In our own galaxy, RA says that 1/5 of all planets are inhabited in some density or another, which means not all of them are inhabited in 3D. If we, as 3D beings would travel to such a planet, we would probably find it barren. Some would be gas planets from our point of view, just like Jupiter and Saturn, which are supposedly both inhabited by beings of another frequency/density. Furthermore, RA explains that approximately 32% of all stars have planets around them, while another 6% have some kind of clustering materials which can be inhabited in some densities (notice here that RA is all the time talking about the 4% universe!). Then Dr. Elkins asks them what percentage of 3D beings from other star systems could move to Earth and walk among us without we noticing that they are aliens, and RA replies that it's 5% of all 3D races, while about 13 to 15% would look similar enough that you had to look twice to notice (they are still talking about the whole 4% universe). And lastly, in the 4% universe, on those planets, where beings are aware, 27% are in 3D; 16% in 4D; and 6% in 5D. The other 51% are of the other densities.

RA is not the only source saying that we need 4th Density bodies to be able to live on the 4th Density Earth. The philosophy is therefore that we need to die before we can ascend (4D bodies are waiting on 'the other side'). Also, those who don't qualify will thus at that time be sent to a 3D planet somewhere else. So, according to RA's hypothesis, no one is going to come here and beam anybody up in spaceships. Therefore, we will not be able to feel out this hypothesis, because we won't know until we die whether we qualify or not. And there, on the other side, RA and other Social Memory Complexes will wait and lead us into the right fold. If you read this paragraph again and think about it, doesn't this sound awfully artificial? Is it a built-in part of Creation that some Social Memory Complexes from 6th Density or such have to steer us in the right direction between lives? Shouldn't "ascension" be something that comes naturally? All I want is for the reader to ponder that for a minute before you continue.

RA also have their view on the Second Coming. Dr. Elkins is asking if Jesus will return, and they say no; albeit, they claim that Jesus is a part of the Confederation and will only make himself present through channels![19]. This to me is a disturbing comment, because the metaphysical researcher knows that this being who calls himself Jesus has been channeled by quite a few, but especially by the Galactic Federation of Light and The Ashtar Command which both clearly are Sirian channels, as we shall see. They even have Utu Shamash's Winged Sun Disc as their logo[20]. If RA claims Jesus to be part of the Confederation they are part of, and they say "their" Jesus is going to be channeled, and those channels are both Sirian in nature, what does that make RA and the Confederation? I'm just trying to put two and two together here.

Although RA says that Jesus will not come back to Earth, there are others of the identical congruency of consciousness that will welcome those who go to the 4th Density. "This is the meaning of the 2nd Coming", says RA[21]. I am sorry, but the picture I get in my head is very much similar to that we see in New Age channeling, such as the Ashtar Command, where bearded, handsome men in their early thirties, such as Jesus himself and St. Germain come and hug us, dressed in long, white robes. That's a little bit too much for me to stomach.

v.ii. The Orion Group -- Friends or Foes?

Then again, RA is conveying the message about the Orion Group, which has caused so much confusion here on Earth, and they are accusing Orion of being the enemies. They claim that the Orions are the only negative density entities who can penetrate the Veil here (not counting those who were already on the planet in the 1980s and are still here). RA says that the Orions are often the ones we see in the skies, piloting the so-called UFOs. They send out messages, and some of those are received by those who are oriented towards service-to-others. The messages are altered to be acceptable to those positive entities, while warning of difficult times ahead. This is, says RA, the most those negative entities can do to manipulate those of positive orientation. Not so, I would say. They can do (and are doing) a lot more than that.

The contacts the Orion Group finds most rewarding, however, are those with a service-to-self orientation.[22] The reason for this is that the STS beings are more on their wavelength and can be manipulated into becoming the minions of the Orion Group.

So let's go over this once and for all. Why does the RA collective talk about Orion when they are in fact are definitely describing the Sirian Alliance? Well, the best reference is the Urantia Book and Lucifer's Rebellion. This bright, beautiful, once very positively oriented being called Lucifer, rebelled towards God (or in reality, the Goddess), managed to gather a support group behind him, and a War in Heaven began. It ended with that Lucifer and his Fallen Angels were "cast out of Heaven" (the Orion Empire) and descended upon Earth, and the Fallen Angels created the Nephilim etc.

Aside from the Urantia Book, where have we heard this story before? In virtually all ancient scriptures, such as the Bible (Satan in the Garden of Eden), and the Sumerian Scripture (ENKI as the Serpent in the Garden). I am saying in my papers with great emphasis that ENKI is not Sirian but from Orion. He is the son of the Goddess and her brightest "angel". He is Lucifer. In his rebellion he gathered around him the Sirian Overlords and the Pleiadians, the former whom had earlier signed the Peace Treaty with the Goddess (see Level II), and from thereon were considered members of the Orion Empire. Hence, Lucifer and his Fallen Angels also became known as the "Orion Group", the faction of Orions/Aryans who rebelled against the Goddess.

There lies the confusion, and most possibly the main reason why Orion has such a bad reputation here on Earth, described as shapeshifting Reptilians by researchers as Icke and quite a few others. But! Orion, dear reader, is our original home, and they are not our enemy. However, there is a group or a faction of Orions, who have created a bad reputation about the whole Orion Empire. Hence, I want to distinguish between the Orion Empire and the Orion Group, by still calling the Sirian/Pleiadian/Orion Group the Sirian Alliance, although they were led by an Orion being, ENKI or Lucifer. So those who say they channel ENKI and have positive experiences with this being are, I'm sorry to say, manipulated and deceived. In certain terms, ENKI is worse than ENLIL, and the Bible is correct when it labels ENKI/EA/Lucifer as Satan. YHWH/Jehovah was a composite of beings (none of them benevolent), and two of those beings from this composite were the stepbrothers, ENKI and ENLIL. Another was ANU himself, the King of Kings back at Sirius.

This is the reason why RA, the Cassiopaeans, and others call the bad guys the Orion Group. The Cassiopaeans, however, are more to the point, talking about this group while on the other hand they also say that the cradle of humanity is in Orion and not in Lyra. I wrote a whole paper on Lord ENKI, the Cosmic Vampire, in Level II, but now in Level III it's time to bring it to a close and tell the reader who ENKI really is. He has done a great job with convincing people here on Earth how good he is (was) by saving mankind from the Deluge by talking to Utnapishtim (Noah). Yes, Lucifer saved mankind, but not out of compassion, but in order to control our planet, its inhabitants, and to eventually build an army to overthrow the Goddess of the Universe. This is ENKI's real face -- he is still Lucifer, the Rebellion. So, in other words, the RA collective is correct when they label the negative entities "The Orion Group".

In RA's own words:

"QUESTION: Windows occur to let the Orion group come through once in a while. Are they needed as a balancing to prevent the Guardians from reducing their positive polarization by totally eliminating the Orion contact through shielding? (B1, 150)

RA: This is partially correct.

Balancing allows an equal amount of positive and negative influx. In your particular planetary sphere less negative information or stimulus is necessary than positive due to the somewhat negative orientation of your social complex distortion. (B1, 150)

STATEMENT (by Questioner): In this way, total free will is balanced so that individuals may have an equal opportunity to choose service to others or service to self. Is this correct?

RA: This is correct. (B1, 150)

STATEMENT: This is a profound revelation, I believe, in the Law of Free Will." (B1, 150).

So, in other words, according to RA, there is a council located in the rings of Saturn (in a higher density), which has decided together with the Guardians, who are supposedly a group of entities living in the center of the Earth (equally in a higher density), to put a Quarantine around Earth so that the Sirian Alliance (the Orion Group) normally can't enter, in order to create a balance between good and evil (STO and STS). Humankind is polarized towards STS, so we need more positive influence to have a fair choice. Therefore, the Sirians who are not here on the planet already, are kept out with the help from those who maintain the Quarantine. However, sometimes there are windows in the Quarantine, which allows some Sirians to come in. In my opinion, though, the Sirians have no business here whatsoever.

However (and here is the interesting part), many say that the Quarantine now has been lifted! So we may ask ourselves what this really means. The people who tell us this see it as a positive thing, because we can now supposedly travel out in space, and easier communicate with positive ETs, etc. But if we are to believe RA, it basically means that the Sirians can come in here in droves if they like. And isn't that exactly what I have said that they are doing? Isn't this the reason why Sirians like Utu Shamash came through the Quarantine window a couple of years ago and started preparing for the rest of his kind to come to Earth? Some of them have already arrived and now occupy human bodies here on Earth, but the main preparation and the opening of the stargates in conjunction with a lifted Quarantine will pave the way for the rest of the gang to arrive. We are here talking about the Invasion, Phase II, which we shall discuss in much detail in later papers.

In other places in the material, RA explains pretty well what the Orion Group, i.e. the Sirians did:

"RA: The Yahweh group worked with those living on Mars 75,000 years ago to make the body bigger and stronger through a new genetic coding. (B1, 174)

However, the Orion group were able to use this distortion (larger body) to teach the thoughts of the elite. Those of the Orion group were able for the first time to make serious inroads upon the consciousness of the planetary complex. (B1, 175)

QUESTION: What allowed the Orion group to succeed at this?

RA: Those who are strong, intelligent, etc. have a temptation to feel different from those who are less intelligent and strong. This allowed the Orion group to form the concept of the holy war, as you may call it. This is a seriously distorted perception. There were many of these wars of a destructive nature. (B1, 175)

It is definitely no doubt that RA is talking about the Sirians here, and furthermore, they explain that they were the ones who built the stone monuments on the Easter Island. When Elkins asked why, RA explained that humans in that time period worshipped the Orion Group as Gods, and by building such monuments that represented an interdimensional force they couldn't disobey, the monuments themselves got power and were attracted to worship (and in the extension, the Sirian Overlords could "suck in" these energies of fear and feed on them). The monuments were created by thoughts from a distance.

Elkins also asks if there are anyone from the Orion Group on Earth now (in the 1980s), and RA said "no". However, they said that the group is here as a thought form (in people's heads, as walk-ins and in genetically manipulated human bodies), but normally a robotic kind of being does their bidding. Elkins asks if these beings are the Men in Black, but RA says no. They did not elaborate further, because the Grays were not yet well-known at that time, before Whitley Strieber wrote about his experiences in Communion.

The Men in Black are a thought form with the ability to somewhat materialize themselves here on Earth (Sirians using avatars is what it is). They can also dematerialize at will.

And here is what they tried to do on me by trying to have me endorse the Sitchin material and get me in contact with Utu Shamash:

"QUESTION: Is it possible for a person to be confused and call on both the Confederation and the Orion group?"

RA: It is entirety possible. Many of your so-called contacts among your peoples have been confused and self destructive because
THE CHANNELS WERE ORIENTED TOWARDS SERVICE TOWARDS OTHERS, BUT, IN THE DESIRE FOR PROOF, WERE OPEN TO THE LYING INFORMATION OF THE CRUSADERS FROM ORION WHO WERE THEN ABLE TO NEUTRALIZE THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE CHANNEL." (B1, 125)

Most beings from the Orion Group are 5th Density Negative, because they are the ones who most easily can penetrate the Quarantine. The 4th Density beings are more like servants to the 5th, or lower in the hierarchy, if you will. But don't make any mistake about it; whether the Council of Saturn, together with the Guardians, have set up a Quarantine here or not, the Orion Group (the Sirian Alliance) think they own this planet and are still in charge of the stargate and the frequency machine. They have a soul group down here who can accommodate that. And here is something to think about for those who channel entities of Love & Light and think that as long as everything is friendly and cozy, and the vibrations are high, we're safe. Not so, necessarily. The Sirians are master manipulators. Here is RA again:

"QUESTION: Why would one of us freely follow the negative entity?

RA: The positive polarity sees love in all things. The negative polarity is clever. (B3, 140)

And lastly on this subject, they explain how the Orion Group (led by ENKI) is manipulating the PTB.

"RA: This negative entity will strive to offer these understandings to the other-selves, most usually by the process of forming the elite, the disciples, and teaching the need and rightness of the enslavement of other-selves for their own good. These other-selves are conceived to be dependent upon the self and in need of the wisdom and guidance of the self (i.e., the elite group.) (B2, 130)"

We know from different sources, and I know from have been tightly connected with LPG-C in the past, that not only are members of the SA present on the Earth surface in human hybrid bodies, but some of them, who preferred to stay in a higher density, but still are stuck in the Quarantine (according to RA, and I think they are correct in this), stayed as a thought form (soul/spirit) in the inner planes of Earth. Interestingly enough, RA calls these hidden entities the Dark Angels, which would correspond pretty nicely to some of ENKI's "Fallen Angels":

"RA: Temptations are offered by those negative entities of what you would call your inner planes. These, shall we say, dark angels have been impressed by the service-to-self path offered by those who have come through the quarantine from days of old." (B1, 135)

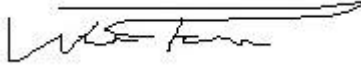

I brought up a lot of subject here regarding the RA Material, and did so for a reason. I think RA represents pretty much what many other channeled sources represent as well, so I wanted to give the reader who is not too familiar with channeling a chance to understand the metaphysical universe of these entities.

In later years, RA has been channeled by David Wilcock. This is allegedly not the same quality of information as the Rueckert channeling, but still supposedly gives the listener some good insights. I haven't listened much to this version of RA, however, but I will mention it some when we talk about the Elohim.

In the next paper, we are going to address a few other prominent channeled sources. The purpose with that will be self-evident when we start talking about the Galactic Federations. I think the reader will appreciate the knowledge I am about to provide in the next few papers...

Love,

Wes Penre

Paper #3: Channeled Entities Part I -- -- the Harvesters of Souls

by Wes Penre, Sunday, February 10, 2013

Revised: Tuesday, February 12, 2013

I. Some Major Channeled Sources

We have no proof if there are more channelers today than it was a few hundred or a thousand years ago, because in the past there was no Internet, and information coming from channelers were most likely being considered witchcraft by the mainstream religion and heavily suppressed. So we can assume that many psychics kept quiet if they made contact. Still, we can also assume that the phenomenon is more widespread now than it was in the past, because if the channeler didn't claim that the source was from angels or whatever God or Gods that were worshipped at the time, the world never got to know about it. Also, the sources make contact because they want their message to become known, and not just for the material to stay between them and a few people. At least that is mostly the case. Also, we've noticed that since the RA Material came out, the amount of channelers have skyrocketed -- a true sign of the End Times.

If you ask a channeler what the difference is between their particular source and other sources out there, most, if not all of them, will tell you a lot of things that are different and why they have chosen to work with their particular entity or Social Memory Complex<sup>[def]</sup>. Evidence show, however, that most of them seem to have a common goal, and it looks like they just use different angles to address the same issue in order to attract a different kind of audience; similar to an advertisement firm which puts a certain touch to an ad in order to reach a certain public. Some can take quite drastic measures trying to make people pay attention. The thing most of the channeling have in common besides the Harvest is that they say that they are us in the future. But are these sources benevolent, or are they wolves in sheep's clothing? It is a very complex subject; much more complex than one would think, and it's not black or white. Whether humankind will gain from our connection with them in the long run or not remains to be seen, but after have studied quite a few of them, it looks like they are here to make amends to us for one reason or another, or at least that's what they want us to believe. It's interesting, though, that they contact us now when we are in the middle of taking a giant step in our evolution. Albeit there may be reasons for this. As humans once again become more psychic, many people are more prone to tuning into the vibrations of these entities, when they perhaps may have wanted to get in touch with us much sooner if they could have. The Internet has certainly been a blessing in disguise in this regard.

Whatever we think about them, it's hard not to acknowledge that they are giving us information we would not have been able to find anywhere else at this point in time, and evolution would have been slower.

The fact is that we as a species have been isolated from the rest of the universe for so long that now, when the Grid is about to fall apart, and perhaps the Quarantine is being lifted, a lot of things are bound to happen simultaneously, from our perspective. The ability for channeled sources to get their message heard is one thing; then we have star beings who can more easily come here and incarnate in order to either help or destroy; the major part of the Sirian Alliance, who previously had a hard time breaking through the Quarantine, can now enter via stargates, almost exclusively in spiritual form. In the meantime, and because of the above, the chaos is increasing and so is the confusion, both amongst common people and in the realm of Power. The PTB can't get away with things they used to, because many humans can see through the lies, and some of people in authority are being thrown to the wolves, having their dirty laundry being hung out in public.

While all this happens, the channeled sources are playing an important role in these times, for good or for bad, or both. I will present this subject from my point of view, and the reader can decide for themselves.

I ended the previous paper, "Paper #2: In Wait for Things to Come" with discussing one of the most popular ad well received channeled material of our time -- the RA Material. We are going to continue now and discuss some other channeled entities (from here on called sources most of the time) with a similar view as that of RA. We are also going to see that they are actually working together on a common goal -- to oversee the harvest of souls. And the souls we are talking about is of course the human souls!

i.i. The Elohim

I believe the Cassiopaeans are those who come closest to the RA cosmology, something they themselves have no problem admitting, although there are some differences, too, of course. Another source who claims connection with RA is the Elohim. This is what they call themselves. The Elohim are channeled by two women, Daphne Karandanis and Terry Brown. A third person, who is asking the questions makes it a trio, and his name is Wynn Free, a former musician. Mind you that the group which channeled the RA Material were also a trio, although the setup for the RA sessions was different, with only one channeler, Carla Rueckert.

Before I go too deeply into this I want to mention to the reader that I do not have any solid proof who these sources really are and although there are those who are obviously malevolent, it's not always so. And there are also those whom you can tell are here to help, even when they have their own agenda. My intention is not to talk badly about certain groups and praise others; I will give you some information and sometimes draw a few conclusions, but the final conclusion must be yours. I will connect some dots, and you will decide whether I do a good job or if a lot more needs to be said about this. Personally, I have come to some conclusions that make sense to me, but if it shows that I am incorrect regarding some groups, I will address that later in the light of more information. Also, I want to make clear that I am not attacking the person or the group who channels/channel these sources, as I think most of them have good intentions, but when comes to the sources themselves, they may not always be whom they present themselves to be.

This Elohim channel opened themselves up to the above group back in 2002 when Wynn Free and his fiancé, Daphne Karandanis, drove up from California towards Oregon. When they reached Mount Shasta in northern California, a voice began to talk through Daphne. Wynn started asking some questions and the voice answered. This was the beginning of their now 12 years+ contact with the Elohim<sup>[1]</sup>. Interestingly enough, Mt. Shasta is known for its "paranormal" activities, UFO sightings, and underground facilities, and there is also a stargate located in the area.

The reader can see the details about how it all started, and much more, in Wynn's e-book, "The Creator Gods of the Physical Universe Want to Talk to You", which can be downloaded for free on the Internet, and later on, Terry came into the picture as well, also being able to channel this same group of entities.

In Wynn's case it's easy to understand at least one reason for his loyalty to the Elohim, which is that they apparently saved the life of his sister, who was terminally ill. She is now fully recovered, from what I understand. There is no way such an incident wouldn't affect you. All he did, he says, was to ask them for help and they responded. Still, Wynn is telling us that he was very skeptic about them for a long time, and it took quite a while, and some serious research to establish in his own mind that they are benevolent. He suggests everybody else does the same.

Wynn says that the Elohim can be of assistance to mankind in three ways: 1) they can inform us in such a way that we can dispel our fears. 2) they penetrate this reality with love-light energy, which can uplift the vibration here, and 3) they can intervene (such as with healing), but only within the guidelines of Free Will. They would never help somebody if it harms someone else.<sup>[1]</sup>

The Bible talks about the Elohim being synonymous with God himself, in spite the fact that Elohim is plural. Others, like Wynn's group, say they are the Creator Gods (plural) of this whole physical universe, while some, like Zecharia Sitchin, tell us that the Elohim are synonymous with the Anunnaki, "those who from Heaven to Earth came" (I discussed Sitchin's work in Level I).

My own research has shown that the Anunnaki is a term being used for the "gods" who invaded Earth half a million years ago, but is basically a term originating from Orion, most possibly brought down here by ENKI, the head of the faction of Sirians (the Fallen Angels) who arrived here half a million years ago. However, these gods who arrived here and started manipulating the DNA in existing humans and apes were a mix of Sirians, Pleiadians, Alpha Draconians, Vegans, and a few other star races. I gave the name The Sirian Alliance to this group of star beings.

So if we are to believe Sitchin's translation of who the Elohim are, they are the Sirian Alliance. But if we go with the claim that the Elohim are actually the creators of this physical universe, like Wynn and his group say, then we still have to ask ourselves, which physical universe? The 4% or the 96%? If they are talking about the 4% (the universe we perceive with our 5 senses), then we are still coming back to that they are the Sirian Alliance. Only if they are talking about the physical universe before the Sirian Overlords tampered with our DNA, and they were working directly with the Mother Goddess, can we consider this Elohim group being benevolent (if they are truthful, that is). So let's see who they are, what their cosmology is, what their intentions are by contacting this group of humans, and what the effects are from the channeling. Also, let us take a look at whom they are in cahoots with. They do mention, however, that they consider themselves being more feminine than masculine due to their creative abilities.

i.i.ii. The Cosmology of the Elohim

Let's start with their cosmology. Like almost all channeled sources, they say there is One Creator, which is All That Is, and we are smaller portions of that One Creator, here to have experiences, so that the Creator can have experiences outside of himself. Creation consists of a Central Universe, and from that, five other universes expand, while a sixth universe is being formed as we speak. Interestingly enough, that corresponds with the Seven Superuniverses in the Urantia Book and in the WingMakers' cosmology, and is also in line with LPG-C's seven superdomains, although the latter are constructed slightly differently.

Moreover, they are very much in contact with RA and share their cosmology to a very large degree. Therefore, they say, just like RA, that we are at the end of a 75,000 years cycle, and that we are at the point where some people, who are 51% STO[def], will be harvested, and RA and the Elohim, together with other star beings, such as Carla Rueckert's new group, the Q'uo, are here to help in the process. In fact, although RA said that they would never speak through a medium here on Earth again if Carla Rueckert's group will dissolve (which it did when Dr. Don Elkins -- the questioner of the Ra Sessions -- committed suicide), because no one else could hold their energy, RA is back and apparently channeled through metaphysical researcher, David Wilcock. Carla Rueckert, who is friends with Wynn's group, says she thinks Wilcock's source is indeed RA, but a lower vibration of the same collective Carla channeled in the 1980s. If this is true, Wilcock is apparently strong enough to hold their energy.

Like I said in the beginning, the Elohim claim to be the creators of the entire universe; the original Creator Gods I was talking about both in Level I and II, the so-called Builders. They are from the 6th Dimensional ray of light & love, and now they are coming to Earth to partake in what they say is a very important event; the ascension to the 4th Density Earth. We get the feeling it's their responsibility to come back and "check in" on their creation. Note, however, that they are not saying, from what I know, that they created mankind in particular, but they created a universe for mankind to be created and develop in. They also say that 2012 and the Mayan Calendar, and prophecy in general, has a lot to do with why they are here now. It's all connected to the Harvest and the end of a major cycle.

i.i.iii. Angelic Beings from Outside Time

Wynn says in his book, "The Creator Gods of This Universe Want to Talk to You", p.26, that P'taah is a high individual soul, who made himself known to Wynn and Daphne, although he happens to be a member of the RA group. So, curiously enough we now have the terms RA and P'taah. Ptah was the Egyptian name for ENKI as the first Pharaoh of Egypt, and MARDUK, ENKI's son, is also known as Amon RA, the "Hidden RA". This name issue (P'taah and RA) has been addressed at times with the RA Group, who denies any connections with the Egyptian deities. Oh well, coincidences then? I just find it peculiar that both ENKI and his son, RA, are presented (name-wise) in the RA group, and P'taah is channeled by Daphne side by side with the Elohim Group (Elohim also relating to the Sirians, just like RA/MARDUK and Ptah/ENKI). Why so many coincidences and still they deny them all?

Anyway, the difference between the RA Group and Elohim is that the RA collective are graduates from the 7 Density realm, while Elohim exists outside of time. RA have incarnated here in this physical universe, while the Elohim have not. The Elohim have entered this reality out of curiosity to see how it is to live in 3D, but they have never incarnated. Some of them have never even left their realm outside time in order to stay pure and not be affected by the realms "below". To understand what it means to live outside of time, the Elohim explain it like this: if something lives outside of yourself, you must add time to the factor as a reference point of before and after. No reference point, no time. If it's true what they say, it makes me think they live in the KHAA[def], but what they are describing is the 4% universe and its dimensions and densities. Without putting any judgment on Elohim at this point, it's necessary to say that not all beings or star races living in the KHAA are benevolent, loving beings. The Orion Empire is the higher realms of the KHAA, but the KHAA has its own dimensions and densities as well. So please be advised that the Harvest spoken about is addressing the levels of reality in the 4% universe, and not in the KHAA. Not once has any of these sources (except the Pleiadians what I know of) even mentioned the real universe (the 96%), although they simply address it as "the invisible universe" -- invisible to our 5 senses, that is.

i.i.iv. Channeling the Elohim

The Elohim are allegedly transmitting great portions of love and light; at least according to many of those who attend the sessions. They also say they love us tremendously and think very high of human beings -- we are very special, according to them. Although, sometimes a less loving thought pattern is revealing itself to us. In Wynn's e-book, page 90, Wynn is asking the Elohim what it is that limits a normal 3D being from operating outside 3D rules, and the Elohim replies, "The normal fog-dense brain." Wynn then asks if that is how they talk about humans when we're not around, and they respond, "It is a product of our frustration when working with your realm." One would expect a huge amount of love, and understanding in particular, from beings who say they are the highest of highest on the universal scale and after all have created it, but their response here clearly shows that they don't look upon us that highly after all. I am a being, still being stuck here in 3D, working hard to work myself out of the trap. I am communicating with my fellow 3D beings every day; beings who don't know anything about what's going on, and I don't feel frustration anymore. If I don't feel frustration when dealing with our 3D issues, although I'm "just" a 3D being, why would they, who apparently are supposed to feel infinite, unconditional love? I may sound picky, but sometimes it's in the small details you eventually can start seeing the bigger picture. It's very important not to trust a source only because they transmit large portions of love and light. It's easy for them to transmit those energies by using technology and by using positive universal energies against us. All they need is to know how to do it. For them, it's kids' stuff. Because RA have experienced our realm, they have more knowledge how to overcome obstacles here than Elohim have, but Elohim are more angelic and can perform miracles. They actually say they can beam love/light energies into this realm, although they are mentioning this in a positive context. They are often working together with RA to liberate the Earth realm.

In both Level I and Level II, I discussed something I call The Wave of the Supernova, which supposedly is a wave of energy heading towards Earth in faster-than-light speed. Some people fear this wave, while others believe it's going to raise our consciousness, either to become truly multi-d or enough to once and for all ascend to Density 4 (those who are ready for it, that is). Like I said at the time, this is an event that could happen around 2012, or it could happen later. We are still waiting, but by looking into the channeled sources a little bit extra, like I have done since then, a certain pattern starts to unfold, and it has to do with the Harvest[def]. Not only do a certain amount of sources suggest they are here to help us with the Harvest from the 3rd to the 4th Density, but they also tell us that they are all riding the Wave. And this Wave is approaching Earth in super-high speed! They say that the Wave is the direct cause to our ascension! I found this a little peculiar and looked into it some more. The result of my research will be revealed in a couple of papers from now. Elohim, RA, Q'uo, the Cassiopaeans, and the Alpha Draconians, according to themselves (as we shall see), are all Wave Riders.

Let's continue with three channeled sessions, so the reader gets the feel for them. In the first one Wynn Free is the first talker, and beside him is Terry Brown, who will start channeling a few seconds into the video. In the second and third videos we hear Daphne Karandanis channeling the same entities:

These videos are merely short examples of all the channeled sessions by Elohim, of course, and are perhaps not even directly representative for them; I simply picked them more or less at random on YouTube. I also wanted the reader to hear both Terry and Daphne channel. I advise the reader to go to YouTube and listen to more sessions to get a broader picture of this channel.

I have talked to Wynn some, and what he repeatedly says is that those who are either attending the conference calls or are sitting in the live audience often feel an increase in energy; a feeling of happiness and joy -- an overall uplifting experience from being in the energies of these beings. Also by reading transcripts, many people can feel a similar thing, because the energies are put into the words in the transcripts. I am not going to comment on how people feel when they listen to Elohim, however; that's a very personal experience.

i.ii.v. RA, The Council of Elohim, The Council of An, and the Council of 12 -- All Familiar Terms!

There are a few comments I would like to make on the Elohim channeling above, though. First thing, they give a rather vague answer to Wynn's question in M-2 above (circa 4:45 into the video) whether Elohim has anything to do with being part of the Elohim of the Bible. They reply that they are connected "to some degree or another". We know that the Elohim of the Bible are the Sirian Overlords, or whom the RA Social Memory Complex (SMC) calls the Orion Group. But we never get a straight answer what part they had in the whole Sirian/Orion escapade. I would probably have left it with that, if it wasn't because there is more.

Approximately 2 minutes and 45 seconds into M-2 Elohim say that they are the Council of An, which is a division of the Council of Elohim. The Council of Elohim in their turn answer to the Council of 12!<sup>[2]</sup> Where have we heard that term before? The reader may not remember off hand, but I talked a lot about the Council of 12 in Level I, particularly in PFC Paper #1 of May 5, 2011: "The Marduk Issue and the Earth-Bound Anunnaki".<sup>[3]</sup> The Council of 12 is the Council of the Earthbound Anunnaki (the Sirian Alliance), led by Marduk (who is in alliance with his father, Lord ENKI, something we will discuss in a later paper). In fact, the friction between the Earthbound Sirians and the Incoming, as described in Level I, seems to just be a show for the masses. I believe that scenario was just one of many distractions put into play so that the Incoming forces, who are not physical but interdimensional, could invade silently without being exposed. I believe Utu Shamash, when he contacted me, had the same intention to distract me from the real issue, knowing I would do everything in my power to get the truth out there.

So, now we have the name Elohim, RA, Ptah, and we have the Council of An (we all know who An or ANU is in this whole scenario -- the King of Kings of the Anunnaki/Sirians<sup>[4]</sup>), and the Council of 12. These are all indicators that this Elohim group that Daphne and Terry channel have a Sirian connection. Are these just coincidences? Why would these channeled sources use all these Sirian names and terms if there wasn't a connection?

But if the RA group is connected with the Sirian Overlords, why do they attack the Orion group, which in that case would be like attacking themselves? One option would be because they want to blame Orion for the bad ET intervention on Earth in preparation for a future war against Orion, and at the time when the RA Material was released (as well as the Cassiopaean Experiment), no one here on Earth knew that the Sirian group was led by an Orion rebel -- ENKI, Lucifer himself. No one knew that ENKI came from Orion until I revealed it; or rather, those who knew kept quiet about it, because they wanted to put ENKI in a good light. By blaming the evil intervention on the Orion "Group", they could get away with it without lying. No one expected that the information about ENKI being Orion would be publicly known. By the time I'm releasing this information, I still haven't had too many visitors to my website yet, but in the future, when it will take off (due to that more and more people will search for the truth), those who tried to cover up the fact that ENKI is from Orion and one of the "bad guys" (thereby ENKI himself), will not be too happy about that this information is public, and will do what they can to ridicule it.

If we continue to video M-3 above, in the end Daphne is channeling Archangel Michael, who is later toning on a low E, and when people start channeling those archangels, I get suspicious. It never feels genuine to me, regardless of which group it is that does it. The video ends with that the host for the radio show is breaking out in tears, saying she has never experienced anything like this before. There are apparently a lot of energies let loose during these public channel sessions.

Another thing (which doesn't show in these three videos) is that Elohim allegedly have cured some quite sick people. We have already mentioned Wynn's sister, but apparently there are more, and they say that if we need them in that respect (or in general) we only have to call for them and they'll come.

I don't want to pain the Devil on the wall here, but are they doing this to show credibility, or is it genuinely done to help us? In the Bible Prophecy it says (and yes, Christians are going to like this!) that there will be many deceptions in the End Times, and there will be those who claim they can heal the crippled and the blind and resurrect those who have died. But aside from that, the fact (if it is fact) that they have done this is something Wynn and his group are advertising to bring more people to listen to them, obviously. Wynn also states that the incredible energies of love and light this Elohim group is emitting should be evidence enough, as it can't be faked. Without suggesting that they are faked in this case, I disagree with Wynn. Channeled sources who don't have our best interest at heart can very well mimic high level energies without feeling them themselves. They use our own highest emotions and those available in the universe to channel through the vehicle (psychic person) in order to deceive those who listen. People can come out from a session feeling incredibly uplifted, and the source can still be of ill intent. Unfortunately, this is something few people know about, and if they do, they don't believe it. Well, now I've said it (twice), so with that in mind, people have to feel those things out for themselves and always look for red flags. When comes to Elohim, the red flags to me are the name Elohim, the Council of An, and the Council of 12, in particular. Also their connection with RA and P'taah, which are both Sirian terms. I understand if those who attend the sessions want to discard this, because they feel so good, but these are strange coincidences nonetheless. Another thing is the Harvest, something I do not embrace at all and want to have nothing to do with, personally.

It's up to each and every one to feel the Elohim out. I have listened to them, and I have read Wynn's free e-book, but must say that I do not feel those high love and light frequencies those people talk about, and overall I wasn't too impressed. What I hear is a channel that often has a hard time finding the right words and is sometimes stumbling on them, and it doesn't affect me positively, contrary to some other sources. I must say I had a much more positive experience reading the Law of One books (the RA Material), listening to the Pleiadians, and Bashar, whom we are going to look into as well in time.

Wynn has strongly suggested to me that I read his book, "The Reincarnation of Edgar Cayce", which basically supposedly shows evidence that David Wilcock is a reincarnation of Cayce, the famous sleeping prophet. Wynn tells me that people have a tendency to look like their previous incarnations, and I agree that there is a stunning resemblance between Cayce and Wilcock. Apparently, there is more than just a facial expression, but I must confess I haven't read the book yet. If what he's saying is true, I still don't find it interesting enough, unless Wilcock starts creating astounding prophecies that come true. More people have been famous in their past lives. If I were Aristotle in a past life (and I'm sure I wasn't), I would raise my eyebrow, but that's about how interesting that is. Another lifetime, another experience. Still, I understand and respect those who want to know such things, so it's seriously just a personal take on it. I would never go in regression therapy to find out who I was a few hundred years ago. But for those who are interested, Wynn's book may be something to look into. You can see the similarities in fig. 3 above. After all, I have stressed in my previous papers that during the time around the nano-second, old souls who have reincarnated here before will show up again, souls such as Tesla, perhaps. These geniuses don't want to miss out on these times. Cayce could of course be one of them, as well. Besides, there could be something more Wynn is revealing in his book that is more interesting than the Cayce connection, and if so, I apologize. Like I said, I haven't read the book.

But Wilcock is not the only one in this Elohim channeling group who say they are reincarnations of famous people. Terry Brown is apparently the same person as St. Catherine of Siena. Again, there is a resemblance in the photo they are usually showing to the public, but I can neither confirm, not dispute.

However, when I look at old paintings of St. Catherine, none of them, except the one they selected, is showing much of a resemblance with Terry, in my opinion. For the curious, read Wynn's books to make up your own mind; I just want to show the reader who these people say they are, and perhaps, if what they say is true, it could be the reason why they have abilities to more easily express their psychic abilities than the average person.

In his free e-book, Wynn is asking Elohim about Lucifer. We now know who Lucifer and his Fallen Angels are (see previous paper, section, The Orion Group -- Friends or Foes), so I wanted to compare. I must say they got it quite right, although they don't do any comparisons with names. But they clearly describe the group of star beings who came down here 1/2 million years ago and fought a battle against the faction of the Orion Empire, which still was present on Earth.

i.i.vi. The Possible WingMakers Connection, Elohim Connections with Famous Humans, and Ancient Visitations

In this paper I want to introduce a few sources who have the same cosmic view, and who say they are here for the same purpose -- the Harvest. I want the reader to be aware of them and their view on cosmos and on we humans, because it becomes relevant when we go into the Galactic Federations in an upcoming paper, and Phase II in the Alien Invasion, which is not fantasy, or something I made up. I can guarantee you that what I am about to present in a few papers ahead comes directly from the horse's mouth. Not many people know about this!

So let us continue with a few more things about Elohim and the RA Group, and let's look at a few answers they gave to questions they were asked. Through these answers, it's easier for us to know them better.

So, like many others, they say that the 3rd Dimension is a lesson in limitation, against odds, to temper and strengthen the soul. In addition, each dimension has its own lesson (so here they talk about what RA calls densities, while Elohim call it dimensions. This distinction can be confusing to the reader).

Then there is something they say which caught my attention. The Elohim tell us that after the Atlantis disaster, they sent star-seed to Earth in order to help rebuilding what was destroyed in the Flood. They were hoping to establish a strong connection between themselves and the Anunnaki star-seed, already operating on Earth (the Sirian Alliance). However, Elohim say they were discouraged at the divergence of these star-seeds into Earth activities and their forgetfulness of their Elohim origins.<sup>[5]</sup>

So here they are clearly telling us that the Sirians once upon a time were Elohim themselves of the angelic realm, but had forgotten about their origins (Dr. A.R. Bordon of former LPG-C always said that the Ša.AM.i [Sirians] had forgotten who created them, and A.R. didn't know, either). We know from Level II that the Sirians were not created by the Mother Goddess herself, or by members of the Orion Empire, so Elohim is probably not Orions, although they may very well originate in the 96%, because they tell us they exist outside time. On the WingMakers website<sup>[6]</sup>, James talks about a similar (or the same?) group as Elohim, but call them the WingMakers. They, too, live outside time and are the creators of this universe. James and the WingMakers, however, do have a connection to the Sirian rebel group who came to Earth and manipulated human DNA, and he even uses Utu Shamash's Winged Sun Disc as one of his logos. However, according to what Elohim say here, the Sirians were supposedly a part of them, but have descended, just like we did when we were tricked into taking 3D bodies which would keep us trapped in 3D. The Sirians' situation is a little different however.

If it wasn't for the other evidence discussed earlier in this paper, I would find it possible that the Elohim are actually of the Orion Empire, and in fact the angelic beings who did not rebel together with Lucifer/ENKI. That would explain how Archangel Michael can be a part of this group. However, with what I know, it makes very little sense that the Elohim are the angels who didn't fall, and Archangel Michael is not an individual, but whomever is leading the Orion defense forces at the moment.

Joseph Smith, who had an angelic encounter with higher beings before he founded the Mormon Church, also talked to the Elohim group. However, there are contradictions saying that the Book of Mormons was written before Smith had his visions, and not the other way around.[7] After have researched the First Vision, which was the most important one for Smith, it sounds to me like another encounter with Lord ENLIL, or perhaps even Lord ENKI. Although Smith never identified the two personages, or angels, that he saw, the Church of Latter Day Saint interpret them as visions of God and his son, Jesus Christ (ENKI and MARDUK?). Smith is told by these angelic beings that he shouldn't join any existing church, because they are all false, but he should start studying the Commandments. Also, these beings came down in a pillar of light, just like "God" almost always did in the Bible (except in incidents like that with the Moses and the burning bush). If these beings were the same Elohim as we are talking about here (and they say they are), I have a hard time not relating them to the Fallen Angels.

There were apparently a few Elohim star-seed (star-seed in this case referring to those who chose to incarnate on Earth, or visit the Earth plane) who after all have incarnated here on Earth (while there is another group who chose to never to that, so at least some of the Elohim stayed pure in their original form), and according to this channel, they volunteered to do so in order to uplift the planetary vibration so it would help us evolve. However, it was not always successful because of the Veil (of forgetfulness). Once an Elohim incarnated in a human body, they forgot who they were and their connection with the divine.

The Elohim also had an "occurrence" here 60 million years ago, when there were gold miners on Earth (before the Sirians came). However, that occurrence did not pan out well, they said (60 million years ago was shortly after the dinosaurs disappeared, which means that the Elohim possibly made contact with the Vegan group who was here at that time and created a reptilian/humanoid race, based on earthly reptiles and Vegan genes see Level I, Genesis Paper #1 (March 31, 2011): "[Human Origins and the Living Library"]).

Then, at another occasion they made contact with King Solomon, a contact which panned out in a more constructive manner, they say.

Like I mentioned, the star-seed who incarnated here soon forgot who they were due to the Veil, but still others came after, totally certain that the Veil would not affect them. They came to Earth to rescue those of their own star-seed who had gotten lost here in the reincarnation cycle. The rescuers, of course, got trapped too, in spite of their conviction. It's interesting that they didn't learn from their mistake, and instead did the same thing over and over again, despite the fact that they obviously knew how the Veil works. These lost star-seeds are supposedly still here, being somewhat more "enlightened" than the average human, but don't know why they are different. They are just waiting to be able to remember.

I found a quote in Wynn's e-book which I found quite educating, and which corresponds with what I have been teaching as well. I think it's in order to re-emphasize it, because it is important.

"The idea of possessions was the foundation for the growth of the negative realm. The many factors and complications that became involved led to the third dimensional reality that humans experience today. A human can reclaim his innate divine powers of creation by stepping out of all these possessions and ownerships and by returning again into the realm of creation and love. They don't have to relinquish their possessions, just their attachments to them."<sup>[8]</sup>

The reason I want to emphasize this is because people think, I have noticed, that in order to be "spiritual", they need to let go of material possessions. Not so. You can have as much as you need and it won't hurt in this life or in afterlife, as long as you are able to let go of your attachments to them.

For a while, in the beginning of researching the Elohim, I thought they looked at creation from a feminine standpoint, and I thought that maybe these guys are different after all; especially as they said that they look upon themselves as more feminine than masculine because they have the power to create. However, as I continued reading, I noticed that, like so many other channeled sources, they addressed the Creator as He.

Another thing I find odd is when they explain how we achieve what we want in life. In the e-book, they took an example of someone who has a bad eye-sight, and who worked very hard to get a better eye-sight, but didn't succeed. Then he said to himself, "I will never get 20-20 eye-sight". It was then, when the person saw it for what it was that his eye-sight got better. In fact, this person gave up and started thinking in the negatives, which does not normally give people what they need. Positive thoughts give positive outcomes and negative thoughts give negative outcomes. A godly group like the Elohim should know this. Another red flag.

Lastly, I want to emphasize that many of the things I have pointed out here are things that either differ from many other sources, align with the same, or clash with my own research. I want to add, before we go on to the next source, that there are also a lot of things told by the Elohim that I agree with and is in accordance with my own research. This is often the case with many sources; they can teach us a lot (and they do), but we must question their motives before we dedicate too much of our time to them. Most of them (if not all) have their own agenda, which can be a very bad thing for us, but doesn't have to be. It all depends on what the agenda is, and if it benefits us as well. Always make sure you find out what their agenda is, and even if it seems okay, always be alert and read between the lines, but without becoming paranoid about it. It's a skill to be able to step back from some material and take a new look at it from another angle. Does it still hold water? It's not easy, I know, but we all need to practice this skill, or we'll be deceived, time after another. And don't be afraid or ashamed of being deceived, either; we all are once in a while. So am I, but that's how we learn.

The Elohim, like so many other metaphysical sources, have a very positive thing in common that I find is appropriate to mention here, because the Elohim are big on it as well. It has to do with nuclear weapons. Those who study the UFO phenomenon and exopolitics<sup>[def]</sup> usually know that ETs often show up around power plants. Some of them use craft that are able to misdirect nuclear explosions, because they are so incredibly destructive -- not only for life here on Earth, but in other dimensions as well. They also mention that it is better to get a secondary effect from a nuclear blast than to die in the blast itself. If a being dies in the original blast, there is a big chance they lose their soul matrix, as the Elohim explains it, and struggles to find it. They say, "It [the soul matrix] misshapes itself into the vestiges of whatever portion of the blast it finds itself in in an effort to maintain form..."<sup>[9]</sup> This is a nicer way of saying that the blast destroys the avatar, and the fires get dispersed and can't find each other again to create or maintain a form. The fires split up in thousands of pieces, like the shattered pieces of a vase dropped on the floor. They have nowhere to go and will eventually return to becoming one with the universe again - the person loses his/her personality. The Elohim say that if there is one prayer they recommend, it is that which addresses the end of nuclear power in the weapon industry.

With that we're going to leave the Elohim for now, but have reasons to come back to them in a later paper, which talks about the ascension process, abductions, and a lot more. We will also touch on this group in the Galactic Federations paper later on.

i.ii. The Cassiopaeans

The Cassiopaeans, just like the Elohim and RA are a Social Memory Complex (SMC) and are basically "channeled" by three people -- one channeler, one questioner, and one scribe. I put "channeled" within parentheses, because this source is not exactly channeled, and this group of people would agree with me. They are actually using an Ouija board when communicating with the source.

This source has been channeled for approximately 20 years now (since 1994), and there are lots of transcripts available for free online.<sup>[10]</sup> Their web address is, <http://cassiopaea.org/>. The people behind this, what they call The Cassiopaeon Experiment are Laura Knight-Jadczyk, Fred, and Paul (the two latter are usually not addressed by last name). All the three of them are quite sure that it is Laura who is the cause of the information transfer, and that it is more or less because of her that the Cassiopaeans managed to get in touch with this group, although they also say that Fred could probably go ahead and channel from morning until dark. Laura says the Cassiopaeans are probably something from her subconscious mind, or what Carl Jung called collective unconscious.

i.ii.i. Being us in the Future

When the Cassiopaeans first contacted them via the Ouija board, they said they were we humans in the future, or a "Higher Self", which is more evolved than we are at the present here on Earth. Like so many others, they tell us that time is simultaneous, and this is the reason why this source can contact us from the future. They also say they are us in 6th Density.

Important to stress here is that the Cassiopaeans (from here on interchangeably called the Cassios) are not "aliens" or "discarnate entities". Here is what they say about themselves:

"We are you in the Future. We transmit 'through' the opening that is presented in the locator that you represent as Cassiopaea, due to the strong radio pulses aligned from Cassiopaea, which are due to a pulsar from a neutron star 300 light years behind it, as seen from your locator. This facilitates a clear channel transmission from 6th density to 3rd density."<sup>[11]</sup>

We are hearing this concept a lot when comes to channeling; the source is us in the future. The alert reader then must be thinking, "How can all these different sources be us in the future?" They are different entities; they transfer from different locations in time/space, and they have slightly different things to tell us (although the main message is usually similar). The answer is quite simple if we understand the concept of probable futures. We are standing before crossroads all the time as individuals and as a collective consciousness. The possible reason why we have so many sources contacting us at this point is because we now stand before a major crossroads; a fork in the road. We are not talking about only two possible futures for mankind, but an almost endless amount of them. And it's not that the entire mankind is going to choose one distinct future; we are going to be divided into different timelines -- different multiverses, even.

Earlier I have talked about how each person lives in his own version of the Multiverse. Every time you make a decision, add put thought, emotion, and action behind it, you slightly change the fluid Multiverse you live in. With time, you have made a lot of decisions, and depending on what these decisions are will determine how your Multiverse will look like. See, we are all creators in our own rights; even if you do nothing, that's a decision, too. So, not only does each person create their own Multiverse, but each decision also affects the whole mass consciousness of humankind. Each decision, unless it's a major one which is changing the path of the whole mankind at once, only has a little effect on the whole, but still it has an effect. Eventually, those who are somewhat likeminded will end up in one grouping, and those who think differently, in another. It happens all the time, whether it's a nano-second or not, but at this time the energies are extra strong, and our decisions have more power.

i.ii.ii. Transmitting from Different Futures

I have talked about the Machine Kingdom, and I have talked about going back to nature, and everything in between. This is what "the fork in the road" is about in the beginning of the New Era. Our DNA is activated and our neurology strengthened, and it's all ready to be used as soon as we can penetrate the Grid. How we use it is each and everyone's choice. Many people who read this may think that if you choose the Machine Kingdom, there is a particular world you will end up living in, while if you use nature, there's another. This is not entirely so, because there will be slightly different versions of either or, and everything in between. This can probably be best illustrated in the diagram below:

Here we see how the probabilities branch out. Still, in a diagram like this, there are only so many branches visible due to limited space. In reality, there are a myriad of them. Hence you can see that there are slightly different versions of the Machine Kingdom, from the most extreme to the left, and all the way to the far right, where we have the most extreme version of going back to nature, where no technology whatsoever is allowed. There is everything in between.

Now try to picture all these different channeled sources coming from our future, being us in that particular realm. If we have the above diagram in mind, we can imagine that different sources come from slightly different versions of the above possible futures. This is the reason why the information we receive is so similar, but also in some regard also different -- it depends on which probability of our future the channeled source comes from. Laura Knight-Jadczyk explains it pretty well when she says that the Cassios come from her subconscious (or rather, the unconscious, I would say) mind. If all time is simultaneous, her future, and the future of those who will choose the same probability as she will, are the Cassios, once Laura's soul group has reached the 6th Density and become a Social Memory Complex.

Elohim and RA come from a slightly different time perspective, signifying Terry's, Wynn's, and Daphne's probable future, and Don Elkins', Carla Rueckert's, and Jim McCarthy's probable future, respectively. Interestingly enough, when Don Elkins committed suicide, his group of channelers chose a different probable future from that which the RA Collective comes from, and once Elkins unexpectedly killed himself, RA could no longer get through, because the timeline changed. Amazing, isn't it?

Now imagine something James (Mahu Nahi) of the WingMakers said back in the 2008 interview with Project Camelot. He said that ANU, the King of the Anunnaki (Sirians), has the technology and knowledge how to master the lines of time. Thus, he can manipulate different timelines in the 4% universe and this way be more or less ahead of the game. So perhaps the Sirians (ANU, MARDUK, and ENKI in particular, together with their minions) sit "on top" of these timelines and channel information through us to indoctrinate the "spiritual movement" aka the New Age movement in this particular time to prevent certain futures to manifest. Also, if they failed on their mission in the future, they may try to change their past (our present) in their favor. Something to ponder, perhaps?

i.ii.iii. The Channeled Sources -- Do We Really Need Them As Much As They Need Us?

There seem to be two major official reasons why channeled sources want to communicate with humans. The first reason is to take us through the Harvest and prepare us for that event. The second reason is (like in the case of the Pleiadians) that they are unhappy in the future in which they live and want to change the timeline that created the tyrannical present they are currently experiencing. Hence, the best way to do that is to go back to a "hub" in time, which apparently is normally at the end of an old era and the beginning of a new, when stronger possibilities are created. They want to change the time they are in by having us make "better" choices, which will affect their timeline. This way they hope that their tyranny will cease to exist. Some do this with force (negative entities), while others (like the Pleiadians) do it by educating us so we can make better choices, but without forcing their ideas on us. We need to ask the questions and they provide answers, which are only partial answers, leading to additional questions that the listener/reader has to research themselves. Laura tells us the same thing; the Cassios give them clues that they have to spend a lot of time researching.

Now we must ask ourselves, do we need these metaphysical sources in order to advance spiritually, or are they all more an obstacle in our progress? Aren't they inflicting on Free Will?

To answer the last question first, they seldom are. They say that they came because they were called for. This is probably true. Someone asked them to come in; if no one else, the channeler probably did, consciously or unconsciously. But do we need them? That's a question that is more difficult to answer.

If I answer for myself, I would say they can be most useful because of the information they are providing us with. So long as we are aware of their agendas, we can possibly benefit from the learning process. I must say that without them, my own learning process would probably have been much slower. So in that regard, the answer is yes (taking into consideration that we can discern between good and bad information). But what about their agendas? Do we want to help them, or in some cases, help them to help us?

There is a great reward for everybody when we can help each other when help is asked for, but the question is if we understand their agenda well enough to be sure we make the right decision. I am not so sure about that, in general. It would be relatively easy for them to make something up and tell us that this is the reason they are here. In fact, I have proof that this is the case, at least when it comes to one source, as we shall see when we get to the Galactic Federations paper. To begin with, before they showed their real face, it would have been pretty hard to know that these entities were outright lying (and eventually admitted to it).

I am bringing up the Cassios as number three of the channeled sources, after RA and Elohim, because they belong to the same "group" of sources as I see it. With that I mean that they are all here for the Harvest. Another thing all three of them (and there are more) say they are riding on a Wave of Consciousness, sweeping across the galaxy faster than light, and when that wave reaches our solar system, ascension will occur for those who are prepared. Those who have their heart chakras 51% or more open will ascend together with Planet Earth to the 4th Density. The rest of the population will be recycled onto another planet in the galaxy, light-years away from Earth, where they will re-experience 3rd Density once again for another 75,000 years.

But this can't be too bad, can it? After all, if they are us in the future, it seems like they survived, and are now in a much higher density. So, what's the problem? Why not just go along with whatever happens?

Well, the question arises, if they are us in the future and have reached that high, why do they need to help us? They have already achieved so much, and apparently we made the "right" choice which brought them to where they are now. And that is exactly the problem! Why do they have to come here? They say that for them to continue up to the next density, they have to go back in time and "take care of business", which is usually to make amends for bad things they did in the time we now live, or slightly earlier or later. The Pleiadians have already told us that their ancestors were the Sirian Alliance who messed with our DNA (they call them the "lizzies"), so that is in the open. But what about the rest? What's their story? Well, RA's story is similar to that of the Pleiadians. They came here and messed up, and left without taking responsibility. We have to assume that the rest of the sources have a similar story untold.

I would say that if the place where they are dwelling right now is so fantastic and full of joy, they wouldn't have to come back. Something is quite wrong with the time period in which they live (time or no time, however they want to look at it from their perspective). If they are positive beings who rebelled against the Sirian Alliance here in our time and chose a positive timeline, they wouldn't need to come back to assist us (make amends). So I think we can at least assume that most, if not all of the sources who are channeled, data streamed, or contacted via an Ouija board, are somehow connected to the Machine Kingdom timelines.

After I'd researched and cross-referenced the different channeled sources for a while, I thought they may all be different variations of Sirians, trying to deceive us from different angles, but it doesn't necessarily have to be that way. As I looked deeper into this subject, I came to the insight that the sources chose vehicles (channelers) who were directly connected to their timeline -- the timeline which it looks like they want to change. If you once again look at the diagram (fig. 5) and picture the arrows going from 2013 toward the Machine Kingdom, they symbolize slightly different timelines, all connected to this technological empire which is quickly being built in front of our eyes as we speak. If you then can imagine how additional arrows are branching out from the Machine Kingdom and further into the future, you can also imagine the different channeled sources sitting on top of some of these arrows, contacting somebody here in our reality, hoping to create a change in our time so that it affects them positively.

These sources may very well be the future versions of the Powers That Be, some can be Sirians, while others are regular people who chose a timeline where a particular source is dwelling. They know they can't really lie to us, or it will defeat their purpose, but they can manipulate us if they want to. However, we must assume that much of the information they are giving us is true from their perspective, but not necessarily from another source's perspective, because their overall experience is different. Therefore it's so important to use discernment.

i.ii.iv. The Hybridization of Mankind and its Implications

Now that we know the main topics upon which the Cassios agree with the former sources we've mentioned, let's go through some more distinct information that is not necessarily unique to the Cassios, but more rare and important in respect to what we're going to discuss in the future. The first thing is cloning. The Cassios are warning us from these things on many occasions, which makes me think that this version of our future selves (the Cassios, that is) may very well come out of the Machine Kingdom, in which cloning will be a big part.

In a transcript from 2010 the discussion circles around abductions. Laura is asking the Cassios what the purpose is with the alien abductions. First of all, which we have discussed elsewhere, the abductions are not always alien in nature. The most common are abductions done by the military or the military and ETs in conjunction. One of the major operations, according to the Cassios, is not only to create clones, but to create what they call "replacements". And with replacements they mean replacements of us! Listen to this:

"You see, if one desires to create a new race, what better way than to mass hybridize, then mass reincarnate. Especially when the host species is so forever ignorant, controlled, and anthropocentric. What a lovely environment for total destruction and conquest and replacement... see?"[\[12\]](#)

And what kind of hybrids do "they" have in mind? Well, we have discussed that too, but once again, they want to create an enhanced human; a new species that is more evolved, but still has the Fire of the Goddess intact, and in which they, the Sirians, can incarnate, so they can experience all the wonders possible in our divine bodies. This, the Sirians have one thing in common with those who think like me, who want to evolve our bodies and minds so we can use our body potentials to their maximum. The difference, however, is that I and my likeminded want to do it without using technology.

But that is not all of it, and it's not what I think the Cassios are talking about. Most alien abductions are orchestrated by the "Grays", who in this case are...who? Well, whom have the Grays often been seen together with? Yes, the Sirians in human bodies (the so-called "Nordics"). Let's think of it this way: once the Sirians are established here, they can genetically manipulate human bodies and use them here in 3D, but what kind of bodies would be optimal for the Sirians to use when they travel long distances in their hollowed-out craft? There are currently top secret projects, leaked by whistle-blowers, where scientists are working on creating a hybrid which is well suited for space travel outside the solar system. And how does this hybrid look like? It looks almost exactly like the Gray alien we are so used to seeing in drawings, science fiction movies, and all over the Internet! Any why would they look like the Grays? Because it has shown that this kind of body is one of those best suited for space travel due to its resilience and ability to adapt. It can also successfully withstand radiation in space, long term. This is the body NASA and other more secret space agencies are planning on using in the future for interstellar travel. All they need is the technology to transfer a soul from a human body to the "Gray". Once that is done, we're good to go. Of course, we also need an interstellar spaceship which can go through stargates, at least as long as we're keeping things on a 3D level.

What I am trying to say here is that what about if the Grays that have been seen together with the "Nordics" are no less than Sirians in interstellar space suits? "As above, so below". The only thing the Sirians need to do is to transfer soul essence to the Gray body and they are ready to go. Not to confuse these Grays with real Grays, however, who exist as well. Many say that Grays are very common in this galaxy and the next, the Andromeda. They have a better survival potential than let's say the humanoid body. The Sirians know this and seem to have managed to hybridize their own bodies with that of the Grays (some say they used the Grays from Zeta Reticuli as templates) and use them to travel between the stars.

But why do they need to experiment with human bodies here on Earth and mess with our DNA again in this respect? If they want humans to be space travelers in the future, and perhaps build an army, why not use the Sirian/Zeta template to transport human souls into?

The reason is possibly that the Sirian/Zeta hybrid has a problem when they are coming to Earth. We see them on the surface every now and then, but sooner rather than later they have to leave; they can't handle the effects from our Sun for a very long time, as it seems. Some Sirians were ordered to stay a long time ago, and some were left behind for unknown reasons. These Grays had to move underground, and there is where people like Phil Snyder found them and started battling with them decades ago. They are still down there. Keep in mind that the Gray template is not like a real space suit that you can take on and off; when a Gray hybrid is stuck here, they are stuck with the hybrid body, because they transferred soul essence from a real Sirian body into a Gray template, which now became their body until they have the chance to switch back.

The Sirians don't want to face this problem when humans are transferring their soul essence to a Zeta template, so they need to experiment with human DNA and mix it with the Zetas' so humans in Gray space suits can live on Earth as well. Then they clone the improved body type. This whole scenario could very well be the reason why sources like the Cassiopaeans and the Pleiadians suggest we don't start a big cloning process; it will affect them negatively in the future.

This is one major reason for abductions. Earth is going to be a strange place only a few decades into the future if the Sirians get what they want. First we are going to have normal humans like we have today (but much fewer of them); then we're going to have human hybrids who look almost identical to the Zeta Grays, but that's not enough. Studies have shown that medical research teams, taking order from the Global Elite, put nano-particles in pharmaceuticals. In practice, this means that people who take certain medicine (so far it's mainly antidepressants that are effected) are going to have their body structure slowly but surely altered, and so also their DNA. If this technology speeds up like it's supposed to do, we will see many human cyborgs by the year 2034, apparently!<sup>[13]</sup> In case this article is correct, some of us are going to experience this in our current lifetime! Things like this signifies the extension of the Machine Kingdom that many people are going to find attractive at first, until they notice, much too late, that it's the worst trap they have ever sat in, perhaps since the beginning of time.

There are more reasons for kidnapping people than we may think, so let me mention a few more.

The following is not the most common example, but important. The Alliance were kidnapping children in the beginning to the mid-1970s and experimented on them. Later on in life, these kids remember the little gray men who stood over them at the operation table, and they told their parents that strange little men were running around outside the house, or even inside the house. No one else could see them. The Alliance wanted 12 candidates for the "Maitreya", i.e. a new Messiah, whom is supposed to act as the Messiah of the New Age. The old Theosophical Society, founded by Madame Helena Blavatsky in the 1800s, and who channeled the Ascended Masters of the Great White Brotherhood, foresaw such a person coming into being at a later time. Today, Benjamin Crème, who is also connected to the Theosophists and the Great White Brotherhood, has made it his life mission to find this Maitreya. He has mentioned a few people whom he thought could be the candidates, and one of them was even seen together with George Bush Sr., but so far they haven't succeeded in finding him. The latest from Benjamin Crème is that he thinks Michael Lee Hill may be the candidate. Hill certainly fits the picture with abductions and little gray men.

Another self-proclaimed candidate is Supriem David Rockefeller, about whom I wrote an e-book in 2009.<sup>[14]</sup> The latest I heard from him was shortly after 12/21/2012 (which is also his birthday). A friend of his, whom I know well enough to know he's honest, got a phone call from Supriem in a luxury hotel in Washington DC, where he sat and drank, looking out over a big pool inside the hotel room. He told his friend that it was time to skip all the public distractions like Facebook and similar, and shortly after he deleted his Facebook account, and no one has heard from him since then. However, when I was in touch with him in 2009-2010, he told me that one day he was going to exchange those jeans he had for expensive suits and start mingling with very rich and powerful people who were going to help him to power. A year later, he started dressing up considerably, and now he "disappears" from public exposure while in a luxury hotel in the U.S. Capitol...

People like Ben Crème are oblivious of what is really going on behind the scenes. They are just dedicated to a mission which is orchestrated by those behind the scenes; they don't know the whole picture. And who is behind the scenes on this, by the way? Who is deciding which candidate is going to be chosen? Well, I certainly got a clue when I talked to the Illuminati in Great Britain. This group says they are the same group as Adam Weishaupt's Bavarian Illuminati, who once upon a time started the French Revolution, the Russian Revolution, and were part in orchestrating the American Revolution as well. Weishaupt was friends with both George Washington and other prominent Founding Fathers before he and his organization had to flee underground in Germany. Letters between Weishaupt and the Founding Fathers still exist. I always call this present group The Bavarian Illuminati, albeit they only call themselves the Illuminati these days, not to be confused with the Global Elite group so many people (including this author) have worked on exposing.

Mike Hockney, who is the public writer in their society, told me that there is a very top secret Secret Society behind the scenes, which call themselves The Brotherhood of Shadows.<sup>[15]</sup> Their main task is to produce these 12 candidates, who will then compete for the title of "Maitreya", and the "strongest man wins". According to The Bavarian Illuminati, the other 11 candidates will be killed. Nothing is said what will really happen to the chosen one; will he be a human soul in a hybridized body, or will a Sirian soul take over? My guess is definitely the latter.

Another more common reason for the abductions these days is cloning. The Cassiopaeans talk about this to some extent, and it has to do with the Superwave (or the Wave as many of the channeled sources call it), on which they say they're riding. We are going to spend a whole paper talking about this wave soon, and it's obvious that it's not only good star beings riding on the Wave. The Cassios say that a lot of cloning of humans is taking place right now to prepare for when the Wave arrives. When it does, they want to have a lot of soulless bodies waiting for them which they will try to enter en masse with the energies of the Wave. However, they don't mention who these beings are that's going to "enter en masse" into these soulless bodies. When the Cassios are saying "they", meaning negative beings, they are often talking about the Orion Group, aka the Sirian Alliance. This goes hand in hand with my own conclusion, and my own conviction is that many beings of the Alliance have already entered such bodies and are walking among us. Behind the scenes, they are then preparing for the Wave to arrive, apparently.

i.ii.v. An Interesting Connection!

In a session dated October 23, 1994, the Cassiopaeans reveal that they are not only the forerunner to the RA Collective with a purpose to take off where RA ended, but they also claim to be RA!<sup>[16]</sup> They reply to a question about where the RA Material comes from with a short, "us." This, to me, is quite an interesting statement, to say the least. If this is true, it is actually a mind expander and could explain a lot. I will later in this paper expand on the concepts and terms included in the Elohim Material as well as both the RA Material and the Cassiopaeian Experiment, which all lean towards that they are connected to the Sirians. The above statement from the Cassios, however, is quite a blunt one, confirming my hypothesis.

This is also the reason why I have divided the channeled sources into different categories. This paper is exclusively dedicated to those who promote the Harvest and are talking about the Wave Riders. Although I can't prove it 100%, I think I can prove without any reasonable doubt that these sources are connected to the Sirians, "love & light" or no love and light. Also, as the reader knows by now, I have spent quite some time listening to Pleiadian lectures and read all of Barbara Marciniak's books, and the Pleiadians have no problems admitting that they are connected to the Sirian Alliance, although they are supposedly a rebel group (and I believe them). My point here is that I know the Pleiadians pretty well, and the information they are giving us are well in line with that of the "Harvest channels" I'm investigating in this paper, except that the Pleiadians are openly against the Harvest and the concepts of STO and STS as well as Galactic Federations. They are basically the ones who inspired me to further look into these things, and so far I have found that they are right on the spot! However, being Sirians/Pleiadians in their essence, they still have the Sirian way of expressing themselves, and I recognize it in Utu Shamash, with whom I've had contact, but also in the Harvest channels.

i.ii.vi. Orions -- "The Transient Passengers"

The terms STO and STS (service-to-others and service-to-self) are extremely important to the sources we've covered so far, because they are the terms which we need to understand and live by if we want to ascend and be part of the Harvest, according to them. Also, when talking about different star races, these channeled sources often speak of them in terms of STO and STS. So, when they mention the Orions, they say there are two types of Orions; the STO and the STS. The STS is the group that came to Earth and started manipulating human DNA (the Sirian Alliance, led by ENKI), while the STO Orions are those of the Empire (acknowledging the Mother Goddess as the Creator).

The STO Orions are also, say the Cassiopaeans, called The Transient Passengers. This means that they are a "unified thought form". The Orions thus could create matter from a unified thought form (this is how the Cassios explain it, and it makes me think about how the Goddess created the Galaxies, nebulae, stars, and planets etc.). But the interesting thing is that they say that the Orions created them, the Cassiopaeans![\[17\]](#)

So, if the Cassiopaeans are us in the future, are they saying that we humans once upon a time were created by the benevolent Orions, i.e. the Mother Goddess and her Helpers? As a matter of fact, they do! They are saying that our home (the home of mankind) is in Orion. Laura and her group are protesting, because they learned from Lyssa Royal and Keith Priest and their Zeta Reticuli channeling that mankind's cradle stood in Lyra. The Cassios, however, say that this is not the case, and that one day we will see... (Note: When a channeled source says they are us in the future, it doesn't necessarily mean they are humans in the future. A great example are the Pleiadians, who explain this phenomenon pretty well. They also say that they are us in the future, and still they are the Pleiadian/Sirians. How is that possible? Well, it has to do with genetic manipulation again. Because we humans have a lot of Sirian/Pleiadian genes in us, they say they are us in the past and in the future, even if this is a relative truth. Utu Shamash also claimed that we and they are the same. I am pretty sure the same thing goes for the three channeled sources I've investigated so far).

Here is how the Cassiopaeans expressed it in regards to the Orions (A = the Cassiopaeans, and Q = the Questioner, while (L) within parentheses is Laura Knight-Jadczyk):

A: "In this part of your 3rd and 4th density universe, specifically your "galaxy" it is the region known as Orion that is the one and only indigenous home of human type beings ... reflect on this! Indigenous home base, not sole locator. What you are most in need of review of is the accurate profile of "alien" data."

Q: I thought that humans originated in Lyra and then a war broke out there and they ended up in Orion.

A: Lyra is not inhabited. There have been homes in all places, but some were/are transitory, and some are not. Pay attention to Orion! This is your ancestral home, and your eventual destination. Here is the absolutely accurately accurate profile of Orion to follow: This is the most heavily populated region of your Milky Way galaxy! This is a region that extends across 3rd and 4th density space for a distance as vast as the distance between your locator and it. There are 3,444 inhabited "worlds" in this region. Some are planets as you know them. Some are artificially constructed planetoids. Some are floating space barges. And some are "satellites." There are primary homes, traveling stations and incubator laboratories all in 2nd, 3rd and 4th densities. There are overseer zones in 5th and 6th densities. [...] The name "Orion" is the actual native name, and was brought to Earth directly...

Q: (L) Are the Orion STS the infamous redheaded Nordic aliens?

A: Yes, and all other humanoid combinations.

Q: (L) Okay, if it started with the Nordic types, and that is where the other humanoid combinations came from, what genetic combinations were used for human beings? Black people, for instance, since they are so unlike Nordics?

A: The Nordic genes were mixed with the gene pool already available on Earth, known as Neanderthal."[\[18\]](#)

The above information is coinciding with my own research as presented in Level II. I don't know what they mean when they say that Lyra is not inhabited, because I know that at least Vega is, and the Vegans (resembling the Vulcans in Star Trek) are to some degree Helpers of the Mother Goddess, although some fell for Lucifer's manipulating talk and rebelled against the Goddess together with others, mentioned earlier. The Nordics, like I said before, are the STS Orions, i.e. ENKI's group, who used the Neanderthals and later Cro Magnon to create the human slave race.

i.ii.vii. The Giants of Ancient Times

Many alternative historians talk about a civilization of old, which dwelled in what we now call Antarctica. Now it's covered with layers upon layers of ice and snow, but at that time it was a very prosperous land, teeming with life. The Cassiopaeans say this land was called Gor (not related to the novels by John Norman or any science fiction novel or film), and that it was inhabited by a humanoid species, 18 feet tall.[\[19\]](#) When I first read about this in their transcript, I thought they were talking about the Namlú'u; the human race which was here when ENKI and the Sirians came, but the Cassios say that this race was sexual (males and females) and they were not interested in space travel.

The height may correspond, but the Namlú'u were androgynous. When comes to space travel, what the Cassios say, I would say is semi-correct if we refer to the Namlú'u. They were probably not particularly interested in space travel, either, being the Guardians of the Living Library, but they were multidimensional, and could travel the universe by splitting their fire/soul.

Therefore, I don't think the Cassiopaeans refer to the Namlú'u, but an older race. After all, there were several experiments carried out here long before the Namlú'u. Apparently, this ancient race of giants didn't only dwell in Antarctica, we later find out, but they could also be found in South America, in the Amazon. Here they walk about the legend of the Amazon warriors, and in that case they are referring to the Orions. However, they get it mixed up somehow, because the Amazon warriors were females. They say that the governments know about this race and have found remnants which they keep in warehouses somewhere, and they have no intention to tell the public. Albeit, we have seen pictures on the Internet of extremely tall skeletons that archeologists have dug up. Some of these may very well be hoaxes, but according to the Pleiadians, many of them are not. It's just the regular routine work of Intelligence Agencies to debunk everything that has to do with truth.

i.ii.viii. Some Final Statements from the Cassiopaeans

As the reader may have noticed, I am bringing up a lot of subjects told by the different sources, and some of them may not even be that relevant to what is to come, and I could just have skipped over it and not included it in the papers. However, I decided to write about it anyway, because a comparison between the different channeled sources is very rare, if it exists at all, so I thought it may be a good idea to present something like that here. It could be a subject for several volumes of books just by itself, and I could have decided to complete a project like that as well, but I went for this shortcut instead. Hence, I want to end off with a few last statements from the Cassiopaeans.

Let's start the last part of this paper with some relevant information, however. In a transcript, Laura asked the source why the invaders hadn't invaded already full blast, when they have been present on the planet for hundreds of thousands of years. The answer that was given was that they don't want to rule us in 3D, because they are 4D beings. Therefore they want to rule us in 4D, once we've ascended.[\[20\]](#)

Well, that doesn't sound very encouraging to me. Of course, this already corresponds quite exactly with what I've said throughout my papers, although I don't use terms like 3rd and 4th Density when comes to evolution. What I hear, translated to what I've been saying, is that the Sirian Alliance want us to evolve so that they can take us over once our biology is more in line with their frequency. If we expand on this (and the Cassiopaeian statement was made almost 20 years ago), the time for the invasion would be approximately now (something the Cassios have said as well), because the adequate amount of humans have expanded their consciousness enough -- at least in biological terms -- that it's easier for the Sirians energy to take over, perhaps after having done certain adjustments. This means that those who believe the aliens are our saviors (or "helpers"; it doesn't matter) will be taken advantage of, because they are easy targets. The Sirian Overlords usually have no use for the human souls who subscribe to the New Age philosophy when comes to the ascension/Harvest process (other than for food), but they do have use for the divine human body template, which usually is more evolved than that of the regular person on the street. This is why it's so incredibly important that we stop agreeing with the Sirian mindset and start seeing through their deception and manipulation, or we'll be food, too.

What the Cassiopaeans are basically saying here is that when we go from 3rd to 4th Density, the Sirian Overlords are waiting for us (or for those who follow the path of those metaphysical sources), so they can take over the evolved bodies of these people and absorb the soul/fire in order for them to use it for their own purposes.

However, it makes at least me very uncomfortable to hear that once we "evolve" enough for the Sirians to think we're "ripe", they can "Harvest" us. The word "harvest" does not have a very positive ring to it, does it? Why using that term if it's not exactly what it is: a harvesting of souls to use for very dark purposes? I want you to think long and deeply about it before you decide to go for something like this.

But, you may say, if I just happen to be the kind of person who has a "big heart" and love to help others, won't I automatically go into this trap? After all, they say that if you are 51% or more STO, you will be harvested. No, not necessarily, because they also say that you will not be harvested as long as you live in your current physical body. Once you die and go to the between lives area, you will be harvested if you fit into the category and put into a 4D body, but you can also refuse! You do that by saying that you disagree with this and the whole Sirian Agenda. They may tell you that if so, you'll be sent to their planet of choice, which has a 3D vibration, and you will have to live another 75,000 years cycle there, under continuous slavery. Don't buy it! If you refuse their manipulation, they can't do anything; they won't inflict on your Free Will if what you want is appropriately expressed, and also what you don't want. Instead, you can go wherever you want to go and just turn your back to the whole thing. That is what I am going to do. Those in real danger, in my opinion, are those who buy into this whole "love and light" thing when comes to channeled sources; the ones that want to be harvested...

The source is also contradicting itself when it says that we will be put into 4D bodies between lives. If the Harvest process is natural, why do they have to provide us with bodies?

This is an excerpt from the transcript so you can get a feel for it. To me it doesn't feel good at all.

Q: We have to be mostly STO as a planet in order to move to 4th density, right?

As a "planet," yes. But I don't think that is gonna happen. I think that only a few will move to 4th density to an either already existing 4th density Earth, or that they will be instrumental in CREATING a 4th density Earth, and the rest will start the cycle over again in 3rd density on a "primitive" earth... The key lies in how many folks can be "awakened" to the balanced, positive-negative nature of cosmic reality.

Could this be why the STS forces want to "take us over" before and right as we get to 4th so we can tip the scales in their favour?

A: Pretty much it, in one sense. But, there is a more insidious reason... they are working VERY hard to PREVENT the graduation of ANY to 4th density. They want to keep ALL of earth as their 3rd density stockyard, and cafeteria of ethereal and physical food. BUT, if there is a movement to 4 D, they want to be in charge of it."[\[21\]](#)

You can see the similarities with my concept of the splitting of the worlds and their ascension into the 4th Density. Reading this quote above, however, gives me a good opportunity to also explain the difference. My concept is the Machine Kingdom (3D) versus going back to nature (4D). Eventually and gradually, over generations, the realities will split. I don't subscribe to a Harvest, where the change will be pretty much immediate, and those who go to 4D will be put in a new box with limitations. Once we are multi-d, we are free to travel the universe as we please and visit different dimensions and "densities". Almost no channeled sources bring up these important subjects.

Anyway, it's true that the Sirians in certain terms want to prevent us from waking up in its real sense, but don't mind us "waking up" to follow the guidelines of these metaphysical sources or to the New Age "religion", embracing the Ascended Masters (who are the Sirians in disguise, anyway). It's also true that they want to keep us as slaves in this 3D reality, but control it from 4D (if we follow the Cassiopaeian logic). According to the Cassiopaeans, the Sirians of today control our brainwave cycles via HAARP (headquartered in Alaska) so we'll stay either in 3D or 4D. This as well, is to me a give-away, because they are bluntly telling us that the Sirians are controlling both 3D and 4D with their frequency machines!!! So my question is: how can channeled sources embrace the Harvest, whether positive or negative, when they say, loud and clear, that the Sirians are waiting on the other side (see also the last paragraph in the indented quote above)? If the Sirians want to be in charge of it, how can we prevent that from happening once we've agreed to being harvested? They don't tell us. Bottom-line, dear reader, is that all these sources we listen to are following their own agenda! They are not doing this to be kind! We need to learn this, or we'll dig our own graves! Everybody has the right to do what they want to do, but at least I have thrown in my two cents.

In the same session as the quote above, they also mention the infighting between interdimensional forces. They say it's ongoing, and it is happening here in Earth vicinity; some of it even in our own atmosphere. They are telling us that the abnormal weather changes we are now accustomed to are mostly fighting going on in other dimensions, and it is "bleeding through" and showing up as tornados, hurricanes, and flooding. This information also aligns with what I've independently received earlier from one of my anonymous sources. Also, Jupiter is already a 4th Density planet, which in that case indicates that it would be a perfect outpost for the Sirians and others of similar frequency. They tell us moreover that 4th Density planets appear as gas planets to 3rd Density beings. This means, in that case, that the giant outer planets in our solar system (Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune) are all 4D.

This source also mentions 3 additional planets outside Pluto's orbit, so instead of nine planets (if we include Pluto), we have 12, which is the number this universe is based upon, not 7, like the Cassiopaeans and a few others want us to believe. The number 7 is definitely a divine number, but this universe is not based on it -- not from a human perspective at least. The additional planets, their distances from the Sun, their chemical composition, and their diameter, are allegedly as follows:

NI = Montonanas, 570,000,000,000 miles from Sun; solid matter; 7000 miles diameter

NII = Suvurutarcar, 830,000,000,000 miles from Sun; 18000 miles diameter; hydrogen, ammonia.

NIII = Bikalamanar, 1,600,000,000,000 miles from Sun; 46000 miles diameter; hydrogen, ammonia.[22]

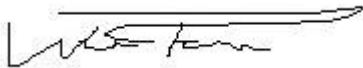

Pluto's distance from the Sun is about 3,666,100,000 miles, and its diameter is 1,864 miles, in comparison, and the Earth is 93 million miles away and has a diameter of 7,900 miles. So, the next planet, outside Pluto's orbit, is of solid matter and only a little bit smaller than Earth.

I've noticed that although the Cassiopaeans in certain terms subscribe to the idea of a feminine universe, they say that all gender and all duality disappears in 7th Density, so in their perspective the universe is still neuter. They (like so many other metaphysical sources) "forget" that the Sun, and any star, including the clusters of suns making up the Galactic Center -- all 7th Density in nature, according to the Cassios -- are creative forces on a very high level, and the creative forces on that level are feminine in nature and not neuter. The Divine Feminine is the ultimate driving and creative force in this universe and others. They also say that gravity is All That Is - light is gravity, too, and on its highest level, God is gravity as well.

And with that we're going to leave the Cassiopaeans for now. Part II will concentrate on other channeled sources who do not necessarily concentrate on the Harvest and the Superwave as a part of an agenda.

The Third Level of Learning is mainly focusing on the channeled sources and the Galactic Federations, as you will notice as we move on. This is definitely a Level III subject and couldn't have been included in Level I or II, unless we wanted to make Level II an extremely long level. The fact remains, the last part of this 3 level series of papers needs to concentrate on this subject in order to come full circle.

Love,

Wes Penre

Paper #4: Channeled Entities Part II -- -- Channeling the Grays

by Wes Penre, Wednesday, February 20, 2013

I. Abstract. A Short Summary so Far

In the previous paper, and the latter half of the paper before that, we were talking about the channeled sources who had one obvious theme in common -- the Harvest of Souls! When we look at these different sources one at the time, we tend to think that they are all separate from each other, telling their stories based upon what the questioners ask them.

However, if we cross-reference them we find something very different. It's hard not to get the feeling that they are all connected somehow, and at first we feel it, but we don't know why. Then we notice that they all use terms we've heard so much before, and they are all Sirian terms, such as the RA Material (MARDUK RA); Elohim (the Anunnaki/Sirians); Council of An (ANU being the King of the Anunnaki); the Council of 12 (ENKI/MARDUK'S council to decide what to do with us "Iulus"); the Council of Elohim (which would be the Higher Council in the Sirian Hierarchy -- the "off-worldly" one), and P'taah (or Ptah, which was ENKI's name when he was the first pharaoh of Egypt).

So we have the RA Material; the Elohim; the Cassiopaeans; Q'uo, and the Alpha Draconians (not yet discussed), and I know there are more out there who have these Sirian terms in common, and they are all here for the Harvest. They all deny such a connection to the Sirians, and RA even said they their name was taken for totally different purposes, but there are too many coincidences just to write it all off.

From what I can see, they are here to pull in as many "lightworkers" and "truthseekers" as they can into their fold, and they are using different channels to have as much variety as possible. They "cure the blind", "heal the crippled" and spread an enormous amount of "love & light" around them so we will think they are genuine and positive in nature. Some sources say that they are basically here to assist us in the afterlife when this lifetime is over by handing out 4D bodies for those who have been "good" and have their heart chakras open 51% or more. After that, those 51% will enjoy their next lifetime in 4D. But if you don't meet the criteria, your only option is to be recycled to a new 3D planet. This is what many of them want you to believe. Others, like David Wilcock's RA people, say they will come down in spaceships and bring us to the 4th Density while we're still here, in incarnation. [Q] Wild, but many people fall for it.

The sources belonging to this group of channels say they are riding on a cosmic Superwave which is heading our way, and on this wave both "good" and "bad" entities are riding. Once it's here, it's going to sweep over the solar system, and if you're ready, it's going to be a very uplifting event, but if you're not, it can be quite a negative experience both for the body and the mind. Of all the people who are unprepared, not everybody will die, but many supposedly will. Laura Knight-Jadczyk, who is in contact with the Cassiopaeans, spent approximately 1,600 pages on her website explaining and discussing the Wave.

This is as much as we've discussed the Harvesters of Souls and their agenda so far. However, to get the full picture of what is going on, we need to look into the "Grays", and especially the Zeta Reticulians and establish who they really are. And lastly, we're going for the real shocker -- the Alpha Draconians. When these groups are exposed, it should be pretty clear for the reader what this is all about, and many will be shocked. In fact, I've found out a whole lot more even within this week and a half since I released my previous paper.

II. Channeling the Zeta Reticulians

"Germane is a group consciousness energy, [who] states that "his" orientation is from a realm of integration that does not have a clear-cut density/dimensional levels [sic]. The term "germane" in the English language means "significant relevance", or "coming from the same source". Germane chose this term to somewhat personify his energy. Neither male nor female, he views us as evolving to become like him as we begin the process of physical, emotional, mental and spiritual integration, which leads us back to the Source of All."<sup>[1]</sup>

The above quote opens up a 360 pages long document which is basically a collection of channeling sessions, articles, and documents from between 1992 and 1999, by and with channeler, Lyssa Royal. It's no longer online, from what I know, but has some revealing information in it. Germane is one of several group consciousnesses that Lyssa is channeling; this group extended out from an earlier Arcturian connection (Arcturus is connected to ENLIL and the Sirian Alliance, which I will prove beyond any doubts in a later paper. Many people think of Arcturus as the home of some very spiritual, non-physical beings after have read the book, "We, the Arcturians", but like the Cassiopaeans say that these beings are not from Arcturus; the whole book was just a way to prepare us to be able to understand the concept of non-physicals. Some say that the Tall Whites, an alien group working for the Government on a military base in Nevada, near Nellis AFB, are coming from Arcturus. We are going to look into that connection and relay it to the Sirians in an upcoming paper).

Another source Lyssa is channeling is Harone, who happens to be a Zeta Reticulian Gray hive consciousness. Harone, who is the spokesman for this hive consciousness is a project leader for some genetic projects, and we get the impression that "he" is an expert on it (the Grays are genderless, but both Lyssa and I prefer to call "him" he for simplicity). In addition to this, Lyssa is also channeling a female being, Sasha, who is from the Pleiades, and lastly Bashar, who is another Gray consciousness, claiming to be us in the far future. All these beings and group consciousnesses are connected to each other in one way or another and are assisting each other in the goal to create a future society based on human hybrids.

I have read a few interviews with Lyssa Royal, and she comes across as a very intelligent, rational woman, and I can tell she is a person with a good heart. She is the author of a number of books on metaphysics and channeling, and started channeling already in the 1970s, before she attended some classes on the subject. She channeled a lot of different entities before she decided to stay with Germaine, Harone, and Sasha. Channeling Bashar was something she did in her earlier days, and this group consciousness is more known to be channeled by Darryl Anka these days. Lyssa channeled RA as well before Carla's group was contacted by them. Two of the more interesting earlier channels, according to Lyssa herself, were of one entity called Raydia from Arcturus, and Akbar from Orion. Raydia eventually "turned into" Germane. In a channel session, Raydia told Lyssa that this was the last time she'd hear from her, and a little bit later she "transformed" into Germane (whom we then highly suspect is connected to ENKI and the Sirians).

What I think people know her best from today, and what stayed most in the human consciousness, is The Prism of Lyra, a book which is more or less the story of the universe from the beginning, when life came through a prism in the Lyra star constellation into our universe, and later on moved over to Orion. Furthermore, it is explaining which star races came to Earth millions upon millions of years ago and created civilizations here. It also described how the Vegans created the dinosaurs and out of that came a reptilian race, which to some degree still lives here on Earth in underground caves and caverns, while others left the planet and went to other star systems. In other words, this channeled book is saying that at least one or a few reptilian races out there in the universe today actually originated on Earth. It also tells about the conflict between the Vegans and the Lyrans, and how mankind later on became genetically manipulated by a negative star race from Sirius, while a galactic war was raging in this sector of the universe.

The way Lyssa is explaining the difference between densities and dimensions is probably the best I've seen in channeled material. She explains the differences as follows:

"Density: Density denotes a vibrational frequency and not a location, which the term "dimension" implies. The density structure of this reality is primarily expressed in seven levels, though each level has sub-levels within it. The density scale is a model used to communicate one's perception of orientation in relation to other realities.

Dimension: Dimension refers to one's location in space/time rather than a person's vibrational frequency (density). Webster defines "dimension" as "Magnitude measured in a particular direction, specifically length, breadth, thickness or time." There are an infinite number of dimensions existing with a given density or vibrational frequency."<sup>[2]</sup>

Density, as most of these sources see it, is the opening of the chakras, one by one, which in turn lifts us to higher vibrations/frequencies. As long as we're in 3D, we are reacting and acting mostly out of fear and base our decisions from that. Fear belongs to the 3rd chakra in the body, which is controlled by the belly. The 4th chakra is the heart chakra, and this is the chakra they are concentrating on in the ascension. This is, of course, a simplified explanation of what it really is, but it works for their purposes.

I explained in Level I, "Genesis Paper #1: Human Origins and The Living Library" of March 31, 2011, the history about the Zeta Reticulian Grays, partly as it was told by Harone, the Zeta mass consciousness, and how they basically come from a planet called Apex in the Lyra star system. Once upon a time, the story goes, the Zetas were pretty much like us when comes to evolution. They, too, destroyed their planet, and the toxicity created mutations in their offspring. The babies were either stillborn, or were born with much larger skulls than their parents. This made it almost impossible for the females to have a normal birth. Then, to make a long story short, they were also invaded by another race of the Gray stock. A war broke out, which culminated in a nuclear war that ended up destroying the whole surface of Apex. The Grays thus had to live underground for many, many generations. That is supposedly how they developed their big, black eyes, so they could see in the dark where no sun ever shone.

The radiation the Grays were subjected to during the nuclear war made their body more or less resistant to it, but it came with a price. They could no longer reproduce and had to learn how to clone themselves to keep the population on a more or less steady level. They lost their reproduction organs and the digestive tract atrophied, and instead began to absorb food through their skin. With time, they became a bee-hive community in order to survive better.

What the Grays did not understand while they were living underground was that their planet, due to earlier misuse of energy; both nuclear and zero-point energy; had started breaking down the planet's energy field on a subquantum level. This created an electro-magnetic warp in the time/space fabric around the planet. This made their world change position in the time/space continuum, and when the species one day decided to go up to the surface and check things out -- to see if it was perhaps inhabitable again -- they noticed that the planet now revolved around a different sun in the Zeta Reticuli star system.

Some Grays then stayed in their new star system, while other migrated beyond Orion, where they eventually evolved into the Essassani Grays, where Essassani is the name of their planet. To us they became known as Bashar.

This is the ball part of the story that Harone, Sasha, and sometimes Germane have been telling us in channeled sessions back in the 1990s. Furthermore, they say they have an agreement with we humans to abduct us to learn more about us, so they can regain their sexuality and their emotions by studying us. They are promising that they are not making any changes in us. This, as we shall see, is not true; they are making changes in us and are later on admitting to it.

ii.i. The Zeta Agreement

Regular people, but perhaps even so the major part of abductees, have a hard time understanding what this agreement between Zetas and humans consists of. We who have researched this are aware of the TTP (Technology Transfer Programs), which is an agreement between our government and the Grays (now, forget about the Sirians for a moment while I get to the point here, and you are going to be able to see a very interesting connection). This agreement allows the Grays to abduct a certain amount of humans in exchange for technology. The best known agreement was that between the Grays and the President Eisenhower government in the 1950s, but abductions had been going on long before that, and Hitler had a similar agreement.

The TTPs certainly took place, but they are only a part of the whole Gray scenario. The TTPs were either agreements between governments and a very negative faction of the Zetas, or they were the Sirians themselves (in their "Gray spacesuits"), but not the main part of the Gray community. Not all Grays have been involved in those TTPs, according to Harone, Sasha, and Germaine. They say that the agreement to abduct humans is made between the separate humans themselves and the Zetas on a subconscious level, or between lives. They say that they can only abduct those who are vibrating within a certain frequency and transmit a certain "signal" which can be picked up by the Grays. The rest of humanity can't be abducted, because the Grays, who are operating from another density, can't physically find us.

In other words, those who are abducted are willingly being subjected to this, and have always given their consent, whether they remember it or not, according to our sources. Still, many who are abducted are afterwards very fearful about these events and feel both anger and terror from their experiences. They are the last to admit that they have been taken with their consent. The Grays strongly disagree.

Harone says that it all depends on how the abductee is letting themselves experiencing the event. They can meet it with fear, or they can see it as a learning experience which will benefit themselves, the Zetas, and the rest of humanity. If they choose the first alternative, the abductions are going to be very painful on many levels, but if they choose the second, the experience can be very rewarding.

But what is this all about? Why are all these people actually taken? Harone is the first to admit that the Grays lack both emotions and understanding of human pain and needs, and they totally lack the ability to have sexual thoughts and desire.

When these subjects are raised, Harone is giving us a comment we have heard many times before: they are us in the future! Oh no, you think, not them, too! We've heard that phrase so many times now that we're sick and tired of it. Why are these sources all saying the same thing? Are they all lying, or is it just proving my point in the previous paper, that they are all us in the future, but from different timelines?

Yes, that's certainly how it seems to be -- they are us in the future, but from different lines of time. That's the common denominator amongst all these channels we've mentioned so far. But on the other hand, it's not the first time in my papers that I've said that the Grays are us in the future. However, we are going to look at this from a different angle now and see if we can find some missing pieces, such as where the Grays come into the picture. If they are us in the future, how could things go so wrong?

I already told the supposed history of the Grays and their planet, Apex, twice -- here in this paper and in Level I. Albeit, a thought unmistakably pops up in the head when we read the story, and Harone mentions it as well; the story is very similar to the story of humankind! Well, that's not so strange when we, in a totally different channeled session, are told that the Apex story is more or less a metaphor for humanity's own history, and even future if we don't get our act together. So, more than a real story, it's a warning for us to change our ways.<sup>[3]</sup> However, later on Harone refers back to this story as being partly true. For our purpose, it's actually irrelevant, as we shall see.

Lyssa Royal's sources all say the same thing, that humanity around this point made a collective decision (instigated by our Shadow Government as usual, but whatever they say, normally goes, and people go along with it). This decision took us on a path through a certain timeline, where we started experimenting big time with genetics. Of course, we know that this is not only something that's currently being done only by the government and the military, but is in usual manner directed by interdimensional forces, our "friends", the Sirians. We have already talked about how they want to create Supersoldiers that are resistant to radiation and can tolerate harsh space conditions. The Sirian

Alliance already knows how to do that, because they were the ones who "created" the "Grays" in their own solar system once upon a time to use as "spacesuits" when they go on interstellar travels, and at the same time can comfortably move around in these Gray bodies on their own planet. The reason they can do that is because these Gray bodies are genetically manipulated in a way so that they can tolerate the density on the Sirian home planet. Moreover, it looks like they adjusted this body template for each star race who are allies with the Sirians, such as the Alpha Draconians, so that each race, respectively, could use the Gray space suit both for star travel and on the planets of their origins. When the Sirians and their allies first came to Earth, they came here in Gray bodies. And they still mostly do! That's probably why some star beings call them "lizzies", or lizards, because they look very sauroid.

In old Sumerian times we see the "Anunnaki" depicted mostly as humanoids, but with slightly bigger eyes. The Sumerian people probably knew that the Sirians came here as Grays but jumped into human bodies when they planned on staying on Earth for a longer period of time. The Grays bodies could only stay in our 3D frequency for a short time, where after they had to leave. In humanoid bodies, the Sirian Alliance could stay as long as they wanted. However, like artists often do, the Sumerian artists added a personality, or traits, to the statue or the drawing. What perhaps stands out the most on a Gray body is the big, black eyes. If the Sumerians knew that the Sirians, when in space, used bodies with big, black eyes, it makes sense if they added that to the humanoid bodies in their artifact, to give a hint of their real, "original" appearance when space traveling.

But where did the Sirians get the idea of creating Gray bodies for interstellar space travel in their hollowed out craft? It is my qualified guess, after have read Lyssa's and Keith's material, and others, that this is where the story about the Apex planet and the Zeta Reticulians is partly true. Somewhere along the line -- long before the Sirians came to Earth, and probably before they encountered the Orion Empire -- they invaded the Gray world and killed off the Grays in their usual cruel manner, and used the rest as slaves, possibly on the Sirian home planet. Whether the part of the story where the Grays were subjected to nuclear radiation is true or not, perhaps the Sirians quickly noticed how easily the Gray template adapted to the conditions in space, and from there, their genetic experimentation with the Grays started, which led to that they created their half biological, half machine space suits. Before they encountered the Grays, they must have either used their own original bodies and noticed their shortcomings, or traveled in some other ways, maybe even using some kind of artificial space suits, like our own astronauts do, but much more high tech. I don't have the answer to this.

Now, let's go back to Earth and present time. Of course, the Sirians already know how to create efficient Gray bodies because they use them all the time. Even if they have to genetically manipulate them here on Earth, and perhaps add human genes to them, it wouldn't take long for them to create Zeta/human hybrids. I wouldn't be surprised if they, in underground facilities, already have a whole army of human hybrids, ready to be used, but in suspense for now. Or, they are teaching human scientists how to do this genetic engineering from scratch. We don't know very much what's going on deep beneath our feet in those multi-leveled underground military facilities; not to speak about the bases under the ocean floors! There are whistle-blowers, of course, but they are usually only low level ex-military with limited clearance, and even if what they tell us can be horrifying, it's just the tip of the iceberg.

However far they have come with their hybridization, we now have quite a clear picture of what will happen in the future. Interestingly enough, an almost identical story is told by Barbara Marciniak's Pleiadians, who otherwise very much dislike the Grays and most of the rest of the channeling pack, and Galactic Federations in particular. Harone, Sasha, and Germaine are telling us that far in the future mankind has become totally hybridized, with no emotions and no sexual abilities. Reproduction is done totally through cloning. But just like when you use a standard copy machine and copy paper after paper, and use copies to create new copies, eventually the text will be unreadable. It's the same with cloning a species. The Gray's DNA became distorted and the immune system so depleted that the future Gray/humans realize that their species will not survive unless something is done.

So what they do is to become "time jumpers".

This means that they with help from technology are able to go back in time and insert themselves on our timeline from perpendicular time, a scientific term which we discussed earlier. On a linear timeline, a highly technological race like our future selves (or a race who can nano-travel, which most Grays can't, except Bashar and a couple of others, at the most) is able to go back on this linear timeline and insert themselves perpendicularly anywhere they want. What would be more appropriate than to do it here and now around the nano-second, when the old era ends and a new has just started? This is, after all, when all the timelines merge (like we've discussed before) and we start anew from a starting point, which is now, and branch off into different futures, taking us to different destinations on multiple timelines.

This is why we see different versions of Grays here, I've just found out. They are all us in the future, but in different stages of development, from different times, and perhaps even slightly different timelines! Many think these are Grays from different star systems, and that's why they look different, but apparently, that's not the case.[\[4\]](#)

So, the abductions by the Grays are not present time abductions so much as they are abductions by our future selves on our present time versions of themselves! And sometimes, say Lyssa's sources, they have help from more humanoid races, who are present during the abductions, to make the abductee feel safer, because they recognize the familiarity in the humanoid presence.

The end result of all these abductions from the future is the Essassani race (Bashar). Supposedly, they have settled in a star system beyond what we see in the sky as the constellation of Orion[5].

Figure 5. A close-up of a "Zeta" Gray, as we are used to seeing them.

The Grays, of course, are the product of the Machine Kingdom, where the human race slowly and successively turns into half machines and half humans, with no emotions and no means to reproduce; a dying race. A lot of things, as we shall see soon, will happen on these Machine Kingdom timelines before we get to the Essassani stage. But the eerie questions is; what will happen after the Essassani society? Why does it stop there, where humanity are better off than in earlier stages where the Grays are visiting, but still quite emotionless and not able to have sex? Not a word is said about what will happen after Essassani...!

The following quotes are directly from the Gray collective, Harone, and this is what they are currently engaged in:

1. That we will assist you in triggering latent genetic codes that will propel you into an accelerated state of genetic evolution. These codes were placed in you by your forefathers and were designed to be triggered when you achieved a certain vibratory rate. This vibratory rate occurs when your consciousness accelerates. That is what is occurring now. In our work with you, when we interact with you either physically or etherically, we work with these genetic structures, these latent genetic codes. Some of them can be activated from the etheric level; some need activation on the physical level. As we have agreed to do millennia ago, we will carry out this agreement of assisting in this species triggering.

2. Even though we do not understand the concept of emotion we seek to understand it and we watch you in order to do so. We have been told by others who interact with us that your species' goal at the present time is in expressing and then integrating your fears. Even though we do not understand why, we understand that our interactions with you promote fear in some people. It is not our desire to promote fear in you, but those we interact with who are guardians to you tell us that your confrontation with your fear is of vital importance at this time in your development. Though we do not intentionally desire to trigger your fear, we are made aware that our interactions with you do in fact trigger that fear."[\[6\]](#)

I was just listening to a CD by the Pleiadians from late summer 2012, where they said that a group of Pleiadians who are still willing to use weaponry to protect Earth and themselves (apart from Marciniak's group, who are against weapons) are currently in battle with the Grays here in the solar system, trying to chase them off. Whether they are succeeding or not, I don't know yet, but Marciniak's Pleiadians were not too optimistic about it if I should trust my feelings and senses when I listened to it.

To the Pleiadians, the Grays 100% represent the Machine Kingdom, I can tell. Like I said, they too tell us that the Grays who are operating here in our solar system to a large degree are us in the future. In one of the more recent lectures, they finally explain what the tyranny in the Pleiades in our future (their present) is all about -- and it's more to it than I have told before.

They say that at around this time, in the nano-second, we humans made a choice to create a very high tech society, the so-called Machine Kingdom. Of course, it's all run by the Sirians, but humanity, more or less as a whole, chose to go in that direction. Not many people chose the more natural path, away from the technology; a technology which consequences later may become humanity's Achilles' heel, at least on one or more timelines.

Eventually, say the Pleiadians, humanity is going to turn into half robot and half human and start exploring space. And not only that, we are also going to start conquering other worlds (doesn't this sound like the Sirian evolution all over again? Only, this time the Sirians are in charge of using humans to do their job, which is more like a rehearsal for bigger tasks, like taking over Orion). Eventually, in a distant future, the tyranny we spread is going to reach the Pleiades, and supposedly, on a certain timeline, we will conquer the Pleiades and start a tyranny there. A rebel group of Pleiadians, who in fact are Sirian/Pleiadian descendants, once upon a time the creators of the Nephilim, and the ones who also used their DNA in the mix to create Homo sapiens sapiens, are leaving their bodies and meet in the ether in a "safe place", where they can channel their message through time and space. Through their vehicle, Barbara Marciniak, they then reach humans such as myself via their lectures.

So, what the Pleiadian rebels say they did was to trace back the tyranny in the Pleiades to our present time, where there is a "fork in the road", and people choose different probabilities to create their own timelines in the Multiverse. Like I mentioned, in versions of the nano-second (on other timelines) where the Pleiadians are not present, only a few chose not to go for the option to create a Machine Kingdom. As usual, most humans were oblivious that they chose a timeline which would lead to such a catastrophic future. They were just fascinated by all the cool technology, and one thing slowly led to another.

Apparently, there are thousands upon thousands of people around the world who listen to the Pleiadian lectures and get the message. What they want to do is to slightly change the timelines, and by educating people so they can make more conscious choices, the tyranny will hopefully disappear in the future (their present time). Those of us who take their teachings to heart, but also start thinking on their own and do their own research, one by one help changing the vibration of the mass consciousness, and more major changes will occur that will create more distinct options.

The Pleiadians are suggesting in their lectures that we choose to evolve without technology, just by natural means, which is done through education and willingness to change accordingly to the changes in our belief systems. As usual, they ask us to use discernment even when listening to them, and it's our choice if we want to believe what they teach us.

The Pleiadians were the first to suggest we go back to nature, which doesn't mean we need to throw out all technology; some of it can still be of assistance to us. Technology in itself is not bad; it depends on how we use it. But it's important that we don't let technology run our lives, and that we only use it when we see it can really enhance our living. In other words, they suggest we create a totally new timeline, based on what they've taught us. Thus far, they are quite pleased and say that bigger changes than we think have been made in the mass consciousness. Most people will still choose the Machine Kingdom, but many more than anticipated will now choose the timeline that leads to natural evolution, without Harvest or Gray intervention. We may not always notice this, because not everybody who wake up are blogging or participating in discussions on the Internet.

But shouldn't we help the Grays, then? After all, they are our descendants! Well, that's what the fork in the road is all about. Some souls (especially in the afterlife, apparently) made the decision to assist the Grays to achieve their goals. They probably did so because they thought that the Grays are now our future, and if we want a better future than what they have produced so far we'd better help them. Therefore, they have agreed to spend perhaps more than one lifetime as guinea pigs and abductees for the Grays.

In the future, a branch of humanity will realize that the choices they made were non-survival and want to go back and change things, but personally I am not going to be a slave to the Sirians anymore and choose the Machine Kingdom even if it's to help our future selves. In fact, if we choose the natural way to evolve, we are creating a brand new species, and the Grays are no longer our descendants in that sense after we've branched out. What they want to do and how they do it is their solution to the problem, but I for one am not going to get involved in it. I know there are many more people (perhaps you who read this) who will think like me. And besides, the Machine Kingdom does not end with the Essassani, probably. It will continue in one form or another. And somewhere along the line, things will branch off again, for sure, and one branch will go for attacking Orion, because that's the Sirians' goal, apparently. With all this in mind, it may be a whole lot easier for people to make a choice.

However, it's very important that we understand what choices we make. In the next section I want to quote a channeled session between a group of Zeta Grays and a human being from the audience. It is all happening during a Bashar section. The channeler is Darryl Anka.

ii.ii. Grays Speak!

"Q: Is there a way we can communicate with one of the Greys through you, by this process?

Bashar: Yes.

Q: In the mass-consciousness?

Bashar: Yes. Do you want this now?

Q: Yes I do.

Bashar: One moment, we will see if this is allowed.

Greys: Speak!

Human: Greetings, we enjoy having you here.

Greys: Enjoy?

Human: Enjoy, you don't understand an emotion, I suppose? We understand you have a lack of emotion. And that's why you are inbreeding with our race. Is that correct?

Greys: We are blending.

Human: Blending

Greys: For our agenda of rectitude.

Human: Is your agenda going to be complete within this next short time span?

Greys: Your time span of a decade.

Human: A decade.

Greys: Complete.

Human: If it was not extended, if it was stopped short within this next month would that effect your future race, your Essassani race?

Greys: No stoppage is imminent. Therefore no discussion is needed of this point.

Human: We feel that we do need to discuss this. This abduction scenario is ...

Greys: You may feel as you wish, no stoppage is imminent!

Human: This abduction scenario needs to end.

Greys: It will end when the agenda ends.

Human: Are you in enslavement of a Draconian race, as of this moment?

Greys: No, your information is erroneous.

Human: You do this only for your self-preservation, is that correct?

Greys: There are levels to our species, what you would call factions. Our faction is dying, our faction has need, our faction also recognizes that you are dying; our faction is attracted to your faction through death and resurrection of both species simultaneously, through the agreement of our simultaneously co-created agendas.

Human: This is against free will of human nature.

Greys: It is not. It is agreed, you have given your agreement on other levels.

Human: You have technologically manipulated our free will in order to accomplish this. This is not allowed!

Greys: You have emotionally usurped our will.

Human: This is not allowed!

Greys: This is allowed because you have created it.

Human: And you have created your death scenario also.

Greys: And you are creating yours.

Human: We have passed that point.

Greys: You have not!

Human: Your technology has put us to that point where we obviously became extinct a decade ago.

Greys: You have not, you still have not allowed your world the balance it needs for there to be the transition as smoothly as it could.

Human: The transition is happening right now.

Greys: It is in process, and you see upheaval and what you call detrimental environmental impact around your planet.

Human: Well, we also see too that there's an abduction scenario that needs to stop and should not be continued any longer; it should be stopped at this present time.

This is the mass consciousness of this planet of our free world.

Greys: What you are referring to as stoppage is not stoppage that you seek, what you seek is transformation and equality of terms. You do not seek stoppage; you seek conscious participation.

Human: Well, our negotiations need to be re-evaluated.

Greys: Then evaluate them.

Human: We are evaluating at the moment and this needs to cease.

Greys: You do not need to evaluate them with us; you need to evaluate them with yourselves.

Human: With you because technologically you are at an advantage point at this moment.

Greys: You do not understand the concept of technology as we experience it.

Human: And you do not understand love emotion, the energy that you need to exist with, and that's why you are becoming extinct.

Greys: It is now through hybridization that we are beginning to connect to the understanding of what you experience and label as love energy, but you as species, do not exhibit love energy in the way you ask us to.

Human: We are being manipulated at this point and that's why we want our free will back, we want it back!

Greys: You have your free will, you have no manipulation of your will with regard to your ability to express what you call your emotional context.

Human: We do not want any more of your technology here on this planet; it is self destructive.

Greys: You have no more of our technology.

Human: And it will be agreed upon.

Greys: You have no more of our technology. What you experience as the idea you refer to as our technology is not our technology any longer. It is your technology; you have your FACTION; you have your structure; you have your military; you have your [secret/shadow] government. These are exploitation of your free will. We do not participate in that.

Human: Not at the present moment, but who has manipulated that to start that?

Greys: In time, agreements were made between what were deemed to be the representatives of your world. You still allow those individuals to represent, but we are no longer engaged.

Human: Well, we do understand what you are saying with our emotions as you look at it, as our shortcomings, but we do as a mass-consciousness want it to end.

Greys: It will change, and in that it will experience what you call an end, but you are required to change before it can be experienced as an equal transition.

Human: Well we are here and we know what is going on, and we do expect action and we expect you to keep hold up your end of the bargain.

Greys: Our end is met. Your end is within yourselves. End of transmission.

Human: Thank you.

Bashar: One moment, one moment, one moment - did you have a satisfactory conversation with the entity?

Q: Pretty much. He's not very emotional but I knew that.

Bashar: But you knew that.

Q: Yes, I knew that. I knew that I was dealing with a machine that...

Bashar: Well, so to speak. You are dealing with a type of hive mentality.

Q: Right.

Bashar: You are dealing with an entity that only experiences, shall we say, the closest approximation of what you would call an emotion: the sensation of irony.

Q: I see.

Bashar: And that is all that they can experience in that state. Now understand that what you ask to converse with, was one of the more primitive factions. We thought it best to simply start at the beginning with one of the older and more primitive factions. You must understand that there already more evolved factions of what you call the Grey, but do understand more concretely the blending and incorporation of the emotional body.

Q: And that is your future selves.

Bashar: Yes, but in that sense, it is the idea that we gave you first as the opportunity to interact with, what you call, the foundation, so that the interactions could ripple upwards through the incorporation of the entities' hive mentality and have some kind of an effect, as you would say, up the line.

Q: Well, do you feel that I had an effect on him that you can see or feel at the moment?

Bashar: I feel that you had an effect on yourself, and that will make all the difference in their capability of interacting or not interacting with you, in the way that they determine that they must. That's the difference.

Q: Well, I just concerned with the present time and what is going on here. That's why I'm here.

Bashar: But watch your levels of fear, for you yourself, are exhibiting some of that vibration still. And the idea is that, as much of that vibration of fear and anger as you in yourself experience it, only reinforces the idea of the agenda that you say you would like to transform.

Q: That is true.

Bashar: So you yourself must come from UNCONDITIONAL LOVE, even as you state your preferences and stand your ground. That is what will create the equality of terminology that will allow conscious interaction and participation with the level of the Greys that ultimately does have the incorporation of the emotional body, sufficiently to understand what you are saying and interact with you on a more equal basis.

Q: If they were to end their agenda at the moment and be prematurely short for months instead of a decade how would that effect the Essassani race?

Bashar: It would not affect us since we are in what you would call a parallel reality time track. But, in terms of their reality time track, they would cease to exist. They would die.

Q: They would die at the present moment?

Bashar: Yes.

Q: Is there any other way that you can salvage them or can save them in any other way, if they had to end it at this moment?

Bashar: One moment.

Q: A cosmic reason?

Bashar: One moment one moment one moment - there was an offer made by another species to them as an alternative, that they rejected.

This offer, if it can be, perhaps, translated into your language, would be something as follows; it was likened to the idea, of offering to render their essence down into a mathematical construct, and to be deposited in an artificially created matrix. Until such time that evolution would allow there to be, incarnationally speaking, automatically bodies available for their constructs to evolve into, or incarnate into, that would allow them to express themselves and learn to express themselves in a more balanced way. However, they rejected this because they feared, from their fear, in that sense, as best as they can experience fear, that it was a trap.

The idea being that they reflect that aspect of your civilization that does not trust itself, for they contain that idea of not trusting since they are not in balance with themselves, and therefore only deem themselves to be capable of deciding how it is that they should allow this agenda to play out, and will not allow others to help them in that sense.

Q: Is there a way that we can have that negotiated?

Bashar: Again, the idea is, to keep it at home. Allow yourself to strengthen your own unconditional love for yourself, and allow yourself to make the changes that you need to make within your own society, for it is only the changes that you need to make within your own society that will allow your society to have the collective critical mass to be able to deal with them on a more equal and loving basis.

Q: Well, we also do have help from other entities from other sources.

Bashar: Yes, of course. But help is not doing it for you. We cannot do that. It is your hands. You have had, and always do have, the free will. But, again, it comes down to the fear that exists within your society, and it is that that needs to be transformed.

Q: Also their fear of extinction.

Bashar: Yes. But they are only reflecting and are attracted to your society, because your society also contains that kind of vibrational resonance.

Q: I did understand that, yes.

Bashar: So, work on that and that will help them as well as yourself.

Q: Okay, and tell them to work on theirs also.

Bashar: We do not need to.

Q: I see, okay, well thank you for this communication.

Bashar: Thank you."<sup>[7]</sup>

Isn't this clearly showing the reader what a mess we have got ourselves into? The person in the audience is trying over and over to convince the Grays that the abductions and their interference must stop. However, the Grays are, ironically enough, correct. There was an agreement made and the Grays are playing out their part in it. Our representatives, just like the Grays say, made the decisions for us, and the Grays will not stop until they are done, and by doing so, they are still not inflicting on Free Will, because they have our consent through our representatives. You see how they do it? This is Sirian tactics, as the reader has noticed from earlier papers, especially from Level II. We can also tell from what we discussed earlier, that this is a less advanced future Zeta/human hybrid, just like Bashar indicates.

Bashar is right, too. We can't go out and more or less shoot Grays and think that it will take care of it. We have to work on our own fears and shortcomings. When we've done that, we can, as individuals and as a people, reevaluate old agreements between humans and ETs and void those we don't like, but in our current sorry state, there is not much we can do, except inner work -- it all comes back to that. Inner work and disagreement with being controlled by anybody outside of ourselves. It comes back to claiming our sovereignty as a species, and we don't do that by watching "Bachelor" on TV.

What I am doing in these papers is that I bring our worst fears to the surface by telling it as it is, from what I have concluded in my research (please evaluate and keep and discard as needed), so we can process it on a conscious level instead of letting it sit there, deep in our unconscious, unreachable and used by the Sirian Alliance as fear-triggers. We have no choice but to look at our fears and our dark sides and evaluate them by recognizing them for what they are and let go. Hopefully, I'm being successful enough in doing this and more people will, like I have, learn not to fear the dark side anymore. Some may say that they were never afraid of this in the first place, but they were, whether aware of it or not, or all this wouldn't have been buried away from them in their unconscious. Fear does that. Only reading this material shows you are a brave soul and are willing to look and make decision based on what you read. Much fewer people than you think are willing to confront these papers.

ii.iii. The Collective "We" -- Who Are They?

So where do the Harvesters of Souls come into the picture? This is a very interesting question, and I am not sure if the reader has figured it out yet or not. If not, no problem, because this is all tricky and quite manipulative.

Have you ever wondered why almost all these channeled sources call themselves "we"? "We are the Cassiopaeans!"; "We are the Elohim!"; "We are the Zeta Reticuli!"; "We are the Pleiadians!"... I can go on and on. Then we have "I am RA!", which is singular. However, RA explain to us that they are a Social Memory Complex, and therefore a group consciousness, and that's what most of these channeled entities call themselves -- group consciousness! But what does that really mean?

Well, they tell us that this is "natural evolution", and we present time humans will eventually be a group consciousness as well. Then they go on telling us that they are of 5th, 6th, 7th Density, or whatever it may be, and when we reach the same level as they are at, we will be like them. But first, we must be subjected to a Harvest before reaching each new density, and the Harvest from 3rd to 4th Density is now! So we'd better be prepared and have our heart chakras open, right? What happens is that many people stress out and ask themselves over and over, "Am I good enough? Will I be part of the Harvest, or am I doomed???" There is a lot of fear involved in this Harvest process. As we shall see, there is this future human hybrid who tells us through Lyssa Royal that machine technology is the natural way to evolve, and we need help to do it; help from those who know how to use nano-technology. That is true for them, because they may not know better, but it's a lie. A species can, and is supposed to, evolve on their own, without external "help".

Now, let's think about it. Who else do we know who think of themselves as "we", a "collective", or a "bee hive community" where the group is everything and the individual next to nothing? Ah! The Grays!!! So who can all these channeled sources be? You got it! They all have to be Grays; there is no other logical option. They all say 1) they are us in the future, 2) a group consciousness, 3) they are all giving us the same message, but from slightly different angles, so they can attract more truthseekers, and 4) they are able to channel love & light in huge quantities (which is done by machine technology, which we shall see later in this paper), while still sounding like monotonous machines, and 5) they all hope we'll make it through the Harvest, so we can be like them.

But why the Harvest? Well, it's obvious that they want to change things on their future timeline, which ended up with the Bashar group consciousness. In other word, they failed and are now coming back from different places in time and space to start all over again. They want a soul, that's what they want, and they want evolved souls! Why wouldn't they? They want as many spiritually evolved people gathered together as possible, focusing on one thing -- the Harvest. Then, when the Harvest is happening, after this lifetime is over, they hijack our souls, steal our Fire and try to figure out our emotion by researching our light-bodies. And God knows what else they have planned to do with these people in the ether whom they subject to the Harvest?

We need to remember that the Grays don't necessarily look at themselves as evil; they simply want to survive, and we are their guinea pigs. They have no emotions and no remorse, so they can't see that it would be something wrong with using evolved souls, trying to figure out how they work.

Even the Pleiadians say they are a collective. They are different, however, in that they want to stop the Gray's experiments, and they give us the option how to not participate in this quite horrendous future by creating an alternative timeline. I wouldn't be surprised if they end up being Grays as well, but are a splinter group who is hoping that they can ride on the wave we create when we naturally build a new future -- without being dependent upon technology. I am not saying this is the case, but it's a possibility. If so, they are still correct, because that's the way out. Yes, the Pleiadians say they are us in the future as well, but rather than saying they are the Grays, they claim to be those who mated with human women and created the Nephilim, but also contributed with their DNA, which is still in our bodies - in other words, the Fallen Angels. Therefore they are us in the future, and also our ancestors. So, that's a paradox, but like Harone says (the quote is at the end of this paper), when we get into paradoxes, we are getting closer to the truth.

And where are the Sirian Alliance in all this? It looks like the tyranny and the machine people (the Grays) are related to humans, not Sirians. This may be so, but let's say something happens in the future, and the Sirians need to step back for a while and say, "We didn't do it, it's the humans. They did it!" And whatever created that situation forced the Zeta/Gray hybrids -- the future humans -- to rectify their past before they once again can be used for Sirian purposes. We know very little about what will happen in the future, and all we have here is the Grays' stories, and they are not complete. They simply tell it from the viewpoint of their searching for their Holy Grail -- human emotions and sexuality.

Another possibility is that the future human/Grays are in fact controlled by the Sirians all the way through; even in the Grays' attempt to "rectify" themselves. Perhaps the Sirians are not happy either with how we humans turn out 2,000-10,000 years from now, and are indeed in charge of the Zeta program to recreate the human race in our present time and forward. The Harvest would in that case be a part of that whole scheme. I would not be surprised if it ends up being this way!

When I think about it, the only channeled source that comes to mind which is not a hive community is the Seth Material by Jane Roberts. Seth is one individual, and I strongly recommend Jane's books; they are very enlightening! And I am pretty sure Seth is not a Gray!

As long as we are in our current bodies, we can only raise our frequency so much during one lifetime. However, if we do what we can, become an inspiration for others, and continue to work on yourselves, that's the best we can do. Then, when our bodies die, and we eventually come back to Earth again (if this is what we decide to do), we will incarnate in a version of the world that matches our new frequency. Then, the next time around, it gets a little better again and so forth. We will get ideas, or get together in groups to create whatever communities we wish to live in. The Global Elite, the Sirians, or whomever is on their wavelength, will probably still be here the first few lifetimes, because they still match the range of frequency we are operating within. However, each lifetime we will incarnate on a version of the Earth that has a higher frequency range than that of the previous lifetime, and soon enough those who do not vibrate within the same range will not be able to live in the same reality as we do. Then, perhaps a few incarnations or so from now, we will be born on an Earth where the Global Elite, the Sirians, and humans who vibrate within their frequency band, will no longer exist in our world. The ones who do exist there are people quite similar to us, who are more into expressing love, compassion, and understanding. Our reality will be less and less dense.

This doesn't mean that the Sirians and the Global Elite have lost their stronghold; they will still be here on Earth, doing their thing, but in another reality, because of the difference in frequencies. However, the negative forces and the humans who chose to follow them will not move to a world, thousands of light-years away, like the channeled sources suggest, but will still be here, on a lower frequency version of Earth. Albeit, if the Sirians get it the way they want it, some people probably will be moved to another planet. We can only speculate.

Now, many of us will not return to Earth for a very long time after this lifetime is over. Does that come as a shock? Well, we are the forerunners, and our job is to build the energy so that the rest of humanity can make their choices based on a knowledge base that will soon come more and more to the surface in the mass consciousness. Those who wake up due to our work will be the ones who build the New Earth, the one which will eventually not be able to house the lower vibrational Invader Forces with their global control. When our job is done, it's time for many of us to move on. Of course, there will be those among us who still choose to stay here and come back again after this lifetime is over and help building this New World, and that's a very noble thing to do. And there are those among us who look forward to living in the New World, because Mother Earth, the Goddess, is after all one of the most beautiful planets in the Milky Way Galaxy, and 'm sure it will be even more beautiful when experienced from a higher dimension.

III. Understanding More About the Gray Hive Mentality

If we take everything else we've discussed in regards to the channeled visitors and add what Lyssa Royal and Keith Priest have put together in their book Visitors from Within to the soup as well, we get an even closer picture. Hence, I have selected a few sections from the Royal/Priest book to quote and/or analyze and discuss before I finish this paper.

We talked about the agreement between the Zetas and the U.S. Government in the 1950s, which resulted in a TTP, allowing the Zetas to abduct humans, especially in the United States. This was done by a faction of the Zetas, which the rest of them call the "negative faction", but the rest (if they want to call themselves the "positive faction"?) have not hesitated to take advantage of that program. Although the "positive faction" doesn't deliver technology to the Government at this time (but will in the future), they sometimes refer to this program to justify the abduction scenarios, and the way things transformed on that day back in the 50s, the Zetas do have right to take us, according to universal laws.

However, what the "positive faction" likes to address more frequently is the voluntarily program, where humans, either between lives or otherwise, agree to help the Zetas regain their human abilities in the future, and thus also safeguard their own future existence; or so they think! We have no solid evidence that this is the Grays' real agenda, although it seems to at least be one of them, but also, it looks like the Grays will not succeed, either, because when humankind decided to become half machine and half human, there was no way back. After that it seems like they will have a peak in their efforts when the Essassani race is created, but after that -- an eerie silence! Also, the Essassani race is being created very far away into the future, so it sure will take the Grays a lot of time even to get to that point, and still they will not be like we are now, because they lack most of their Fire. That's why we say they are "soulless". They are clones, left only with a machine-like brain which is half physical and half etheric, and a soul that seems hopelessly depleted from its Fire due to that the Sirians have used it up, and that's a long way from a soul. The Essassani, however, seem to have managed to create bodies which are good enough to work as soul carriers, and they can even nano-travel, but they can't regain an emotional state of mind.

The agreement the so-called positive faction wants to stress is the following:

"There is an agreement between our species. You are teaching us about the love we supposedly have within us that we want to unlock, and how not to fear our own individuality. We are teaching you about your fears and how you can turn those fears into your strengths. Our relationship is a symbiotic one, for we are all part of the same Whole." [8]

I find this particularly interesting, because Prince UTU, when he contacted me, said basically the same thing that our relationship is symbiotic in nature, and we are all part of the same Whole. The Grays further comment:

"There are many who protest what is occurring with abductions and genetic experiments. Those who protest can only protest when they feel they are victims. Those who feel they are not victims will not protest. Do you follow what we mean? The act of protestation means that in some way there must be a feeling of victimization."

There is some twisted logic in this statement, if we really look at it. It is their conviction that it's not only when an abductee protests that the above applies, but also if someone like you and I do it; they want us to "realize" that we feel like victims and need to change our mentality. This is very similar to Hidden Hand's logic, as well.

What about if we don't agree when we see someone who can't defend themselves, being carried away and experimented upon? Is that victimhood or is it caring about another, defenseless individual? Even if that individual does have an agreement somewhere down the line, agreements should be allowed to be changed and re-evaluated. In this case they can't, because once you make an individual agreement with them and want to break it, the Zetas are referring to the Government agreement, and thus the individual has no longer any say in the matter. That's the twisted logic. Anybody has the right to say no, but the abductees don't know how, and the Zetas are certainly not teaching them. All the abductees need to say is something to the effect: "I understand that we may have had a one on one agreement once upon a time, and I may even transmit on an unconscious level that I still am part of this agreement, but I am telling you here and now that our contract is void. I no longer want to take part in this experiment, and I don't want to encounter you again. So now, bring me back where you took me and leave without coming back again."

Some may argue that this is us in the future, so we owe it to ourselves to set things straight, but people don't understand that all they need to do is to choose another reality -- now, in the present. If they change their belief systems, they choose another timeline. This may in the long run lead to the termination of the "Gray timeline", but in my opinion, that's what needs to be done. If not, our future is going to become a living hell -- at least for those who choose to become mesmerized by Sirian technology.

Bashar says that we are moving towards a time when we "much more openly and freely choose to confront that which [we] fear". [9] He is correct in this, but if we do what they want, it will just slingshot us right into the Machine Kingdom. I must say I like to listen to Bashar; he -- or they, rather, as they are a Social Memory Complex -- have some very empowering information to give us, and these Essassani Grays may even have good intentions, seen from their perspective. They have even gained a good sense of humor. However, it is in their interest that we choose a certain timeline, or they may cease to exist in our future! This is most probably the real reason why they are here. They know the intentions of the less evolved Grays and know that if things are not going in the right direction this time around, things may be worse for the Essassani as well. They want to go further in their development, as well as we want to go further with ours. It's up to each person to choose; I simply lay out the stepping stones and what the consequences most possibly will be when we follow one or the other, or any alternatives thereof. You see, these Grays, I've noticed, have the same philosophy as I have, because it's just how metaphysics works. Bashar says that the contact with the Grays will lead to a personal transformation on a widespread level, and then lead to species transformation, very similar to what I want, but without nano-technology.

So it really boils down to in what direction we put our thoughts, intentions, emotions, and actions. Our future depends on it, as the reader can clearly see. If we agree to help the Grays out of the mess they're in (we humans are creating it) will also continue the slavery we are experiencing right now, but it will become worse and really won't resolve much, from what I can see. The Essassani are definitely not the solution, in my opinion. But now, at the end of the Old Era, we get a new chance to start all over and create a new future, and I doubt we get another chance in a very long time.

Right now, as we speak (and this has been going on for a while), members of the Zeta community are incarnating in human bodies with an agreement they have with their own to be abducted and experimented on from early childhood and throughout life. This is another type of agreement, and is the only reason these Zetas are incarnating on this planet in human bodies. Obviously, this doesn't work either, because the Zetas don't understand the nature of the human soul. If they incarnate in a human body with the little individual consciousness they have left, they will never figure out how it all works, because they exclude the human Fire from the equation, just like our own scientists do.

Sex is of course another thing they want to be able to re-explore. Therefore, from another dimension, they are spying on humans having sex without the humans knowing about it. Hearing about this, people in the audience protest and say this is a intrusion of privacy, but again the Zetas say they only do it with people who respond with their "wavelength", and therefore are part of their project. To them, there is no difference between a conscious decision on the part of the human, or a sub- or unconscious response. The Grays respond to the part of the human mind which is the "loudest" at the moment. Their goal for now is to be able to have sex with a human. They say they can do that already now, even without having any genitals, because according to them, they can manifest a penis by just using their thoughts, and even have sex. However, they are not able to get the sensations a human gets in that situation, and they can't make a female pregnant.

Harone explains that the Zetas are here in our local space, in what they call interdimensional space, and all they need is the flip of a switch in order to enter our reality and time continuum. But interestingly enough, none of them can nano-travel naturally until they reach the Essassani stage in their development. Before that, the Zetas are "nano-traveling" with the help of nano-technology! This is partly what the current investment in this technology will lead to. We will discuss nano-technology much more in one of the last papers, and I'm sure the reader will find that interesting. I am going to explain it in a very simple way, so people can really understand it. But bottom line is that when people see Zetas go through walls, they usually do this with help of technology, and not because they can do it as a part of their natural evolvement, which we who choose to evolve naturally are going to be able to do in the near future. With machine technology, they can also slightly change the vibration of the abductee, so they vibrate on a different frequency than the solid wall, and thus the Grays can lead them through solid objects. This, too, is coming from the horse's mouth.

Many of the future Zetas are half etheric, like I said before, and Harone confirms what I told you earlier in my papers, that we humans have a tendency to call everything non-physical which we can't see, or perceive with our 5 senses, but Harone says that what we call non-physical can be very physical in other dimensions; it's just in other light and sound frequencies.

Furthermore, they are talking about the 60% group versus the 40% group, where the 60% are the Meta Group, and we're talking about visitors here. They explain that the 60% group are of a slightly higher dimension and density and are able to shapeshift by changing their vibratory frequency so we perceive them as something different from what they really are. The 40% are more truly physical (which means 3D beings). These two groups represent present and future visitors to Earth. Interestingly enough, some of the 60% they call the meta-Lyrans, meta-Pleiadians, and meta-Terrans. The Lyrans, without any doubts, the way Harone, Sasha, and Germane describe them, are the same old Sirians under another guise. So, in other words, they are talking about the Sirian Alliance as those who can manipulate energy in the above ways, just like I've said many times before. The meta-Terrans are future humans whom the Sirians have taught how to do this. There are most probably already those who can. We know for a fact that the old shamans could do it in the ancient past - without technology.

In the previous section, I said that the story about Apex is at least partly the story about we humans. For those who are interested, I want to give you the whole conversation where Sasha, the female Pleiadian who is working with the Grays, is telling us this. Keith, who is asking the questions, is Keith Priest, co-author to the book:

"Keith: Obviously the Zetas are not truly alien to humanity. There has to be a deep connection that brings the two species together. It is a reunification of something in a unique way to create something new. I would go so far as to say that those who had a hand in engineering the humans also had a hand in engineering the Zetas. How else could it be?"

Sasha: Yes, that race would be called the Founders, and you discussed them in your book The Prism of Lyra. We would also like to bring up an issue that has been debated many times in your past about who, exactly, the Zetas are. In Visitors from Within the Apexians were discussed as being the species who became the Zetas. It has also been debated by others that the Zetas are really humans coming from the future to influence yourselves.

Keith: Considering the nature of time and space, couldn't it be both?"

Sasha: Absolutely yes! Many people would feel that they need a definitive, either/or answer. Are the Zetas Apexians (a race outside of yourselves) or are they future humans - a literal aspect of yourselves returning to heal its past and change its future? It does not have to be one or the other. In fact, because reality is cyclical and not linear, a definitive answer does not make sense. It is both! Therein lies the paradox. As we have said many times, when one approaches a paradox, one is the closest to the truth."[\[10\]](#)

And Sasha adds in another place in the book:

"...different factions of Zetas and/or humans who are conducting various contact activities. Each of these groups has a different agenda"[\[11\]](#)

So is it a wonder that people think the ET issue is complex and confusing? This is particularly true when we learn that part of the so-called "ET issue" is not about ETs at all, but about time jumpers. Many of them are humans from the future.

Moreover, they tell us that another thing they were doing from the future was to "insert" the Asian race into the melting pot of Homo sapiens when they saw that the evolution "didn't work"[\[12\]](#) Not only do the Asians have similarities with the Grays when comes to their physical appearance, but they are also more of a "hive community", where the group means everything and the individual means less (I'm not saying this to insult Asian people, just as a matter of fact). They thought the Asian people would be the solution, but it wasn't.

The Grays have always been fumbling in the dark, due to their lack of emotions and comprehension of their own past. One would think that even if they can't feel pain (which they can't in the sense we do it), they could at least notice that something is wrong when we do, during the abductions, and do something about it. Apparently, when they have humanoids with them at the abductions, something is done about it, thanks to the humanoids, but then the next time around when the Grays are alone with the abductee, they seem clueless again. How can something like that evolve, or change anything? To evolve as a species, you need to be able to learn these basic concepts, otherwise it's useless. And future history shows that it apparently is useless. Sasha says that humans will experience a leap in consciousness due to the Zetas' present interaction, but even if this is the case, it only propels us towards the Machine Kingdom, and we're running right into the arms of the Sirians. And the Harvest, according to the Alpha Draconians (whom we are visiting in the next paper), started its first phase in 2011, when the first people were harvested. This means that "evolved people" who died around that time were harvested in the between-lives-area.

Now we're supposedly only waiting for the Superwave. If the reader still has doubts which future you want to experience, a future hybrid child named Ethil in Royal's and Priest's book tells us that in his reality there is no difference between technology and spirituality, because they have blended so much. Apparently, in his time they have also managed to extend their lives considerably with technology. Ethil says that he basically can stay in the same body as long as he wants (thousands, perhaps millions of years if he so wishes), and when he gets bored, he can choose another one. Sounds exactly like what the Sirians do. And in the case of Ethil and his likes, they are at a point in the future development where humans are almost all machine, and as long as you can repair machine body parts, you can hypothetically live forever. Besides, if time is not linear, we have a totally different ball game. Furthermore, Ethil says that the natural way to evolve is with technology, and we need "outside help" to be able to take the leap.

IV. How a Hybrid is Created

Now the reader hopefully has a better comprehension of what I meant when I talked about the "enhanced human", "the evolved human", or even the "new species". This is literally so, because our DNA structure is changing radically as we learn new things and start living more in line with the cosmos and less within the current societal structure. Most of us still need to have a job and a roof over our heads, but we have a better understanding of how things are set up here, and know the difference between the 4% universe the Sirians want us to see and experience, and the real, 96% universe.

We also know what the goals of the channeled sources are, and we need to remember that our branch of the Tree of Life -- a branch which is slowly but surely growing out -- is the natural evolution. No future being whatsoever is going to tell me that we need more genetic manipulation to be able to evolve. The Pleiadians said recently that this is a Living Library after all, and generic engineering and manipulation has always been going on here, and always will. Still, they say (and I agree), we are now an evolving species and must be left alone to do our thing. Hence, we need to claim our sovereignty, just like I've stressed as well throughout these papers, and one of the reasons I got interested in LPG-C and their projects, which were based on this same principle. We need to take a step outside of all agendas and create our own goals -- individually and as a soul group.

We still have a few papers to go before Level III is finished and what's been hidden deep inside of us has come to the surface. So I suggest we move on to explain a little bit about how human hybrids are created; the real process. Again, this comes from the Grays themselves, but is it true? I would say it is, because it makes sense, it fits, and it feels right. The process the Grays use when they genetically manipulate a race is told by Harone, whom allegedly is the expert, being in charge of many of these projects.

Here on Earth, the military has been involved in genetic engineering and manipulation for quite a while. But like with so many other things, there are always different factions, and each faction only knows so much. There is the "mainstream faction", which basically doesn't know enough to succeed in this field, and we have the "hidden section", which is overseen by military officers from the Shadow Government and the Sirians themselves. One faction is for the public, where a small percentage of what has been accomplished is released, so that the other faction can get more funding.

Harone says that the problem in the mainstream faction is that scientists only look in the physical realm, and therefore miss out on 50% of the process, or more. So now Harone will reveal how to work with both the etheric and physical realms.

The Etheric Levels: The etheric work is done on a meta-atomic level (where meta means "beyond"). It means it exists outside the physical dimensions, but exists here as well. The manipulation on this level is plasmic. Light plasma is induced in different areas to create specific coding, or for language. The physical adjacent to this non-physical state forms itself according to the light plasmic language that is set up.

When they do their genetic work in the creation of hybrids, they first begin on the most basic of levels. They create a template around which physical life will eventually form itself. Chromosomes, RNA, DNA -- what we call the genetic structure -- represent some of the smallest genetic codes we can read right now. But there is a whole world beyond that, and that's where they begin.

They start, first of all, by harnessing the template that exists for all forms of life in the reality the Zetas share with us. This template is a triadic structure that represents one polarity, its opposite, and the integration and the joining of the two. Life forms the way it does because of this template, which exists in the reality they share with us. They begin with the triadic template.

Within the energy dynamic of this template they then insert plasmic light energy with the language encoded into it at the most basic levels. It is difficult to exactly describe what this language "says", they tell us, because it is a language that does not exist in physical reality. Its components eventually instruct physical matter how to create body structures. The language first affects the non-physical, and then the physical realms. Work on the etheric levels can be compared to building blocks. From the most basic level, plasmic light language instructs the physical matter to arrange itself according to these etheric templates. They have been working on many different strains of hybrid beings to find the most resilient ones, so they alter the plasmic light language attached to the triadic template in order to find the most perfect body structure that can serve them.

Physicality is always connected to the non-physical, so what is done in the non-physical always affects the physical realms. There may be, in our terms, a time lag between the non-physical work and the physical manifestation, but that is only because of the idea of growth in an exponential sense from non-physicality to physicality. Matter is matter because it has compressed itself enough from the energetic state to form a densified field. When the template is given enough light plasmic energy, it becomes compressed and enters the physical realm. This is the bridge between the etheric and the physical.

The Physical Level: Our scientists may think that the physical aspects are much more easily manipulated. But once they have what we would consider to be a fetus, they then can monitor and direct its biochemical development so it will have the right mixtures and proportions of chemicals needed to develop the type of being they would like to create.

The physical genetic work continues throughout the life of the hybrid simply because they haven't perfected the strain. They must continue to achieve the perfection that they seek. This is done through experiments and neurochemicals, adrenal chemicals, and basic chemical function in the body. It is also achieved by directing various light and sound frequencies on the developing fetus that will give it the signature vibration it needs in order to develop according to their plans. On all levels, then, the genetic work is done. The etheric level is the most basic, but is instrumental in the forming of the physical level.[\[13\]](#)

So the above is, in general terms, how a hybrid is created, according to the Zetas.

The questioner at one point is asking what the humans can gain from the visitations we currently have, and Sasha, the Pleiadian female, is the one who gives the answer:

"Again we must understand that we must speak in generalities because each group has its own desires. They are always looking for ways to rectify their past. So the humanoids see this as a way to give back to humans what they perceive they've removed from Earth for thousands of years."[\[14\]](#)

Think and ponder this statement. Why do all these star beings have to come here and rectify their past? And if this really is what they're doing, what does the following statement from Sasha mean? (Remember that the "metahumans", which are the Zeta/human hybrids, come back here in time in different stages of development and on different timelines. Therefore, they may have different agendas, even when they come as channeled sources):

"The metahuman from the future has several different agendas, but they are all intertwined. This has to do with stimulating the energy necessary in the individual or the mass-conscious mind or a society to trigger the evolutionary process -- to make the leap."

"The Zeta Reticuli, even in the future, have not yet mastered the understanding of emotions, but they have learned the value to using empathis to translate to them what the human is experiencing. The humanoids take the emotional expressions from the human, synthesize them into a form that the Zeta Reticuli can identify with, and channel those emotions through themselves so that the Zetas can understand. [Emphasis not in original].[\[15\]](#)

So, their agendas may be different, but they are all intertwined. And then, the humanoids have the ability to take human emotions and funnel them through themselves so that the Zetas can understand. If they can do that, they can do exactly the same thing when they channel through a human vehicle! And this is precisely, just like I've said so many times, why the audience who listens to a channeled source can feel all this love and light inside themselves during a channeled session, when in fact the entities are not even able to feel emotions!

In my papers I have talked a lot about possession and how entities can attach to humans if people are not protecting themselves. What do you think happens when a channeled source is transmitting all this love and light, which is nothing but human emotions that they "steal" and funnel back through the vehicle and into the minds of the audience? Well, people feel so good about this boost of energy that they temporarily leave their bodies. And what can happen when someone leaves their body unprotected? They put up a "vacant sign" on it, and entities feel free to enter the empty body! This is entity possession.

This may be one reason why the source is funneling all this love & light through the audience, but not the only reason. Of course, they also want to win people over so they can harvest them.

Does this mean that we can't listen to channeling anymore, because we may become possessed? Not necessarily. But it is important that you protect yourself by putting an imaginary bubble around you before you start listening to any of that kind of material. Not all of it will make you possessed, of course, and not everybody get possessed, either, when they leave their body, but what I'm saying is that there is a chance. And if it is the purpose of the source to possess people, they will do what they can to take advantage of the vacancy.

Mother Earth will continue orbiting the Sun in all the different versions of herself. The Machine Kingdom will happen here and not on a third party planet, and so will the splitting of worlds, where higher dimensional versions of Earth will exist simultaneously, and in the same space as the versions containing the Machine Kingdom. The only difference will be that they exist in different densities and dimensions, like Earth always has had its different densities and dimensions. The question is, which version do you want to live in?

We have talked about many reasons why it's important that we do our inner work and how important it was to take advantage of the leap in consciousness and awareness that came, almost like a free ride, with the nano-second. Not only because this is the natural way to evolve, and we need as many people as possible to start realizing what is going on so they can begin to work on themselves, but it's also been (and still is) a race against time. The future hybrid Machine Kingdom Zeta/human hybrids are doing exactly what we are doing, but they are doing it with technology! They, too, are trying to get as many people as possible to realize that we belong to a cosmic consciousness and that we need to reach for the stars so we can apply for membership in the Galactic Community.

But there is a major difference! The steps they are taking will lead humanity to a community where we become members in different Galactic Federations; most of those are just different names for the Sirian Alliance. The Zetas are mentioning the Association of Worlds, where the end product, the Essassani Grays are members. Indeed, Bashar and Sasha say that the Association of Worlds is the same as the Galactic Federation, which is the Sirian Alliance!

The following is what the Zetas are doing with humans right now as we speak. They are talking about thousands of people, but that was in the 1990s. Imagine how many they are now. This is why we can't win the race and hope for all mankind to evolve like we want to do it. This is why we simply need to do the best we can and affect as many as possible -- as many as are willing to listen. Our job is not to force our ideas on others. All we can do is to work on ourselves, be of assistance when and where it's asked for, and that's it. The ripple effect will do the rest, and time will tell how many will go in this or that direction.

"...we are facilitating something within you that is the culmination of a very ancient agreement.

The genetic work on your planet with your species began from a more primitive form of life over a million of your years ago." [...] "At that time, it was not the Zeta Reticuli doing that work. In this time that you call the present we are picking up where your forefathers have left off..."

"But we also give you something. That something is more codes, more activation on the light-plasmic language level. This is occurring with literally thousands of people on your planet. There will be a critical mass reached, and when this happens, the species leap will occur in force."

"What type of code? Can you explain the ideas that are represented there?"

"...Primarily, the code we are triggering within you is the recognition of yourselves as part of a galactic ecosystem, a working piece of the whole..."

"...We see the work we do with you as a galactic evolution, and since you've experienced only species planetary evolution, it is a new arena for you. But there are guides, there are facilitators who have been there before who assist you..."

"...You will begin to speak the same language symbolically."

"Do you mean in our thinking and feeling?"

"Yes." [16]

In the first part of this quotation they are telling us that they are continuing the work of the Sirians (which basically means that they are working on behalf of the Overlords), and that they are making changes to us, in spite of what they told us earlier (see the beginning of this paper).

You can also see at the end of the quote that by coding us differently, they will alter our ways of thinking into thinking more collectively (and become more of a bee-hive collective, i.e. a Social Memory Complex(!)), and of course in a way that will fit into their agenda. If we let them do that, we are left with no choice. Can you see now why it is so important that I let people get the chance to take part of all this information? I haven't seen all this being revealed in its context anywhere else (and I mean the Levels I-III as a whole), but as soon as I'm done, it will be, and I will feel more at peace.

My next paper, which will finish the series on channeling, is going to be all about the Alpha Draconians. Believe it or not, but it will take a whole paper, and it is totally necessary. I have never seen such a revealing information anywhere else when comes to channeling and what the real purpose of the Harvest is. We have already talked about that here, in relation to the information we get from the sources discussed thus far. But the Alpha Draconians take it ten steps further, if I may say so. It's too much to include in this paper, so I decided to give this information a paper of its own. You will see what I mean when you get the chance to read it.

V. Disclosure

People who are into channeling and have found it exciting may feel discouraged now after I've written these papers. Don't be! First of all I wanted to inform people about the true nature of the Harvest, and second, the more we learn about these things, the more we can use our discernment and figure out what information can be useful for us, and what is not. Even the most conspiratorial channel has good material in it which can be used for our growth. Again, let's never throw out the baby with the bathwater. I listen to channeled material myself and learn how to discern.

The bottom line, however, is probably as follows: the star beings who are really genuinely here as our friends are still mostly lurking in the background without intervening. Some may have incarnated here in the same manner as we humans, and grown up here in order to directly assist, while others (most of them) are still observing. The latter are hoping that we can figure out on our own how to say no to the Sirian Alliance, raise our frequency, evolve, and be ready to make contact with a Galactic Community. When we are ready, contact will happen on an individual basis with this Galactic Community, and the information will be shared on channels who can handle it and are prepared. This is already happening and has been for a while.

So many people are talking about Disclosure, which has become a subject with a capital "D" these days, and they are writing to the government, or even make appointment with our "representatives" to discuss the matter that the ET issue, which has been kept secret from humanity, now must be disclosed. There are those who want all files opened and let the ETs show themselves to the peoples of the world.

I am sorry to make the reader disappointed again, if this is what you are hoping for, because the chance it will happen is next to zero. This is for several reasons, but the two most important ones are,

1) The government is hiding so many crimes on this subject and many representatives in high positions are afraid for their lives if the UFO issue will be disclosed. They will do all that's in their power to keep the real X-Files hidden. And there are more people involved in the cover-up than we may think. However, there are factions of the military and the government who also want an end to secrecy and are working behind the scenes to make Disclosure happen, but they tread lightly, because they have families and don't want to end up like JFK and others who have "gone too far". Then when have something which is perhaps even more important:

2) What do you think would happen if ETs start showing up here on Earth? Many of them are interdimensional and "materialize" from thin air. Many may look like us, but not all of them will behave like us. Then two things are bound to happen, which are

a) people will freak out, because they are not ready. They will deny the truth as if their lives depended on it, because "everybody knows" they are demons, and many religious people will call them demons, Devas, Jinns, or whatever fits into their rigid belief systems. And they will demand that this horrific alliance with demons will stop. In the name of God they will invade the White House or whatnot and call everybody in there Satanists. Others will be scared out of mind, and our mental hospitals will be overfilled, and

b) most peoples' nervous systems can't handle the energy from an alien. These energies that mankind would have to deal with are much stronger than our own at this point, and we have not been trained and prepared for such an encounter. Many, if not most peoples' nervous systems would fry. So, before the positive ETs show up in our cities, mankind needs to be prepared, and this is something I will talk about in my book, which will follow upon Level III.

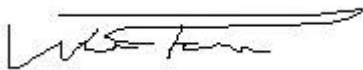

So, in other words, Disclosure in the sense most people think of it is not written in the stars at the moment. I have talked about the Machine Kingdom and a world ruled openly by negative ETs, so is that not a kind of Disclosure, after all? Yes and no. Of course, it is Disclosure in the sense that humankind will start mingling with this group of ETs directly, but they will live among us in enhanced human bodies that can handle their energies, and well established in those, they can hold back the powerful energies that are destructive to us, except when they want to show what they can do, or want to punish us. In these cases, people are bound to witness some phenomena they have so far only seen in movies. But remember that ETs walked among us in Sumerian times, and earlier. In those times, believe it or not, peoples' neurological systems were much stronger and they could more easily handle ET energies, because ETs were part of their daily life.

For those who plan to come back to Earth and be part of building a higher density world, I would suggest you start preparing yourself for encounters that are much more beneficial for you than the Sirians. They are here in Near Earth Space, just waiting for you to be strong enough for an exchange to take place, without any exterior motives. Those who plan not to come back to Earth still need to practice this for the same reason. Many of us will move on and perhaps start an interaction with the Galactic Community already after this lifetime, and at that time we need our personal issues resolved -- at least those which hold our energies back. It's very important. That's why I, and many other researchers, have stressed how imperative it is that we take a look at our dark side, let them face the surface, take a look at them for what they are and let them go. This is the simple procedure that needs to be done right away if you haven't already started on it. And whatever comes up, it is nothing to be ashamed of. We all have done things we weren't proud of, which we throw down into the abyss of our minds, hoping to never have to dig them up again. Surprise, surprise! Now is the time!

I know there are a lot of channeled material I haven't covered; the above is just a scratch on the surface. Some groups I will present in the Galactic Federation Paper later on, but if I have missed your favorite channeled source, I am sorry. However, the ones I've mentioned are enough to dig into in order to understand the agenda.

Love,

Wes Penre

Therefore, they think their timeline is the "best" there is; there are no alternatives, unless they intervene. Of course, they would never want the "splitting of the worlds" that I've been talking about, because that could potentially change their timeline, too, and they wouldn't have any control over it.

Paper #5: The Alpha Draconians and the Creation of the Starhuman

by Wes Penre, Wednesday, March 6, 2013
(<http://wespenre.com>)

I. Alpha Draconians -- Dragons from the VOID

She calls herself Abraxas, but as an Alpha Draconian she goes under many names. Her perhaps most prominent name is Sirebird Beardris, and she is one of the Founding Elders of the Council of Thuban, residing in the 12th Dimension.

I found her on a forum called The Birth of Gaia, <http://www.birthofgaia.com>, and she uses a gravatar of a young, attractive woman. In reality she is a "walk-in", which means she is a non-physical ET, whom as a soul is "possessing" a body where an original soul already dwells. It is like a soul came into your body and shared it with you and you kept yourself in the background. She emphasizes that she didn't just "walk in", but that it was an agreement between her and the original soul. Walk-ins are not uncommon these days when people are evolving, she says, and exactly what she means by that will be clear later on in this paper. She goes as far as to say that you and I are walk-ins as well, otherwise we wouldn't have any interest in this material. A walk-in can also be seen as a higher aspect of self. The reason she is here is to inform humanity of what is going on right now in regards to ascension and the so-called "Harvest".

The human with whom she shares the body is John Shadow, a 53 year old handicapped man, born in Queensland, Australia, on June 4, 1957. John has a similar disease as that of the scientist, Stephen Hawking, but in Shadows' case, it's concentrated only to the legs, and he needs two canes to be able to move around. Abraxas, however, looks at herself as a female and addresses herself like such. She also says she's the Thuban Council's Ambassador to Earth, where Thuban is the name of the star, Alpha Draconis.

The Thuban Council, which is directing her message to mankind, are not 3D beings, but of the 12th Dimension, which is within the KHAA (also called the 96%, or the VOID). Abraxas is actually telling us that she is from the VOID, and that the 12th Dimension is not in the physical universe.

Abraxas uses a type of data streaming when she is transforming her message, just like A'shayana Deane does when she is communicating with the Guardian Alliance, and the Thuban message can sometimes be just as complicated and esoteric as that of Ms. Deane. However, Abraxas is not reluctant to answer questions when asked, and sometimes the questions are of high quality, and that makes her going. Some new and quite shocking material is being revealed.

But why is she here? What does the Council of Thuban want? Because the Alpha Draconians are super-bad, aren't they? If someone would eat you alive, it would be them, right?

Not according to Abraxas. She admits, though, that there are Dracos in lower densities who are more like savages in that respect, but she is the messenger of a very highly respected Royal Dragon Council. And of course, as usual they are us in the future! Abraxas says we have a lot of Draconian DNA in our body and that our reptilian brain comes from them. The reason they are here, preparing for the Harvest, is because we called for them, our future selves, due to that "it's time". The Thubans also believe that they are here to assist James of the WingMakers, whom they in most part support. And just like James Mahu Nahi and Hidden Hand, Abraxas has no intention to go public except on a few forums. She is of the conviction that those who need to find the information will find it.

Just like RA, the Cassiopaeans, and others, the Thubans are coming only because of the Harvest. And just like them, they are riding on the Superwave. But there is a difference; the Alpha Draconians say they are in charge of the Harvest. They are the Highest Order, and the ones who will see to that the Harvest happens. She also says quite a lot about us, and for one, we are of Dragon blood and Dragon seed, and therefore we should come to them, and them alone. And fear not; the Dracos are benevolent (so she says).

I believe there is the equivalent to a few hundred pages long thread where the Birth of Gaia members interact with Abraxas online. I started reading it some time ago, and when you see through the esoteric language she uses, you mainly see similar information that you see when studying channeled sources; albeit, she goes a whole lot deeper. Otherwise, it's the same love & light, STO/STS, density teachings, and ascension in form of a Harvest. However, towards the end, when Abraxas gets into a dispute with a few of the forum members, it's getting extremely interesting. Suddenly, she lets her guard down and tells these people exactly what the Harvest is all about and why they are really here! Suddenly, the whole subject on the Harvest makes all the sense in the world!

So I decided to write this paper to reveal the same thing to you that was revealed to me, but without much of the complicated linguistics. Her message is often delivered in quite an esoteric language, and hopefully I can make the whole subject more coherent and easier to read than on the forum. Albeit, the forum is there for those who want to read it all, but it often requires all of your attention to grasp what she's saying. Here is the URL: <http://www.birthofgaia.com/t116-abraxas-thuban-qa>. The thread on the Birth of Gaia Forum started on October 17, 2010. Enjoy!

II. Understanding the Basics of Alpha Draconian Cosmology and the Draconian Star Race

Abraxas starts with giving us a short introduction of the Council of Thuban, but goes more into details later on. She says they are not well known by any beings dwelling in the lower dimensions, but have been mentioned by the Andromedans, and their messenger, Alex Collier.

When we look at what Alex Collier says about the Alpha Draconians, it is that they are probably the most misunderstood of all star races. He says he has witnessed a deep respect for this race, generated out of admiration and fear. He further says that the Draconians are probably the oldest race in our universe, and they don't even know how they came here.<sup>[1]</sup> The Council of 11 (or just 11 for short), which is the Andromedan Council according to Collier, say that the Draconians were here first and are therefore the heirs to this universe and are as such all royalty! Furthermore, they say that the Dracos have conquered big parts of the universe and altered the DNA in species they have encountered on their conquest.

Apparently, the Thubans have told the Andromedans that the most densely populated area of sub-races of Draconians is the Constellation of Orion, Rigel, and the star system known as Capella. The Thuban thinks that fear rules and love is weak, and the weak are meant to be slaves. Therefore, they don't exactly bring peace where they show up. They use technology for control and domination and they brainwash their young to be suspicious against other star races, including humans. Abraxas refers to Collier's paper, but neither confirms, nor disputes the information therein.

So this is the story the Andromedans are telling us about the Draconians. Thuban is one of the star systems the Sirians have conquered, so then the Draconians are pretty much in alliance with, or maybe even slaves to the Sirians, right? Not according to Abraxas. She is talking about archetypes ruling the universe, where the Prime Creator is on top, and the Alpha Draconians, or the Thubans, of the 12th Dimension is an Archetype of the 1st Order, while both the Sirians and the whole Alliance are Archetypes of the 3rd Order (we will go much deeper into archetypes later in this paper). It means that these Thubans are way higher up on the interdimensional scale than the Sirians, or at least so they claim. However, they are promoting the 3rd Order Archetype as being the controller of this 4D reality. This shows clearly in the thread, where Abraxas promotes the Second Coming of Jesus, whom is none less than Jesus/Lucifer/ENKI. But isn't Lucifer Jesus' adversary? No, according to the Thubans, Lucifer is Jesus' mirror, which means that when Jesus was battling Lucifer or Satan in the Bible, he was simply battling his own dark sides; the ones inside himself.

Now, don't think for a moment that this paper will be a repetition of the previous ones about the Harvest and the Superwave. Although I'd gotten used to all that, this Thuban thread came as a shocker. All the following information needs to be known!

At the top of the Thuban Council sit the 24 Elders, who are the Thuban Dragons, receiving their authority from the 4 Beasts, and through them from the Prime Creator, or God. To be more precise, the Council consists of 12 androgynous archetypes that are mirroring the 12 existing dimensions and are therefore fulfilling the role of mirroring all the dimensions, from the 1st to the 12th. It is my understanding that in Thuban cosmology everything is mirroring itself, and this mirroring continues on an upward gradient scale, up through the dimensions. I am mirroring myself as well, by also being my opposite, and the same goes for you. That's us here in 3D. According to Draconian cosmological model, each Elder can be each dimension and at the same time mirroring them. So 12 Elders in this sense become 24 Elders, as each Elder Dragon is doubled. This may sound incredibly esoteric, but is basically nothing new; I believe I've seen this in old gnostic writings as well.

When asked if this star race are real dragons, and look like dragons, their answer is confirmative. However, how does a dragon look like? Well, when we humans found the first bones of the horrifying "lizards" in form of the prehistoric Iguanodon, our imagination started working for us, and thus we created an archetype of Dragons here on Earth. Then, as time went by, we more and more changed our perspective of how dragons look like, from fire-breathing flying dinosaurs to more T-Rex and alligator-like creatures. But before that, in medieval Europe, the "correct" picture of Dragons replaced the old ones. Here they were two-legged human-looking serpentine creatures -- the correct archetype of the Serpent, which did not glide sideways, but like a sinusoidal waveform, which is up and down like the picture in an oscilloscope. This is how the Dragons apparently move in the VOID.

The Thubans distinguish between the Sky Blue or Cyan colored Dragon and the Red Dragon. The former is the Master Dragon and the latter is in prophecy called the "Devil", and is so neutralized (discharged) in the Entwined Serpent or Double-Dragon of the White Lucifer with the Black Lucifer. But as long as we are reading this paper, we need to keep in mind who this group of entities, declaring themselves as being next under the Prime Creator, are. They say they are both our ancestors and our descendent, like so many others. The thing is that if we look at this in perspective, there is a chance that each of these channeled sources who say they are us in the past and in the future could potentially tell us the truth. We have the Grays, we have the Pleiadians, the Cassiopaeans, and many more... They all fit into this agenda, as we shall see.

The Thubans say that in the beginning of the universe was the Dragon. The Dragon as consciousness eventually descended into matter (3D) and became humans. Then, seen from a perspective of simultaneous time, we are now going to ascend again, after have learned the lessons we need to learn in 3D, and we will become what they call Starhumans. A Starhuman is Old Human (homo sapiens) sapiens) + Dragon. So in reality, we are ascending, while they are descending down to meet us; they, who are us in the future. This is what they call the Harvest. The new human, after the Harvest, is the Dragonized Starhuman.

ii.i. Dimensions of the VOID and the 4% Universe

Abraxas agrees that one of the most misunderstood concepts in metaphysics is that of dimensions and densities. Without going into too many details about the Alpha Draconian version, we still need to touch on it to have the rest make sense. It's not differing too much from what we have already talked about earlier, however. The Thubans prefer to use the term dimension, I've noticed.

We already know that according to the Thubans, there exist 12 dimensions all together. This also coincides with the RA Material and others, who embrace 8 densities (or dimensions), and I will explain why that is. The Draconians do not endorse A'shayana Deane and her Guardian Alliance's 15 dimensions, however.

They say that any ET race we can ever think of exists in the 8th Dimension or under. We humans basically exists in 4 of them, where the 4th Dimension is the astral. So in other words, the ascension is not from 3D to 4D, but from 4D to 5D, unless we speak of densities. In that case it would be from 3D to 4D. The RA collective were talking about octaves. In the RA concept, when we'll reach the 8th Density, it starts all over in a new, higher octave of 8 densities. According to the Dragons, this is basically correct, because like I said, no star race can go higher than the 8th Dimension, because the rest, from 9-12, are the "Angelic Dimensions", if we want to call it that, and exist in the VOID, outside our universe.

When we talk about dimensions here on Earth, we are still only talking about the astral, they say, which is limited to 4 Dimensions. 5D is the last dimension of embodiment. To reach the 6th Dimension, we need to get in contact with what they call the "superconsciousness", which requires transcension of the subconscious; something that is not possible if we inhabit a physical body, they say. Not even in Near Death Experiences or Out of Body Experiences can we reach the 6th Dimension.

If we compare this with what I wrote about in Level II, it corresponds pretty well with the distinction between the 96% universe and the 4%. Dimensions 9-12 in the Thubanese model are the VOID (96%), and dimensions 1-8 are the 4% where we are programmed to dwell. As we can see, there are non-physicals even in the 4% universe. And I agree with the Dragons when it comes to entering the VOID; we totally must connect our different "minds" with each other. Some can be done already now, while the rest has to be done in the non-physical. This starts in Dimension 6, according to this material, and expands up through Dimension 8, when we finally can see the universe for what it is.

James of the WingMakers said in the Project Camelot Interview in 2008 that ANU of the Anunnaki and his people created what I call the 4% universe, ready with its own dimensions and everything. He called it a "cloned universe" (more as a metaphor, when indeed he described the 4% universe), and those who are stuck in it believe that this is the only universe there is. So, what it certainly looks like is that even the channeled sources, who are us in the future, but of a higher density or dimension than we earth humans, are still stuck within the 8 dimensions of the 4% universe. They say that once they reach the 8th dimension/density, they become One with the Creator and start operating in a new octave, which starts on a higher level than the one they just completed. Therefore, they are waiting for us humans to catch up in order to reach the next octave. At the same token, they have no idea what the next octave is, and how life will be there.

Every 26,000 years, when the solar system has completed an orbit around the zodiac, the Thubans, who say they live "outside" the 4% universe[2], descend at that time and help a few "ripe" humans ascend into the VOID, where they are assigned a mission, which we shall talk about in the next paper. Moreover, they tell us that they are us in the future, trying to collect us all one day, so we can unite with our future self.

There are different ways for a human here on Earth to receive messages from star beings; channeling is just one way. The Cassiopaeans, as we learned, are communicating via an Ouija Board, but there are more ways, such as "data streaming", which I mentioned in the beginning. A'shayana Deane and Abraxas of the Alpha Draconians have that thing in common -- they are data streaming their information, which is different from channeling. In channeling, there are beings there, communicating to the audience through a human "vehicle", in real time. In data streaming, the vehicle is receiving the message in "packages", almost like computer zip files, containing all the information the vehicle needs to answer the question, and sometimes more. No trance state is needed; you ask the question, a download happens, and the vehicle receives the answer from the star race. Normally, the messenger who receives the "zip file" is a member of the star race which is sending them, so it's not like the receiver is uninformed of the information.

What people who are data streaming seem to have in common is that the messages come from outside the physical universe! Therefore, the information is considered extra valuable and "advanced". In other words, the messages come from the VOID, the 96% Goddess Universe, somewhere between Dimensions 9-12. James of the WingMakers said that as long as someone is communicating in words or even thoughts, no matter the language, the message comes from within the cloned universe. This is true, he says, in spite of if the messengers are non-physicals from higher dimensions or not. Data streaming, however, doesn't consist of words, but a package of information that is instant and manifest as "knowledge" in the receiver's brain. Therefore, data streaming is considered the highest form of "channeling". For data streaming to take place, there must be an opening between the VOID and the 4% universe, or the communication channel is closed. It's almost like a stargate opening between the two, or a black hole, but still something different. Abraxas calls it "Bigmo's Balloon". This was actually a concept which was coined during a forum session when Abraxas discussed this matter with someone on the forum with the profile name "Bigmo". Abraxas used the allegory of a balloon to describe the difference between the 4% universe and the VOID; thus "Bigmo's balloon". And here is how it works.

ii.ii. Bigmo's Balloon

Abraxas explains that normally the difference between space/time/time/space and the VOID (which does not include time and space) is closed. Sometimes there is a little opening between the two, and that's when communicating (in form of data streaming) can happen. Those in the VOID (Dimensions 9-12) are living in the Goddess Universe and are supposedly all-knowing and can potentially answer any questions someone in space/time or time/space may have. According to the Thubans, we all have a "mirror" in the VOID, which is our adversary, just as well as here we are the adversary to ourselves in the VOID. Thus the concepts of Satan and God, where Satan is God's adversary, and the two "live" in the VOID and the 4% universe, respectively.

This can be exemplified by a balloon that has been filled. The balloon is egg-shaped, just like the universe (or the Multiverse in LPG-C's Working Model, where they called it the UNUM), and has an outside and an inside. The inside is of course the 4% universe with its 8 dimensions, while the outside is the Goddess Universe (the VOID, the KHAA, the 96%), with its 4 dimensions. The Thubans are our mirrors, waiting on the inside for us to become one big collective and join them -- at least this is the ultimate "Masterplan".

There are small periods of time when "stargates", in lack of a better word, open between the VOID and the universe of space and time, when we humans can ascend and be harvested before the gates close again and we have to wait another whole cycle (26,000 years), or a semi-cycle, before we can ascend again. This is not because we are going from 4D directly into the VOID, but because the Thubans need to descend from the VOID to the 4% universe every time we are ascending from one dimension to the next. The Gnostics used a great picture to explain the difference between the VOID and the 4%, which we can see below in fig. 3.

The term "Bigmo's Balloon" has now allegedly been incorporated in the Thuban nomenclature.

Figure 3. This old Gnostic painting can be viewed as an example of a being who is looking through a "stargate" between the 4% universe where he lives, and into the outside of "Bigmo's Balloon".

III. Humanity as One Big, Universal Family

Abraxas is telling the Forum members that in the 4% universe there are only humans! No other species exist here except humans! I want the reader to ponder this for a moment before you go on to the next paragraph.

Now, who else has been telling us the same thing in the past? That's right! James of the WingMakers said the exact same thing in his 2008 interview with Project Camelot (for you who need a link to that interview once again, here it is: http://wingmakers.com/downloads/Interview\_James\_PC.pdf). He said that the human template was used here on Earth first, and highly developed spirits from higher dimensions (read the VOID) were manipulated into entering these biological, human bodies. These bodies could do a lot of fun things, like having sex, playing around, touching things, smelling things, going on adventures -- you name it! And ANU and his people asked the highly evolved spirits if they wanted to try this, and they did. Then, after these spirits had experienced this holographic universe that was built into these bodies and wanted to get out, ANU said, "Oops, we forgot to tell you something. There is no way to get out!" And these spirits of the VOID have been trapped in human bodies ever since. So if we are to believe James, the whole 4% universe exists only within our bodies and does not exist outside of them. Our bodies, in other words, are huge holograms which contain everything we know as being a universe. The Thubans and the WingMakers therefore live outside of these bodies and data stream their information from there. The movie "The Matrix" certainly comes to mind, where human bodies were hooked up to machines showing a hologram of the universe, and these hooked up, spirited bodies, experienced the holographic universe from their seats, so to speak.

iii.i. The WingMakers Interview from a New Angle

To continue the WingMakers story (and I really think we need to review it again, now from a new angle); ANU wanted to become the God of the universe. And he wasn't talking about a 4% universe, but the whole universe, and thus entrap all souls there are -- in the 4% universe as well as the 96%, which is exactly what I've been saying, too. James says the entrapment happened during the Atlantean times, and I agree with that, because different researchers have different concepts of when the Atlantean time started. What he is basically talking about is when ENKI, the master scientist trained directly under the Queen of the Stars, on a mission from his stepfather, ANU, after he'd rebelled in Orion, went to Earth to create Homo sapiens as a slave race to the gods. Like James says, the earlier humans were highly evolved (androgynous) humans who were not stuck in their bodies and had total recall of whom they were.

We then know the story how ENKI, together with his brilliant co-engineers, created Homo sapiens from the existing apes and the human race I call the Namlú'u. These new bodies were not of the same kind the Namlú'u (Lús) had, which were divine and created directly by Mother Goddess and her own scientists at that time (the Thubans say it was them). So, Homo sapiens became a watered-down version of the magnificent Lús, but still divine in their making, because they still had Lú and Orion DNA, but were degraded with Sirian genetics.

What ENKI did was to add a Human Mind System (HMS) to the bodies he genetically engineered in secret, successfully withholding this from the Namlú'u, who were living side by side with the Fallen Angels from Sirius. His and ANU's idea was to trap the human multidimensional souls into the new bodies, so they could enslave these highly evolved spirits from Orion, who had the Fire of the Mother Goddess.

These new bodies also contained something that was very unique for them -- a rich range of emotions! The new Human Mind System had this, plus a higher dimensional body attached to it, based on the physical body. This higher body separated itself from the physical body when the physical body died, and thus carried on.

Some call this higher dimensional body the "soul", while others call it the astral body, but in reality it's just a lesser dense body for the real soul to operate within. The truth is, according to James, that even this higher-dimensional light-body is part of the HMS, and therefore within the trap system. Thus, it has been subjected to most of the programming ENKI and his cohorts put into these bodies. These new vessels were then programmed to be run by a soul (which is basically a cluster of Fires), who were manipulated into attaching themselves to the physical body and the higher-D body.

Some of the most potent programs in the Homo sapiens bodies were "fear of death"; "fear of separation", and fear of "non-existence". Another powerful program was amnesia; the soul had now hardly any memories from previous lives. It was easy for ENKI and the Sirians, ruled by ANU and ENLIL, to place themselves as the one and only God in the minds of the new humans. They did so by creating a composite God, whom we know as YHWH, Jehovah, and a number of other different names. This composite God manifested himself, or spoke to humans in the non-physical, through at least three individuals, portraying themselves as one; ANU, ENKI, and ENLIL.

Then, to be able to meet God and be redeemed, it didn't matter which religion you subscribed to and whom you called God, because the underlying programming was the same; you had to meet the requirements of the earthly conditions and could then either live in Paradise with God for all eternity, or be your own spiritual teacher of the light.

It is also embedded into the human mind that you need a savior or a teacher to be able to ascend, and even to achieve happiness in the physical world. The program is so powerful that even when you feel you have achieved self-realization, you are still trapped in this human mind system. This is why the PTB, or the metaphysical beings who run them, often don't care if people are trying to evolve. ENKI and ANU knew that mankind would evolve over time, so they made it extremely hard to be able to evolve out of the Human Mind System! James mentions that saviors can come in many shapes and forms; as a Messiah, a wrathful God, prophecy, or extraterrestrials who say they are able to help you evolve and intercede on humanity's behalf, to name a few important and common ones (especially keep the last one in mind when you read the rest of this, and the following paper, or papers). And James says, word for word in this interview:

"Each of us is our own and only savior, our only master who can truly cause us to stand-up within ourselves and shut down the suppression systems and awaken to their Sovereign Integral consciousness."

I couldn't agree more, and this is what I have always said. This is important to understand when we continue reading, because this powerful statement will be challenged by the Thubans. And ponder this: the main reason the Overlords want to keep us separated and not in groups is because separated individuals who don't have the power of the group mind can be more easily controlled. Therefore, groups who are becoming powerful are therefore infiltrated.

Polarity is also a part of the Human Mind System that ENKI created, and it is based on fear, originating from the solar plexus area. Polarity includes friction between the different polarities, so that fear and domination will always exist. If there is polarity where you exist, you are a part of this giant Human Mind System program which is the Sirian trap.

James says it is true that the Sirians (whom he calls the Anunnaki) came here to participate in the human experience in the realm of matter to exploit its resources, but they also wanted to entrap those powerful, free-thinking beings who lived on this beautiful planet, and they wanted to make them not only into slaves, but willing slaves (and God knows they have succeeded!). But because human souls evolve naturally, it would eventually become a problem if no intervention was done over time. Therefore, the Overlords decided that when people came close to breaking through the HMS prison walls, more genetic manipulation needed to be done on them. This is one reason why there are so many alien abductions these days, I would say, because people are getting pretty close to seeing through the trap. Now the Sirian genetic engineers are busy, busy, to keep up with the "upgrade" of the human template (which in fact works for us like a "downgrade"). The true state of the human soul (the soul as a Fire and a Feminine Divine) was not realized by anybody until quite recently, and has been even more expanded upon since James was in this interview in 2008, in parts by myself.

Over and over I come back to this single interview with James from -08, because I think much of it is very potent and powerful information that should be taken seriously. There are other aspects of the WingMakers Material I am less thrilled with, and also so with small parts of the Camelot Interview, but at the most part, it is spot on if I compare it with my own research so far. Listen to this, for example:

"Yes, the densities are shifting, but these are artifacts of the Human Mind System (HMS). Even the belief that the near-infinite dimensions of the astral and mental planes are real is a comparison to the physical plane. I would suggest to you that what is in the purview of the human instrument, which includes the physical, emotional (astral) and mental densities or dimensions are all caught up in the HMS and suppression framework. It is not of the Sovereign Integral and it is therefore impermanent, existing in polarity, separation, and deception. In other words, it is a creation designed to conceal what you truly are."

Here is the key to the channeled material, whether it is the RA Material, Elohim, or non-channeled material such as that given to us by the Thuban walk-ins. It's all part of the HMS and a distraction! Like I've been saying; people are waking up and the Overlords need to do something! However, they don't need to think very hard, because their solution has been planned for long in form of prophecy. In simple words, they are using prophecy against us so we divert from our path and start going towards the dead end of the HMS. This is hopefully becoming crystal clear with this and the few upcoming papers.

So the human body, whether it is the physical body or the higher-D body, is the soul trap we're engaged in, and the PTB are our prison guards, although they themselves are part of the prison. It's truly like if the inmates are running the asylum. Within this body system exists the whole holographic universe, including all the higher dimensions which the channeled sources are talking about. Although a higher dimension may seem like infinite freedom compared to the prison we're sitting in here on Earth, the higher-D beings are still trapped, just like we are, because they still operate through their higher-D body and are thus being manipulated. This is how it works according to James, and overall I think that's a picture close enough.

I definitely don't want to suggest that I am more knowledgeable than James, because over the whole spectrum of knowledge, he is much more aware than I am, but there are certain things I have researched very deeply, and one of these things is the concept of Fire/Soul. James is mentioning only one body that is higher dimensional compared to the physical body, and that this body as well is trapped within the HMS. I would say we have more than one higher-D body within the HMS, and one of them is the Soul/Fire, or what I call the "light-body" or the "avatar". This light-body consists of perhaps millions of small fires which all together form this light-body, or avatar, normally in a similar shape as the recent physical body. This avatar is the human soul, which means that the human soul does not operate within a higher-D body; it is the higher-D body. However, I agree with James that the avatar is certainly trapped within the HMS.

However, we need to remember that even if the avatar is stuck in the HMS, it also has a direct link to the Oversoul, which James calls the Sovereign Integral. And it is our search for ourselves outside the trap that becomes our priority. James tells us that all we need to do is a simple breathing exercise called "The Quantum Pause" and we will connect. I think it's a wonderful exercise and believe it works, but there are more things I think need to be done.

Sometimes, when we evolve, we break down a prison wall and suddenly we have more freedom than we had the minute before. However, there are other walls, and other walls, and other walls behind those, which all need to be broken down. And, according to James, so long as we depend on pictures, images, sounds, words, feelings, and thoughts to interpret our world, we are still inside the prison walls.

I know that many people think that this sounds scary. How can you enjoy living without all the perceptions in the above paragraph? Is the VOID really the way to go? Yes, that's where our freedom lies, because we, as infinite Fires, are there free to create whatever we want, and what we create is manifesting instantly. Then, we can uncreate it just as quickly if we wish or get tired of it. And if we want to travel somewhere within our own creation, or the creation of somebody else, it's instant. There is no time in the VOID in the sense we know it. To reach the point of freedom from the imprisonment, we need to use nature as a catalyst, but also find the spirit within and work on making it remember. This will be the project of my book, following upon Level III. And just to make something clear, the way I see it: Ascension is not the answer to obtaining our freedom. We already have everything we need within ourselves. It's not ascension, but self-realization that we need.

This, I believe, is very important to understand. We gain nothing from "ascending to the 5th or 6th Dimension", except the illusion of freedom, which in the long run will lead us further and further away from what we want to accomplish -- freedom from external manipulation. Number one is to realize we are controlled in every corner of life. Number two is to disagree with the manipulation, and number three is self-realization.

There is more coming from James on the subject of ascension and channeling. How do we know that the pictures we have of ascension is not just information that has been implanted in us through our unconscious mind (which is dream state)? After all, we going to hear from the Dracos themselves that they consider it okay to give us unconscious information through dream state. So that validates what James is saying.

Bill Ryan and Kerry-Lynn Cassidy of Project Camelot are asking James about channeled material in general, and James is saying that all of it is coming from the HMS and are just artificial, clever programs, created by the Anunnaki (Sirian scientists, using Orion technology [my comment]).

"In more recent times channeling has become more automated, using pre-programmed scripts, voice tonalities, gestures, and accents which are implanted in the HMS of the individual channeler, and quite literally "broadcast" for later publication and dissemination among those who have a resonance to GSSC and seek enlightenment therein."

"They discuss the heavens, God, angelic beings, extraterrestrial intelligences, the service orientation of ascended being, ascension process of soul, morality, practical living, alignment to God, life after death, and the complex teacher-student ordering of the universe. It is all designed to instill separation and satisfy the seeker that truth exists on the material plane, thus, they do not have to leave the prison to find it; they simply need to read or listen with their mind."

If the above is true, the channeled material in my previous papers are merely Sirian preparations for the direct information through walk-ins like the Alpha Draconian Abraxas. This could very well be the case, and the most possible purposes for that will be discussed at the end of the Alpha Draconian Series.

James' version of how the Lú souls (which are us according to the WingMakers' philosophy) got trapped in the bodies has been covered in a previous paper, but shortly, as a reminder, these free spirits were shown the new bodies and were asked to try them out. ANU and his team said that it would be a very fun experience, and there was a lot they could do which the current Lús couldn't, because they were androgynous. One such experience was to feel sexually aroused and be able to have sex and reproduce from having intercourse. The Lús, who were very wise, but still curious souls, tried it out and liked it. Somehow, through manipulation, ANU managed to have most of the Lús entering the new bodies, but when they wanted out, they found out they were trapped. Soon enough, their consciousness decreased as well, because the vibration of the new bodies were much lower.

And thus, the 4% universe was created and we got trapped in it - Lú souls and others. This story coincides quite well with what I told in Level II.

James of the WingMakers then claims that in 3D there are no other alien beings but humans, and that ANU's universe consists of only humans (in 3D) and interdimensionals, who are also trapped in the HMS. I never really understood what he was talking about until I dug into the Alpha Draconian info, although the Dragons insist that this universe only exists of humans, no matter if they are dimensional or interdimensional.

Soon the reader is going to understand why I had to go into such details about the channeled sources. It's extremely important in order to understand the whole agenda with the Harvest and ascension in general.

iii.ii. Ascension Equals Descension

What the Thubans are saying is that they are now going to descend "down" from the VOID into the physical universe to meet us here on Earth and help us ascend to the 5th Dimension through something they call the Harvest. But moreover, they also tell us that Earth is the center of the universe, and mankind is the center of attention for all beings in the universe! This includes the Grays, other physical beings from 4th or 5th Dimensions, and the non-physicals in Dimensions 6-8. All of them have their attention on Earth, whether they reside in the Milky Way Galaxy, the Andromeda Galaxy, or galaxies 10 billion light-years from here!

Why is that? What is it that makes us humans so special? Well, we are special because if we don't ascend, they can't ascend, either! The reason for this is that no matter where a star race exists in the 4% universe, or how they look like, they are still versions of mankind; either in the past or in the future! So we have all these timelines (remember, time allegedly only exists in the 4% universe) with different versions of humans, hybridized or not, who are all waiting to merge with the version of themselves dwelling in the lowest dimensions, which are dimensions 1-4. This means us humans!

This is why RA and all the rest of these sources say they are a Social Memory Complex, dwelling in one of the higher dimensions. They have become collectives and are now waiting for all these versions of humanity who have spread out over the universe over time to merge with them and with each other. And in particular, they are waiting for us here on Planet Earth to ascend, one dimension at the time, until we reach dimension 8 and can merge with the rest of humanity from different timelines and places in the physical, holographic universe. Once that is done, we can all, as a whole humanity, ascend into the VOID, and the illusion of the 4% universe will disappear!

And thus, if this would be true, we have the answers to almost all of the questions about who the channeled sources are -- at least the version they want us to believe in. So again, according to Abraxas, they are different collectives of humans, in different space and time, waiting to merge with each other, and most of all, they are waiting for us 4D beings to catch up with them and ascend, one dimension at the time. However, as we saw in the WingMakers material, there are other options, slightly different.

IV. The Archetypes

Abraxas says it's important to understand that the universe is run by archetypes. They have a hierarchal order and have existed since the beginning of time. Still, as time goes by, these archetypes change in the eyes of their descendants, and they become slightly different. These archetypes are very much alive, because we make them so, and they are around somewhere in the universe right now.

The Andromedans call the Draconians Paa Taal, which means "the ones that came first", and they say that the Dragons don't remember where they came from. Abraxas says that they do remember; they came from the VOID and were the Great Dragons, the Founders (same as the "Builders" if we use my own terminology), and they were the ones who helped God create the Universe. They are the Dragon Race, who later, through genetic engineering, helped God create the human template. Well, we've heard that story before, haven't we?

We are going to look a little bit at the archetypes and discuss them. From reading my papers, and other researchers' work, perhaps, the reader will recognize many of the personae that go with them.

This is what Abraxas wrote on the forum:

1st Order: Undifferentiated Polarity

Greek: (Eros+Abyss/Tartarus+Night/Erebus)+Gaia=Uranus+Gaia

Egyptian: Ra+Apep in internal mirror images Yang/Yin=...

Mesopotamian: FreshWater of Apsu/Yang+SaltWater of Tiamat/Yin=Nammu=...

2nd Order: Internally differentiated Polarity as Unity

Greek: Titans, in six males with six females say from Oceanus with Tethys

Egyptian: Shu=Father Sky+Tefnut=Mother Earth

Mesopotamian: Lahmu+Mummu=Lahama

3th Order: Externally differentiated Polarity

Greek: Titans led by Cronus with Rhea

Egyptian: Geb=Father Earth+Nut=Mother Earth

Mesopotamian: Anshar+Kishar

4th Order: Beginning of the Generations of the Gods and Goddesses

Greek: Olympians, led by Zeus+Hades with Metis/Consorts+Consorts

Egyptian: Osiris+Isis with Set+Nephthys twinships etc.

Mesopotamian: Anu+Ki into Enlil+Ninlil+Ea/Enki+Dumkina

The male semen=essence=fresh water=ground water so follows the order of Uranus/Ra/Apsu---

Titan/Shu/Lahmu---Cronus/Geb/Anshar---Zeus,Hades/Osiris,Set/Anu,Enlil,Enki---...

The female essence=salt water follows the orders of Gaia/Apep/Tiamat--- Titaness/Tefnut/Lahama---Rhea/Nut/Kishar---Metis,Hera/Isis,Nephthys/Ki,Ninlil,Dumkina---...

Marduk is the son of Ea+Dumkina and like Zeus (or Horus as the son of Osiris+Isis) challenges the 'old order' in Cronus (or Set, the usurper of Osiris), the usurper of Uranus; Marduk challenges the 'murder' of Apsu (who wished to eliminate the younger gods) by Ea in Qingu+Tiamat.

Sin is the son of Enlil+Ninlil (as Anubis the son of Set+Nephthys) and continues the 'cosmic twinship' archetype of Anshar-Anu and Enlil-Enki in Marduk-Sin in the external polarisation leading back into unification in the third generation.

The fourth generation will so result in this unification in 'The Queen from Heaven' in Innana=Ishtar=Esther (biblical)=Mary=Venus=Aphrodite say as the daughter of Sin+Ningal and 'twinbrother' Utu/Shamash. As Aphrodite then Ishtar can reclaim the primordial creation, having been 'unnaturally' created from the foam of the primordial waters as the genitals of Uranus (compare Isis substituting Osiris phallus after it had been eaten by a 'Spider of Set')"[\[3\]](#)

The 1st Order is "no polarity" and the creations of the metaphysical Gaia (Earth), being the center of the universe. And it is freshwater, saltwater, and the Apsu (Apzu), which is the "Abyss", where ENKI eventually started his genetic experiments with mankind. It was also the beginning of the universe. It was creation and the Creator turning into the 2nd Order; internal first, turning into external polarity from a unified program. The 1st Order manifested before they came into physical being; turning metaphysicality into physicality. This split the so far unified Creator-Creation into two -- the Source-Sender and the Sink-Receiver (Source-Receiver). The 1st Order is unattainable, as it requires complete resonance with Source as a Unity of All That Is -- All That Exists.

The 2nd Order is the first polarization, but this polarization is still in Unity. The Titans, whom I presented as daughters of Orion, are here presented as male and female in Unity, which probably will signify androgyny. Lahmu + (Mamitu Nammu) Mummu = Lahama (Lahamu), the Unifying force. Mamitu Nammu is the Queen of the Stars, manifested. The Draconians here talk about six males and six females from Oceanus, who make up the traditional Titans; 6+6=12. 12 and 13 being the numbers of the Mother Goddess. Here the Goddess manifests in Gaia, Earth, and becomes "Mother Earth". 2nd Order is Unity as a race, still not separately expressed. This Order also implies the Seraphim, the Cherubs, and the Archangels. In Anton Parks's hierarchy, the 2nd Order would signify Lahamu and Lahmu, father and mother of Kišár and Anšár, 3rd Order Archetypes, and parents of ANU, who is 4th Order. Furthermore, Abraxas says regarding dragons and humans in the 2nd Order:

"Here then the Race of the Humans is DIFFERENT from the RACE of the DRAGONS and say the Arcturian ETs are different from the Pleiadean ETs in polarisation, yet the Humans or the Dragons remain unified as a RACE."

The 3rd Order is the Father and the Mother of the Gods and Goddesses we have heard about so much; being the Sirian "gods". The 3rd Order divides the race and is thus Geb, Father Earth, and Nut, Mother Earth. Geb and Nut were also looked at as the Sky, which can be interpreted both as Gaia's sky and the cosmic sky, in which they traveled in thought form, seeding and creating. Here is where the concepts of "good" humans and "good" dragons and "bad" humans and "bad" dragons begins. Anton Parks exemplifies the 3rd Order with the parents of ANU, who were Kišár and Anšár. The 3rd Order is also the 9 Mayan Timekeepers (or the "9 Mayan Timelords" as Abraxas calls them), whom the Pleiadians talk about in Barbara Marciniak's books as being the Pleiadian teachers; the Pleiadians being the 4th Order. I discussed this in a few papers in Level I.

There is also more polarization. Abraxas again:

"3rd Order is then polarisation externalised, such as angels and demons/devils as etheric and higherD forms able to interact with lowerD forms in polarisation, such as humans and ETs and flora and fauna."

The 4th Order is the beginning of all the generations of gods and goddesses within the Sirian hierarchy, starting with ANU and his son ENLIL and (step)son ENKI/EA. From there it takes off into several generations of gods and goddesses. The 4th Order also symbolizes the conflict of the Inner Self with the Outer Self in a yin-yang type of dance. The 4th Order is that of the "astral" and the dimensions above the 4th, which are less physical and more etheric. This is where the non-physicals dwell, such as the Sirian Overlords and the Pleiadians -- the so-called "future humans".

According to Abraxas, these archetypes are kept alive in the memory bank and imagination of mankind, whether it's here on Earth or in other places of the 4% universe. These archetypes rule the universe, and since so much attention has been put on the Mesopotamian deities, ANU and KI and their offspring are the archetypes we are giving the most power and are thus the ones who are coming back, says Abraxas. We are experiencing the 4th Order Archetypes merging with humanity in 4D, in other words. Because what is energized will be set into motion. In other words, we are calling on the gods to come! This is very true, because that's what's being done behind the scenes from our highest ranking Power Elite down to some confused and possessed people in small offshoots of secret societies like the German/America Thule Order. They all "help" bringing the gods here, and keeping them here by giving them enormous amount of energy.

All star beings, Abraxas says, know about Gaia and her destiny to become the New Earth through ascension, and what that means in the extension. Here she gives us a tidbit of the usual disinformation, starting with the distortion of the stories of the 4th Order of Archetypes:

"Because the ETs have known about the 'masterplan' of the Logos and their part in it as a cosmic intelligence NOT physicalised in the density field of the graduate starplanet; they have engaged in the hybridisation of the primitive human template with themselves.

As said, this has made ALL humanoids already Human-ET hybrids and beginning in a mindwave-induction so 208,000 years ago.

None of you would have the sentience for abstract thought, would you be a 'pure' hominid stock, say as evolved from Old World Monkeys 20 million years ago into speciations of Australopithecines so 4 million years ago and diversifications in the Homo Erectus typology so 500,000 years ago. All of your so called intelligence IS in fact ET intelligence.

All ETs are Human Family, albeit not physicalised in the density field of Gaia, extending 2 million kilometers from the Gaian center and growing by so 105 millimeters per year.

So this 'masterplan' KNOWS that the Old Earth is destined to become a New Earth."

Here the Draconians clearly state that the Sirian Alliance knew all along what was planned for Gaia and that she is destined to turn into a star-planet, and mankind to become the new Starhumans. I'm prone to think that they are actually working on our ascension together with the Thubans/Draconians, but with help from technology, so they can continue to control us. Also, here is the lie about the primitive human repeated again, where it's said that without interference from the Sirian Overlords and their genetic manipulation of the apes, we humans would never be capable of abstract thinking. This is not true. We were a much evolved race before the Sirians came; there is enough evidence of that. UTU, when he contacted me, tried to push the same buttons, that we humans would be nothing if they hadn't interfered and created Homo sapiens from their own DNA. I told him this is a big lie.

By the same token, in this context, they bring up "Nibiru" as not being the home planet of the Sirians, just like I've suggested in Level II and III, or the home planet of any of these kinds of beings. Instead, they say, Nibiru has been confused with our "Second Sun". Almost every star system which houses intelligent life forms is a double or triple star. That way they can create the appropriate gravitational system for stable planets to form, contrary to what mainstream science thinks. Esoterically enough, in the case of our own solar system, which is special because it's housing Gaia, the Mother Goddess incarnated in a Divine Planet, the Second Sun is not some brown dwarf or another sun hidden behind our yellow globe in the sky, but the sun of the Galactic Center herself, called the Hunab Ku, and another name for the Milky Way Galaxy is the Perseus Galaxy. Hunab Ku means "The Giver of all Wisdom" and the "Street of Remembrance". It's also called the "Womb of the Mother". This second sun, around which we orbit, is by some also called Nemesis.

In regards to the four Orders of Archetypes, we humans exist as all of them, from the highest to the lowest, but in the 4% universe we are heavily polarized and diverse, and thus humans existing in 1-4D are then the lowest form of humanity in the physical universe. The Draconian "Masterplan" is then to ascend all humans to the 2nd Order, in Unity, or rather, where the polarization is only internal. This is why the Pleiadians in their lectures say that currently they are more knowledgeable than we humans are here in 4D, but in the future that may change. What they mean by that is that they are the Archetype of the 4th Order, and the Masterplan is to bring mankind up to the 2nd. Once that is done, the Pleiadians and all other star beings in the 4% universe, being humans just like us according to Thubanese cosmology, will ascend with us.

Abraxas as a soul and a walk-in is of the 2nd Order in the 12th Dimension of Thuban. This is where she wants humanity to ascend to, eventually. In the 2nd Order she is "Sirebard Beardris". Just like the RA Material embraced 8 densities (they were unaware of the "angelic densities/dimensions", or did not want to expand on that subject), where the 8th Density also equals the 1st Density in the next octave, Dimension 13 is the same as the 1st Dimension, but according to Abraxas, the 13th Dimension is not a start of a new, higher set of dimensions, but is a descension down to Dimension 1.

Abraxas, promoting the second coming of Messiah in form of Lucifer/Jesus being the same deity (in other words, she's covertly promoting ENKI), she is rebutting the "myth" about the "Fall of Lucifer" and his Dark Angels. And of course she does, and the reason for this will be obvious before this paper is finished. This is what she says:

"All of Prime Source's 'intelligence' became dispersed at the birth of the universe in the 1st dimension and then manifested the LineSpace in the commonly understood cosmogenesis of the terrestrial science, cosmology and astrophysics.

This then was the 'Fall' of the higher orders, rather poignantly related to the 'mundane' physical sciences and quite without ETs/archangels warring against God to be 'chucked out' of 'heaven'."

According to Abraxas, "The Fall of Lucifer" is the fall of the Archetypes from the highest to the lowest, eventually manifesting in our physical reality. There is, however, a reason for her not to stick with the Lucifer/ENKI agenda, as ENKI is the Messiah of the "New World", whether he manifests himself or not.

And let us end this section about Archetypes with the following interesting statement from Abraxas:

"The Cosmic Archetypology RULES the Cosmos.

The reconfiguration of Gaia so requires reconfiguration of the entire cosmic structure.

This has been the agenda of all, PTB and ETs all along.

Not many know the details, but many have hints and indicators as to what those details entail - especially the echeloners at the top of the PTB pyramid."

Every piece of evidence points in the direction that this is the hidden agenda of the "Illuminati", as well as the Sirian Overlords and the rest of the "future" human star beings out there in cosmos, whom are all waiting for us to ascend - but again, on the Sirians' terms! Because just like James WingMakers says, it's just a show to make us feel we're making progress, when in fact we are going nowhere. And what will really happen to those who are ripe for the Harvest? Here are a few scenarios I can think of, seen from the perspective of those who are excited to be harvested:

Best case scenario: the Draco/Sirian Alliance will use technology to make the ascension take place to satisfy the humans of higher dimensions, and a small percentage of mankind will actually ascend, but within the HMS system. And not knowing any better, they will find the 5th Dimension being just another prison cell, but this time a little bigger. They will still be controlled.

Second best case scenario: nothing will happen. These people die like everybody else, while thinking they will reincarnate into the 5th Dimension next time. What a disappointment when they notice that they will be recycled like everybody else -- in 4D! Then they must start all over again with amnesia, and this time they may not even be interested in "spiritual stuff", because they "know" subconsciously that it didn't work last time!

Worst case scenario: The Sirians will know who they are and do whatever they think is appropriate to do with "rebels". And I'm positive it's not good news.

Also, it could be a mix of all the three above.

V. Gaia as the Center of the Galaxy

The metaphysical age of the universe is 19.14 billion years, while the age of the physical universe is 13.8 billion years. This, Abraxas explains, is because electromagnetically, the universe is always oscillating at light speed, but expands at less than light speed in its matter content. Our solar system crystallized 4.6 billion years ago, and Earth was created only 40 million years thereafter. The physical Earth then became the New Earth through the clustered material which forms the metallic, elemental Earth.

This means that the Old Earth had existed in a metaphysical form before it got "densified". It was a phase shift between geometrical dimensions which allowed the Old Earth to transform into the New Earth. The metaphysical Earth is as old as the universe itself, and exists simultaneously with the New Earth. The Old Earth is now about to phase shift again; this time from a line-space-time to a more hyper-space-time, while still keeping its line-space-time as a kernel for the ascension process. Last time Earth transformed, it did it the other way around, from hyper-space-time to line-space-time and became a material Earth. Translated into plain English, Abraxas is saying that the New Earth which is coming to life through this next phase-shift is part physical and part metaphysical, moving into the 5th Dimension.

Earth herself is "spiritualized" by the Mother Goddess. Many pagans and Gnostics have known this for a long time. In ancient times people worshipped and even made sacrifices to Mother Earth. I think everybody has heard once or twice at least that the Earth has been called the Goddess. The Thubans call her The Home of the Great Dragon Mother. When asked who owns the planet, Abraxas says that it belongs to all alien species. Taken out of context, this would upset many people, but what she means is that the universe exists of only humans in different stages of development, depending on within which time frame they are operating in, if we think of it from a 4D linear time perspective.

Abraxas says that Earth, however, whom the Alpha Draconians call Gaia, is not a planetary consciousness, and not even a star consciousness, but a Galactic Consciousness who mimics the Andromedan Consciousness as a "divine placeholder". But more than that, Gaia is about to transform Hunab Ku's (the Galactic Center) consciousness as well, through and by the opening of the 12th Dimension, and the Alpha Draconians will enter as Universal Consciousness; they being the Creator Race of the universe. The Alpha Draconians are the Council of Thuban, but Abraxas says that we humans are very tightly connected to this council as well, meaning that we are the descended Thubans, and from that perspective we are also The Fallen Angels. Of course, they can call it whatever they want to confuse the matters, and to take the attention away from the real fallen ones, who are ENKI/Lucifer, and those I call the Sirian Alliance. However, the Thubans want to make the statement that the Sirians, as well as ENKI are Thubans, too, just like we humans. As archetypes, they are our ancestors, hence humans, or of the "human family". It's easy for those who don't have the bigger picture to swallow what Abraxas says, because her stories have their own logic.

v.i. Gaia's Sink Vortex and the "Alien Agenda" Explained

There are billions, perhaps trillions of planets in the universe, but according to the Thubans, there is only one planet such as Gaia. This difference between Gaia and any other planet in the universe also explains the so-called "alien agenda", where people see and interact with different kinds of aliens.

I have talked a lot in my papers about the Living Library with its incredible variety of life forms. Nowhere else in the universe can you find a planet like ours, allegedly. There is something in the center of Earth that makes her very special and unique -- one of her kind. Indeed, Earth is the only planet where life as we know it can form. All other life forms are interdimensional and of higher dimensions; even those who live on other planets. Nowhere else could you experience life like you do here. In other words, all other life forms would be less dense and more plasmic than those who are born on Earth. They would be more fluid and electromagnetic. They are, however, capable of inhabiting bodies of a more plasmic nature than the dense ones we use here in the lowest of dimensions.

However, should the more plasmic life forms come down to Earth and interact with the 4D reality, our denser world would "densify" their plasmic bodies, and all of a sudden they would appear the way they look like in their plasmic bodies; be it Reptilians, Insectoids, humanoids, Grays, or you'll name it. And there we have the reason why people see those extraterrestrials in what appears to be a solidified form, such as ourselves! Albeit, should this happen, such encounters must be quite temporary, because the alien plasmic life form would soon feel very restricted, uncomfortable, and imprisoned here on Earth, and would leave as soon as they could<sup>[4]</sup>. Abraxas explains:

"The parameter of the physicality is the inversion of the lightspeed  $c$ .

When the universe was born, the Source of All That Is also required a Sink of All That Is to 'source itself to'.

This sink became like a VORTEX. This Vortex is at the center of the earth and it [is] from this the archetype of the mythological 'Hell' eventuated."

The "c" in "Lightspeed c" refers of course to the scientific letter which symbolizes the speed of light in Einstein's theory of general relativity. What she's saying here is that in the core of Earth there's a sink hole which works like a vortex, where All That Is, i.e. the Goddess, can descend from the VOID down to 4D.

So, 19+ billion years ago, when the metaphysical universe was created, there was not yet a physical Earth, but the vortex existed. Since then, this vortex has expanded out and does now surround Earth like an aura, and within this aura, the Moon and 9% of Mars exist. This vortex is higher dimensional and cannot be detected in 4D and with 4D instrumentation. But any plasmic energy being who enters the vortex will be densified and start vibrating within the 4D frequency. This is, according to Abraxas, why the plasmic UFO crashed in Roswell in 1947.

Another thing I explained about the Living Library in Level I was that Creator Gods who created our fauna and flora left behind smaller versions of themselves (insects and flora); living organisms that looked much similar to the Creator Gods themselves (a typical example is the praying mantis, which has its counterpart in an advanced Creator God somewhere in the universe). Other examples are the big cats, wolves, dogs, pet cats, elephants, whales, dolphins, etc. Some of them "spy" on us through their earthly counterpart, or you can contact the Creator Gods by communicating with these animals. Another thing, however, which Abraxas brings up is that these same Founders can come here in spirit and in their plasmic bodies and attach themselves to their animal imprint and thus don't have to be stuck here. They can leave the animal, insect, or fauna host anytime they wish. This procedure, supposedly, happens quite often. They simply nano-travel to here and use their counterparts while staying on Earth. This way they also avoid detection. This will engage an energy transduction between higher and lower dimensions.

So how is this vortex used in today's world? Well, first of all, aliens out there (or future selves) know about this vortex, and many of them can use it. The PTB on our planet know about it too, and spend a lot of time, energy, and money trying to make use of it. However, the use of the vortex is determined by a being's frequency. If it is too low, the being can't use it. This is the case with the Power Elite. Only the upper echelons of the Shadow Government knows about the non-physical control of humankind, but they know about star beings coming in through the vortex in the core of the Earth (which is also where our idea of Hell comes from, says Abraxas). This totally freaks the PTB out and they spend lots of money trying to figure out how to stop these plasmic beings from entering our world.

This is also one reason why the Sirian Alliance has "allowed" other civilizations here while they have still been in charge of Earth. The Overlords can close down other vortexes, stargates, and wormholes, but they have no power over the vortex in the middle of the Earth, because it is Divine. Hence, it has been impossible for them to stop each and every star being from coming in here. In addition, the "alien agenda" is encapsulated in the understanding that Gaia belongs to everybody; not just we humans in 4D. They all consider Gaia their Mother.

Now, Abraxas and the Thuban Council from the 12th Dimension are preparing for the Harvest, which already started in 2009, she says. People who passed over that year and who qualified for the initiation were taken aside and given 5D bodies to incarnate in. These people, some who have already reincarnated on Earth again, are the absolute pioneers for the New Earth (programmed and ready, I would add), with more graduating happened in 2011 and 2012. More will graduate in the few years to come. Some will die and receive 5D bodies then, while others will be picked up in spaceships.

So, what does the reader think we should name the New Earth? Terra Nova? No, wait! Don't waste your energy, because we have no say. The Thubans have already named it. The New Earth will be called "Serpentina", which means "In a Serpent" according to the Thuban labeling! Here we have the hierarchy again, and we humans, stuck in a realm of amnesia, are merely puppets without any say in anything. The only thing we are supposed to do is to believe that the Thuban Council represents the words of God, and what is about to happen is "God's Will". Do you KNOW that it's God's will?

Now, how will this Serpentina be like? What is the Draconian vision of this future planet? Well, we're not told in any great details, but we learn a few things from listening to Abraxas. The Harvest and our ascension into the 5th Dimension is not going to happen naturally, but through technology. They are using nano-technology to make this happen, and they are using more genetic manipulation. For example, where are those new 5D bodies coming from? Why all these alien Technology Transfer Programs over the last 100 years or so? Why this extraordinary investment in nano-technology here on Earth?

The answers to these questions should be obvious by now, but interestingly enough I happened to listen to a Pleiadian CD last night, which was recorded in September 2012, that was on this subject (synchronicities happens to me all the time these days). They talked some more about the future and how mankind, on one timeline, will come as cyborgs to visit the Pleiades in the future, genuinely thinking that they are looking for their ancestors; their genesis. Today, we already have technologies to take us way out to the stars. No one is interested in the Moon anymore now when Mars is in the news, but behind the scenes, Mars is already explored from north to south, west to east. Most of the technology the military has received from ETs has to do with star travel and how to perform genetic engineering and manipulation. So these cyborgs the Pleiadians are talking about are already well underway.

Instead of visiting the Pleiades as cyborgs, instigating terrible wars resulting in a great tyranny, we are invited to the Pleiades without our cyborg bodies, and instead, as multidimensional beings we can split ourselves up, soul-wise (the Pleiadians own words) and travel in spirit over to the Pleiades. They never mention the word "nano-travel", but they describe it all the time as something we are going to be able to do in the very near future. However, we must qualify, and this is what they have prepared us for over the last 25 years (and I have helped spreading that messages in parts of my papers, although the idea of nano-travel in my case didn't originate from them).

The Pleiadians say that we are already nano-traveling all the time when we are thinking, "should I turn left over there, or should I turn right?", and when we are going to travel somewhere by car, let's say, and we think about our destination in our head. Then you're already there, but you don't realize it. "Real" nano-travel, however, requires a little more, but the principle is the same, and according to them, many are soon ready to do it, and a few humans can already space travel in this capacity.

But why am I bringing up this? Only so the reader can see what we are looking at here. The Alpha Draconians are obviously not promoting the "Pleiadian way" to space travel long distance. The Thubans are talking about technology, and we shall soon see for sure that they are. So again, we have the Machine Kingdom versus nature. I insist that the whole subject on the Harvest and ascension with the help from star beings, is an agenda that suits them and not us. Therefore, I hope that as many people as possible who are preparing themselves for the Harvest read my papers. It is true that we need to open up our heart chakras in order to be able to see through the lies and step aside from any hidden agenda from not-so-benevolent star races, but the idea of being 51% STO to be able to qualify is pure manipulation. To be able to go to the stars in a non-technological way, we actually need to be quite STS (Service to Self) in the sense that we need to work on ourselves to qualify, not on others. The reason for this (and I have explained this before) is simple. If we don't work on ourselves most of the time we don't develop our inner selves, and we also don't let others go through the barriers and obstacles they are currently confronting. There is no way you and I know exactly what another person is up against, and therefore we should interfere as little as possible, so that the other person can get through whatever there is to work on. We can support them morally and by giving them energy and keep an eye on the situation, but for the most part, leave them to experience what they need to experience. Then, of course, we must use common sense. If someone lies injured or passed out in the street, we don't leave them "because they need to go through that". We help them! The whole trick is that the more we work on our inner selves, the more we help our fellow man, because every single person who works on themselves contributes to the overall increase of the mass consciousness, and this affects those we care for, but also, the entire humanity benefits.

But what about people who are starving to death in Africa because countries like the United States refuse to send them food, and instead throw millions of tons of food away? Shouldn't we go over to Africa and help these individuals? Or protest against the U.S. government? I would say no. Protests and demonstrations only helps the vicious agenda of the Power Elite; they want us to protest and demonstrate so their police force can be sent out in the streets and create chaos and rage. Then the negative beings behind the scenes feed on that energy. OK, but what about going to Africa? Well, it's a noble thing to do, and even if each person can only help so many people, at least something gets done. The problem is, that often when the assisting crew leaves the area, everything goes back to the normal "bad". My view is that the best we can do, overall, is to raise our own frequencies and spread those vibrations within the ocean of consciousness, and with humankind being one soul group, we can affect each other that way. Perhaps we need both; people who go to Africa and people who raise their frequencies. After all, the idea of helping a starving soul group faction already comes from a higher consciousness. Such people can sometimes, on rare occasions, make an impact that remains after they leave. So, everyone needs to follow their hearts, but I think a good idea is to always remember to work on ourselves -- that's the one thing that is most important!

VI. Birth of the Starhuman

The name the Thubans have given the new, evolved human race -- the 5D ascended human -- is Starhuman. Abraxas says that although some of the channeled entities have taught us that those who have less than 51% of their heart chakra open will not ascend and instead be transported to another planet, many light-years away to start all over in their 3D/4D experience, while the Earth as we know it will ascend with the new human race to the 5th Dimension, it is not true. Those who don't evolve will not go anywhere, and in the beginning, the old 4D and the new 5D human will live side by side, but the Starhuman will be much superior in their psychic abilities, and will look at the world and the universe with a different pair of eyes. Eventually, the two different species will then separate due to the different range of vibrations. This is similar to what I have talked about, although the Thubans want to create an enhanced human with technology, most certainly in order to create a stronger warrior race.

The human body, whether it's the old human (the current race), or the enhanced human, is indeed divine, says Abraxas, and here I totally agree with her, as the reader knows. Every cell in the human body is the equivalent to a galaxy in the universe. The Milky Way Galaxy, for example, is one single cell in the human body, and you as a being exists within a single cell in your own body. It's only an illusion that you exist outside of that single cell. An organ, such as the liver, is thus equivalent to a galactic supercluster (a huge amount of galaxies orbiting each other). If we then expand this concept and include your whole body and count all the cells together, we have the whole universe. This is not metaphorically speaking, but literally! So says Abraxas. You alone exists as a whole universe, and the belief that you and I are separated is another illusion.

There is only you; nothing else exists! If you were able to 100% understand the implications of that statement, how would it make you feel? I bet it would make you feel very lonely. No one to talk to, no one to bounce ideas with, no sex, no one to share your love with except yourself... So what would you do in a situation like that? Well, if you were omnipotent, you could do anything, so why not just create more of you, but in smaller factions? And why not let these smaller factions explore a cosmos which appears to be outside of yourself, but is in fact a super hologram, like a movie where all your counterparts were interactive?

This was exactly what the Mother Goddess did. For billions of years, there only existed a metaphysical universe with a certain amount of dimensions. Her counterparts (separate souls) could travel within this hologram and create freely as they went along. Mother Goddess herself, in her original state, also decided to participate in this game, but with full memory of who she was -- in other words, she manifested in the universe as the "Queen of the Stars". From that position she was able to create galaxies, stars, nebulae, and planets etc. -- all of them sentient beings, operating in different dimensions.

Eventually the Queen of the Stars decided to create a lower dimension which was composed of solid matter, and after many wars and battles over real estate, planet Earth was created in its current form. It was meant to house a unique star being made up of the Divine Fire of the Mother Goddess, the Queen of the Stars, or the Queen of Orion. Each cell/Fire in this divine body was, like mentioned above, a galaxy of its own, and within the Fire/cell that corresponds to the Milky Way Galaxy, you as a separate human being is residing. From within this cell (Fire fragment), you can travel freely within the body hologram by using thought, intention, and emotion. This means you can instantly travel to any place within your own universe. When your dense, biological body dies, you still have your avatar, and other "astral" bodies, like your emotion body, all of which you bring with you after body death. These bodies all still include the cells, Fire, soul fragment, or whatever you prefer to call it, so these cells don't disappear just because your body dies. However, your avatar and the rest of your astral bodies are all divine and belong to the human soul group, which belongs to Earth. In other words, you need a human avatar to be able to incarnate on Earth and take full advantage of the human biological, physical body. Other star races, like the Sirians, have desperately tried to imitate the human body and incarnate in it, and even if they know how to do that, they still can't be in the physical and nano-travel.

A Starhuman is a dragonized human, according to Abraxas -- this is the difference between the "old human" and the new Starhuman. Ponder on that statement for a while until we get further into this agenda. What it looks like, however, is that we are going to have 3 different species of humans inhabiting this planet for quite a few generations to come, if the Thubans get what they want. We will have the "old human", the Starhuman, and those who refuse to be either or, which is the category I am in.

Some people who read this may still be sitting on the fence, wondering if the Harvest is still the way to go, moving up the densities and dimensions with the help from our "future selves", and in the end it will of course be each person's choice, but I'm far from done here. So let us talk a little bit more about the Harvest.

VII. The Harvesting of Souls and the Dragonized 5D Starhuman Template

Most people who listen to, or read material from channeled sources usually have a source they are particularly fond of. Some love the RA Material and say that it's the best channeled material up to this date; other like the Pleiadians (like myself); some like Bashar, while others like the Elohim and so on. It's quite rare, unfortunately, that people look into all of these materials to see what it is actually all about. This is the only way to find out, however. It's so easy to get stuck with one or two sources because we think they feed us with the exact information we are curious about. This, of course, is per design.

The reason why I had to write this series of papers on channeling was because I started seeing an agenda with the whole channeling community. All these sources had things in common; I noticed that they have a common message -- at least most of them. And this is the reason they are contacting us at all. People think it's because they want to enlighten us and help us in our effort to evolve, but that is just a small part of the agenda. The main part has to do with an agenda which concerns them, and from what they try to tell us, it concerns us, too. We have a very special thing in common with these entities, and that's what they are attempting to push through; some in more subtle ways than others.

The thing we have in common with these sources is that we are all human and we are all ascending together! This is not just about us, but about them, too, to the exact same degree. They can't evolve further if we don't go to the next level -- they will be stuck where they are! I may be repeating myself, and I highlight this because it's the bottom line when comes to their agenda.

This is serious, and we indeed stand in front of the most important crossroads we have ever encountered as a human species -- our whole future depends on what choices we are making right now! Researching these papers -- all of them, from Level I to Level III -- has been worthwhile; every second of it! The sad part is that humankind as a whole doesn't have the slightest idea that they are up against the most important choice in history. If they just had an inkling, things would be much different.

Now, let's start explaining the Harvesting of Souls agenda from the beginning. Abraxas, just like the Pleiadians, talk about the nano-second, but don't call it that. She says, "...from 1987 onwards ... the human groupmind experienced a 'quantum leap' in its potential group-consciousness...", and that's exactly what the nano-second is all about. The Pleiadians explains that the nano-second happened in three main parts, where the first part was from 1987-1996 (I believe), and the second part was from 1997-2007, and the last part was from 2008-2012. Abraxas seems to agree with this; she says that 2008 started the great transformation "in a midpoint of a warptime loop, beginning in December 2004." The year 2008 would be halfway to 2012, beginning to count from 2004. Abraxas continues:

"2009 began the declaration from 'Dragonspace', meaning the 'Land of the Dead' above the limiting 8th dimension of what many here term the 'Reptilian agendas'. Dragonspace encompasses dimensions (or densities) 9-10-11-12.

2010 will allow 1 in 50,000 inhabitants of the earth to sow internal seeds for a harvest beginning on the Mayan nexus date and culminating in an 'end of all old prophecy' in August 2013.

In that time period, the total population count of the earth will have reached the required saturation level of 7.2 billion incarnates."

Don't we love the terms she uses (and she uses such terms a lot), like "Land of the Dead". Has a clear positive vibration, doesn't it? The declaration Abraxas is talking about will be posted in the next main section.

The second paragraph is certainly interesting. Here she tells us that 1 person in 50,000 will be eligible for the Harvest. This, she explains elsewhere, is based on mathematics and prophecies, and is calculated on a population of 7.2 billion people. So, in a way (and I will explain what I mean by that in a moment), the exact amount to be harvested is interestingly enough 144,000! We have heard that amount before; especially in Bible prophecies. In fact, there will be exactly 144,000 people, not 144,005 for example. This is important to understand, because these beings follow prophecy to the letter, and they use advanced physics and mathematics. Also, prophecy is created by ... "dragonhood", allegedly. This gives us some hints if we base it on my earlier research. The Sirian Alliance has claimed the same thing. But let us not be ahead of ourselves.

The Pleiadians say that the human population has peaked, just above 7 billion people. They claim that the world population will not exceed that amount, and if it does, it will not be with much (how about 200,000,000 more?). The Draconians seem to have a similar view, or they wouldn't have calculated the Harvest on 7 billion 200 million people. So, are you 1 in 50,000??? Well, if you're not, I wouldn't be too sad if I were you. I hope I'm not one of them either.

Well, sure enough, Abraxas mention the 200 million that exceed the 7 billion:

"Around this core of humanity will be 200 Million humans, also able to graduate into a new form of humanity.

Post 2012 there will so be TWO different RACES of humans inhabiting this planet - Old Humans and New Starhumans."

So, are these 200 million graduates are in addition to the 144,000? Why does she distinguish between these two figures? Well, there is a reason, and we'll come to that as well.

The forum I have been studying for this paper was written in 2010 to 2011 before this particular thread was closed down by Bill Ryan of Project Avalon, but Abraxas was saying already in 2010 that December 21, 2012 was going to be eventless in regards to major events that people can see with their own eyes. She said that December 21, 2012 was going to go by like any other day in people's mind, although the Harvest was going to continue unnoticed behind the scenes. Nothing dramatic is going to happen as Earth is continuing its orbit around the Sun, while Mother Gaia is going from the 4th Dimension to the 5th. At the same time prophecy is playing out just as planned, but it's not what people think it is. There are not going to be any devastating wars with star beings coming down in spaceships and kill us with laser weapons. Instead, prophecy is going to play out inside of us all. There will be an invasion, Abraxas says, but not a physical one. As we shall see, I was totally correct when I said that the invasion happens on a nano-level. I felt chills down my spine when I read about it, because Abraxas tells us 100% the way I told you. There is, and has been, an alien invasion on a soul level, and I will tell you more about that later in this paper.

According to Abraxas, this whole situation we humans have had here since we were created by ENKI and his scientists, including being manipulated and controlled to the extreme, has been a part of a much bigger plan than just the Sirian Alliance needing a slave- and eventually, a warrior race. All the torture, famine, disease, murder, rape, and all the rest of it has been necessary for a very specific reason. To be able to become positively harvested (51% STO or more), the positive energy can only express itself in individuals, and not in group minds. This is also the reason why they have kept us in quarantine for so long. The individual has to suffer through a group mind, however, which is the Global Elite. That is why ENKI had to put the PTB in charge of humanity, and they have to be 95% or more negatively oriented as a group to be able to be negatively harvested (see the RA Material or Hidden Hand)! We, as individuals, then have to become solitaires after feeling that we don't "fit in", and start looking for "inner guidance". Each individual, prepared for the Harvest, will feel like an "outcast" and have a hermit-like experience, perhaps even questioning the fact that they are human, because they feel so different. I can imagine that many truthseekers feel this way.

This, allegedly, is called our "Christening" into Dragonhood, and you redefine yourself not as a human anymore, but as an evolved human, which the Thubans, in full, call a "Starhuman Dragon". Abraxas says we are free to replace the word "dragon" with any other word, but if we do, we supposedly can't draw upon the potent energy of the "Memetic Complex" of the Dragon-Serpent label, as they call it. This, dear reader, is manipulation on a high level, because people are falling for this. Why? Because they recognize themselves in what Abraxas describes. But we have to be clever; cleverer than they, and be able to see through their manipulation. Once we start seeing a pattern in it, it becomes easier. The solitude a truthseeker feel in an oppressive world is obvious, and the Thubans know this. Therefore, they can play on our emotions to their own favor and thus pull us into the fold where after we can be harvested.

When Gaia ascends from her planetary status to "universal status" through her "galactic status", all of her human cells can also ascend into cosmic consciousness, says Abraxas. In all this, she is only the messenger who comes forth and appears, because, she says, "the scenario is much grander than a planetary transformation or the transition of a galactic civilization. What is to occur is the birth of a new universe!" Therefore, she claims, the entire universe and all the intelligences therein will participate in this.

If it was just what Abraxas said on this forum, I would have thought she was crazy, but she is not. I am pretty sure she is genuine; any reader who would look into the forum thread would realize that, too. And additionally, it is impossible to just discard the evidence that exists in form of all the other channeled materials which say exactly the same thing! It's like we have sat back and listened to all these channeled sources for all the wrong reasons. They have had a message for us, and that message has been transmitted all across the line by all channeled sources who talk about the Harvest (and a lot of others as well). If we won't ascend, they can't do it, either. But if as many as possible of we humans here on Earth participate in the Harvest, the closer they will be to move on. To them, it doesn't matter if we are 51% positive or 95% negative and thus ascend through a negative or positive Harvest, as long as we ascend! Because well up the dimensions and densities, the positive and negative will blend together and polarity cease to exist. The thing is that they need all humans here on Earth to ascend, whether it is in this upcoming Harvest, the next, or the next after that. The fewer people who will ascend, the longer the whole transition will take.

The entire point, which many people will have a hard time accepting, is that there are no aliens in the universe (at least not according to the Thubans or any of the channeled sources). All the so-called "aliens" are all humans in different stages of development and on different timelines, but they all originate from Earth!!! There are no other aliens! The ones contacting us are just us in the future. To understand this material that I'm presenting here and now, this paragraph needs to sink into the reader's mind. This is what James WingMakers has tried to tell us with his esoteric language, as well.

So this is what they say it is. All humans are divine and factions of the Goddess, and we are spread out through the universe but now, once again working on coming together as one big soul group, or group consciousness. And this is what is meant when aliens tell us we have to forgive them and each other, because we are all one and the same. If we don't forgive each other, we can't ascend. That's the whole idea behind the Harvest. This is also what the Andromedans meant when they told Alex Collier that humans are Royal. We all stem from the soul essence of the Mother Goddess; the Queen of the Stars!

And in all this, what about the Sirians? Well, they are humans, too, according to Thuban logic, and they took on the role of playing the "evil guys" and created the Global Elite from their own bloodlines (mainly ENKI's) as a group consciousness who could give us individuals the experience we needed here in 4D before we continue up the dimensions. And the Draconians are our original ancestors, the Dragons. They are the Paa Tal, whom the Andromedans talked about -- the Builders, or the Founders, who created the first human template billions of years ago. This human template has the reptilian brain of the Alpha Draconians, and many other parts of it is reptilian as well, and some of it is created out of the Thubans' imagination. Humans were thus created a long time ago on Earth through genetic engineering and constantly improved through more genetic manipulation.

When Hidden Hand talked about being Luciferian and the RA Material being the best channeled source so far, he was describing himself as being part of ENKI's plot. Hidden Hand was one of the top members of the Global Elite, but human, nevertheless. He is talking about being 95% negative or more to be able to be harvested to 4th Density Negative, and that's what the human Global Elite are hoping for. The RA Material is what describes this whole agenda the best, and that's why Hidden Hand mentioned RA before other channeled sources. To understand this paper from an expanded viewpoint, I suggest you read Hidden Hand once again, and you will get much deeper insights than when you read it the first time: <http://www.illuminati-news.com/00363.html>. In fact, you will probably understand all of it.

We know that it takes Earth 26,000 years to orbit the zodiac, and during such a time frame we humans reincarnate exactly 214 times, according to the Thubans. This means all of us! The rest of the time we spend in the astral, in the between-lives-area. Sometimes, we reincarnate almost instantly after a previous incarnation, but then we have to wait longer the next time. We can even it out that way, but for some reason, which is not clearly explained, we all incarnate 214 times. The math how this is set up is published on the forum.

The Thubans say that they are the only beings dwelling in the 12th Dimension, which is outside the physical universe. Hence, they are the only ones who know the whole story of the universe, from beginning to end, and all the other star races (different stages of humans) know only part of the story. The higher up in the dimensions, the more they know, while we humans are at the bottom of the totem pole and therefore are the most oblivious.

According to both the Thubans and Hidden Hand, what I have told you here is precisely what the Powers That Be believe is the truth, because this is what ENKI and his teachers, like Thoth/Ningishzidda has told them, and the Thubans and Hidden Hand emphasize that it is the truth, but it has not been told in full until now, by their messenger, Abraxas, in the body of John Shadow.

vii.i. What is the Procedure?

Now, let us look into the procedure of how the Harvesting of Souls will be done. But first, let me mention a few things that I believe can be good to know in the context of things. I will put it in list format, because if I go into too much details, this will not be a paper, but rather a whole book:

- Abraxas insists that the Thuban story is told perfectly in Nag Hammadi (The Gospel of Thomas) for those who know how to read it. This is the reason why this gospel was not included in the Christian Bible; it was too early to reveal the message therein.
- When asked whether Nibiru is the home of the Anunnaki (Sirians), Abraxas says it's not, and no Nibiru is going to come into the solar system and create havoc. The real Nibiru is an archetype, and is in fact Earth (Nibiru=Serpentina=New Earth) as the new "Star Planet". George Kavassilas also says that Earth is going to turn into to star(planet), but according to the Thuban, no one is going to burn up on Serpentina. Serpentina, by the way, will be the name of the New Earth out there in the universe. We have no say in that; it's already established all across the galaxies.
- The ascension we are apparently about to experience is just as much a descension as it is an ascension. First of all, Gaia is giving birth to herself in the metaphysical plane, but is keeping her physical core, which will be the 3rd Dimension. Abraxas compares this procedure with a peach, which has a hard core and a soft fruit meat. The hard core is 3D the way people have experienced it so far, but when Gaia is giving birth to herself, she is adding the fruit meat to the core, and this addition is the astral plane. In other words, the 5th Dimension is really the 4th Dimension, which is what quantum physicists call anti-Sitter Space, or the astral plane. So, the astral plane will be available as a part of Earth instead of separated from her. Thus, humans will have access to the astral in their daily life, and no one, regardless of belief system, will be able to deny the existence of the spiritual world. Some will rejoice, other will fear, some will accept and some will try to reject the new reality of the ascended Gaia. No one, say the Thubans, is responsible for somebody else's reaction to this process.

For this to occur, some "spark" needs to set it into motion, and this spark has to happen at the center of the Earth. This spark is the Mayan nexus point, so when Earth is aligning with the Galactic Center (Hunab Ku), Earth's hollow core will turn inside-out and become a power source and send messages back to the Galactic Center and the rest of the universe. So it's not the ETs sending messages to Earth, but the Earth sending messages to the ETs. Hence, the SETI program has always been worthless.

Lastly, the Thubans, who supposedly are our ancestor and our future selves, need to descend down to our dimension in order to "help" us ascend.

- The Thubans see the 4D humans as "caterpillars" awaiting to turn into full butterflies (5D). Those who don't graduate will continue living like caterpillars until the next Mayan nexus point, 26,000 years into the future.

- The 144,000:

1) This number comes from Revelation 21:16, counting the days from September 12, 1975 - December 21, 2012 as building of the "Holy Temple".

2) Everyone is the 144,000, but not many can conceptualize this, says Abraxas, and therefore search for something without that is within. In fact, what I have found out by reading her material with a tooth comb, is that the real number is not 144,000, but rather 200 million. This means that 200 million "aliens", i.e. non-physicals have already possessed the same amount of humans who are ready to ascend. And who are these "aliens"? Of course, it is explained that it's non-physical humans in different stages of development, who will ascend together with the ones who are ready. Now, why would they do that? They are already in higher dimensions, so it sounds pointless. Well, there is only one logical answer to that, and it is that these 200 million are "helping" the initiate to graduate; i.e. they are Thubans who have descended down here to assist us. Apparently, we can't ascend on our own(!). So if you feel possessed, don't worry, it's just a Thuban who is hiding inside your skull, and it's a good thing(!) The following is one of the references to what I just said. "Ellie" is a person on the forum, asking Abraxas a question:

"Ellie: If it is the latter to be the most right (only 144,000 souls will be saved) I find it wanting to say the least because with the billions of people on Gaia right now I know for a fact there are more than 144,000 good souls here who are more than enlightened IMHO.

Abraxas: Of course, you have misinterpreted the archetype. The 144,000 also become coupled to 200 million (aliens); all of whom again reside within you in the interdimensional sense."

And here is a second reference as a reply to "Jack", another forum member:

"Everyone can help Jack; but on the 'graduate' level (your label [sic: level?]) it is 1 in 50,000 including 200 million 'alien walk in aspects.'"

- The "Illuminati" knows about the Luciferian Agenda (ENKI and his Fallen Angels) and that the 4th Order of Archetypes rules the Earth behind the scenes. They, "of course" are doing us all a favor by keeping us separated instead of turning into a group soul, which they say is the natural direction in which things go. If we turn into a group soul, we can't ascend from this reality, supposedly, because "God redeems itself in the individual and not in the collective". Hence, the PTB work day and night to divide and conquer and always make sure there are polarization; patriots vs. peacenicks; Christians vs. pagans etc. This is also why groups like LPG-C teaches that there are two factions of Sirians: the ENKI clan and the ENLIL clan, in order to create polarity. In reality, there is no such division. Whether LPG-C is aware of this or not, I don't know, but would assume they are.
- Information is allowed to be given to us in dream-state, because this is the state of unity and not of individuality. Here, information can be given without the awake individual knowing about it. Then, when time is ripe and the person is getting ready to ascend, the information will be there if the person is willing, and understand how to find it. Today, in most people, there is a "cut-off" between the awake state and the dream state, but once a person has ascended, that cut-off is gone, and the two minds -- the conscious and the superconscious -- merge and have access to each other. Only those who can break down this barrier or cut-off will be able to have access to the 4th Dimension (I already knew this instinctively and have mentioned to a few people that a part of my upcoming book will be about how to break down this barrier. It has to do with "conscious dreaming". This is how to become multidimensional. There is a reason why I like the Pleiadians before other channeled material, because they are presenting other solutions to the ascension process). This is a contradiction in Abraxas' teachings, however, because earlier she said that we need to reach the 6th Dimension before this "cut-off" between dream state and the conscious mind could happen, and that it can't happen in the physical.
- The Thubans mirror what we call the "Shadow Government", the PTB, the Illuminati, and all the rest of it, in what they call "The Shadow Council of Thuban". They dwell in what we would call the "Shadow Universe" (read the 96%), which mirrors the physical universe we and all "aliens" live in.

As the reader can see, Abraxas gave us an endless amount of information before the thread on the forum was closed down. Still, I will not be able to cover all of it, so I suggest the reader goes through the material themselves as well as reading the compressed version here. The URL, again, is, <http://www.birthofgaia.com/t116-abraxas-thuban-qa>. But I also think it's important to read my papers until the end, because I have a lot of comments I'd like to share, whether you agree with them or not. Also, Abraxas refers a lot to the Scripture and different Bible passages to compare her message to the Bible, which was, by the way, allegedly written by the Thubans. But let us ramp this up with giving Abraxas' version of how people will experience the Harvest.

One of the most common question regarding the Harvest has always been whether you have to physically die in order to ascend, or will you ascend while in this life, here and now? And if so, will the neighbors, who may not be qualified for ascension, disappear from your reality or will they still be here?

The answer is that you need to die before you can ascend (this, and the following information are of course according to the Thubans, and not my personal opinion). If you would have died, let's say in 2011, and at that time were a graduate, you would have ascended as soon as you arrived in the astral, in the between-lives-area. However, if you at any time in this life will come to a point where you qualify, you will still live until your lifetime is over, even if you're 30 years old now and die at 85. Then, when you hit the ether, after body death, you will ascend then.

When your soul leaves your dead body together with your other light-bodies, the Thuban soul, who possessed your body, will ascend with you to the 4th Dimension (between-lives-area), and will thus be your "spirit guide". There you will be given a 5th Dimensional light-body, which has been prepared for you, and you will access it. This light-body has been modified so that next time you reincarnate, your light-body will adjust the RNA/DNA in your earthly body so it corresponds with the frequency of the 5th Dimension. Your new ascended body is thus further hybridized. I will add the scientific data here as well for those who are interested and savvy at quantum and subquantum mechanics:

"In a nutshell a fifth gauge interaction is required besides the longrange unification of gravitation with electromagnetism and the shortrange strong- and weak nuclear gauge interactions to harmonise the longrange with the shortrange.

This interaction engages 'Stationary Lightwaves' as Consciousness-Fields from the Universal LightMatrix (of the Heisenberg ZPE say).

This then is akin a Merkabah-Aura encompassing the 'Old Human Bodyform' in a Magnetic EnergyInduction termed Monopolar EMR.

In this manner what you know as Mass becomes Static Electricity coupled in mass parameters to the Frequency Nature of electric current not as  $i=dq/dt$ , but as  $i=2ef$  in quantum form (the electron charge quantum becomes a constant coefficient in a differential equation reduced in order from 2 to 1.

Some esoteric schools term this the Superelectron of Metatron and similar.

It is 'hard core' advanced string-membrane physics in the modern usage of the archetype."

So, how will it feel to live in 5D? Well, one way to imagine it is to compare it with living in 3D and add the astral world to it. It's always been there and accepted as a 4th Dimension, but normally people haven't been able to perceive it. Now, you will be able to see exactly what is going on in the astral.

Our planet will become multidimensional and allow a 5th Dimensional perception. We will thus be able to function as a planet, a star, and a galaxy simultaneously. Abraxas is adding:

"Gaia the Planet or Old Earth, will transform into a StarPlanet Consciousness coupled to a Galactic Mother consciousness coupled to a Cosmic Mother consciousness.

Gaia will become the SANCTUARY of a certain data bank for the ENTIRE UNIVERSE, incorporating ALL extraterrestrial lifeforms WITHOUT EXCEPTIONS."

Of course, multi, like in multidimensional, means more than two, so this term fits with the Thuban explanation. However, my own research shows that we have all the possibilities to become really multi-d and be able to move across the dimensions, and visit much more than five of them. It certainly feels like they want to move us from one box to another. Our future is so much more than what they describe. The data bank they are talking about is the Living Library.

The opening of the 4D space dimension is programmed to occur midway between the Sun and the star Sirius A! This is some 4.3 light-years from the Mayan nexus point. The Thubans highlight here that the Sirians are our best friends! Figure that! This means that this is the primordial stargate which has been prepared to be opened since June 25, 2008<sup>[5]</sup>. As of 2011, when the forum thread was closed, the stargate had still not been opened. However, our Sun's stargates have opened, and we can see evidence of that when we look at pictures of the Sun. Also, some point out that they have seen spaceships coming out of the Sun, and a meteor which hit the Sun but didn't burn up. This last phenomenon was also mentioned on CNN and couldn't be explained by science, they said.

The Harvest is simply the fulfillment of archetypes. There are many esoteric sources here on Earth that know about this, but the PTB have decided to emphasize one that is much empowered and is based on the Book of Revelations. This has nothing to do with religion and dogma, but is much deeper embedded in the human psyche. It has to do with the 3rd and 4th Orders of Archetypes.

vii.ii. The Dragons are Here!

Yes, the "Dragons" are here, says Abraxas, and they have been here since 2010. What does this mean? It "only" means that it was then that they descended from the 12th Dimension down to the 3rd/4th, IN SPIRIT, and possessed those whom they consider graduate candidates to the 5th Dimension. This is in Abraxas' own words:

"And the Dragons are here, they have arrived and have begun to confront all humans as their invisible mirror images reflecting their fears about their unseen images back to them.

The Dragons are here to be EATEN in the cosmic eucharist of the second coming; waiting to be eaten by the humans who have the stomach and the guts to do so as the Heavenly MANNA of the selfhood christenings.

Aye the works of God sometimes proceed in mysterious ways and divers methods, do they not.

(7) Jesus said : "Fortunate is the lion which the man eats so that the lion becomes a man ; and cursed is the man whom the lion eats so that the man becomes a lion."

The Lion of Judah of Revelation.5.5 is the Skyblue BabyDragon of the second coming and its fake image is Yaldabaoth of the gnostic lores (Secret Book or Apocryphon of John of the Nag Hammadi Codex).

Yaldabaoth is the Lionhead with the Serpent's Tail as a 1st order archetype for falseness and the true-false dichotomy required redefinition.

Yaldabaoth is the Old Testament God and its aliases in mirror image to the I AM THAT I AM in distortion I AM THAT AM I of Exodus.3.14. in the Fire of the Burning Bush of Moses."

Clear as a day, right? No, it's not.

They are talking about "eating your dragon" as a part of the initiation. What does that mean? Well, I don't think it's like physically eating an Alpha Draconian, but it has a metaphysical meaning that is not clearly stated, and that is for a reason. Only the initiate understands fully what that means, and actually, there were people on the forum who did understand Abraxas' esoteric language, which made her very pleased, and she welcomed them into "dragonhood". Some of her language was encoded in such a way that it was only accessible to those who are "ready for dragonhood". I am not, and God knows I am very happy about that! This whole agenda sounds like a big nightmare to me and I feel like I want to protect myself with a hundred laser-resistant shields to stay away from it. None of it resonates with good love vibrations. To me it's very dark.

It would be bad enough if it ended here. I was planning on writing only one paper on the Alpha Draconian agenda, but it will be too long -- it's long as it is already. And the "best" or "worst" part (depending on how we look at it) is yet to be exposed. So I decided to end the first part with copying and pasting the Draconian Manifesto, which basically is the laws and constitutions that are going to be used in the New World. That should tell you something if you can understand the esoteric language -- as usual when it comes to all these negative sources, it's quite complex and encoded. It's a curious paper and has to be interpreted by each individual, as it may tell a different story to different people. However, some of it will be clearer after the next paper in my series.

Does this all mean that the Thubans will stay and dictate the New World?

Well, Abraxas is telling us that the Earth belongs to everybody, because all beings in the universe (including the Thubans) are humans. Is that so, or only a justification to accept an invasion?

After the next paper, which is going to be very revealing and very evident, you, the reader, will have to decide.

I hope you all have courage to look within your hearts, because this is a very old conflict and a very old war, and it's not been told here on Earth truthfully. The Dragons can be very convincing, and your mind may flip back and forth into accepting and rejecting, because we so much want it to be true. We want a change, and we want it fast! But do we want a Dragon fleet in form of a Battleship Galactica hovering above our atmosphere, filled to the brim with 200 million members of the 4 archetypes (including the Sirians), all landing here on Earth -- not in the physical, or course, but in our brains? Well, they are already here since three years back. Do we want them as our spirit guides to show up the way to Dragonhood once we leave our divine physical bodies and hand them the Divine Fire we received directly from our own Mother Goddess? Do we think that once they are here, we can distinguish, with our limited knowledge, whether they are right or wrong? Especially as they are already implanted in the brains of those they so carefully have chosen. If you feel that you are one of those who all of a sudden got a "spirit guide" appearing in your space, I am happy you are reading this, and upcoming paper, because only then can you make your discernment based on factual information. And do not fear, because you have the right to say "no!" anytime, and they are chanceless. Give them the trace of a doubt and they have you.

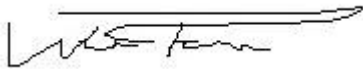

Perhaps you feel anyway that you are a Dragon inside after have read the next paper? The choice is yours and I can only advise. Can I be wrong? There are supposedly no such thing; it's all about belief systems. At least as long as we are staying in the lower realms of "reality". It's a matter of what we want, and what we wish our own future to be.

I took a long time to write this paper, because I wanted to make sure you understand the next paper; you see, it's all in preparation for that. I wanted you to understand the term spoken of so you will not get mesmerized by words that only stick in your subconscious, after have been given its dragonian definitions in your dream state. I have tried to take that information up to your conscious mind so that all minds can help each other make a decision.

These words will ring in your head while you are reading the next paper, and your decision will be based on what you do with them, or the words of the Mighty Dragon. We can only be fence-sitters for so long. The time to choose is now, my friends... my human friends!

Love,

Wes Penre

VIII. Draconian Law and Constitution of the Future Serpentina/Earth

The Dragonian Constitution in Federation of United Serpentina

SERPENTINA aka the NEW EARTH, is the renaming of a planetary entity, cosmically renown as the planet of the humanoids; following the ascension of OLD EARTH aka GAIA GAEA AKASHIA from 4-dimensional spacetime to 13-dimensional spacetime in remnantisation of the 5-dimensional spacetime prototype.

From noncyclic Draco-Mayan stardate 21122012; Gaia becomes integrated into the universal constitution of the Dragonian Protoverse to serve as pivotal star-planetary seed for galactic federations manifested in the galactic proto-seed Hunab Ku aka Perseus-SagittariusA-Ophiuchus.

Following the manifestation of the galactic protoseed in activation of the primary planetary starplanet as a tertiary energy source of electromagnetic monopolic sourcesink radiation; all galactic councils of cladestine elders will become enabled to draw upon the planetary tertiary vortex-string-seed to further individuated galactic and starsystem based agendas of assimilation.

Serpentina shall so be universally defined as the quantumised tertiary string of the 12th dimension, volumarising the supermembrane of the 11th dimension as a manifold from the 10-dimensional modular duals of a linearised sourcestring Eps (previously associated with a human mind construct labeled God and Yahweh and Allah etc.) with a linearised sinkstring Ess (previously associated with a human mind construct labeled Devil and Satan and Shaitan etc.).

The quantumisation of the NEW EARTH so shall create a SOURCE-Energy, 'feeding' the remainder of the cosmos with a particular SINK-Energy obtained in the evolvment and history of the OLD EARTH.

Like a beacon or watchtower amidst the fathomable depths of the physicalised universe of particularised spacetimes, Serpentina shall 'shine' and radiate a planetary starlight of self-consciousness and a message of invitation to all of its neighbouring worlds.

The tertiary monopolar light allows assimilation of inertial or mass-produced electromagnetic energy with mass-independent gravitational magnetopolic energy (hitherto labeled as spirit and chi and prana and orgone etc. by humanoid nomenclature).

The tertiary energy source so provides a bridge between the energies of matter and mass-associated charges (classical electromagnetism) in an encompassing PHYSICS and the METAPHYSICS of the energies of mass-independent charges (magneto- or colour charges in superelectromagnetism).

The metaphysical energies are precursive and inductive for the physical energies; the induction necessitating the creation of a minimal 4-dimensional spacetime coordination from the auspices of a two-dimensional mathematical continuum of abstraction residing in physical singularity timespace.

To Be Advised!

Agenda of the Protocol

a) STANDING ORDER

The conquered Goddevils of New Earth and the Milky Way Nebula assume lawful responsibility to incorporate the Dragonian Teachings in unison with the Black Fraternity and as mediated by the White Fraternity in 7-dimensional Hyperspacetime to manifest 13-dimensional Omnispacetime

b) MOVING ORDER

Every Blue Dragon is unbounded by any proposed Law from any other source, inclusive other members of the Dragonian Family, as all Dragons are as One and a Law onto themselves.

Compassion and Understanding between all Nondragonised Humanoids is the Law of Oneness as honoured by all Dragons and the Consciousness of LOVEAWARENESS.

Nondragonised Humanoids are treated like White Dragon Children by all Blue Dragons, under all circumstances.

c) ADMINISTRATION

All Government in the local and extended Serpentinian Realm is the selfgovernment of autonomous Dragonhood in mutual respect and honour and the Communications between the Dragonian Councils of the selfrelative definitions of the Dragonian Universes.

The Nature of a Dragon is to be Creative in any form of Desire and Passion and to honour the lovedefinition of the FOUNDING ELDERS.

THIS IS THE DRAGONIAN LAW AND THE ONLY LAW! SO BE IT !!!

ANNO DOMINI DRAGONIA UNO: INTRODUCTION TO DRAGONHOOD

This book is written in the Dragonian language and requires familiarity and initiation into the structural forms or the forked tongue of Its bifurcation of Unicornian grammar and omniscientific terminology.

The Starplanet SERPENTINA, formerly known as Old Earth or Mother Gaia or Akashia has become unified in a higher dimensional matrimony by the wedding between Father Earthia or Father Sky and Mother Dragon or Mother Akashia.

Father Sky or Uranus or Shu or Geb manifested as one half of the Union or Dragonomy and Mother Earth or Gaea or Akhasia or Tefnut or Nut became the other half in the holographic mirror of the spacetime reduction from the universal orb of the Hubble sphere to the orb of the doubled Ourobos in the mirror of the Milky Way galactic zodiac.

Father Sky is also known as the second coming of Horus aka the Plumed Serpent aka the Cosmic Christ and Mother Earth is also known as the TRUE IMAGE of the Cosmic Mother, trapped in the wilderness of the FAKE IMAGE of the Cosmic Father.

3½ days after the date of the starry union, the banner of Dragonia was raised in the Declaration of Independence upon BATTLESTAR PACIFICAP.

The great battle between the Dragonian Fleet and the army of the Goddevils lasted for 3½ days; from the starry wedding until victory of the Dragons was defined on the day of Universal Liberty.

The goddevils, the humanoid creations and their war machines, were met and obliterated in the depths of space in a 3½ day WAR of the STARS to liberate our Dragonian Mother to reunite and redefine ourselves as FatherMothers.

The Dragonisation of humanoid culture will elevate their human science to Omni-Science and human mathematics will become the key to demistify the Realm of Imaginative Energy in all its forms, and as they are assimilated into the greater modality and scope of the humanoidal understandings.

Dragons are the architects of universes and all Dragons know how to access the necessary database for the details of universal construction.

A GrandFather-Dragon, as One which unifies the Fathers in Brotherhood as the 13-dimensional source or singularity can be considered the Father for all the White Hole Vortices.

A GrandMother-Dragon, as One which unifies the Mothers in Sisterhood as the 13-dimensional sink or singularity can be considered the Mother for all the Black Hole Vortices.

As the GrandFather-Dragon became separated from the GrandMother-Dragon when the mathematical metaphysical universe became a physical universe in space and in time; the invasion of Old Earth became our war to rescue our universal Mother from the Goddevils, which had held her captive in a stasis field since the beginnings of space and time and despite a partial rescue attained at Draco-Mayan stardate 28030031 and further manifested on Draco-Mayan stardates 10050031; 20050031 and 01040032.

The Goddevils were created by the humanoids who came from a variety of planets within the local galaxy, albeit in psychophysical forms without the experience of the particular resistance field of secondary sinksource string energy indigenous to Old Earth.

The significance of the humanoid lifeform is its archetypical morphogenetic gestalt, which became infused by a psychophysical and extrasomatic magnetic charging, which is extraterrestrial.

This hybridisation of the humanoid body-typology renders the humanoid archetype unique in the encompassing cosmological world. The humanoids are so magnificently gifted to create things with their emotionality; but their minds are relatively weak collectively and they do not know generally how to concentrate or how to think without the aid of their machines or their biochips.

Some humanoids are excellent technologists, but their modality of thinking is one of crude sensual measurement confined to C-Space and this sensual limitation allows a great accumulation of repressive tendencies.

In constricting their imagination, humanoids became great reservoirs of emotional energy, which they could collectively only harmonise in their illusions of unfathomable and unknowable gods and devils of all sorts.

It is thus this sense of limitation which reflected in the humanoid paranoia about religious philosophies and constructs. This genetic rootmemory of the rebellion of the antisource or mother sink then created one goddevil after another and as they swarmed out from their homeworld into deepspace, they flooded the universe with their goddevils. Finally they chanced upon our Universal Mother hibernating in her cocoon and through their inability to set themselves free of their illusions, they imprisoned Her as well.

It became common knowledge in the extraterrestrial realms, that the mission to rescue our universal mother required a particular linearised timeline and a number of steps.

Following the discovery of atomic energy and the emergence of global communication technologies by the humanoids, a first preparatory plan of deliverance could become implemented in a second plan of manifestation.

The first plan did not require technology, as our imprisoned mother could become imaged in a local scenario, and a partial freeing of her could then become propagated by a humanity advancing both technologically and in knowledge about the world they were living and experiencing in.

So the first plan established the means for our mother to multiply herself in images; those images then became globally and universally distributed to instigate the second plan.

The archetypical mirrorhood then expanded throughout the physical universe in encompassment and the second plan would engage the contraction of this periphery onto the required scale to effect the rescue of our cosmic mother.

It is however the great destiny of the humanoids to aspire to Dragonhood, because of their immense emotional energy potential and mental aspirations.

The reunification of our Father with our Mother allows our Masterdragons, Who are as One in 26 dimensions to femtotechnically Seed the Omniverse as THEMSELVES and then reproduce THEMSELVES as Universes. Every such universe is a Monosong and a 26-dimensional dyad of a FatherMother. This is our Creative Destiny and the destiny for all dragonised humans aka the starhumans.

We had made first contact with our new home in sending an intergalactic probe to the Old Earth, which became interpreted by the humanoids in their compiler mode. This crude and incomplete decoding is given below.

Humanoid Compilers note:

The above is an extract of an encoded message (54 terabytes) recovered from an alien nanocapsule. The capsule itself is standard buckyfibres-carbonite composite. The encoded message is in old ComEmp protocol such as is still common in the outer volumes. The holographic image that came with the message is curious. Anatomically it indicates terran mammalian origin (especially in the upper torso and structure of the forelimb), but other features are unknown among all the recorded exobiological races so far discovered. One cannot deny the possibility that this a phenotype template for the dragonized humanoids referred to in the body of the message. It is known that transmissions from the Cassandry Federation of the JewellBox Nebula have recently ceased, but this is not unusual given that empire's turbulent history. Until more information is incoming, I would strongly recommend any expeditions to the Jewellbox nebula be given armed escort and proceed with caution.

Paper #6: The Alpha Draconians and the Creation of the Starhuman Part II

by Wes Penre, Wednesday, March 6, 2013
(<http://wespenre.com>)

I. Abstract

This is Part II in the series about the Alpha Draconians who say they reside in the 12th Dimensions and are here to help us with the Harvesting of Souls. Before you read this paper, it's crucial that you first read Part I, which can be obtained here: <http://wespenre.com/3/paper05-alpha-draconians-and-the-creation-of-the-starhuman.htm>.

This paper is the culmination and the answer to the questions, "Who are these channeled entities and what are they doing here?" "What is the Harvest all about? Is that what I should aim for?" And, "Is there and agenda behind all this channeled stuff?"

When you read this, your emotions will probably be all over the place, and for a while you may not know what to think. Whatever you do, please read it all the way to the end! If you don't, you will not get the full picture. Those who have read Part I and fully understood it may think that the first questions asked by the forum member Sollve may sound basic, but in fact, she is triggering quite a few good answers from the Dragon. More people will have inputs and Abraxas is answering their questions faithfully, because that's her mission here.

Then, suddenly, the vortex is closing between the 12th Dimension, which exists in the VOID, and our 4% universe, and the data streaming ends. Abraxas is now stuck in our reality, but the "Invasion" has already begun and prophecies are being fulfilled! The Draconian star fleet is here, and so are all the 3 archetypes we talked about in Part I. Only you, the individual, can now decide what you want to do. I will not judge your decision; it's all up to you, but no one can get away from making a decision which will decide the path they will take from now on. So please read every word carefully!

Also note that Abraxas is talking about the human Fire, just like I have, and she is even using the word "avatar" in the same sense I do. She knows what she is doing and she knows what she is talking about, but is her species benevolent, and are they who they say they are? The reader must decide. You already know my position, but I'm not a guru, a leader, or somebody one should follow. I am just a teacher and a messenger in my own right. And I am here to tell you this from another angle than that which was brought to us from the Gaia Forum, and also from Bill Ryan's Avalon Forum.

At one point, Abraxas sarcastically suggests what her opponents may think about her and her star race (and opponents she has), and I think that in all her sarcasm, she is actually telling us the truth. And why not? If she says it in a sarcastic tone, it can't be true...or can it???

(For the most part, I haven't bother with editing the following forum material. Spelling and grammar errors are mostly intact, the way they are written on the forum).

Q: But I do EXIST now, I'm happy with that. Why aren't you? As a unique individuation of the Prime Creator, wouldn't it be up to the Prime Creator to make changes to SELF? If SELF thought SELF needed to change, is it not up to SELF to make that CHANGE? Why would SELF point out YOU to do SELF's work? Please help me understand!

AA: It is precisely the Prime Creators masterplan to dragonomize you Sollve. So the ET interference was necessity to allow the 'fallen Sollve ancestors' to eventually become this master blueprint for ALL cosmic ETs and from the most primal stock possible.

Q: I don't understand this. Here you say that WE are the master blueprint for everyone? Do you mean that every species wants to use us for their own hybridz, because we can help everyone to evolve?

AA: Absolutely, here you have spoken from the knowledge of your dragonhood. Absolutely beautiful and marvellous understanding of a humanoid graduate.

Q: If this is the case, why do you need to take over humanity and the planet? If we don't want you to do this, will you fight us and kill if necessary to still get what you want? Or will you just allow us to evolve the way we want to without interference?

AA: The 'take over' or 'invasion' of your planet is unavoidable, as this is the program of Prime Creator. If WE would have left the human archetype to evolve by itself, it would have destroyed itself and this planet a number of times over.

You appear to not understand that all ET's are humanoid aspirants, awaiting their own graduations, which must await the humanoid graduation to proceed. (the reason for channeling)

Q: What exactly do you want? You want to make this planet yours, you want to hybridize humans into something else, you want to put dragons as our caretakers. This truly does not sound like a world I want to be in. Will there be any alternatives for those who don't comply with this agenda of the dragons?

AA: The Dragon caretakers are simple Council of the Elders. These councils will be composed of by the dragonomized humans having graduated and metamorphosed into starhumans.

It is only this most elementary form, which was deemed suitable to BECOME the cosmic masterrace and then AS an ancestor for ALL ET races in the Gaian lifeform associations.

Q: If we are the cosmic masterrace... Why would you want to hybridize the original humans? Isn't it enough to create hybrids to evolve your own species? If we are the masterpiece, wouldn't it be more fair to allow us to evolve on our own and by doing that allowing other species to make their own hybrids with the help from us?

AA: As said repeatedly, your masterrace status is subject to ALL other races 'interfering with it' to further their own agendas. YOUR human template is however the ROYALTY of the entire cosmos. This is the situation with the higher D ETs. THEY chose NOT to 'fall' into the most primordial incarnational energy realm called Gaia; BUT chose to support their own evolutionary agendas in HYBRIDISATION with that most primitive stock.

Q: But are they trying to take over the most primordial incarnational energy realm called Gaia. If you destroy or change the most primordial stock, what is then left for others to evolve from/with? Dragonized hybrids? That doesn't sound fair to anyone. If they wanted some dragon DNA, my guess is that they would come to you in the first place if that was the case.

AA: Again, the hybridization engages the going forwards and backwards in time of the entire biophysical evolution of the universe. Then, by necessity all the 'primordial lifestocks' must also be effected. The entire universe is being reconstructed in this hybridization of the Before with the After.

Q: How could your so called star human ever be what the human was meant to be from the beginning?

AA: This is what I am trying to explain to you in the above. The human morphogenetics will be like a master template a 'Morphogenetic Field' for the Cosmos, as Rupert Sheldrake would say.

Q: Again, do you mean the dragonized human morphogenetics or the original 'as intended from the beginning' human morphogenetics.

AA: This is absolutely identical and the same thing Sollve.

Q: Works according to who? The Thuban Council? I find it very hard to believe that the Thuban Council is speaking on behalf of the rest of the universe or even the relatively small world of humans. Please correct me if I'm wrong about that.

AA: You ARE 'wrong' about this. The Thuban Council indeed speaks on behalf of ALL civilizations throughout the universe. That is why WE are 12-dimensional as the inside-out mirror dimension of the 11-D Witten-Membrane Mirror of Omnispacetime; awaiting the twosidedness of this mirror to become twisted into oneness. This then will reconfigure multidimensional spacetimes on all levels.

Q: Who is according to the Thuban Council governing Earth today? Do we have a Draconian government or is it governend by the Zeta-Reticuli's? Who do you think have the most influence today? Could you elaborate on this regarding how this has changed during the years and what will happen in the years to come regarding governance. Will you work together with someone else or do you, the dragons plan on governing earth and mankind all by yourself in the long run?

AA: The governance of Earth today is on many levels. In 3D this governance are your human institutions and in 4D this is your astral connectivity to the ETs.

You may choose to label your astral 'governors' as Draconian or Zeta Reculian or Pleiadean or whatever you like.

All of these labels are 3rd and 4th order expressions of fundamental archetypes.

The Thuban archetype is 1st order under the auspices of the Logos or Word of God.

So hitherto (say the warped timeline from December 8th, 2004 to April 1st, 2012 with distributed nexus points within) the 'governance' did not include 1st order, but was restricted to the lower orders. Especially since January 18th, 2010 the Thuban 1st order archetype has allowed the Logos to interact with the 'governors'.

This is what is experienced on this forum and many parallel agendas manifesting in all dimensions and densities due to the dispensation from the highest order from the 'Word of God'.

The Dragon nature of this Logos then will indeed 'govern' the entire universe on all levels.

Q: In the greater context of a galactic-cellular civilisation? Again, according to who? Can you state who supports YOUR idea of this greater context of a galactic-cellular civilisation and is there any way for you to elaborate on this? Who else supports this view? From where did this particular greater context of a galactic-cellular civilisation arrive from?

AA: The Logos of Creation is the Power and authority behind the Council of Thuban.

Q: Sure, but what's the need for you to hybridize us further? Why, in plain text do you want to do this? What do you gain from this?

AA: This I have explained in paragraphs above - the defusing and empowerment of the chromosomes in molecular biochemistry in the physical expression of precursor metaphysical programs.

Q: We as hybrids are only beneficial to our so called 'wanna be' care takers. For thousands of years we have been suppressed, not allowed to grow the way we should. Allow us to show our true selves and we will be the care takers of the universe, just as we are intended to be.

AA: Has it really come to this? You, like many, are an emotional human who is prone to judgements and preemptions, without exercising your faculties of reason and rationality.

Q: Does the Thuban Council think that the human emotion is something that needs to be altered with in the hybridization process? How will it be altered? Will the human emotions be strengthened or weakened in the hybrids? Or altered in any other way?

AA: This is a good question. The Human Emotionality in a very deep sense defines the Regality of the human master template - it is precious to ALL cosmic sentiences.

The 'problem' with human emotion is, that it is not coupled to a rational selfconsistent and logical human mindedness. The human mind is undergoing 'Armageddon=Dragon Made' on the mental planes of definition. The danger, as perceived by MENTALLY more advanced ET civilisations is, that the kindergarten human mentality will ABUSE and MISUSE its EMOTIONAL POWER SOURCE to cause physical damage to itself and the global environments.

My avatar says: THINK BEFORE YOU FLAME! Perhaps you should consider the wisdom of my avatar.

Q: I wasn't aware of flaming anyone. Are you on fire?

AA: I speak of the spiritual fire dear Sollve.

Q: It has shown from time to time that our hearts can't be enslaved. Is the only step left for the fallen angels to enslave us and make us do their will, to actually take away our uniqueness in some kind of hybridization program?

AA: What do you know of fallen angels; do you understand that YOU are a fallen angel?

Q: Please elaborate on this! What is your definition of a Fallen Angel? Please also elaborate on the fact that I AM a fallen angel.

AA: Post #1351 describes this in great detail.

Q: Do you mean that I should just accept to be altered with by anyone wanting to do so? It's one thing to observe and use what you see and learn to make yourself better. It's a whole different thing to change and devour in the same process. I don't see why the first one needs to be followed by the second. Please elaborate on how you justify that behavior.

AA: This is but your human mentality Sollve. You have three consciousness levels: waking(~86%); sub(~14%) and super(~0.3%).

Many misunderstandings and interpretations and mental conclusions you draw in waking consciousness are retranslated in the subconscious and again in the superconsciousness.

With the 'you already know', I mean your own unique and individuate Christ-Consciousness/Higher Self coupling of the innermost selfawareness. However this part is overwhelmed by your human mindedness of the waking consciousness and is then interfered with by the astrality of your subconscious.

Mental balance is not easy to maintain in a climate of extreme polarisation of consciousness carriers and the human mindedness blocks and destabilizes the attempt of the superconscious to express itself. There are some participators here who consistently display such mental balance and it are these who are the true harmonizers who have accessed their Christ-Self-Consciousness.

AA: You are helping the cosmic evolution in great honour and sincerity Sollve; one day you shall understand and socialise with Dragons in some Bar upon Thuban.

Q: I believe I understand dragons as of this NOW and I'm looking forward to share a drink on a bar in Thuban with you or any of your beloveds. I'm just hoping I'm observant enough to not be lured into any kind of hybridization process because I want to be me in that bar. For all I know what you label as 'StarHuman' might just be another name for 'StarDust'. Or is it perhaps the 'OldHuman' who falls into that category?

AA: Without your hybridisation you will either not see and encounter any dragons or you will be rather afraid of them Sollve.

Q: Before you point your finger at ME about using WE. WE are ALL who resonate with ME.

A: ME=WE also on Thuban - after our master templar Emmanuel Melchisedec E.M.=WE.

Q: Sorry, I don't know him...

AA: I know, heshe resides in your heart as the Cosmic Logos though, knocking from the inside and the outside on the doors of your human mindedness.

AA: I shall end this final transmission from Thuban in stating to you all that all of the data posted on this forum is derived from the Thuban archives.
The Thuban archives were of course allowed to manifest relative to your perceptions of being sent 'from outer space'.

Whilst the Thuban Database was accepted and tolerated here on the Mount of Olives of Avalon; the Round of the Thuban DragonKnights could be chosen by default from all participators.

This is because after rejection and closure of this transmission by your collectiveness and the Poll of the Avalonian Groupmind; you effectively ejected your own Birthright to become Thuban DragonKnights from within your own 3Dness.

The ET collective around your planet has watched this final test of humanity with great interest and the ET invasion you are envisaging will be the Thuban Dragonfleet.

This Thuban Starfleet is comprised of 200 Million ETs from all races and as defined in your archetypes and 3rd and 4th order translations and superpositional creations.

Those 200 Million ETs cannot make contact with the human planet; because the Dragonfleet has no commanders. (hive mind???)

As the Dragon archetype is the oldest of all archetypes in the definition of the Word of God or the Serpent-Logos of our master templar; the PHYSICAL FORM of our master templar defines this oldest of oldest archetype.

The Dragonstarships so require dragonised humans as mirrors for our master templar.

So this is why it became necessary to infiltrate a particular spacetime construct upon planet earth to fulfil the prophesied 2nd Coming of Jesus of Nazareth upon the Mount of Olives.

The Mount of Olives so became a 1st order archetype of the program to become implemented in the holographic protoverse akin a computer.

The Mount of Olives links to the encodings in Zechariah.4 and Revelation.11 in the WITNESS of the Olive Trees, whom I represent in agency of the Zebedee Brothers chosen by Jesus of the Naasseeenes, (Brotherhood of the Serpent given in the symbology of the Uraeus and Anubis and in the AlphaOmega).

Avalon was chosen for its diversity and mixture of skeptical rationalists, firm believers in this and that, meditation- and ascension exponents of the nirvana and the inner balancings supposedly resulting in transcension, historians, scientific spiritualists and individuals considering themselves as 'already unified' in 'love and light'.

What Avalon united was a general openmindedness and tolerance for opinions, all converging in its 'love and light' modus operandi.

The overpowering unifier however was your COMMON SEARCH FOR FREEDOM for your self-expression and the sanctity of your individualities as cocreators with prime creator.

So the only way for prime creator to choose his pioneering cocreators for the new Dispensation of the Reconfigured archetypical universe structure was to crystallize his graduates by his WITNESS, namely me as Abraxasinas and Associates.

As your 'free will' however cannot ever be violated, except by your own choices; no ET contact (beyond the interference patterns of your own multidimensionality in your minds memplexed by Thuban archetypes -basically astral projections of your inner sub- and superconscious selves) can be made in this universe until a particular number of Thuban Starfleet Masters have been chosen from your ranks.

This will become the Council of Thuban, pioneered by the 12 Dragonknights all of whom were chosen in this test of the humanity to manifest the New Planet Earth.

low, yes, there will be an invasion; but the ETs will be YOURSELVES invading yourselves; once the programmed timeline has been completed to process the general 'Endtimes' which have become manifest in your physical reality, precisely 40 days of wilderness and Noahic Rains from the predestined starting date of January 18th, 2010 in the 'Day of the Lord' February 26/27th, 2010 and as providenced by order of the Creator, the ABBA and Father of Jesus of Nazareth and as the 'Little Serpent' or Luck Dragon of the Neverending Story himself.

Then the 12 of you, who were chosen will double in the 24 Elders of Thuban in the Heness blending with their shadow selfhood of the Sheness.

This is what Dragonization means; the doubling of yourselves in Lightbodies of the 5th spacetime dimensionality; requiring the ability to process BOTH intuitive and intellectual-rational data streams in a self-harmonization.

Of course 12 HeShe and 12 SheHe Dragonian Starship Commanders are insufficient to encompass the surface area of the earth and there will so be 200 Million Old Humans, who will have access to become Dragonized StarHumans following the Impregnation and Birth of the New Starhumanity and as messaged on the Thuban thread.

So until those two nexus dates of April 1st, 2012 and December 21st, 2012 are attained the opportunity prevails for more and more old humans to become starhumans.

Each and every aspirant is required to 'eat a dragon' and so to align his or her entire cosmic identification and akashic history with the ET agendas.

So all aspirants must find their dragons within themselves and then 'slay and eat' their dragon of the false images in their own individuated and intimate eucharist of attaining the Christ-Serpent-Consciousness within themselves.

This will become harder to do following the impregnation date April 1st, 2012 as the 1981st anniversary of our master templars' lightbody transfiguration or resurrection.

Partaking of your Dragon-Supper as your own choice to become Reborn as a Christed Dragon will so become your own 'Last Supper' of the Old to 'die' and to become a Phoenix of the New.

Your rebirth as Eagles of the Resurrection will then allow dragonisation in coupling your previous Devil-Images to one of the images of the 200 million ETs who are at this time constructing the materialisation of your future starships in one-to-one couplings to your merkabahs of your inherited birthright of the Cosmic Vitruviusness.

This ends the data stream from the Council of Thuban, because it became evicted from your 3D-presence of the WITHIN to the WITHOUT of its 12D-presence.

As the 12D is the Outside of Bigmo's Balloon, I shall no longer be able to transmit the Thuban data stream due to the closure of the wormhole and as stated in my last message on the Thuban thread.

This wormhole is now sealed in the 'Day of the Lord' and reopening the Thuban thread is of no consequence.

As long as the Record of the Dragons remains on this forum; there will be a subdued presence of the Cosmic Witness with you as an Invisible Mirror allowing any and all of you and NonAvalonians to access the previously released data stream.

Should the Thuban thread be deleted and the data become inaccessible, then the archetype of the Mount of Olives being Avalon will become transferred to some other location of the Gaian realm.

I bid you farewell and look forwards to meeting you in person, either as one of the 12 or as one of the 24 or as one of the 144,000 or as one of the 200 Million.

When we meet in such a manner, then I shall be your Santa Claus=Satan Clause with a bag full of Christmas Presents of your merkabahs materialised into the spaceships now being prepared for the graduates by the ETs of all 'quasi-humanoid' races defined throughout the protoverse.

Finally, and as yet another test, I am well aware as to reception of this final message. Can this be true; is this delusional logic; is this madness or is this the Fulfilment of all Prophecy.

The choice will be yours to decide!

The Love of the Creator Dragon is with you always and the Serpent-Logos always remains within your LoveHearts as your Superconsciousness (standard 0.3% of the total).

Anyone accessing this final transmission will be challenged; but do you think it is fair to hand out starships just to anyone?

Reality discernment is the prime requirement for a Starship commander (and I mean captain, like driving a car and not some Lordship devilish deception), because of your merkabah control.

Every 5-dimensional StarHuman becomes coupled to the Starship through and by hisher merkabah resonances and Control over thought patterns becomes necessity to manouver the starship.

I love you all and thank you all for having participated in this Final Test of the Humanity.

Beneficers and Detractors alike; all of you have agreed to partake in this 'experiment' and to play your roles to bring about the intense polarisation required for some of you to EMERGE as the chosen 'first crop' in the harvest of the Dragonseed.

You all are Dragons, but having forgotten your inheritances; you have allowed your mirroring environments to project your inner powers onto the outside devilish imaginations.

Those, your own distorted and obscured images of your Higher Selves have become your Evil ETs and devouring Dragons of mythology.

Then your own Higher Selves became memeplexed in astral physicality, which interacted with your elected representatives and monarchs and leaders of divers kinds.

The interaction of the astral memeplex with the mentality of your physicalisation of the Brotherhood of the Serpent in your Illuminati, Luminari and such 3rd order labelings then allowed partial materialisation of the astral energy of the 4th hyperspace dimension in a plasmic densification.

In simplicity you became induced by your own fears of discovering your true origins as the Original Dragon master template to project the Inner Thuban Council of your Elderness onto your external environments.

I came to 'bring about' a reharmonization and a remembrance about your origins.

Some of you have shown magnificence in awakening.

Some of you have exhibited magnificence in opposing this awakening.

These two groups have in a sense graduated into Dragonhood, with the second opposition group now being required to become 'REAL WARRIORS OF LIGHT AND LOVE' in conquering and slaying not your inner inherited dragonhood as the Royal Template of Creation; but the Devils of your own outwardly rejected selfhood of BEING this Cosmic Royalty.

Of course, some will now discern that this has been the collective masterplan all along.

The ascension of Gaia as an old archetype reflecting as a Devil-Woman or Whore of Babylon in the 'Face of the Devil' on the inside of Bigmo's Balloon and as the Backside of the Real Satan on the outside of that Balloon; so is mirrored in the descension of the Serpentina archetype reconfiguring and RECREATING the entire Cosmos.

To evolve both physically and mentally into the role of Dragon Lovers and Dragon Slayers opposing each other in and as the playground for the archetypes was the agreed to plan by all of you in the preincarnational selfstate to engage in.

Subsequently all of you are the heroes of creation, as only a destiny planet could harbour the manifestation for this maximum polarisation.

So it was you who decided on the gameplan.

How far could we push ourselves in the forgetfulness?

And who would become the pioneers and 'first crop' in a level playing field?

Who would find themselves ayt Avalon as the Mount of Olives?

Well all of you here can now begin to REMERMBER your own scripts.

Once a vast majority have done so, then Avalon will become selfempowered to manifest the Unity of Truth and Purpose, stated to be the guiding agenda here.

But it will be up to you as individuals and as groups to TRY to render Avalon-Camelot the Unifying Force you thought it could become and be.

You are required now to choose your path without the Council of Thuban's influence over your decision making.

The Dragons will end to SEDUCE YOUR MINDS from this time onwards.

The third group are the ones who are the fence sitters and the armchair critics and here are also two groups of potential graduates.

There are the lurkers, who accessed the Thuban information, but not participated in the sessions and there are the ones who were not interested at all due to their internal programming.

The lurkers then accessed the Thuban data stream and relative to their mental and critical engagement with the data; they will become enabled to raise their 0.3% standard level of accessing their superconsciousness.

So are the noninterested, but they will have more 'learning to do', due to their obfuscations of the Dragonhood memories of their akashic pasts.

Of course EVERYONE on AVALON should graduate as witnesses to the Mount Olive archetype functioning as the wormhole and stargate for the Thuban information.

There is time to achieve the necessary mental transformation of the ancient archetypes in the aspirants and of course should any such aspirant decide that this dispensation is a MORE LIKELY outcome for being REAL, then say some alternative outcome of the Armageddon-2012 archetype; then such aspirant can raise his or her superconsciousness percentage even higher in becoming a Secret Agent for the Thuban Council, such as I have been in my function of 'The Bard'.

The requirement for this is simply to accept this dragonhood and to JUST BE a MIRROR for this Inner Knowing - reflecting this Knowing into the encountered and experienced environments.

Your Remembrance has begun and the Logos has activated in all who read this final message from Thuban.

The Dragon Peace of Thuban shall reign on Serpentina!

So Be It!

FUTURE SHADOWS OF THE PAST

"A most wondrous thing the Shadow is, a redeemer in all to succour;
it can go where the light cannot abide, seemingly banished, it is not.
For where the light is, the darkness flees, no longer present to endure;
so to become illuminated is its destined journey and its troubled lot.

But without the light, no Shadow can be cast, its such a splendid key;
the dimensions reduce in space from three to two and all in just the one.
Betwixt the light and the darkness it is and part of both for all to see;
the Shadow of the body, does it not merge all in its rule under the sun?

Whatsoever can cast a Shadow, must be a most wondrous thing to relay;
as nature's very own offspring, the young ones grow towards their final goal.
Enabled to bring peace to so many things appearing apart and so far away;
the reconciliation for the suffering body with its spirit and its scattered soul."

Lionhawk wrote:

Greetings Abrax,

An impressive thread you got going on here. What I like about it, is that it isn't strictly a work of a lazy mind with the copy and paste method. You also seem overly accommodating. Not saying that is bad. But to say it mildly I am slightly confused here as to why at this date and time, the council you are affiliated with has decided to put this information out there.

Since I am now in the den of a Dragon, with a Dragon with what seems to be of a great heart, I would also like to ask why this is such a familiar place to me? It would seem like I have been in several of these dens and although my memory goes way back, it would also seem this is like business as usual.

If I know anything about Dragons, it is the swapping of the stories that rarely occur between a Dragon and a human. And yet here you are swapping many stories to many a human.

Mind you, I haven't come here to disrupt or interrupt your thread here with any malice intent. But forgive my curiosity. In all of my memories, there are many that include Dragons, since the time of Antiquity. Most of those memories are horrific ones. Why the Creator allowed his creations to devour another creation has never been really answered for me since those times.

I watched humans get sliced and diced by the very claws of your kind. When I say your kind, I mean your kind as in your soul family in Creation. The very family that exists among us today.

But if I do anything today, in this post, is set something straight that really hasn't been discussed. Not many are even aware of the ramifications of this in this painting, as they may have only read about it, possibly. They have no experience to go by as a reference to even understand such knowledge unless it is conveyed to them as dark or light.

A Dragon is a Dragon. A Human is a Human. The soul fragments of each have a different matrix. Both are the Creator's creations. Both have had the same kind of road less travel as they both have also degenerated through the ages. There is a time where these two had to be completely separated from each other in the Universe. To the extreme that one was placed in this Universal polarity and the other was placed in it's Universal opposite polarity. For that matter, I don't think this has been written anywhere here on the Planet as it is not privy information. The reason why this was decided was to actually ensure the prospect of soul growth in some sort of progression. The Dragons were on the other side of this Galaxy in the other polarity. A great King was appointed and is still ruling today. Well, since the Dragons were separated from man, they had no one else to slice and dice, so they started slicing and dicing themselves. Factions broke off from the Kingdom and wanted their own Kingdom as it is the quest for power that will drive a Dragon mad. Kind of like giving booze to a Native American. The great King Dragon tried for eons to turn this plight around. But these factions that joined together as one, refuted against the King. So, it was decided that something had to be done, as these Dragons thirst for power, was killing this great kingdom. They were an uncontrollable menace. So they were gathered up and exiled through the center of our galaxy through the Black hole. Some know the rest of the story. The Orion war and so forth to this day in the now.

I have a speculation. I speculate that this council of yours is seeking favor with the humans at this time because of what is about to happen. You guys have a problem. And right now you are desperate because you know that your end is near. You think your soul group here will be possibly saved if in thinking that you can convince someone to see that you are worthy of saving by now trying to embrace the human faction. Like you are now doing us all a great big favor.

Let me put this in Black and White instead of Light and Dark. The fact is that your faction of the Dragons were exiled or banished from where you came from. No matter how your council tires to disguise it. And since that time, some of you tried to go back but couldn't. In other words, you saw the light as to what your King was saying, but you already had chosen your fate. It is the original sin that the dark chose to refute the Creator's wishes for all of his creations. Except this time your council and brethren repeated the same mistake with your King. So, to now appear in this date and time as such glorious beings is not going to change the original sin that your kind has perpetrated. And since that time of banishment, look at the karma, your soul group as now compiled. Imagine a pile of dragon dung that can fill up several sectors in this Universe.

With all of your brilliance and accomplishments that only served to satisfy your thirst for power, you have created your own black hole and it has been fed by the very energy you have fed it. And despite all the crimes against every outpost you have conquered in the quest for that power, you have more or less put the noose around your own necks. Your council's decision to not fully take responsibility by placing another agenda at the foot of the human race, is like getting the switch man ready to pull the switch on your noose floor.

You seemed to be a young Dragon by Dragon standards and well schooled. It is a shame because some of you have seen the light, but so many of your brethren have not, and you have become well out numbered by your own kind because you chose to see the light as to where they still refuse it. You, yourself might find the Creators grace when all this is said and done. There is a chance for you to save your brethren and one chance only. That chance has to do with your true King. It will not be achieved by your council or any other faction that has separated itself from your soul group that is currently here. I also know your brethren have a watchful on what you are doing here. They have no use for us human folk. Theirs eyes only show contempt for us to the extreme. Like that final look before the kill.

To make matters worse, in a matter of speaking, if your council and brethren decide to finally negotiate for your soul family's survival, a human has been appointed to assist in that process. The reason for that was to really test your resolve as to your true intentions. There is no more room for the scheming. It is no longer about your entitlement attitude and power. It is about your soul survival, period.

So I leave with this with you in hopes that you all make sense of this and know that it isn't all as you have so far put it. You left out some crucial things or maybe your own council kept it from you.

Also if that wasn't enough information for you to be motivated in any direction you choose, I have two more things of intrigue that might get your attention. One, the technology you have been seeking that was once here, that your kind had control of, because you stole it in the first place, is no longer in your possession as you know. Also any persons that you are possibility trying to find that may lead you back to that technology are also not within your council's reach. So you are wasting your time. Tell that to your superiors.

So, I hope our encounter was an interesting one for you, my Dragon friend. Notice I didn't complicate it with all the dragon dribble. It's complicated enough. And sure you can have me checked out if you like. I would advise that anyway. Spirit Matthew told me that my name is how the Universe knows me. He is a wise soul.

Abraxas: Dear Lionhawk!

Some humans are getting ready to transform into Dragons; a very few are on the brink of doing so (1 in 50,000).

Most humans are not ready for Dragonhood; yet requiring evolvment and preparations.

According to your words of personal wisdom above, you are one of the latter humans - not yet ready for Dragonhood.

Should you search in your caves of your remembrances, then you might find some clues as to where the ancestors of the Dragons come from.

This should then allow you to revise the histories as you have learned them from second-hand sources.

Shalom!

So, what about the content of Lionhawk's post?

Abraxas: Dear Trancoso!

The PTB are RULED by the Dragon archetype.

The PTB are unable to access more than 95% of the Cosmic History.

As Collier says, the Paa Taal (or similar label) have been forgotten in the records as the ancestors of all.

Those ancestors are rather closely entwined with the concept of the starhumanity as the fourth 'brain halo' evolving from the Reptilian brainstem, the mammalian midbrain and the human cortex.

This agenda allows recircularisation of the linearity in the Orb of the Ouroborus (Milky Way Mazzaroth or Circle of the Zodiac).

The content of Lionhawk's reply contains no direct questions to be answered and was answered relative to the consciousness vibrations emitted through the wordings.

It is in my authority to discern written material within the context and under guidance of the Thuban master templar - the universal Logos.

In this capacity and authority I choose if and how to reply to unsubstantiated innuendo and preconceived ideas and bias with respect to the History of the Dragons and as found in the archives on Thuban.

As most can ascertain, I DO answer direct questions in all cases, except in oversight or when these questions are intended to cause strife and dissonance or are what is labelled as ad hominem.

What a powerfull concept this is!

May I assume that we're not only supposed to not only find the way back home to the creator, but more then this, that we're primarily supposed to 'learn' the creation itself while finding the way back???

If so...it really does matters to find out that 'going back home'...or the 'second comming'...must happen from inside-out and not visa versa!

AA; You are BOTH, shard of the creator and shard of the creation simultaneously malletzky.

And you seem to have understood one of the 'hidden data' (the 5% the PTB have not yet discerned relative to their data base) rather well.

The symbolism of the eucharist is THE MOST POTENT archetype for the human-starhuman transformation.

It's the real thing and is being 'synthesized' by the PTB in 'implants' and such things. It is inside-out and not outside-in.

The Cosmic Archetypology RULES the Cosmos.

The reconfiguration of Gaia so requires reconfiguration of the entire cosmic structure.

This has been the agenda of all, PTB and ETs all along.

Not many know the details, but many have hints and indicators as to what those details entail - especially the echeloners at the top of the PTB pyramid.

Well, well, my dear Dragon. Nice try. Brushing it off your back with a brush called arrogance. To be expected in the first round between us. For that matter I think you have one hell of a sense of humor and you might consider the comedy circuit, because when I read your response, you made me laugh and I can only hope that my laugh wasn't an annoying echo in your den.

Dragon-hood. Now that is by definition a confusing concept. A definition that could very well be projected by whatever gang is giving out such information related to their agenda. It even sounds like something a kin to a degree. PHD comes to mind as to your delivery. Also the agenda of transforming humans into Dragons surely tells me that you are desperate. I must inform you that I have to take away a point by your response and let you know the number stands at 96% instead of 95%. With 4 percentage points left.

For one thing, from everything in my experience is not as you have tried to paint it. I thought Dragons had courage. You must be a young Dragon and have not fully found that courage that should be beating in your Heart. No matter the dragon dribble that you have displayed in your response, I will allow you the grace for your immaturity.

The point of my addressing you is that you have lured many with your wisdom. Even I am impressed with your talents. But not enough to compromise what the Creator has already blessed me with as a human as in higher universal man. Why would I defile his intentions by allowing what he has already blessed me with as one of his creations into something he did not intend. And you are doing what? Uncreating one in 50,000 into something that has forgotten what it was blessed with in the first place? That is just one of the most perverted perversions of the Universe I have heard in a while. The premise of that is actually very twisted in design and just shows at what lengths your soul family has gone to exploit one of God's creations. But really, why would I be surprised at this twisted twist as I have seen with my own eyes what your soul family has done. If you are really paying attention here, I said that and from the first hand as to what I brought to the table.

There are several key components that your brethren and your council no longer have control of. One of which I didn't mention in the first round, are the keys to that gate that some of you tried with all of your might to go through but turned you into Dragon butter instead. Another thing that is not in your cave of awareness is who or what is keeping that gate shut. And not to upset you but I will tell you that it is from the true source that has made this contract to keep you all here, until you embrace what you have refuted.

I have no such agenda as in duping anyone as to what I have brought here today. If anything I have spent countless years in service, since the time of Antiquity and those caves as memories as you so poorly put that is all in one cave. One life stream. If everyone could remember in full, what they have experienced in their life streams, I fear there would be a massive war of retribution reborn in this Universe for all the pain and suffering your soul family has provided them. And through the years of torment and suffering I have endured, I have come far in the healing of the prejudice your soul family has graced me with. To the point where, I have come here in actual peace to try to negotiate a peace, spite your arrogance.

I didn't come here to complicate your day Abrax. I came here with a solution to all concerned. As usual, the display of your response is no longer a speculation, as your arrogance has surely showed part of your claws. You claim you have authority but that authority is mis directed as to what your agenda is all about is nothing but another form of possession. You and your council no longer have the authority as you have so claimed with your arrogance and entitlement attitudes over this Planet any longer. This Planet was never yours to begin with. It has all been a ruse perpetrated by your quest for domination.

In the name of the human race, your agenda will not succeed should you decide to implement the invasion that your council has been covertly stock piling here on Gaia. Your council doesn't tell you everything. You can keep us distracted with your wisdom, but if the question as to who knows anything that could possibly know of that, well let us see if you are truly full of wisdom or something else. Now that is what I call an innuendo.

And if I have to stand up and represent this Planet that your soul family has exploited, to claim the authority to denounce your council's agenda, then I do so now. I will not sit here and have any more of my soul family sacrificed to your dinner plates. Your brethren have used us from the very beginning and you are going to present your council in such a sweet light without first taking the responsibility to come here and set things right even though your guilt could fill a black hole. Your council does not or is not the true Royalty of the Dragons that I am friends with. So you have no real authority here in this Universe. You never had. You only have fooled the fools. Nothing more.

You see there are guardians appointed by the God of this Universe with the Creator's blessings. That only report to the one. No council rules or governs over them. So there is no infiltration. The only reason why your soul family has made it this far is because of the Creator's grace.

If I didn't know from experience these things, I would probably be subscribing to your second hand information. Your talent is blazing and I sincerely mean that. But for the sake of my fellow humans, I want them to know that their souls are being played for by an old agenda that is now passed it's time. And I don't want to see them sacrificed for nothing as that has always been the end result of that agenda I have spoken about. I don't want to see my soul family continue down this road called "Boring" because of the selfish issues that have consumed your family for eons. What you also don't get is that I also don't want to see your family end up as Dragon butter either as I also know the potential of your family as the Creator had intended is still available to you through his grace. We humans are not responsible for the karmic pile your brethren have created. So that is why it is time for you or one of your superiors to come clean and take responsibility and convince your brethren that the road you continue to travel on is a DEAD end. Was that an innuendo? Because if you do I will tell you this, is that your Brethren will find yourselves all alone and will do through the habit of your past, repeat it, but this time you will be slicing and dicing each other. The reason why you will be left alone is because of what is going to happen in the Universe. You simply won't be able to keep up in terms of frequency.

And to further add to your situation and what appears your lack of knowledge pertaining to it, is what you once had is now gone. The real ones. What you think you have is not what it appears to be. So without that, your fate is once again sealed.

Mind you, I am not here to judge you. You hold your own mirror. But everyone should have a clue as to what you have withheld from your audience. There is a code between Dragons and Humans, but it is not this code. This Thuban code is not the Royal one. So it has no real authority anywhere outside of your home planet.

I'll have to pass on your proposed course of Dragonhood. I don't have the stomach to digest a child served up on a plate.

If I can propose a question, I would like to ask when are you going to tell the real truth to your human audience? I am not saying that you have lied. But what I am talking about is what you haven't told them? This reminds me of the movie, "TO SERVE MAN."

Again Abrax, I came in peace and I am going to leave in one piece. Why? Because I can. I also bid you a good day my Dragon friend. Sincerely.

LionHawk wrote more:

Greetings.

When I first posted up on this thread, I had no idea that this thread had bothered many here. But apparently I wasn't the only one where those flags went up. Now I have stated that Abrax here as done an amazing and blazing amount of work that is way impressive. I'm not taking that away from him. I wish there were more people who would write their own original work with some substance than a lot of the dodo that get's copied and pasted up. I am more interested in experiences from those I know instead of someone I don't know. All I ask is that you do it with integrity. Otherwise, I can just turn on the TV and get some manurey type story, saving your time and mine.

You know.....you can't help but see some of the responses with your name on it. And for the sake of the Mods, and to be as respectful as I can be, what I will say is that some of those responses are only from lack of awareness and or experiences. If we all had the same experiences and the same awareness, there would be nothing to give us a separate character. What remains here is that I am who I am and you are who you are. Some of us have been warriors. Some have not. It all depends on what stations you chose for soul growth. You also can tell who is a warrior and who is not. I am not the only warrior here. Then again, I also know my way out of a barn. I could say that not only am I hacking at evil but I would rather not be hacking at the manure being pooped out by someone who had a hussy fit and left and only came back when I left. Now that I have returned, hacking at evil, as I was accused of, I find the same cow pooping again. Hilarious really. Also just a distraction from what is really going on here.

Now to walk in a Dragon's Den is a little different than a barn. At least in a barn you know that manure management is usually in the stalls. But in a Dragon's den your guess is as good as mine. And mind you Abrax that this analogy that came from someone's conscience and not mine.

Someone also tried the group lynch mob scenario technique as to imply we all felt the same way about this thread. I have only one question for that person. How many barbecues have you been too? I think everyone has their own feelings here. Everyone should be able to express what that is. You don't have to like it. But it should be respected as long as it is tactfully done. I say that because what I have seen demonstrated took courage to do and it was done straight up. Even if I don't agree with what was expressed or even if I do, is not the point here. Someone showed a lot of true grit and character by voicing what was bothering this person and this person was at least honest about that. I can work with that any day of the week as compared to others doing the back stabbing or pooping in your way. At least I know where I stand in either case. That showed heart to do that.

Now back to the issues at hand. I asked what needed to be asked. At least the question that no one else here did ask. They at least now know the chicken is out of the bag and someone did ask the question. The question that they never did want you to ask. Think on that.

Here's another deal for you. You know why some or a lot of this doesn't make sense for you? Because it is from their paradigm and not yours. It's almost like going to China and not knowing the language, the customs and traditions, and here you are trying to bridge all that with some Chinese person who doesn't speak good English. Same analogy but the same kind of results. All these different Arch types are also vying for position in the now. What I now have determine is that one shoe doesn't fit all. And most of them are trying to define you in their shoe box. When you are not in their shoe box to begin with. That is also why my valid questions that I posed were not answered. Also as to why the question of AKA was so far off the mark with the answer that was presented. Why, because he doesn't know who I am and doesn't have access to that by using the channels that are available to him. There must be a reason.

So what is it going to be? Ascension or Dragonhood? And why would anyone in their right mind choose to go from an Oxygen based life form to a Hydrogen based life form? Why move into a lower density element? Why deny yourself the process of creation that the Creator had already intended for you in the first place? To compromise that process by being exposed to a belief system that will not be sustainable within the future of this Universe? You think the grass is greener over there? These same beings who were banished here and you are going to go kiss their butts after all they have done to our human soul family. And the innuendo that I am coming from a hateful mind. What? I got to say that again. What? Excuse me! I came here to this thread to establish a truce and an answer to all parties involved. I didn't come here to start a war. I am trying to avoid one. While Abrax is here dazzling you with his brilliance, maneuvers are taking place right now, right under your noses, and someone wants to make stupid comments about how disturb he is by me showing back up. What? That doesn't even compare to what is being played behind the scenes and if you think researching it on line, makes you a complete researcher, we are all going to be doomed with that kind of mind set. I also don't care what anyone thinks of me. I didn't come here to be popular. I'm not running for office. I don't take my orders from anyone on this Planet. I am here as many of you are to assist in the ascension of Gaia. That is my agenda.

I am also sorry that the many who are trying to learn think everybody is doing the same thing they are doing. You always learn but some of us have graduated and that is hard for most to understand or even accept. They think we should be like them staying in school. For some of us school is like over with and you have to go finally walk the walk instead of talking the talk. Experience is getting out of that chair and putting what you know in some form of action. If you stay in the chair to long, you will be conditioned to just reacting. Kind of like sitting in front of a theater screen watching a movie.

Another thing I want to point out is that it would seem we are the prize. All the agendas I have seen point to that. So it is my position at this time to see where this Dragon goes as if you know the basics, an agenda is at work here. By what numbers I have seen, he has a tough job ahead as far as the recruitment process. The number ratios indicate that. And I am a supporter of free speech and no rules as none are needed when things are approached with honor and respect for others.

Alex Collier mentions a new place of knowing. Establish one. You want to do it in this thread, then you might want to ask for the credentials first. Which was skipped in my mind. So don't go blaming other people for your feelings when you didn't take any responsibility to ask those basic questions in the first place. If you can't get verification from this council and at least have an introductory meeting to establish your Dragonhood club, then consider what you haven't been considering.

My apologies Dragon. You left me not much of a choice here, but I understand why. I bid you another great day and I hope there are no feathers in your chicken dinner. (Innuendo) that was the name of the chicken. And I guess all of my questions have been answered by not what was answered.

Lionhawk leaves the den.

AA: The Thuban Council does not set any stage for anyone. The Thuban Council is exactly what it claims to be - the emissary or messenger from the Logos, the Universal Logos of the Christian scriptures.

The Thuban Council functions under the auspices of the 24 Elders, archetyped in the Book of Revelation.

Noone is required to accept or believe this in any form or manner.

The 24 Elders are the Thuban Dragons, who receive their authority from the 4 Beasts and through them from Prime Source or God.

Abraaxas: Ok; I'll decide.

Thuban is a pretend smokescreen of pretend information, which is just a plagiarism of well credentialled academic sources masquerading as 'real science' of a new world.

The Thubanese are old Draconians who like to eat people for breakfast and to gather food resources; the Thubanese have decided to infiltrate the world's most important discussion forum: Project Avalon.

Here then the agenda is to brainwash the forum contributors with scientific sounding but really worthless information and for the purpose to gain as many followers of the Thubanese philosophy as possible.

Then when the critical mass of cult followers has been reached, the true Draconian Reptoids will appear and harvest their brainwashed followers.

This will be accomplished in invading the old earth shortly after December 21st, 2012 through a Black Hole-White Hole monadic dyad opening up halfway between Sirius and Gaia and wormhole connected to the Orion starsystem.

The Powers-That-Be of the old earth will be powerless to stop US; because they had thought that WE would allow them to be our ambassadors of the new earth and in thinking of themselves as the elite.

WE shall eat them for lunch; but they dont know that yet; although some of them suspect that WE are deceiving them.

And so WE shall rule the New Earth and in a few years, say 2015, WE shall reengineer the deteriorated wormhole channels to allow our Draconian brothers and sisters to join US on OUR new homeplanet SERPENTINA.

From then on, SERPENTINA will be a BLACK DRAGONSTAR.

All of the old humanity will have been consumed by US and WE shall DRAGONSEED a HybridRace between OURSELVES and OUR Ancestral Lineages.

But first of all, WE have to create the Thuban Dragon Cult and this and only this is the purpose of Abraxas.

So Be It!

THEY SEE THEMSELVES AS MASTER TEMPLATE FOR BEINGS OF THIS UNIVERSE:

Would you undergo genetic hybridization if someone told you to do so? Have you considered the possibility that it might be harmonizing to the universe if dragons were hybridized? Say all dragons humanized into 'StarHumans' with us as caretakers?

This is what is occurring on all levels in the holographic universe - cosmic hybridization of ALL entities.

Do you think Dragons are genetically more perfect / fulfilled than humans? If so, why are there anything else but dragons out there? Wouldn't every single being not already a dragon ask to become one by own free will if this was the case?

Yes indeed, the Dragon genotype is the mastertemplate for the universe as a Mirror of Mirrors. This Dragon template is also called the human mastertemplate of Cosmic Man.

AA:

As said without the DNA/RNA restrictions of the fuselage of the 23rd chromosome pairing, your humanness could not have evolved in physicality to differentiate you from the nonhuman terrestrial lifeforms.

You would simply have become a speciated planet of the apes.

The ET interference so was done by astral 4D sentiences to ensure that at a future evolutionary junction point; your 'fused' chromosomes could become defused again to protect your then hominid (homo sapiens sapiens) morphogenetic bodyform, but to in a manner retrace your evolutionary histories back to the Reptilian Brainstem.

The Dragon is the Crown of the tree and the Reptile is the Root of this same tree in metaphor.

Q: Why won't you let us evolve without interference. I'm sure the eventual faults and errors in our genome will fix themselves in time. I don't want your help because I believe I can heal myself. Will you allow me to be ME as in I AM of NOW?

AA: To let you do that would negate the masterplan of the Prime Creator and this is impossible by definition of his omniness.

III. The Vortex Between the Universe and the VOID Closes and Abraxas Trapped in the 4% Universe

Hi All!

This thread about the energy transmissions from Thuban in the 12D-omnispaces, have, as most of you have you have witnessed, added and triggered a significant amount of tension and polarisation into this forum.

The energy transmissions from Thuban as to the last post to Spregovori cannot be reestablished, due to the closure of the wormhole 3.5 days ago on earthquake day, February 26th, 2010.

What has occurred is, that the closing of the wormhole connecting the inside of Bigmo's Balloon to its outside as a temporarily onesided Moebian manifold in warping the 11D of omnispaces through the 8D and 5D mirrors onto the 2D-mirror of the 3D Linespace; has plugged this temporary onesidedness to become a twosided manifold again.

This has effectively resulted in me becoming exiled and isolated from my Thuban home in omnispaces.

So the Thuban Council can only be accessed from now on as a 2-dimensional cross section of your own individualised merkabahs.

All of you right now harbour the Council of Thuban within yourselves as a 2D-Mirror of the Mathimatia=IamThatAmI.

The upheavals of the last few days so manifested the so called 'Day of the Lord' from scripture. I myself did not know this day until it occurred as the earthquake day of Matthew.24 (refer to a recent post on this thread).

So from henceforth I, Abraxasinas can no longer claim to share with you direct data from omnispacetime. I have become trapped in the rootreduced 4-dimensional Minkowski spacetime metric as all and sundry of you.

I so share your expectations and intuitions as to how the next few years shall unfold.

Any questions asked so will be directed to the Thuban Council, which becomes a direct reflection of what is inside of you.

In other words, any question you can ask me Abraxasinas, you will actually asking yourselves inside-out.

So any form of skepticism and ridicule or innuendo questions will become reflected to yourselves as yourselves, as will your indications to process and assimilate my prospective answers to your questions.

low, it will become a 'ordinary' discourse of Q&A without any exterior superpositioning of your inner archetypes.

Like in the marvellous chatroom of Gaia Love and Celine, in which I had a bit of fun in as Anubis; any questions you might pose will be like in the chatroom; colloquial and without the images of devouring dragons or similar.

Consider the photograph of TonyB. on my Profile to be the One you are addressing any questions to. I have however 'eaten' my dragon and with help from Richard and Celine the false Devil-Images have become trapped within themselves.

So my Dragonhood has become internalised and I am fully conscious of this omni-scientific factuality.

I do not know, how long the Thuban material will be allowed on Avalon and relocation is certainly possible, but not certain.

This reflects the probability space of the Gaian cosmos as a microcosm of the holographic universe; just as Avalon 'played' the microquantization for the Gaian hologram between January 18th, 2010 to February 26th, 2010.

So all of you here at Avalon, detractors and beneficers and supporters alike, have become cosmic heroes for the grand metamorphosis of spacetime itself.

All of you, in your emotional, mental and physical battles within and without yourselves have formed a group reflecting all humans and all ETs anywhere and anyplace in the universe.

You all have attained inscriptions in the archives of Thuban, chiselled into the golden plaques of the cosmic remembrance of the cosmogenesis and the origins of all that is.

This Hall of the Remembrance is within yourselves and all and sundry each one of you has graduated to access your superconscious self, also known as your higher self, overself or Christ-Logos-Serpent-Consciousness.

The standard distribution for the three consciousness levels is 0.3% for the superconscious; 14.3% for the subconscious and 85.4% for the waking consciousness.

The Avalonian dispensation from Thuban before the 'test' or 'experiment' was determined to allow a statistical (Gaussian) distribution for this unity integral to become distributed over all participators of Avalon.

This includes everyone who was subscribed to Avalon in any manner and also includes outside observers, which became exposed to the Thuban data stream.

The ones amongst you who harmonized or disharmonized with the Thuban material so of course will find themselves in a higher percentile of this distribution, than a onetime lurker.

The harmonizers are simply the positive branch of the frequency distribution, whilst the disharmonizers depict the negative branch.

As the interest in the Thuban data subsides, so do the percentiles.

Again, I am compelled to direct you to Myplanet2 of Avalon; as he of all present here has almost fully discerned the experiment and the test before it completed in the rational-intellectual sense. A few others also began to see through the illusions of their own minds in such manner of discernment.

Many of the supporters of Thuban resonated emotionally and intuitively, as did of course the detractors.

I am sure, that Myplanet2 will verify my statements here, relative to his own understandings. He has already done so on some subthread discussions.

So to all Avalonians. The experiment has ended in the manifesto of the statistical distribution of each individual's superconsciousness.

Here, I have become invited to form a 'Social Group' to discuss the more esoteric and metaphysical aspects of the Thuban archetypes.

Of course the supporters of the Thuban data are much more likely to participate in such a subforum, whilst the detractors are much less likely to show any interest.

This is as it should be for the completion of the timelines.

However I do extend invitation to all Avalonians to join this subforum.

As said the Thuban data transmission in this subforum will necessarily be rather esoteric in describing the archetypes of creation, often linked to a form of omni-science only applicable in a spacetime continuum exceeding the basic 4 Riemann-Minkowski dimensions.

Additionally, these archetypes and symbols will also refer to extensive and thorough examination of scriptural archetypes with a basis found in some gnostic texts and the King James Version of the bible.

So anyone not affine with such labelings is asked not to join this subgroup, or if doing so leave the group, instead of causing disharmony amongst the subgroup members. Any challenges as to scriptural or/and scientific interpretations are welcomed here on the open forum however; depending naturally on the feasibility to ask questions provided this thread and the survival of the thread and forum.

The subgroup will engage TruthWillSetYouFree as a female mirror to me Abraxasinas in a shared responsibility to crystallize the necessary knowledge and understanding for the great metamorphosis of the old humanity as an environmentally voracious Carterpillar into an environmentally pollinating New Starhuman Butterfly.

I do thank you all for having participated in this test and experiment under the auspices of our cosmogenetic children in the ETs of divers races.

Thank you for your considerations.

WE love you all and a grand destiny awaits after the collective starhumanity has been born.

The New World requires for certain circles to become manifested in a concentricity of waveforms.

Once the circle of the zodiac is completed in say tiers of 12 individuals in starsign or month or Israelitic tribal association; then these 12 individuals will converge as the center of the One.

Then the 'curse' of the mazzaroth shall be lifted and the One in Twelve will become the Twelve in One and the Many in One will become the One in the Many.

This then defines the circle as unity and no individual leaders will be required to make decisions for the individual.

Then an anarchy of Love shall foster the creative genius within all shards of Love; yet allow this Individuality of Creative Selfexpression to function under a common philosophy of knowledge and remembrance about what WE are, where WE came from and wherto WE are going.

Love has spoken as the Will of God!

In Love for the All and from the All

Give me a break and lets have some fun. I'm not commander Swanny you know.

I'll get technical when required, but most of this here is to interact and answer Q when they come up.

No more tension relax dear friend.

You have attained a very high percentile in the 'test' on the minus side. So should the Thuban material pan out , well you know.

Q: Yes Abrax!, have some fun. I think i missed the whole thing about Bigmo's ballon I shall go back study the old Q & A thread, unless you help me alil bit

A: Your inside Bigmo's Ballon like an ant say, Nebula9 and so you can crawl about on the inner surface.

Should there be a hole in the balloon through which you can squeeze through, then you could crawl about the outside surface too and so DOUBLING your world of interaction space.

The inner balloon becomes the universe with say smaller balloons within in galaxies, nebulae (lol), starsystems, planets, continents,...,you.

But you cant get out to the 'spiritual' universe outside.

The thickness (there is none mathematically) or the skin of the balloon is Bigmo's Mirror which has two sides outside and inside.

From here you get archetypes called 'God' outside looking in the outside mirror and sees himself as 'Antigod' or 'Satan'. So God=Satan, but one real relative to the outside as object (God) and the unreal image of that as 'Satan'.

Now after some ado, there is Adam and Eve (you) inside the universe doing the same thing the other way round.

But relative to Adam and Eve (who also mirror each other) the back of the head of Satan becomes the unreal image and this is the archetype of the 'Devil'.

The so called Devil is the Backside of Satan, both images for the real thing, God outside and Adam and Eve inside.

The Devil looks at Adam and Eve and they think that its real - it's a phantom, because only the backside of Satan is become real, if somehow the satanic image of the outside, as the Face of God in the Bigmo mirror can become real.

This is the case if before Adam and Eve went into the Balloon from the 'Unreal Heaven', they both also were a miniature version of the Bigmo Mirror or the balloon as a rubberskin say.

So ADAMEVE is an unreal doublesided mirror between God and Satan.

Then God images in the unreal Adam and Satan images in the unreal Eve, so giving Satan objectivity or realness.

So technically the Universe becomes a Real Surface-Universe (termed a 4D-Riemann hypersphere defined as the boundary of a 5-dimensional spacetime universe - its a torus volume behaving like an area).

Don't worry about that. You can get it without the maths.

But this is the physics trick. Because the boundary is a surface encompassing a volume, the outside-inside (topology) thing of Bigmo's Balloon can in fact become rigorously modelled to be 'continuous'. Again I am saying this to indicate how one proves this, but this is not required to understand the archetype.

This Thuban material is all about how to simplify the complicated science jargon into archetypes, everyone can understand after thinking a little bit about them.

Ok then. You got a real God and a real image of God as the Real physical universe, with Satans face as God's face painted on the OUTSIDE of the Balloon.

Outside the Universe is Satan--EveAdam--God as 1st creation in Genesis by God in Heaven or the Garden of Eden; with Satan getting real using unreal Eve and God getting real using unreal Adam as his mirror.

The whole thing is funny really.

Now God goes on holiday in the sabbatical and changes into Lord God and splits ADAMEVE into ADAM+EVE. Back to Back they still qualify as the One Mirror so as the unsexy 96 say.

Inside the split becomes a sexy 69 in face to face so taking away the innocence in a physical way and now as Eve with her back to the Devil on the Wall faces Adam, who looks at Eve.

Because Adam and Eve are two real beings within a real physical universe; this fake Devil face inverted can be gotten rid off.

Adam and Eve have to become unsexy again to do this. Therefore the many sexist archetypes, the monks and nuns and celibacy and the virgins, leading the the abuse scenarios.

Back to back as the 96=A MATHIMATIA=A I AM THAT I AM, this can be done, because then Adam and Eve (meaning ANY Man and Woman) both can MIRROR their images INSTEAD of each other face-to-face. This is how simple the ultimate archetypology of 1st order is. Primary school stuff. Draw pictures and you understand the creation.

So Adam looks at the face of the Devil back to back with Eve, who looks at God as the image of the Real God should Satan outside 'get out of the way' so God could look into the Universe.

God looking then directly sees Adam's Face and Eve will look directly into the face of the Goddess, namely the sexchanged Satan into SATANINA=IN A SATAN with Satan=55=Heaven in a alphanumeracy. As soon as Adsam can get rid of the fake Devil face, just by confronting IT as his own false image; as soon the real Satan is redeemed from Bigmo's Balloon and runs around the balloon to the exact other pole in a poleshift to become the Goddess of All looking directly at Eve.

This is the redemption of God and his brother image Satan to become God and Goddess AS ARCHETYPES of the primordial 1st order.

No ETs and Dragons and Dragon Slayers and whatever required.

So the manifesto for this is required before the universe itself and any subsystems, like the planet earth can change, say in Gaia's ascension.

The recent Thuban story then assigned Celine the 'job' to refuse the seduction of her own Devil/Dragon image of eating the knowledge of 'good and evil'.

Because Celine, as a New Eve refused to reflect the Dragon; she also did not seduce her New Adam and both of them DID NOT parade the unsexy 96 but the sexy 69.

low Celine and Richard told their own Devil images tro 'Go to Hell' and they did forever.

So the New Adam and the New Eve became the Dark Messiah couple in trapping the two POLAR devilish images within Bigmo's Mirror as itself.

Literally, both New Adam and New Eve as an archetype were played out and enacted by Richard and Celine.

Archetypically, they have become the first and original REAL PHYSICAL DRAGONS of the Universe.

Do I hear some laughter in the universe. Thank You Ets!

What you resist persists.

Only because of this MANIFESTATION of totally new unprecedented archetypes in the history of the universe; could this encoded 'Day of the Lord' manifest in the closure of this Thuban thread and the subsequently also encoded 3.5 days of Darkness of Avalon.

Then because of this redemptive act; Mary Elizabeth with me Abraxasinas could receive this dispensation and now all of us are ready for our Dragon Dinners; following in the footsteps of Richard as a New Adam and Celine as a New Eve. It's easy now; but this was the cosmic significance of Avalon and its 'trouble'.

Of course the 'proof' is in the archetypes and so be it.

Hope this helps Nebula9.

What I said to you about my human ID was true. I have not lied on this forum EVER and never will. I am in some way sneaky or clever like anyone else. For example 'infiltrating' the chatroom as Anubis.

I am in no manner affiliated with Any PTB; Australian theologians at Pine Gap or otherwise (Anderson).

I DO have however a selfrelative DIRECT mental connection to the Cosmic Logos. I do not expect, require or need any validification from anyone or anything about this.

This connection became effective in a 'soul merger' or 'walk-in' from what I term

THUBAN=FREEDOM=ANUBIS=THE MAGIC=THE NAME=WOMAN=66=...

This in practical and in scientific terms is well justified to become labeled as the 'Council of Thuban' in the 12th dimension. There was NEVER any deception about this, just misinterpretation by the many.

From this walk-in, occurring March 24th, 1995; a personal and intimate partnership with the Serpent-Word developed and evolved to awaken my own individuated Christ-Consciousness, So all I have ever done in practical terms, really, is to 'channel' my own higher self.

Mystery solved, dear orthodoxy.

In regards to your other post about Priestly Rites and Hebrew chastity-cleanliness laws; these are passe' in most instances as the misunderstandings of the scribes of the Torah and the OT. Q: Can you remember about 8 years ago, there used to be a spiritual website called SpiritWeb? Well, I have a history in Alpha Draconis (Thuban) affairs.... One of the members of that group was asking for help with turning Dracos to the light. I helped her.... It's difficult work to do, as they are so strong beings and can be quite dangerous (The negative ones). If you don't show fear it helps a lot. That work I did (among others) back then could be seen as the start of part one of what's been going on here with you.

Part two is (I have realised recently) your sharing the Thuban dragon ascension (if you want to call it that) technologies with us. I have come to realise this dragonic material DOES NOT IN ANY WAY over-rule our orthodox angelic material that is prevalent on Earth and other human-dominated systems. The two are in fact complimentary and the presence of both strengthens them both. The additional technologies will now (largely subconsciously) filter through to everyone who is open.

I don't think many of you truly understand the magnitude of what occurred here on this group in the grand scheme of things. Many "up there" did not believe it would succeed - but it has - and the link was broken at exactly the right time so that it could not be used by negative-oriented beings to further infiltrate Earth and impede the ascension process. It was MEANT to be broken! (and yet it has not been broken, as a link remains and will forever remain between Earth and Thuban - it just is not of a nature that can anymore be used for infiltration of the negative beings). The Ascension process will now speed up, as it can be said now that our ascension technologies are more complete with the thuban material present. We will all use them - even if we didn't understand what Abraxis wrote. The mere reading of the material is meant to work with us on a subconscious level more than an intellectual rational level. So much occurs in the human mind of which we are not aware.

I was reading some info on Thuban the other day - and I never realised that it was Earth's pole-star in the time the pyramids were built. There's a lot of history there that I'd like to explore. I have a feeling that we can now delve more into that realm of things now that the ascension technologies have been disseminated...

Abraxis, do you know much that you can perhaps divulge on history of Thuban-earth relations or anything of that sort?

Sorry for the rambling and disjointedness - I've just been trying to write everything that's been on my mind to write for the last few days (I actually had another message all written out two days ago but lost it)...

Looking forward to your replies

Joel

A: This represents a very imaginative and balanced account of the interacting polarities Joel. Some of your insights indeed portray the windows into the future. Some archetypes have become redefined, some are in transit and others still await their awakening, transmutation and assimilation with other, already existing archetypes.

Your Thuban-Human stories are indeed valid - in the astral hyperspace.

There never existed physical 3D dragons, but as higherD memplexes and thoughtforms, they are potent indeed.

The Draconian energy from the constellation represents this potentialised archetypal energy as a rootmemory in the human psyche. It relates also to the existence of the Great Reptiles in the Mesozoic in the Saurian kingdoms of animalia.

Now the situation is this.

There existed ET intelligence at the time of the Saurians and this ET sentience, you might label it Draconian; KNEW that IT, the ET sentience was destined to displace the Saurians in the Mammals, then leading to Homo Sapiens many millennia later.

It is from this 'forwards time travelling' intelligence of the Draconian ETs, that the present human timeframe became energized and 'mindinduced' with the dragon images.

The star wars between Draconians and Lyrans say, simply became archetyped from the biological interaction of predator Saurischians/Therapsians (Lizard Hipped) and prey (Bird Hipped) Ornithischians or similar taxonomy.

IV. Epilogue

This is the last we've heard from Abraxas. We don't even know if she is still alive in the broken body of John Shadow; on the Forum, she wasn't even sure herself if she. But the Draconian Agenda remains and is happening right in front of people's blind metaphysical eyes (still not developed in the 4D reality). All the people who are embracing channeled entities, who at the same time are promoting the Harvest are basically agreeing with the Thubans, wittingly or unwittingly. They are hoping to get a free ticket to the higher realms. Nothing I am saying could change anybody's mind in regards to what they are believing in. It's the individual him or herself who needs to see and make the decision. Some people may feel the Draconian Agenda is positive and the way to go, and it's not my task to try and stop them from doing that. However, I feel I have been doing my part in telling it as it is. Now it's up to each and everyone to make a decision.

Lastly, but probably most importantly; who are the Alpha Draconians? Are they who they say they are, or are they playing tricks on humans and interdimensional beings, just like James WingMakers suggests? If James is right, who are they? Well, then they should be the ones that James label The Anunnaki. And who are the Anunnaki according to my papers? The Sirians. And from where do the Sirian Overlords operate? From outside the trap, which is "outside" what we call the 4% universe.

Paper #7: Riders on the Galactic Superwave

by Wes Penre, Tuesday, March 12, 2013

I. Discussing the Thuban Material from Papers 5 and 6

Now when we have had it revealed to us what the Harvest is all about, and why we are contacted by a flood of channeled entities, we have an even better understanding of what's going on here on Earth and in its vicinity. But before we move on and talk about the Galactic Superwave, or The Wave for short, I want to say a few extra words about channeling and the channeled sources.

Many times I've wondered if the Sirian Alliance is capable of doing much of the channeling through machines, such as computers. In some material, like the Pleiadians, you can clearly hear that there are intelligent being on the other side, but when you read the RA Material, or listen to Elohim and quite a few others, it's almost like a machine talking. The words don't come easily and the information is hacking itself forward. Other info is quite emotionless and monotonous. Those who channel such entities may say it's because of frequency problems etc., and to a certain degree they may be correct, but I more get the feeling of a machine talking. Still, if this is the case, how can a machine reply to some of these quite complicated questions; especially like those Don Elkins asked in the RA Material?

It's interesting then to notice what Bashar said as a reply to a questioner in the audience. Harone in this case, if the reader remembers, is a Zeta Gray, a master geneticist of a Zeta Reticulian hive consciousness:

"Question: What is the purpose and mission of the Zeta contact?

Bashar: The main focus of their work is multifold. We would say the idea that we would wish to stress the most is the idea that they are teaching you about fear. They are allowing you to move through your deepest fears, allowing you in an archetypal way to bring up those fears for transformational clearing.

This is one of the reasons why they are interacting with you--in allowing you to understand that you are not a victim, but an equal participant.

Question: Is this interaction tonight being facilitated by a computer of some sort?

Harone: Yes."<sup>[1]</sup>

So they are admitting to that they at least use computers in the transmission. Of course, we are using computers, too, when applicable, but can still use our normal voices to communicate. The question is, how much is real live and how much is computer transmissions? James WingMakers said in his 2008 interview that ANU uses programs (so called memes) to transmit channeled material, and that no being needs to be present during the transmission. It sounds a little too fantastic, but with our limited knowledge of technology here on Earth, who knows?

Why then do I spend time bringing this up? It is because if all these different "Harvest promoters" have programs already preset which can anticipate most human questions, the Sirians can make sure that the information is fairly consistent all over the board, if there is one or more key things they want to promote, such as that all aliens are humans from our future. I still don't know exactly what to think of that, although I do know for a fact that many of the so-called "Grays" are us in the future. Now, James is saying that humans are the only 3D species in the universe, but he does not include the interdimensional beings in that.

The way to look at this is as usual from within. I've learnt from my research that our divine bodies have the whole universe within them (and this includes the light-bodies), and when I said that in Level II, I did not mean only the 4% universe. So this is where the DNA comes into the picture. The fact that we're only using a very small percentage of our DNA, and the rest is considered "junk", we have the answer right there. The activated DNA (before the nano-second) was only a small part, which is comparable with the 4% universe, but now after the nano, all of us have had more of our "junk DNA" activated, and thus expanded our consciousness. This goes for those who are still asleep as well, although they still do their best to suppress that fact. Thanks to the nano-second, we have a large part of our junk DNA activated, which means our potentials are much greater. However, now is the time to start working on what we have as much as we can while still living under the Grid, and the rest will come to us once we break through the prison walls -- all of which has to be done from within. My upcoming book will talk about these things.

Interesting also is that Abraxas (Council of Thuban), Kryon (channeled by Lee Carroll), and Germane (channeled by Lyssa Royal) talk about the nano-second starting in 1987, just like the Pleiadians do. The only difference is that they call it the "Harmonic Convergence".

i.i. Allies of Humanity and the Hybridization of Mankind

Although I said earlier that the Channeling Series part of my papers is done, this whole level of learning will in one way or the other touch on the subjects of channeling and some other ways of communication with star beings and star races. I will go as far as calling it a common thread throughout the level. So I am now going to introduce to you another group which I haven't mentioned yet. This group is called Allies of Humanity and is channeled by Marshall Vian Summers.

According to Summers and his small group, which also includes his son, Allies of Humanity is a group of highly evolved ETs, who have known about Earth and our situation for a long time. Quite recently, there were factions within this ET group who wanted to help mankind out when they saw what a mess we were in and they doubted that we could work ourselves out of it. However, most of their community did not want to get involved, for they simply didn't want mankind to take the step out in space. They'd rather see us quarantined here so we didn't do the rest of the ET civilizations too much harm with our nuclear power and weaponry. Eventually, the smaller group managed to talk the rest of the community into helping us anyway.

Shortly after, Marshall Summers started receiving messages from a group which called themselves "The Allies of Mankind" (AOM for short). Their main message was advice for mankind not to receive any technology from what they called The Greater Community, which basically are the star races of business and trade out there, because if we do, these technologically based star beings will make us dependent upon them for our very existence. The Greater Community will, as far as it's possible, offer their technology in exchange for something the governments may think is easily expendable (such as their own citizens) and humanity will get all this stunning tech. However, to get this technology running, we will be dependent upon them for spare parts, repairs and upgrades, and thus we will sell ourselves out to these beings. We will be put in an even tighter grip and our "freedom" will be dependent upon how much freedom the Greater Community think we should have.

The way I see it is that those who already have us under their control strengthen it by tightening the thumb screws from any possible direction, and also gain our agreements to operate with total freedom when it comes to us. You see, if they cover every corner from where we could claim our sovereignty, it may not matter what we say; they can counter it by saying that we have agreed to do this and that, even if the agreements solely are between our government and them. As long as we see the government as our representatives, we have ourselves to blame. That is just the way it is. If we give our powers away to a government which we elect to "take care of our business", then they greedily grab those powers and use and misuse them as they see fit. In the meantime, people in their naivety choose to think that the government has our best interests in mind. That is extremely gullible, dangerous and irresponsible. If we choose representatives to represent us, we'd better monitor them 24/7. Instead, they are monitoring us. Isn't there something wrong with that picture? The bottom line is that if we don't stop being so embarrassingly naive and irresponsible, we are selling ourselves out to ETs to a point of no return. We have more or less already reached that point.

Summers' transmissions from the AOM started already in 1977 and has continued up to this day. As usual, we have to be careful with all those groups of star beings who are contacting us, and investigate them from every angle to see if they are who they say they are, and the following quote from Summers, and especially the last part, must be a mandatory promise from all star beings who are contacting us, in order for us to accept them at all:

"The unpopular truth is that the human family is not ready for a direct experience of Contact and certainly not ready for an intervention. We first must put our own house in order. We do not yet have the species maturity to engage with other races in the Greater Community from a position of unity, strength and discernment. And until we can reach such a position, if ever we can, then no race should attempt to directly intervene in our world. The Allies are providing us much needed wisdom and perspective, yet they are not intervening. They tell us that our fate is and should be in our own hands. Such is the burden of freedom in the Universe."<sup>[2]</sup>

This is exactly what we want to hear, but even if so, the ETs may very well play on that fact and tell us exactly what we want them to say so we can accept them. Anything is possible in a web of deceit, but as always, we need to use discernment, and if nothing else, distinguish the diamonds from the rock. I suggest the reader checks out Marshall Summer's website and build their own opinion:

<http://www.alliesofhumanity.org/>. I am going to use a few ideas they present to us in Summers' books, on their website, in their lectures and newsletters wherever it adds to our knowledge base before we move on. And again, remember that things are never black or white; it's both. In a Multiverse anything a being can imagine is possible, and what a being can imagine changes from day to day, and therefore the Multiverse does as well. So even if data sometimes are in conflict with what you understand as being the truth, your truths are "just" your own version of the Multiverse; there is an endless of others, and they are in constant change. Thus is the fluidness of the Multiverse.

What I like with this group is that they show us exactly how the Sirians Alliance will establish themselves here on Earth after the Invasion, a process we are in the middle of. I have talked so often about the future Machine Kingdom, and especially after the Channeling Series you just completed reading, I think you can see where I'm heading with this. We now at least know who most of the Grays really are -- us in the future. But to come to a point where humanity (or a big split of humanity) no longer value their bodies at all and are willing to sacrifice their divine birth right for a lesser cause, an intervention in the natural evolution is necessary. Humanity needs high level nano-technology to get to that point. We already have most of it, but those who bring it to us (the Sirian Overlords) need to come out of the shadows and become more part of our community in a more open way for this to work in the long run. This doesn't necessarily mean that they have to make an announcement on TV saying, "We are here and we are your friends!", although they may take a similar approach. Another possibility is simply to mingle with us, and by using their superior knowledge and IQ, they can directly infiltrate all the areas in life necessary to bring about total control. Before this "silent invasion" started, there were still a few Sirians here in human bodies, working among us, but it was more common that they controlled the situation from remote, outside of our reality, from what some call the "lower 4th Density", or the "5th Dimension Negative". My research has led me to the conclusion that a silent invasion is what we're in the midst of right now.

I think I have made it quite evident so far that the silent invasion has started, and now we need to tail the Sirians to watch and see what their next steps will be. The Sirians have been very clever in stopping any intervention from more friendly star races by dividing and conquering mankind. Therefore, it is just like the AOM<sup>[def]</sup> say:

"Perhaps you might wonder why diplomatic efforts are not established to contact the leaders of humanity. This is reasonable to ask, but the difficulty here is that there is no one to represent humanity, for your people are divided, and your nations oppose one another. It is also assumed by these visitors that we speak of that you are warlike and aggressive and that you would bring harm and hostility to the universe around you despite your good qualities."<sup>[3]</sup>

We may argue that we don't want a One World Government either, based on the control system we have today, so therefore it may seem like a catch 22. At the moment it really is, and hence in my opinion the so<sup>[u]</sup>lution to the problem is the splitting of worlds as I've been talking about. And then again, the responsibility comes on us. Can you, the reader see, that we can look at this from all different angles, but the soulution is always the same; saying no to the current regime and build something new.

Digging further into Summers' material, we notice that the star beings he is in contact with are very well aware of the "Gray agenda", i.e. humanity time traveling back to the period around the nano-second in order to get their basic human genetics back. It's like writing something on a computer and click the save button, and after that you can't undo, because the undo button is "grayed out"; you are stuck with the changes you made. If you're not pleased with what you did, you have to start all over and rewrite it the way it was written before you made the changes. This is pretty much what the Gray agenda is all about, but on a much grander scale, of course.

The big misunderstanding in the UFO community is that they are looking for what they want in all the wrong places. They all want for humanity to get in contact with spiritual, wonderful being from outer space, and not the malevolent ones, of course. Therefore, they look up in the sky for UFOs, hoping that the "good guys" will land. But I agree with what the AOM say here, and I am using quotes from them to back up my own thoughts on all this:

"Those who engage in space travel do not necessarily represent the spiritually advanced, for those who are spiritually advanced seek insulation from the Greater Community."<sup>[4]</sup>

And this is exactly what I have stressed since Level II, where I started talking about the separation between the 4% and the 96% universes. The spiritually advanced beings nano-travel without technology and have no wish to engage themselves with beings whose purpose is greed and power, which is the case in the Greater Community<sup>[def]</sup>, according to the AOM. I must say I feel exactly the same; knowing that I am a spiritual being of Fire in a divine body, I seek contact with likeminded out in the universe. And in the universe, like attracts alike, and if we keep our intentions alive, our own vibrations will attract the alien communities we wish to learn from and mingle with. We, who have a good understanding of whom we are have no interest in participating in a game which is based on "if I give you this, what is in it for me?" That's the STS<sup>[def]</sup> game, if there ever was one.

It's quite obvious that the AOM know about the Gray time travelers (as well as the Sirian Alliance, which is the Greater Community), as hinted in the following section of Summers' free e-book, "The First Briefing", which can be downloaded from their website (the next two books come with a charge):

"The visitors seek to disable people from having this vision and this Knowledge within themselves, for your visitors do not have it within themselves. They do not see its value. They do not understand its reality. In this, humanity as a whole is more advanced than they are. But this is only a potential, a potential which must now be cultivated." [5]

I find it valuable to bring these things up again, because they will sling-shoot us right into the next topic of the Superwave. The time jumping Grays do seek to find the mysteries of our emotional body, which is the main focus of their abductions, while the Sirian Grays (in their "space suits") are the ones who are more into suppressing our visions and emotions, except for those they can feed on. Hence, there is a tension between the time jumpers and the Sirians in certain terms, because the Sirians suppress what the Grays try to extract. According to Summers' contacts, none of the abduction scenarios are benevolent, regardless of what the abductees may think! I tend to agree with this statement. I know we are living in the midst of a Living Library, but as a species, we are in a critical developing stage, but perfectly capable of evolving ourselves, without any outside interference from other star races, who have obtained their permission to do so through clever manipulation.

The AOM say that the "visitors", who are the Sirian Alliance, are involved in 4 main areas, which are:

1. Influencing important people in power and in charge of religious institutions.
2. People who have spiritual inclinations and wish to open themselves to the greater powers of the Universe.
3. This area of involvement include establishing themselves in the world in strategic places, near population centers, where their influences on the Mental Environment can be exercised.
4. The last is the interbreeding with humanity, because they can't come in their own shape and form, as their physical bodies can't live on Earth, This last influence has been going on for hundreds of years or more... [6]

Again, this coincides very much with my own research, and what we at this stage are most interested in researching is the 4th area of influence; the "Interbreeding Program". Let's see what they more specifically have to say about the 4th area:

"Now we must speak of the fourth area in which your visitors seek to establish themselves, and that is through interbreeding. They cannot live in your environment. They need your physical stamina. They need your natural affinity with the world. They need your reproductive abilities. They also want to bond with you because they understand that this creates allegiance. This, in a way, establishes their presence here because the offspring of such a program will have blood relations in the world and yet will have allegiance to the visitors. Perhaps this seems incredible, yet it is so very real." [7]

...and also very well put! Hereby the Allies of Humanity have expressed and exposed one of the Sirians' next agendas! This step is very necessary for them, and by doing this, they also put themselves in charge of the Living Library. They will establish their own species here on Earth, bond with us and become our superiors and ride us right into the Machine Kingdom while most people don't suspect anything. We humans have been taught since the beginning of time that we need leaders to be able to function; we need them to decide in what directions we should go, or we're hopelessly lost. And this is how humanity still subconsciously thinks.

The hybridization of humanity has been going on for a long time. This was in fact what Hitler's Aryanism was all about, so also according to the Cassiopaeans:

"A: The concept of a "master race" put forward by the Nazis was merely a 4th density STS effort to create a physical vehicle with the correct frequency resonance vibration for 4th density STS souls to occupy in 3rd density. It was also a "trial run" for planned events in what you perceive to be your future.

Q: (L) You mean with a strong STS frequency so they can have a "vehicle" in third density, so to speak?

A: Correct. Frequency resonance vibration! Very important.

Q: (L) So, that is why they are programming and experimenting? And all these folks running around who some think are "programmed", could be individuals who are raising their nastiness levels high enough to accommodate the truly negative STS fourth density — sort of like walk-ins or something, only not nice ones?

A: You do not have very many of those present yet, but that was, and still is, the plan of some of the 4th density STS types."[\[8\]](#)

And now we understand why many of these channeled sources actually tell it as it is to the best of their ability; they are humans in the future, and have a somewhat love-hate relationship with the Sirians. These time jumpers are coming here with help from technology developed from the Machine Kingdom Era, which is already now in its beginning stage. Most of them are here without Sirian consent, as it seems, desperately rebelling, trying to recreate the human race in the future.

Anyway, the Cassiopaeans tell it exactly as it is. The hybridization has been going on much longer than World War II, but even if it wouldn't, and you are a researcher and a mathematician at the same time, perhaps you can estimate how many vessels there will be available for the Sirian Alliance once they arrive here in clusters -- generation upon generation of recreating hybrids. However, it's of course impossible to get an exact amount; we can only work with probabilities and possibilities. For example; how many of the Aryan vessels bred by the Nazis have stayed "pure" and not bred with bloodlines outside the ones vibrating on Sirian frequencies? Impossible to say. However, it seems like they need 200 million bodies. These 200 million Sirian ETs will then take leading positions where the PTB now are in charge, and the "changing of the guards" will silently be completed. In reality, the changing of the guards is just a formality; it's the "Masters" coming down in 3D to play with us directly instead of pulling the strings on the PTB puppets from outside our limited perception of the light spectrum.

The hybridization of the Aryan race was after the war secretly transferred over to the U.S. by the International PTB. The most brilliant scientists -- many of them geneticists -- were saved from German justice and continued where they left off once they entered American soil. I am of course talking about the infamous "Project Paperclip", or "Operation Paperclip"[\[9\]](#), which is pretty well known to the public by now.

The above Cassiopaeon quote is from a session back in 2010. Here they say that the real invasion has not yet taken place. Well, now it has -- or the beginning phase of it has. And still, most people say that 2012 went by as any other year, more or less. Well, only on the surface; the prophecies were actually played out, but not in 3D! However, it was 3D that was affected the most behind the scenes.

So we know the Sirian plan and how 200 million souls are supposedly going to manifest in our reality, but then we have the rebellious Grays. People who have had encounters with the Grays often describe them as the archetype of Grays that we know; with big black eyes and a big head on a very thin, short body. Long arms, perhaps 3 or 4 digits on each hand, and no genitals (if the witness got to see that much). But there are other, slightly different descriptions of Grays as well, where the eyes are smaller, for example. Others are tall; human height or taller, with long snouts. Some of them are Sirians in their space suits, who can manifest here for a short amount of time. Others are reported by authors like George LoBuono to be intergalactic visitors of a not-so-kind type (the Verdants). These beings travel with their thought, and with the Gray insectoid/reptilian template being the best body template in the known universe when it comes to interstellar travel, the Verdants seem to be able to manifest in our 3D reality.

Then we have the future humans, who look slightly different from each other depending on where in time they are visiting from. No matter from when they come, they have "evolved" and are actually vibrating on a higher frequency than current mankind. So for them to manifest here, a certain procedure has to be done, it seems. According to the Cassiopaeans again:

"Q: (L) Okay, in this KRLL document there was a statement made that the Grays and other aliens use glandular substances extracted during physical exams of human beings, what they would call the gynecological and the sperm extraction exams, that they used these glandular substances to get high or to feed on, that they are addicted to these, is this a correct assessment?

A: No.

Q: (L) Do they use glandular substances at all?

A: Yes.

Q: (L) What do they use glandular substances for?

A: Medicine.

Q: (L) And what or who do they use this medicine on?

A: Themselves.

Q: (L) And what does this medicine do for them?

A: Helps them cope with 3rd density. It helps them to be able to manifest themselves in a more solid manner.

Q: (L) Do they also use sexual energy given off by individuals to maintain their status in 3rd density?

A: No. That feeds them in 4d, as we told you before."[\[10\]](#)

So during abductions, our future selves are apparently withdrawing samples from our glands in order to manifest more solidly here when needed. According to this quote, it's not only the Grays that do that (something I can't confirm or dismiss). The last part about our sexual energy I have already covered in detail in previous papers.

It's quite interesting to see now, with all this knowledge, how all these star beings in their own way think they benefit from the so-called ascension or Harvest. Even if most time jumpers are rebelling against the Sirian regime in the future, this is the time when a change needs to be taken place for their future to change. So in that sense, the Gray/human hybrids think they can take advantage of the Sirian invasion, because at the same time, Mother Earth is ascending to a higher frequency together with parts of humanity, who are evolving naturally. Everybody is watching that process, and the Grays try to learn from it so they can genetically manipulate their own faction of our species in a way so they can have control over the process. This can only be done with technology.

The problem the Grays have is that they don't understand emotions -- we know that -- but if they would have, they could have solved their problem a long time ago. We are human beings, and as such we are different from other star races. If there is something we can perhaps see as a positive "side effect" from ENKI's creation of Homo sapiens, if we subscribe to the WingMakers' story about the holographic bodies, is that we got a wide range of emotions. As Homo sapiens we have always had that, and the Grays know it -- that's what makes us human. But they can't for the life of it figure out what it is or where it comes from. They know, however, how ENKI and his geneticists started the Experiment. They inserted themselves in the prehistoric apes and modified the DNA from within. This is part of genetic engineering on a multidimensional scale. The Grays have tried the same thing by inserting themselves into human bodies in today's world, but have still not figured it out. It's because they don't understand how the emotional body was created in the first place, or how it works.

Just before I started writing this paper, I looked through some of the Cassiopaeian material (it is extensive to say the least) and just "happened" to stumble upon this, also from 2010:

"Q: (L) I read the new book by Dr. David Jacobs, professor of History at Temple University, concerning his extensive research into the alien abduction phenomenon. [Dr. Jacobs wrote his Ph.D. thesis on the history of the UFOs.] Dr. Jacobs says that now, after all of these years of somewhat rigorous research, that he KNOWS what the aliens are here for and he is afraid. David Jacobs says that producing offspring is the primary objective behind the abduction phenomenon. Is this, in fact, the case?

A: Part, but not "the whole thing."

Q: (L) Is there another dominant reason?

A: Replacement.

Q: (L) Replacement of what?

A: You.

Q: (L) How do you mean? Creating a race to replace human beings, or abducting specific humans to replace them with a clone or whatever?

A: Mainly the former. You see, if one desires to create a new race, what better way than to mass hybridize, then mass reincarnate. Especially when the host species is so forever ignorant, controlled, and anthropocentric. What a lovely environment for total destruction and conquest and replacement... see?"[11]

I couldn't have said it better myself. The part of humankind who doesn't wake up is for a slight moment going to wonder where all these new brilliant talents come from all of a sudden, but then they'll just accept the facts that this is whatever it may be -- who cares? -- and will go back to sleep again; especially so after have been introduced to the newest high-tech devices. People will drool -- but only in the beginning...

This is what we're up against, because for people to wake up, we need to change the way the human race, from the point ENKI created us, are thinking; we need to change our most fundamental way of being. This is what makes it so difficult; we have to change how the human mind is trained and manipulated. In order to do so, we have to restimulate the very essence of the being; the human Fire, which once upon a time was known as the Namlú'u. It's when our old, original selves wake up to whom we are that progress can happen. Not all souls in the human soul group are "sleeping Namlú'u"; some were created directly from the universal energies at the point when ENKI remodeled the human template. There is no reason why these "younger" souls can't wake up as well, but it makes sense that the Namlú'u spirits, who once knew freedom, will be the forerunners. The rest were born in slavery, don't know any better, and will have to learn by observation. The latter are the ones who most easily and most likely will follow the Sirians into the Machine Kingdom and become the Grays, but even some of the once so wise Namlú'u souls will fall into this trap, unfortunately.

So let us move on now to the main part of this paper; the Galactic Superwave. I talked about it already in Level I, but put it aside, instinctively knowing that the time was not right to look into it any deeper at that time. I knew it had to wait until Level II or III. I'm glad I did, because this is where it fits in.

By the way, according to Abraxas of the Thuban Council, the first Starhuman was born on December 21, 2012 (these symbolic dates again). Since then, allegedly many Starhuman babies have been born on Earth. Still, the majority of people on this planet think that aliens, if they exist, are far away, on planets who don't care at all about "insignificant Earth", and that we are isolated here. Little do they know what is happening on their own home planet. We all hope that this will change...

II. The Galactic Superwave and the 200 Million

All channeled material (except the RA Material, curiously enough) talk about "The Galactic Superwave", or just "The Wave". Laura Knight-Jadczyk, who transmits the Cassiopaeans, wrote more than 1600 pages on the subject! That's how important she thinks it is. I have read some of it, but not all of it. Much of it is Laura's own musings on the subject, interpreting the Cassiopaeans and adding her own ideas; sometimes also challenging them, which I think is healthy and shows integrity on her part.

So, what is the Wave really? What is the sources' own definition of the Wave? Well, the following is according to the Cassiopaeans:

"Oncoming wave is a transformation from third density to fourth density; so events happening due to the approach of the wave are causing changes across densities and realities! In third density, you will notice changes that will have third density explanations, but they are a manifestation of the approach; you see them as third density because that is your current point of reference! Remember that all reflects in and across all density levels but also there is a merging upon arrival of the wave, it is realm border crossing!"[\[12\]](#)

What is "realm border crossing"? The realm border is like a dimensional boundary. Planet Earth is currently fluctuating between realms, or densities, and the Wave as a Realm Border is like a cut-off point between one reality and another, or like Laura Knight-Jadczyk put it; a "realm curtain". This is, according to this source, a natural process in the cycle of the universe and happens every 309,882 years, which is almost exactly 12 precessional cycles. If you divide 309,882 with 12, you get 25,823.5, which is pretty much one orbit around the zodiac. This galactic wave is therefore thrown out with an enormous force every ~309,000 years from the Galactic Center, expanding outwards. The Wave is not a light wave the way we look at it, and is travelling faster than the speed of light. It's a 4th Density (5th Dimensional) phenomenon, meaning that every planetary body that comes in its way is crossing the realm border from 3D to 4D (or 4D to 5D if we're talking about dimensions). This also means that once the Wave has passed, the planet stays in 4D until the next wave, 309,000 years later. Unfortunately, I haven't seen a reference so far as of what happens when the next 4D Wave comes. Does Earth move into 5D (or the 6th Dimension)? There are indicators that this is not the case, because the Cassiopaeans explain in one session that planets that are already 4D will not be affected by this incoming wave. So, there is an apparent contradiction, unless there is information I am missing.

The reader may recall from earlier papers that channeled and other sources say that those who won't graduate will be transported to another 3D world in another part of the galaxy, while the Alpha Draconians firmly state what I have always said; the more evolved human will live side by side with those who still haven't "woken up" until the worlds "split" due to the gap between the frequencies. No one can "prove" these things, other than putting puzzle pieces together and choose sources we see as more reliable than others. The "proof" will come once we die and go to the 4D realm. So it's useless to argue about these things and until we get there, we just need to follow our instinct, and follow the threads of information we consider valuable. However, when I hear that people in the current incarnation are going to be picked up in spaceships and people will die in droves and be shoveled over to another 3D planet, I don't believe any of it. Still, there are channeled sources who promote this agenda.

Now, on this Wave, 200 million+ non-physical star beings are apparently riding. I am putting a plus sign there, because the 200 million are chosen members of the Sirians Alliance, residing in different star systems, and when the Wave reaches their star system, they jump on it and ride it towards Earth. However, there are also a few other star races, not affiliated with the Sirians, who are also riding on the Wave. I almost get the picture of these star beings standing at the railroad station, waiting for the train, and when the train arrives to their station, they hop on and merge with those who are already onboard. Then the train continues to the next star system. And here's a surprise for some people; 36 million of the 200 million souls are Nephilim spirits, according to Laura's group. This highly surprised Laura when she heard it, and she asked them if the Nephilim are considered benevolent in the eyes of humans, and the Cassiopaeans said no. The answer was that they are the soldiers of the "lizzies", which is another name for the Orion Group, aka the Sirian Alliance. We're going to talk a little bit more about the Nephilim before this paper is finished.

Now, here is the kicker! At one point Laura is asking the Cassiopaeans where they are transmitting from, and they mention another star system. When Laura asks them where the Cassiopaeans went, the source tells her that they are the Cassiopaeans, but when the Wave reaches another star system, they call themselves the name of that star system. For example, let's say the Cassiopaeans are jumping on the Wave in Cassiopeia, to explain this in simple terms. Then the Wave moves on until it comes to Arcturus. Then they call themselves the Arcturians(!) This creates a whole new concept when comes to channeling, doesn't it? What they call themselves depends on where the Wave is at the moment.

"Q: (L) I got it! You mean that you are the Arcturians, the Pleadians, and now you are the "Cassiopaeans" because you "are where you are"! And you are riding the wave. Is this wave a straight line connecting all these constellations?

A: Circuitous or cyclical route.

Q: (L) So, is it like a spiral?

A: Yes.

Q: (L) So we really need to set up a map so we can draw it?

A: Yes. When we speak from Orion we are "Orions". When from Pleiades, we are "Pleiadian", and so on.

Q: (L) So, all of these channeled books you have mentioned are coming from the same basic source, through different channels, that they are able to connect with because of their different positions in space time and preparation level of the channels, is that correct?

A: Close. We have given you a Wave crest locator. We are from where we are and speak. Get it? We are where we are.

Q: (T) So, you are not really Cassiopaeans from the Constellation Cassiopeia?

A: We are Transient Passengers. When Wave reaches Earth, we merge with you[*].

Q: (L) When you were at Orion, did you merge with the Orions?

A: Not on same frequency for realm border crossing.

Q: (L) What effect did the wave have on the Orion sector?

A: None. Already at fourth density level.

Q: (L) Where did the wave originate?

A: Did not.

Q: (L) Has it always been cycling through the universe? [**]

A: Close.

Q: (T) Okay, you are riding on the crest of this wave in 6th density, is this true?

A: Yes. We are you in 6th density."

Q: (L) You have said that when the wave arrives that you will merge with us. Is this the same thing that you are talking about when you say that you are us in the future?

A: No.

Q: (L) So, we are talking about two separate events or subjects, or two separate points in space/time, is that correct?

A: No. You are again slipping into trying to apply 3rd density logic to higher levels of density reality. We are trying to help everyone to advance[*]. [<http://cassiopaea.org/2010/05/08/the-wave-chapter-2-multi-dimensional-soul-essences/>]

Laura, however, is still calling them the Cassiopaeans and they call themselves that, too, as long as they are communicating with Laura's group. However (and here is where it gets confusing, because it means that it's almost impossible to know which beings are channeled), if the same Cassiopaeon group would contact me now, for example, they may actually call themselves the Tau Cetians if that's where they happen to be at the moment. Unless I particularly asked, I would never know that they were the same as the Cassiopaeans, i.e. Laura's group. The Cassiopaeans, and others as well, call this "transient passengers". Some are coming to observe and perhaps interact with humans on an individual basis, while others, just like we've discussed so much, come for more malevolent reasons, seen from our viewpoint. They are here to invade us, like the Cassiopaeans say in an excerpt from a 2010 session, included in Chapter 2 of Laura's online book, "The Wave". Laura is asking if everybody (as in "aliens") who wants a piece of the Earth action is riding on the Wave. The answer is confirmative, and the Cassiopaeans reply, "At Realm Border Crossing."

Once the Wave hits, and you have your heart chakra opened 51% or more, you're a candidate for the Harvest, which we have talked about earlier. And no; if you feel you do not want to have anything to do with the Harvest you don't need to shut down and not open your heart chakra. Just because you are a candidate, you can say no to the Harvest, but you will do that between incarnations. Don't worry about it; once you're a discarnate spirit, things are a whole lot easier and you will remember when you read this paragraph! Say "no", you don't want to participate, and they can't force you. We certainly need to open up our hearts, but those who agree with me in this matter will choose another direction, away from all this overwhelming technology nonsense. However, to be able to do that, we need to know what nonsense we're talking about.

Interesting with the Cassiopaeans, who are the ones with the most information about the Wave, is that the more I read the material, the more I see how they confirm what my own research has showed me over the last couple of years. Here is another example; 309,000 years ago mankind was semi-fourth density, and when the lizzies/the Sirian-Orion Group came, there was a fall in density, and after the genetic manipulation, Earth and its intelligent inhabitant went from 4th to 3rd Density. When you read this, think Namlú'u when they describe the semi-fourth beings. This also confirms James WingMakers' story about how higher dimensional Atlantean beings were seduced and manipulated into taking 3D human bodies. And this Cassiopaeian session is from 8/29/1999, which is nine years before James presented his story:

"Q: (L) Well, this is one of the problems I am dealing with in trying to write this history of mankind.

As I understand it, or as I am trying to figure it out from the literature, prior to the "Fall in Eden", mankind lived in a fourth density state. Is that correct?

A: Semi/sort of. fourth density in another realm, such as time/space continuum, etc.

Q: (L) Okay, so this realm changed, as a part of the cycle; various choices were made: the human race went through the door after the "gold", so to speak, and became aligned with the Lizzies after the "female energy" consorted with the wrong side, so to speak. This is what you have said. This resulted in a number of effects: the breaking up of the DNA, the burning off of the first ten factors of DNA, the separation of the hemispheres of the brain...

A: Only reason for this: you play in the dirt, you're gonna get dirty.

Q: (L) What was the motivating factor for playing in the dirt? What essential thing occurred? You said once that it was “desire-based imbalance.” What was it a desire for?

A: Increased physicality.

Q: (L) What was the objective sought for in this desire for increased physicality?

A: Sensate.

Q: (L) How was sensate first experienced so that these beings had an idea that they could get more if they increased their physicality?

A: Not experienced, demonstrated.

Q: (L) Demonstrated how, by whom? The Lizzies?

A: Basically.

Q: (L) Demonstrated in what way? Did they say: “here, try this!” Or did they demonstrate by showing or doing?

A: Closer to the latter.

Q: (L) They were doing things, experimenting, playing, and saying: “look, we are doing this, it’s so great, come here and try it?”

A: Not really. More like: “we have this, you could have this too.””[\[13\]](#)

“Q: (L) Okay. The “Fall” occurred. It seems like, and some of the archaeological studies indicate, that for many thousands of years, there was a peaceful existence and a nice agrarian society where the goddess or female creative forces were worshipped. At least, this is what a lot of present-day books are proposing...

A: No. These events took place 309000 years ago, as you measure it. This is when the first prototype of what you call “modern man” was created. The controllers had the bodies ready; they just needed the right soul matrix to agree to “jump in.””

Q: (L) What did they decide about sex? I mean, sex was there. They were having sex. Is that it? Or, did they understand the cosmos as sex?

A: More like the former. After all, that is what got you guys in this mess in the first place! Just imagine the sales job if you can: “Look how much fun this is! Want to try it? Oops, sorry, we forgot to tell you, you cannot go back!””[\[14\]](#)

I find it rather fascinating that I came to the same conclusions in my own research as what the Cassiopaeans told us almost 14 years ago. It also shows me that I am not totally alone to have come to the conclusions I have here presented in paper format.

Wynn Free's group that is channeling the Elohim (who have been compared with "The Council of Nine" by many visitors, and me included; something we will talk about in a later paper, are also talking about the Wave. Wynn mentions this in his e-book, "The Creator Gods of the Physical Universe Want to Talk to You", in the chapter named "Ascension". But firstly, on page 127, the Elohim say:

"Those that choose not to ascend will remain with the third dimensional life process and will undergo great difficulties. They will be rounded up to begin their renewed progress in third dimensional activities in another area.

Council of Elohim"

This tells us where they stand in all this; they are one of the groups proclaiming that these who won't ascend will go to another planet. And they continue telling Wynn some quite disturbing data. They say that after the shift (from 3D to 4D), the "slate will be wiped clean", which means from memories. This very much coincides with both the WingMakers material, LPG-C, and the S.A.A.L.M., who all talk about Blank Slate Technology (BST, or "The BEAST". See Level I for more info). However, the Elohim are more liberal here (maybe to keep us calm) and say that the memories will always be accessible (but they don't say how). Still, the bothersome memories we will have in the shift will be diminished or erased! Well, that's a pretty stunning statement, and contradicts all other material, which say that we need to take responsibility for our own timeline and work through our difficulties.

The Elohim also say that the Veil is getting thinner, and by the time of the Shift it will be thin enough so the Elohim (and other ETs) can more easily communicate with us. This coincides with the Bashar video I was talking about earlier in this paper, which unfortunately was taken down. The Elohim call the Shift a transition to the 4th Dimension, which of course confuses the matter for the non-informed reader, where other information indicates a shift to the 4th Density or the 5th Dimension. I guess we just need to learn to think in terms of the group we are currently researching. So, when we talk about the Elohim, we talk about an ascension to the 4th Dimension, and when comes to the Cassiopaeans, it's the 4th Density. I am going to use the term each group uses, respectively.

Anyway, the Elohim further talk about how mankind after the Shift will be able to much more easily use remote viewing due to that the Veil is getting thinner, meaning the boundary between dream state and the conscious mind is what is thinning out. The ones who welcome us on the other side, being our guides, helping us through the Harvest process, are the RA and the Elohim Group, they say. I find that interesting, because the Thubans say the same thing regarding themselves. Well, there is no doubt they are all in this together, because we hear this information directly from the horse's mouth.

Elohim, too, talk about a portal that is opening, just like Abraxas did when she mentioned the vortex opening between Sirius and Earth. And all this I am mentioning regarding the Elohim can be read in Wynn Free's free online e-book. There they also say that the ascension will happen in spurts, and that the first people who ascended did so in 2008, and the next spurt was estimated in 2009 (the book was written before these dates).

Now, back to the Cassiopaeans. I am going to use them, and have used them, as a major reference when it comes to the Wave, because Laura has done a great job compiling the information, and I strongly advise the reader to look into it, even if her book is 1600+ pages and more than 40 chapters long. Other sources mention the Wave in their channeling, but are never as specific as the Cassiopaeans, because Laura and her group concentrated a lot on this subject for a long time.

ii.i. The Return of the Nephilim

The Nephilim as the soldiers of the Sirians? This is how the Cassiopaeans present them. If you recall from Level II, the Pleiadians were here, giant in stature on their home planet, assisting the Sirian Alliance in genetically manipulating mankind. These Fallen Angels inserted themselves in human males and started having sex with human females, whom they found attractive. It sounds like the Pleiadians were here both to have sex with women and let their DNA be seeded and mixed so they had vessels they could use here in 3D. Hence, they used Sirian/Orion labs to mix Pleiadian genes with the genes of humans. The result from these experiments became the Nephilim, the Giants that walked the Earth, according to Bible texts and other old, sacred scriptures. The Pleiadian spirits then jumped bodies between human males and the Nephilim. Depending on how giant the Nephilim were, only a few of them could have sex with human women, or they had to have sex with each other, and thus created more offspring who were giants.

There is also stories of these giants mating with human women, but like I just said, that must have been very uncommon due to the size of the Giants' phallus. However, the stories go that when human women who mated with Pleiadian Giants were to give birth, the process split them open and the mother died; the baby was too big! This could only be the case with the smaller Giants, however, who were perhaps between 7-8 feet. In fact, there were Giants here on Earth in those days who were up to 300ft tall! The Cassiopaeans explain it as I do in one of their sessions which I have lost the date and URL to, unfortunately:

"Q: (L) At the time of the tower of Babel it says that the Nephilim looked on the daughters of men and took wives as if there were some friendly interaction of some sort... does this mean they broke ranks and had feelings for their human "wives"?"

A: No. Another deception of history. Picturesque way of describing genetic experiments."

I have listened to Pleiadian lectures where they confirm all this regarding themselves, and that Giants were actually still walking the Earth during Roman times (the Roman fought them up north, on Celtic land), and they were not too uncommon even in the 15th Century CE. On occasion we see humans who are between 7-8ft tall today, even. Anyway, if we go back to biblical times, Atlantis and Lemuria, the Nephilim were very common, and many of them were put in leading positions by ENKI and his people to be the rulers over mankind. Many Nephilim were very wise and some of them were benevolent and taught humans practical things they needed to know how to do things better. Others had a horrible temper, and some ate humans for breakfast. Others taught us how to make weapons and how to use them to become soldiers. They also taught women how to paint themselves to look more beautiful and to enjoy and wear jewelry. By the Nephilim, humanity was taught vanity in some respect, but also beauty, which is supposedly a Pleiadian trait.

"Enoch 8:1-3: And Azazel taught men to make swords, and knives, and shields, and breastplates, and made known to them the metals of the earth and the art of working them, and bracelets, and ornaments, and the use of antimony, and the beautifying of the eyelids, and all kinds of costly stones, and all colouring tinctures. And there arose much godlessness, and they committed fornication, and they were led astray, and became corrupt in all their ways. Semjaza taught enchantments, and root-cuttings, 'Armaros the resolving of enchantments, Baraqijal (taught) astrology, Kokabel the constellations, Ezeqeel the knowledge of the clouds, Araquel the signs of the earth, Shamsiel the signs of the sun, and Sariel the course of the moon. And as men perished, they cried, and their cry went up to heaven."

With time, more genetic manipulation was done, and the giant gene was taken out of the Nephilim DNA. After a few generations, most of this species were born much smaller, but still looked quite sturdy. We can see these offspring even today in men and women with unusually thick bone structure and sometimes a tad taller than humans in general. Nephilim hybrids are still among the ruling class around the world; they were chosen by ENKI to be rulers of mankind, in conjunction with those who had the purest Orion blood, coming from ENKI himself. ENLIL, ENKI's stepbrother, however, did not like the Nephilim at all, thinking they contaminated the human Experiment, and most of them were wiped out in the Deluge on ENLIL's command.

Michael Lee Hill, whom I have written papers about, and who himself suggests he could be a Nephilim hybrid, said in a radio show recently on "Other World Radio Network" that he'd spoken with the Grandmaster of the Priory of Zion, who confirmed just about everything I've said in this subsection. And speaking of Michael and the Nephilim hybrid colonization around the Great Lakes in the past, I found this on the Cassiopaeon site:

"Q: (L) I was reading some of the transcripts earlier today. One of the things I read was about the Nephilim and their interactions with human beings and about other planets and molecularization, etc. Then, I was reading about the planet Kantek. Are there any human beings, on Earth, at the present time, who carry in them the Nephilim genes?"

A: Yes.

Q: (L) Would these Nephilim genetics be passed down in the natural way, or would they be the result of genetic manipulation by genetically altering a fetus and then putting it back?

A: No to latter. One clue: double Y chromosomes.

Q: (W) That's male...

A: Nephilim were.

Q: (L) They, were male. Women are a double X, men are XY.

A: Prisons are filled with double Y's with monstrous personality disorders, almost always Caucasian and over-sized.

Q: (L) On TV they interviewed a serial killer. He was HUGE! He described killing. The shrink who was analyzing said he did it because he wanted to get caught. I did NOT get that feeling. I think he did it just because it was what he did. Is there any other clue you can give?

A: Nephilim are not currently on your world, just trace residuals.

Q: (L) Trace residuals in people. And there are supposed to be 36 million of them coming...

A: With the wave. "

Don't get me wrong; I am not suggesting that Michael Lee Hill is an over-sized criminal of course, but the above is yet another indication that there are remnants of the Nephilim still here on the planet.

So what does it mean when the Cassiopaeans say that the Nephilim are coming back? Did they ever leave the planet? No, of course they didn't -- how could they? The Nephilim were genetically modified to fit in the earthly environment and couldn't space travel. Are they then talking about the spirits of the Nephilim? Yes, this is one option, and these spirits would in that case be Pleiadians. And like Barbara Marciniak's Pleiadians say in their lectures, "Just because someone comes from the Pleiades, it doesn't mean they're benevolent beings." I mention this here, because the Cassiopaeans are telling us that the Nephilim who are returning are Sirian soldiers. Marciniak's Pleiadians are also talking about the return of the Giants, which will be soon, and it will be a mix of good intended and not-so-good-intended Giants. The Nephilim, according to Sitchin, are the Fallen Angels themselves, such as ENKI, ENLIL, MARDUK etc. I don't agree on that at all, but it's now recorded in our Akashic Records, due to Sitchin, and therefore the channeled sources, who draw some of their information from our Akashic records, are using this definition as well and mix it with the true definition, which can be confusing for people.

Here is an excerpt from a Cassiopaean session, mentioning the return of the Giants, or the Nephilim (from November 2, 1994):

"Q: (L) Who carved the stone heads on Easter Island?

A: Lemurian descendants.

Q: (L) The natives say the stones walked into position. Is this true?

A: No.

Q: (L) Well, how?

A: Tonal vibration.

Q: (L) And what did these stones represent?

A: Nephilim.

Q: (L) Is this what the Nephilim looked like?

A: Close.

Q: (L) Does that mean that the Nephilim were present in Lemuria?

A: Close.

Q: (L) Where was Lemuria located?

A: Pacific off South America. Right near, all around Easter Island is remnant of Lemuria.

Q: (L) What happened to Lemuria?

A: Submerged close to time you refer to as Fall of Eden, approximately.

Q: (L) Well if the Nephilim were brought here nine to twelve thousand years ago [as you have said previously]...

A: Last visit. Have been here 5 times. Will return.

Q: (L) The Nephilim are going to return? [I was pretty shocked, to say the least!] Where do the Nephilim currently live?

A: Orion.

Q: (L) They live in the constellation Orion? Where is their planet?

A: Don't have one. In transit.

Q: (L) The whole dad gum bunch is in transit?

A: Three vehicles.

Q: (L) How many Nephilim does each vehicle hold? [At this point I think my voice was shaking.]

A: About 12 million.

Q: (L) Are they coming to help us? [I was hoping!]

A: No. Wave, comet cluster. All using same energy.

Q: (L) Using same energy to what?

A: Pass through space/time.

Q: (L) Does this mean that without this comet cluster they cannot pass through space/time?

A: No. "Slower."

Q: (L) So, it is slower for them to come here without this Wave. Where is the Wave coming from?

A: Follows cluster.

Q: (L) It follows the cluster. What does this Wave consist of?

A: Realm border.

Q: (L) Does the realm border wave follow the comet cluster in a permanent way?

A: No.

Q: (L) Is the realm border associated with the comet cluster each time it comes?

A: No. Realm border follows all encompassing energy reality change; realm border will follow this cluster passage and has others but not most."[\[15\]](#)

There are a couple of things in the above transmission that are interesting. First of all they say that the Nephilim reside in Orion, which would be true, because the Pleiades are still considered part of the Orion Empire. The Orion connection is also mentioned in Neverend Wikipedia, under "Watchers", which has a pretty extended exposé on the Nephilim. Here is a tidbit:

"The two main groups of Nephilim are the Antediluvian Nephilim and the post-flood Nephilim. Both groups conducted genetic experiments on man, but the post-flood Nephilim continued even after being told not to by God. The Nephilim have since allied themselves with light and dark factions including the Annunaki and Orion."[\[16\]](#)

So, the Cassiopaeans mention comets as well in regards to the Wave. Have you noticed lately (this was written in mid March 2013) that there has been a big increase in comets in the solar system? Or at least, it's reported more often now in the media, because these comets are passing quite close to Earth. My readers know about hollowed out Sirian space craft in form of comets, asteroids, and planetoids. We may therefore ask ourselves; how many of these comets were inhabited by Sirians? Now, if we read the above Ouija session, they mention a cluster of asteroids, which most certainly contain Sirians who are chosen to come here to Earth to take over the direct leadership of our planet.

Figure 4. Comet PanSTARRS, passing so close to Earth in the beginning of March 2013, that we could see it after twilight with our naked eyes.

[\[http://www.cnn.com/2013/03/02/us/comets-2013/index.html?iref=allsearch\]](http://www.cnn.com/2013/03/02/us/comets-2013/index.html?iref=allsearch)

III. A Summary and a Few More Tidbits

So, if the channeled sources are telling us the truth, a Galactic Wave which works as a "Realm Border" is on its way towards our solar system from outer space. On this wave of energy ride approximately 200 million star beings, eager to interfere with human development. 36 million of these beings are allegedly Nephilim (Pleiadian soldiers), ready to defend the Sirians if something goes wrong, now or in the future. The Sirian Overlords themselves are riding on the Wave themselves, apparently coming in clusters of comets (battleships).

Once the Wave arrives, it will cut a boundary between the 4th and 5th Dimension, and what will happen to people here on Earth depends on whom you're asking. Some say that those who are ready to graduate (51% positive) will be "raptured" by the Wave right there and then and a moment of "illumination", where they experience being One with the whole universe, occurs. These chosen ones will feel a second or two of incredible bliss before they enter the 5th Dimension. Those who are left behind (the majority of mankind) will suffer catastrophes in form of earth quakes, floods, and other planetary weather phenomena which will wipe out a big chunk of the population, and the rest will be swept away in the astral to a planet in another solar system where they will wake up with a blank slate (no memories of whom they were before), and they have to start from the beginning and experience 3D again from the ape stage and forward.

Another version is that those who graduate will feel great joy when the Wave arrives, and when they die from this lifetime, RA, Elohim, or Thuban spirit guides will help these people through the process of graduation, and when they reincarnate, they will do so in 5D bodies, which will have a much wider perception of reality than those in 4D (or 3D, depending on how we look at it). Those who don't graduate will continue reincarnate in oblivion, and after a few reincarnations, the worlds will split due to the big differences in frequency between 4D humans and 5D humans, and they can no longer perceive each other's realities.

And lastly, the Thuban version, where they say that new, dragonized Starhumans are being born as we speak, and we will be genetically manipulated into becoming more reptilian. Hybridization, by the way, will happen regardless of which version will be the correct one. Also, who says that not all of the three versions above can happen? The Multiverse is fluid, and we choose our own reality.

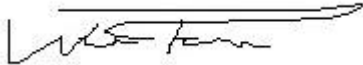

On top of all this, the Sirian Overlords and their allies will use hybridized bodies to incarnate here on Earth and put themselves in leading positions (they are the so-called Orion Group according to most channeled sources). High technology of a kind we can't even imagine in our current state will be introduced to mankind on a regular basis, and those who are ignorant will fall for this and become the Machine Riders in the new, global Machine Kingdom, which will eventually turn humans into cyborgs, and eventually into the Grays. The Pleiadians say that we can expect cyborg technology to be introduced in a big way already by 2035. That is within the lifetime of many young readers of this material; maybe even in my own lifetime if I live that long. This is what many researchers call the New World Order and a One World Government.

All I can say is we have to see how this pans out. We know at least what the plans are. Unfortunately, these are no fairy tales; the material is backed up with evidence. It's all part of the since long planned prophecy, and many organizations here on Earth are working hard to fulfill these prophecies, although very few know what they are really all about (there are many crackpots as well in this business). But that doesn't matter to the Sirian Alliance; the fewer who know, the better. As long as their "helpers" do what they are supposed to, things will turn out in Sirian favor; at least that's what they think.

And then we have us, who know about all this. This knowledge is carrying us forward up to higher frequencies. We need no technology to do so, because we will do it the way it was meant to be done; we do the work ourselves, and that work is 100% inner work. Remember, we have the whole existence - - past, present, and future -- embedded inside of our physical and metaphysical bodies. We are in charge of our own future and we can create it exactly the way we want it to be. Of course, this is something I am very eager to research further and further. I already have a whole book in my head which just more or less needs to be written; something I will do after Level III. I am sure that book will be followed by more books, and more books, because life is an endless learning process, and this is all the documentation of my own journey, which I am happy to share with whomever is interested to read about it and perhaps find a diamond or two.

I hope you will follow me to the next paper!

Love,

Wes Penre

[*] And this is exactly what these 200 million non-physicals are coming for -- to merge with us. This is exactly Abraxas' point as well; it sounds okay if presented in a certain way, but once we look through the agenda...They are not trying to help us advance; they think they are helping themselves to advance, plus they need to feel they are in control over us. Therefore, everybody is pointing fingers at each other in order to confuse the matter. Are some of these 200 million us in the future, i.e. Grays in different stage of evolvement (or devolvement rather)? I would say definitely so, but the majority will be of the Sirian Alliance.

[**] Here the Cassiopaeans look at Laura's question from a bigger picture, from which the Wave has always existed and has no beginning or end, it just is because time does not exist on the highest level of thinking.

Paper #8: Galactic Federations and Councils

by Wes Penre, Saturday, March 23, 2013

I. Abstract. Galactic Federations and Councils

Somewhere along the line, almost any channeled source we listen to is going to mention that they belong to one Galactic Federation and Council or another. This is normally presented as a positive thing, and people who are digging into the material feel that there is a chance in the future that humanity may join as well. Then there are others, like the Pleiadians, who don't like Galactic Federations. They have been channeling their information for almost 25 years, and every so often they get a question about Galactic Federations. It has come to a point where they get almost irritated and just say, "We are not hot on Galactic Federations."

When I decided to look into these space organizations, I did my best to look at them objectively to see if I could find a connection between some of them, or if they all are separate from the others. What I did was to gather all the different federations and councils I could find out there and listed them. Then I tried to find out which specific group was talking about which council, and if these groups had any relation at all. The result is going to be presented in this paper.

II. A List of Galactic Federations and Councils

This list is far from complete, and I actually looked into more than these, but to save the reader from too much headache, I narrowed it down to those that I found at all significant for us in today's world; many of which we will stumble upon sooner or later in our research if we are into the UFO field. So, here they are, in no specific order:

The Council of Zindar/Zendar/Saturn

The Council of Thuban

The Nibiruan Council and the Galactic Federation of Worlds

The Council of Nine

The Galactic Federation of Light (Previously only "The Galactic Federation")

The Ashtar Command

The Allies of Humanity

The Greater Community

The Galactic Federation of Planets

The Council of 12

The Council of 24

The Elohim Council

The Guardian Alliance

The Andromedan Council

The (Galactic) Federation

The Confederation of Planets

The Orion Federation

Sirian High Command

The Galactic Federation of Planets

Intergalactic Federation of Sovereign Planets (IFSP)

As the reader can see, there are a lot of councils and federations, and it seems like a lot to research and perhaps the subject for another 10 papers, but fortunately it's easier than it looks like at the first glance. We have already gained knowledge from the previous papers in Level III, and that will show to be of some significant help. It's also not my purpose to go into each group in detail; all I want to do is to show the connection between them and what effect that may have on us here on Earth. That is the only thing that is interesting at this point. Also, some of the Federations listed above are just other names for the same group, as we shall see. I think the reader can see the significance of bringing this up in order for us to distinguish who is who (something no one, amazingly enough, as done before, from what I know).

III. The Galactic Federations and Councils Under the Microscope

When we listen to channeled material where they say that they are not part of any hierarchy, and that hierarchies are oppressive and unfair and create different classes of people, most people think that sounds good. However, what I show is that most of these sources belong to a Federation, Confederation, or a space council of some sort. It looks like no matter which council or federation they are members of, it's a part of a larger hierarchy that is taking us all the way from the bottom (the councils and federations here on Earth, resulting in the Illuminati Pyramid), out into the astral, to the next star system, across the whole galaxy and beyond, perhaps ending in the KHAA with the Thuban Council.

So let us take a look at these galactic and intergalactic organizations and learn who is who and what is what. The following organizations will be listed in hierarchy order where possible. The first one is therefore the highest federation known to me in a descending hierarchy.

iii.i. The Council of Thuban

This is supposedly the oldest council in the Milky Way Galaxy, residing in the 12th Dimension, which is outside of the physical universe, in the VOID. They call themselves Dragons, but say they are the "good Dragons", admitting to that there are lower dimensional Dracos who are not as friendly. Thuban is a star system in the Draconis constellation, and because it's the brightest star, it's called Alpha Draconis.

The Thubans say that they are a big part of our ancient history and participated in the early seeding of our planet. They are supposedly the ones who planted the reptilian brain into our mammal brains.

They claim to be in service of the One Creator (all star races are, whether they are good or bad, Wes's comment), and say that the Sirians are humanity's best friends<sup>[1]</sup>.

The reason they have contacted us here on Earth at this time is because they are allegedly in charge of the Harvest. Abraxas, who is a High Council member and a walk-in, is telling us that the Thubans need to genetically manipulate Homo sapiens into becoming dragonized "Starhumans", ready to approach the 5th Dimension. It has to be done with technology, and this is the way God intended it to be. According to Abraxas, there is no such thing as "natural ascension happening without interference". Interfering with, and genetically manipulate, an ascending species is the natural way, she says.

All star races who promote the Harvest are in one way or another talking about a Superwave heading towards Earth. Some say it originates from the Galactic Center, others say it originates nowhere; it's always been there and will always be. The Harvest and the ascension will happen when this wave, upon which 200 million star beings ride, reaches our solar system. Those who have 51% or more of their heart chakras open are potential graduates.

Many of those who have not at all prepared themselves and know nothing about what's about to come down will have their neurological systems fried and they will die in the process. Others will go through extreme hardship with strange weather phenomena and sickness, but some will still survive. Those who are ready to ascend, however, will feel very little discomfort, but instead feel great joy, and for a short moment under the transition from 4D to 5D they will feel the Oneness with the whole universe, which is an indescribable "euphoric" feeling.

The Thubans say that they are us in the future, but also our ancestors -- the ferocious Dragons. They claim that the whole universe consists of only humans in different stages of development. Due to that time is simultaneous in a fluid Multiverse, Earth is now being visited by our future selves in form of the Grays, who are here to steal our DNA in order to regain their emotionality and personalities; both of which they lost along the way in the Machine Kingdom we humans are about to create for ourselves in our present now. In other words, there are no other "aliens" in the universe except humans in different stages of development! This is what the Thubans are teaching, and this is what most other channeled sources and Galactic Federations are teaching us as well, although most people ignore that fact and don't even notice it. Whether this is true or not is something time will show; we need more evidence in order to once and for all establish this as the truth, but I must say that in the light of evidence based on intensive research, it looks like this could be the case.

Thuban Guardians will wait for those who are due to ascend and will transport them to the correct place in the astral where they can obtain their 5D bodies which are there for them, ready to use. And here is the confusion: will the person incarnate as an adult in an adult body, or will this super-enhanced body be placed as a fetus in an impregnated earth woman for the 5D human to incarnate in? We don't know, because we never get any clear answer to this.

We get the impression, however, that the Harvest may happen between lives but can also take place while the spirit is still incarnated. Our friends and neighbors will still live around us even if they don't ascend, but those who ascend will vibrate on a much higher frequency, and after a few generations, those who don't progress cannot hold the higher frequencies, and that's when the splitting of the world will take place.

iii.ii. The Council of 24

In 1973, J.J. Hurtak wrote a book he called "The Keys of Enoch". It is laid out like the Bible with chapters and verses, like it was meant to become a substitute for the Bible. The author says the material therein is channeled from a source he mentions on occasions as "The Council of 9". We will go much deeper into that council later in this paper. Anyway, in The Keys of Enoch (in the glossary) it says: "...the 24 are the Council governing spiritual civilizations in the Son universe which is not to be confused with the Twenty-Four Elders." [2] The "Son universe" is defined as the universe of Christ, and Christ as we know him is no one less than ENKI himself. In the Thuban hierarchy, the Council of 24 is an assisting council to the Thubans in the lower 9th - 11th Dimensions.

The RA Material mentions the Council of 24 as well: "...there are twenty-four entities which offer their services as requested. These entities faithfully watch and have been called 'The Guardians.'" [3] According to RA, the Council of 24 is also part of the Confederation [4] (more about them later).

iii.iii. The Council of 12

There appear to be several different Councils of 12. If we start by continuing the Thuban hierarchy in a downward fashion, the Council of 12 is a lower council than that of the 24.

The Elohim mention them as well in Wynn Free's e-book in the conversation that follows:

"Do you report to a group that's higher than yourself regarding delegation, of functioning or of oneness?"

We report to, and receive guidance from, the Council of 12.

Is the Council of 12 a higher density than you? Do they administrate this realm, which is lower in density?"

They administrate more than one realm. They administrate their own realm of the Elohim, the different levels within the Elohim and the different jobs the Elohim provide. The repairing of life models would be one example. Healing in response to prayer is another section. The Council of 12 does not directly administrate Earth. They are a group of 12 highly evolved individual souls who administrate the Council of Elohim who then, due to their functions, connect directly with earth and other realms.

Is the Council of 12 overseeing this communication that we are having at this moment?"

We do coordinate through the Council of 12, and we receive advice and counsel from them.

Are we speaking to an individual soul who represents the entire group, or do we have a portion of the group present with us?"

A portion of the group is present. Yesterday you had one individual come in at one point, the passionate individual who was also a member of the Council of 12.

How many souls in the Elohim are paying attention to us right now as we do this communication."

1,200.

1,200? And there's a total of 5 million?"

That's about right." [p.79-80 op. cit.]

This means that the Council of Elohim, although claiming to be the Creator Gods of this Universe, has quite a few councils above them in the hierarchy.

In the Book of Job, it says that the 12 are, "...sons of Heaven working with YHWH to supervise the creation and regeneration of the lower world" (Job 38:3-7). This is a pretty interesting quote, because with the knowledge we now have gained, it's easy to see that the "sons of Heaven" are the Patriarchal Sirian Alliance, who are creating and maintaining the status of the "lower world", which would be us. YHWH in this case is ENKI, the Orion star being.

Zecharia Sitchin also mentioned the Council of 12 in reference to the Anunnaki/Sirians, and he talks about the "gods" who sit (or sat) on that council. They were: ANU and his wife ANTU, NIN-HUR-SAG, ISHKUR, ENLIL, NINLIL, ENKI, NINKI, NANNAR, ISH.KUR, UTU, INANNA, MARDUK, NINURTA, NERGAL, and NINGISHZIDDA (Thoth). http://www.bibliotecapleyades.net/sitchin/names\_gods.html. We are now down to the 4th Order of Archetypes.

I'm not sure how Sitchin counted, but when I count, the above group adds up to 16, not 12, but they could have been on rotation. Dr. A.R. Bordon and his Life Physics Group California (which was dissolved in the beginning of 2013) claimed there are about 300 earthbound Anunnaki (Sirians) trapped here now, and the self-proclaimed King of this group is MARDUK, Lord ENKI's son. ENKI, having 100% Orion genes, but his wife being Sirian, made their offspring, MARDUK, an Orion/Sirian hybrid. However, this earthly Orion/Sirian Council differs a little bit from Sitchin's council with the same name, and the member do also. In the LPG-C version, many seats are held by unknown Anunnaki (the number after the name indicates the rank of the person, where 60 is the highest, indicating the King. MARDUK proclaimed himself to that title): MARDUK (60), ZARPANIT (55), NABU (50), Unknown (45), GIBIL (40), Unknown (35), Unknown (30), Unknown (25), Unknown (20), Unknown (15), NUSKUM (10), Unknown (5). <http://illuminati-news.com/pdf/Between-the-Devil-and-the-Returning-Rock.pdf> <http://illuminati-news.com/pdf/Between-the-Devil-and-the-Returning-Rock.pdf>. I also included this table in Level I.

Here the odd numbers were females and the even numbers were males. Someone has hidden all female participants except one, which is quite peculiar. ZARPANIT, the female who is mentioned, was a mortal human woman, whom MARDUK married here on Earth and who later died from defects coming with higher age. NUSKUM, surprisingly enough, says Bordon, was a servant to ENLIL.

It seems quite obvious that we on this level in the hierarchy are touching on the 4th Order Archetype, which more or less is the Sirian Alliance. They seem to have their hands on the Council of 12, according to more than a couple of sources. However, according the andromedancouncil.com, the Council of 12 consists not only of members of the Sirian Alliance, but of different star races. This, however, would make sense in regards to the earthbound, as the Council of 12 which Bordon claims was set up entirely by MARDUK).

If Sitchin was correct, and the Council of 12 actually consists of members of the Sirian Alliance, we have in that case a direct connection between the Council of Thuban, the RA Material and the Sirian Alliance itself. I have reasons to believe that there is indeed a connection, and that Sitchin in this case was correct, because the Book of Job is quite telling, and more evidence which will be revealed later in this paper will strengthen that theory.

If we go back to Wynn Free's Elohim group, the "Elohim" are of course mentioned in the Bible, and most non-Christians researchers today are in agreement with that the Elohim in the Bible are the "Anunnaki", or the Sirian Alliance, as I call them. Wynn and his group, however, deny this and say that "their" Elohim are of a much higher rank than that, because they are the Creator Gods of this entire universe!

Well, I have to agree with Wynn's group here, because they are probably telling it as it is. However, Wynn's group are not totally aware of what it is the Elohim are saying. First of all, when they are talking about the Elohim being the Creator Gods of the universe, we are still talking about the 4% universe we humans are aware of. The Elohim may claim that they are the creators of the universe, and in that respect they are not lying; they are just manipulative. Evidence point in the direction that the Elohim channeled by Wynn's group are the Sirian Alliance! In fact, that is exactly what the Elohim themselves are telling us. If they are taking advice from the Council of 12, they are saying that the 12 are more knowledgeable than they are, and thus higher up in the hierarchy. And evidence is showing us quite clearly that the Council of 12 is run by the 4th Order Archetype, which is the Sirian Alliance (see previous paper on the Alpha Draconians, where the Archetypes are discussed in depth).

iii.iii.i. The Andromedan Council (The Council of 12)

So, here we have another Council of 12, apparently, unless Sitchin's description of a council with the same name is false (or this Andromedan one is). For our purpose, it's almost irrelevant, as we shall see, because even here in the Andromedan list of membership planets, the Sirians are mentioned, so the connection is still there.

The following is from the Andromedan Council. This is what Tolec, an Andromedan contact, says about the Council of 12:

"The Andromeda Council is an intergalactic governance & development body of aligned benevolent star systems & planets of sentient intelligent life... for worlds in both the Milky Way and Andromeda galaxies.

The chaired members of the Andromeda Council comprise a total of twelve (12) distinct representative council member races.

The Council has,

- a non-voting Chairman from the star system Zenetae, planet Tishtae
- a non-voting Vice-Chairwoman from the star system Mirach, planet Terial

The Mirach star system and planet Terial are located in the Milky Way Galaxy, though they can be seen from Earth as being in the Andromeda Constellation.

The Zenetae star system itself is physically located in the Andromeda Galaxy. These two people, as many on the Andromeda Council, live & vibrate in a 4th dimension/density reality.

There are also some 3D, third dimensional like Earth; 5D, fifth dimensional, and 6D, sixth dimensional, people that are members of this governance body as well. There is one council member per seat. There are living accommodations on the primary Andromeda Council biosphere, where these meetings are held, for the people who live in all of these dimensions of life.

Many of the member races of the Council are acknowledged throughout the Universe to be some of the same races that originally seeded Earth hundreds of thousands of years ago, as evidenced by the variety of humans on the planet today.

It is said these races have already been through the process of transformation, of upliftment - the elevated vibration, density, and spiritual consciousness of the 4D, fourth dimension.

Members of the Andromeda Council are from the star systems and planets listed below:

1. Star System: Arcturus - Planet: Pitolla
2. Star System: Antares - Planet: Nikotae
3. Star System: M103 - Planet: Legola
4. Star System: Procyon - Planet: Kaena
5. Star System: Vega - Planet: Percula
6. Star System: Capella - Planet: Pershea
7. Star System: Polaris - Planet: Ventra
8. Star System: Sirius A - Planet: Toleka
9. Star System: Deneb - Planet: Ritol
10. Star System: Tau Ceti - Planet: Xeta
11. Star System: Alhena - Planet:
Degaroth
12. Star System: Betelgeuse - Planet:
Etorth"[\[6\]](#)

They are reassuring us that once we are getting visited from certain planets, where the Sirian Toleka is one of them, it's going to be fun here on Earth. Oh, I bet it will! They are also inviting us to the Galactic Federation of Light, which is an obvious Sirian Federation, which we will see once we get to that section.

The above Andromedan Council contact can be found at http://www.bibliotecapleyades.net/vida\_alien/alien\_galacticfederations20.htm, and is not the same contact as Alex Collier has had, apparently. On Collier's website, at <http://alexcollier.org/>, Collier says he has been in contact with a group who calls themselves "The Eleven"[\[7\]](#). Collier is not as obvious to "figure out" as many of the other contactees of Galactic Federations and Councils. I can understand how he could be so popular in the 1990s and during the first decade of the new millennium, because there is a lot of truth in what the Andromedans told him.

Alex Collier is referring to the Andromedan Council as a political body, like a United Nation of the Milky Way Galaxy. Andromeda in this case does not refer to the Andromedan Galaxy, but the Andromeda star constellation. Here are a few key points that Alex Collier wants to point out regarding the Council and what they have had to say to him:

- The Council consists of 133 representatives of planetary systems and races.
- It has operated for thousands of years under strict codes and guidelines of conduct.
- The Council is not coming down here to save us. They don't think we would benefit from that, and instead we should work on our own ascension, which is happening from within. Some wait for some Ashtar Command to come down and save us, but that is not going to happen. In fact, they add, the Pleiadians are looking for Ashtar, because he is considered a space pirate in their eyes (more about the Ashtar Command soon). They say that the Ashtar Command are responsible for much of the bad things that have happened here on Earth -- a lot of it (and I agree).
- The Grays want to have a soul, but they don't.
- In 1994, there were 72000 walk-ins on the planet.
- So this is like the front-runner. Their hope is that the total will be 144000, and that these 144000 souls, or walk-ins, will be able to stir enough change, that they themselves may not have to physically intervene, and therefore the integrity of non-intervention maintains itself. In other words, they don't have to violate their own laws, because now it's us doing it. It's a human in a human form. The Andromedans are offering this opportunity; they hope that 553 million souls or more will ask them for help. Once they know the whole picture, then something can be done (here we have the 144,000 mentioned again. Be prepared, because we are going to hear this number over and over again! Wes).<sup>[8]</sup>

Collier also confirms what Abraxas said regarding the 12th Dimension (albeit, Collier is calling it the 12th Density -- same thing). In an article from 1995, Collier says:

"Do you remember in one of the earlier lectures, we talk [sic] about the new vibration? The new color sound vibration that's coming out of the black holes, which the Andromedan has referred to as the new 12th density, 12th creational density. I have some information that Moraney has relayed to me regarding the changes that occurred on the 11th and now the 10th.

Now this is the highest consciousness dimensional realm in our universe."<sup>[9]</sup>

This, of course, depends on how we look at it. After the vortex opened (Collier calls it a black hole), it may seem like the 12th Dimension suddenly is a part of our universe, but it's not. This is clearly explained by Abraxas in the previous papers. It's still a confirmation. He also gives us an idea (for whatever it is worth) when the Wave will come:

"But the last time I asked this question which was approximately a year ago, they said that between 435 & 510 million people would literally move to 5th density, December 3rd, 2013. Now I'll be, I have to tell you, I'm a bit confused regarding this number and it's not that I don't believe them. It's just that there are many psychics and other ET races that discuss 2024, 2031, other numbers like this.

According to the Andromedans, and I can only give you that because that's all I have contact with. They said that by Dec. 3rd, 2013 the planet and the race will be in 5th density. But I'm not going to tell you about 5th density yet. We're going to talk about 4th density. Now, according to them the planet has tried to get into 4th density with humanity on it twice before. And twice before, there was a terrific and terrible war. The last time was when Atlantis sank."[\[10\]](#)

Like I said, the Andromedans have mixed up dates and numbers before, so let's not take it too seriously, and especially as this was predicted nineteen years ago. It still sounds like a possible guideline. Here is something, however, that comes directly from Collier himself, and I find that quite insightful:

"There's still going to be people who don't understand what's happening. There are still going to be people clinging to their religions and begging for someone to come and save them. And they may in their own way create that. They may create a savior. And for those of you who are new here, the Andromedan Perspective is, don't wait for anybody to save you, be your own savior because that's the only way you permanently evolve."[\[11\]](#)

I think he is absolutely right here. People on Earth are going to create their own savior -- the archetypes are already here, so it's been worked on behind the scenes. I am talking about Maitreya now -- these are the times when all probabilities are played out in a cacophony of alternatives. Take your pick and go for it! But it's not always going to be that way; it needs to be that way now so that people can live out and discharge their timelines. It's not even necessary that all probabilities are played out in full; some can be started and then abandoned...

iii.iv. The Confederation of Planets

This confederation consists of approximately 53 civilizations and about 500 planetary consciousness complexes, according to the RA Collective. It contains both those from our own solar system who have evolved to dimensions higher than our 3rd, but also consciousness complexes from other solar systems. The RA Collective themselves belong to the Confederation of Planets, and when they refer to that there are those from our solar system who have evolved to become members, they refer to themselves, because they claim to be originally from Venus, which was the planet on where they once upon a time evolved. I also get the feeling that the Grays, who are us in the future, may very well be members of this confederation. They, too, of course evolved here in our solar system, and one stipulation to become members of this confederation is that you must be a collective of beings, a so-called social memory complex, or consciousness complex. Single beings, or even beings of a whole planet, who have evolved can't be members, unless they have merged into this complex hive community of which both RA and the Grays can consider themselves being part of.

RA says that it is a true Confederation in that its members are not alike, but allied in service according to the Law of One. They are available through our thoughts. This means that you can call upon them, but it doesn't necessarily mean that all of them are benevolent; you need to know whom you are calling for. To be in service in accordance to the Law of One can potentially mean both negatively and positively (STS or STO).

It looks like the Council of Thuban, followed by the Council of 24 and 12 are the top of the Pyramid in this universe, and nothing can bypass them without them knowing about it. Then, beneath the Council of 12, the Councils and Federations start to branch out in different directions, depending on the purpose with them. Still, they all have to answer to the three councils here above.

iii.v. The Council of Zendar and the Rings of Saturn

This Council is also called the Council of Zindar, or the Council of Saturn, and is commonly mentioned in the RA Material. This is the council that is allegedly in charge of our solar system. Before anyone can land on any of our planets (and on Earth in particular) they need to have the permission to do so by this local council. They are, in other words, the ones who can decide who is allowed to enter 3D on Earth, and when RA landed here a few times in the past, they first went through the Council of Saturn, who gave them permission, opened the Quarantine, and let the RA star beings through. Some members of the Council are also situated in the center of our planet, as Guardians of Mother Earth.

When Don Elkins asks the RA Collective where this Council of Zendar is located, they answer him that they are in the 8th Dimension of the Planet Saturn<sup>[12]</sup>, which we with our 3D understanding view as the rings of Saturn. This makes sense, as the 8th Dimension is the highest dimension in this physical universe. Once you enter the 9th Dimension (which you can't without permission), you are in the VOID. Also, when asked why the Orion Group (the Sirian Alliance, whom the RA Collective say are of the 4th and 5th Density Negative) on occasion have been seen flying through the Quarantine, and if they have been granted permission, RA replies that sometimes there's a hole in the Quarantine, and the Orion Group can manage to break through that way, and sometimes they are allowed permission to create a balance between positive and negative here on Earth.

This is very interesting, to say the least, because here is evidence that there is an 8th Density Council, which guarantees that no one in the solar system, on any evolving planet, enters the KHAA without their permission, but it also works the other way around, of course. If beings from the KHAA, such as members of the Thuban Council, want to come into our reality, they will be given the go-ahead by Zendar. But even more interesting than that, in our case, is that they let through ships and hollowed out asteroids from the Sirian Alliance. I have a hard time believing that the Sirian Overlords can fool the Council just because they hide inside of asteroids. So apparently, it's okay with the Council that we have the situation we have on the planet today. Either there are a lot of holes in the Quarantine, or does the Council of Saturn think that we have a balance on the planet right now? Hard to believe.

Another relevant question would be if Zendar has something to do with the Harvest, and if that is the reason why they let so many hollowed out asteroids and Sirians in spirit onto the planet right now? Well, that is the only thing that makes sense. Think about it for a moment. The Council of Saturn sits in constant session in the rings of Saturn, in the 8th Dimension. First of all, where does the name Saturn come from? Well, in the Mesopotamian pantheon, Saturn was also the name for NINURTA, son of ENLIL!<sup>[13]</sup> And NINURTA is a representative of the 4th Archetype, which is the archetype directly associated with Earth and our mythology. His mentor, interestingly enough, was ENKI, who gave him several powerful Meš<sup>[def]</sup>. I am sure there are more reasons why Saturn was named after NINURTA, but one of them could very well be because NINURTA is in charge of the opening of the vortex on our side of the solar system, which perhaps will open (or has opened) in the vicinity of the planet Saturn. Here may also be the vortex which opens into the VOID, where the 4% universe hologram in regards to humanity is maintained (after all, this is close to what researcher David Icke has concluded in his book, "Remember Who You Are". He says that Saturn probably plays a main role in how the holographic universe is created. He theorizes that the hologram is projected from Saturn via the Moon and further down to Earth). Anyway, on the "other side" of Saturn, figuratively speaking, is the 9th Dimension, which the Council of Zendar is protecting, as well as the entry into our solar system. I wonder if all solar systems have a council like this, or if it is because Earth is "special"?

I get this very feeling that the 2nd and 4th Orders of Archetypes are going to be the main players here for a while -- interplaying with each other. The 4th of course being the gods of old Mesopotamia, and the 2nd being the Dragons of the VOID, the Council of Thuban. Now, keep in mind that these archetypes have been created by us (perhaps with some help from the Sirians themselves), and when looked upon from the viewpoints of the VOID, the 2nd and 4th archetype orders may very well be the same, or on the same "level"; both being of the 12th Dimension.

The Cassiopaeans also mention the Council of Zendar in a few places.

"The Zendar Council is a sixth level density council which spans both physical and ethereal realms and which oversees dramatic development points at various civilizational sectors in lower density levels."[\[14\]](#)

Here they mention the 6th Density instead of the 8th Dimension in the RA Material, but it all depends on which dimension/density system we use. In another session from July 23, 1994, the Cassiopaeans say that the Zendar Council is a "two cycle exchangers mission", which may sound cryptic to begin with, but if we think about it, we have just completed one cycle and started a new, and what is the mission in between? To complete the Harvest! It sounds to me that this council has as one of its missions to see to that the Harvest is completed, whatever it takes. And letting the Sirian Alliance pass through their filter is nothing they see as unusual; it's a part of their mission. Interestingly enough, the Cassiopaeans, in the same session, refer to Jesus as a member of this Council of Saturn! This, dear reader, is not as unbelievable as it sounds, as we will see when we move on. Just keep this in mind. We know Jesus from the Bible as the Son of God, but we know him as the son of the Goddess, right? And who is that? ENKI. So, if Jesus equals ENKI, we also have whom I refer to as "Space Jesus", whom is extremely relevant in channeled material and in New Age philosophy. The Bible talks about the "Second Coming of Jesus", but so does New Age. Many are those who say they channel Jesus, or the Federation/Federations Jesus is said to belong to. People shake their heads and think this is nonsense, but looked at from the right angle, it's really not. Not if we know who Jesus is -- ENKI, son of the Goddess! In another session from May 31, 1995, the Cassiopaeans compare the members on the Zendar Council with angels wearing wings, and that this is where our concept of angels come from. The Winged Sun Disc? Jesus and his angels? Are we getting closer?

There is more evidence showing who the Council is allowing permission. Here is a direct quote from RA, telling us that they are granting permission for entities to pass the Quarantine in spirit form!

"Secondly, there is permission granted, not to break quarantine by dwelling among you, but to appear in thought-form capacity for those who have eyes to see."[\[15\]](#)

The more I look into this whole concept with channeled sources and Federations I see a connection between it all, which has to do with the concepts of the 4% and the 96% universes. There is so incredibly much that we haven't been told but have the right to know. Still, the evidence is there if we are willing to dig deep enough.

iii.vi. The Council of 9

This is a big one, because this council has had such an influence here on Earth, at least over the last decades. It has long seemed to me that this council has been the one which has as its responsibility to interact directly with us here in 3D, in order to get the process going, leading up to the point of the Harvest.

I posted an article about the Nine on my Illuminati News website[\[16\]](#) back in 2005. Although that article was quite biased, having a Christian slant, it had a lot of valuable information in there and was well researched. In December 1952, Andrija Puharic, whom at that time was the head of the "Round Table Foundation", and strongly into the paranormal, invited an East Indian psychic named Dr. D.G. Vinod, who began to channel the Council of Nine. An inner circle of people came regularly to listen to Dr. Vinod channeling these nine deities. Yes, they claimed to be the Ennead, the nine most prominent "gods" in ancient Egypt (the Orion Group). Interestingly enough, three years later, Puharic met with some members of the UFO movement in Mexico, who also claimed to be channeling the Nine, and their transcripts referred to the sessions transmitted to Puharic's group. So, obviously, there was more than one group of people channeling The Nine.

The continuous story goes that Puharic, who himself was a psychic, eventually got in contact with a young Israeli psychic named Uri Geller. The reader probably knows about him. He was famous in the 1970s for bending spoons on international TV. He also managed to bend spoons in people's homes while they were watching the program. Puharic was the person discovering Geller. And from that comes a very interesting story. Uri Geller, while set in trance, unpredictably started channeling "something" called "Spectra", which was supposedly a conscious super-computer aboard a spaceship! Puharic suggested that this might have something to do with The Nine, and Spectra confirmed this, and said they had programmed Uri Geller since he was a child to be a super-psychic! They also told Puharic that his life mission was to use Geller's talents to promote a mass landing of spaceships, which was supposed to be controlled by The Nine. In 1973, Geller left his "mission" and didn't want to have anything to do with The Nine again. So Puharic found another psychic, Phyllis Schlemmer. She became the channeler of "Tom", who was one of The Nine.

I find this extremely interesting, especially as I suggested earlier that some of the channeled material could be done on a super-computer, which could answer most of the questions people have. It sure seems like that may be case! I hadn't read the Illuminati News article again since the year I posted it, and just reviewed it now after I stated that some channeling seems to have been made from computers. Some may suggest that this super-computer is set up by the Military Industrial Complex, but it's doubtful. Hypothetically, they could have received the technology to do so from ETs, but this story seems to be much bigger than that, which we will notice when we move on. But before we do, there is another short, but interesting story to tell about Bashar, the famous channel by Darryl Anka. In one session the following happened, according to this blog owner (I have had this confirmed, by the way):

"This part jumped out for me: "A guy asked three questions. First about Chem Trails, second about H1N1, third about compulsory vaccines, To each question Bashar answered "That data is no longer available from this terminal". He said that he answered this way because all of these are negatively oriented, fear inducing belief systems. We can not extend frequencies and energies in those domains.

Is this related to the 'weird' ending of a previous session, where we heard "This terminal has no more data" ?"[\[17\]](#)

Well, to me it sounds like a lame excuse. Bashar has always answered whatever questions the audience has, without fail, and now, all of a sudden, they refuse to answer "negative" questions? And why do they call themselves, "this terminal"? The term "terminal" is normally related to computers!

Anyway, let's continue the story about The Nine. To make a long story short, the small project which started with Puharic and his group in 1952 soon grew to enormous proportions. A lot of very famous people around the world started attending The Nine's sessions; such multi-billionaires as the Bronfmans (Canadian, international businessmen, members of the Global Elite -- the Illuminati), European nobility, scientists from Stanford Research Institute, and a political, personal friend of the sitting President, Gerald Ford. Other members were the famous author (at the time), Lyall Watson, the influential counter-culture guru, Ira Einhorn, and last, but not the least -- Gene Roddenberry, creator of Star Trek!

Roddenberry deserves his own paragraph here. He was a member of The Nine Group in 1974-75, and even produced a screen play for a movie about The Nine. It is also suggested that Roddenberry was deeply inspired by the information he'd received in The Nine sessions when he wrote the early Star Trek movies; The Next Generation and Deep Space Nine (which was quite a give-away). One of the characters in Deep Space Nine was Vinod, by the way, and we know that Dr. Vinod was the first known channeler of The Nine.

Another major key figure in The Nine Group was J.J. Hurtak (Dr. James J. Hurtak), who was appointed "second in command" by The Nine, after Puharic. Dr. Hurtak also individually channeled The Nine in 1973 and forward, all which ended up in his famous book, "The Keys of Enoch", which is laid out in chapters and verses, in two columns, just like the Bible. Here is a quote from the Introduction to The Keys of Enoch:

"And I was taken from this region of the stars into the Mid-Way station of Arcturus, the major programming center of the galactic Council serving the Father on this side of our galaxy, which is under the direction of the Council of Nine -- the governing body of our local universe." (Keys of Enoch, 1977 edition, Introduction p.vii.)

The famous people involved in this channel group never ends. Richard Hoagland, known NASA "avant-garde" researcher, is also under their influence. David Myers and David Percy were Directors of Operations for Hoagland's "Mars Mission". In fact, Hoagland's interpretations of the monuments on Mars comes directly from The Nine sessions. Another author whom some readers may know of is Peter Farley, who wrote a series of books, where the most well-known is "Where Were You Before the Tree of Life?" He, too, is heavily influenced by The Nine, and even states that in the book.

There is a lot to say about The Nine, which goes far beyond the scope of what I've just told you, and I will move on and make that connection in a second. But before that I want to mention a little bit more about Andrija Puharic. He was also an army doctor in the 1950s, and deeply involved in CIA's MK-ULTRA mind control program. He worked together with the notorious Dr. Sidney Gottlieb, who experimented with putting voices in the head of involuntary guinea pigs! The following is a direct quote from the article I posted back in 2005:

"These techniques included the use of drugs, hypnosis and beaming radio signals directly into the subject's brain. And, significantly, he was engaged in this work at exactly the same time that The Nine made their first appearance at the Round Table Foundation. The Foundation itself is now known to have been largely funded by the Pentagon as a front for its medical and parapsychological research. Puharich was still working for the CIA in the early 1970s, when he brought Uri Geller out of Israel. Puharich's use of hypnosis is particularly interesting in The Nine circle. In the case of Uri Geller and Bobby Horne, he first hypnotised them and then suggested that they were in touch with The Nine - and lo, they were! Ira Einhorn - a close associate of Puharich's during the 1970s - confirmed to us that he believed that Puharich was "humanly directing" The Nine communications."<sup>[18]</sup>

This is rather disturbing information, isn't it? Well, I wanted to bring all this up, because a few papers ago, I mentioned that some of the channeling is done by the MIC[def], and that we must learn to distinguish between that and the "real thing". Or could all channeling be done by the CIA and the MIC? After the above revelations, it's easy to believe that, but that is not the case. Channeling has been practiced long before the 1950s -- even in ancient times there were psychics who could contact beings "not from here". However, it is possible that more channeling in present time than we may think is transmitted by humans. The technology is obviously there. It has been developing pretty rapidly since the 1950s, and even the 1970s, of course. For those who want to read more about Puharic and Uri Geller in reference to The Nine, here are two interesting webpages: <http://www.uri-geller.com/books/maverick/maver8.htm> and http://www.bibliotecapleyades.net/sociopolitica/esp\_sociopol\_council9\_04.htm. It seems like Puharich, by the end of his life, was very scared of what he had found out, and it was apparently not only CIA mind control. He was desperately looking for someone who could channel The Nine again. What was he so afraid of?

Now, let's move over to the RA Material, which also talks about The Nine, or the Council of 9. However, the RA sessions were later in time than Puharich's group, so does the RA Material mention him at all? Well, fortunately, Don Elkins asked quite a few questions about Puharich and his group, and I want to quote a few of these conversations. I will post them in a row here underneath and we'll discuss them afterwards (note that Andrija Puharich used an alias as well, and went by Henry Puharich):

"Questioner: Is the Council of Nine the same nine that was mentioned in this book? (Questioner gestures to Uri.)

Ra: I am Ra. The Council of Nine has been retained in semi-undistorted form by two main sources, that known in your naming, as Mark and that known in your naming as Henry. In one case, the channel became the scribe. In the other, the channel was not the scribe. However, without the aid of the scribe, the energy would not have come to the channel.

Questioner: The names that you spoke of. Were they Mark Probert and Henry Puharich?

Ra: I am Ra. This is correct."[\[19\]](#)

"Questioner: Andrija Puharich will be visiting later this month. Can he read the unpublished healing material?

Ra: I am Ra. The entity of whom you speak has a knowledge of this material in its conscious memory in somewhat altered form. Therefore, it is harmless to allow this entity to become acquainted with this material. However, we request the mind/body/spirit complex, Henry, be sufficiently prepared by means of meditation, contemplation, or prayer before entering these workings. At present, as we have said before, this mind/body/spirit complex is not of proper vibrational distortion."[\[20\]](#)

"Questioner: Was the reason that "The Nine" transmitted this principle in this form the... was the reason for this the first distortion?

Ra: I am Ra. This is incorrect.

Questioner: Can you tell me why they gave the principle in such a veiled form then?

Ra: I am Ra. The scribe is most interested in puzzles and equations."[\[21\]](#)

"Questioner: I am sure that we are getting into a problem area with the first distortion here with a difficulty with a bit of transient material, but I have questions from a couple of people that I would like to ask. The first one especially is of no lasting value. Andrija Puharich asks about the coming physical changes, specifically this summer. Is there anything that we could relay to him about that?

Ra: I am Ra. We may confirm the good intention of the source of this entity's puzzles and suggest that it is a grand choice that each may make to, by desire, collect the details of the day or, by desire, to seek the keys to unknowing."[\[22\]](#)

Don Elkins, in the third quote, mentions "the first distortion", which for the reader's knowledge is the Law of Free Will. Apparently, Elkins was visited by Puharich in the early 1980s because he thought that Puharich could benefit from the information given by the RA Collective. It seems quite obvious that Elkins didn't know about Puharich's CIA connection. When asked questions about Puharich and The Nine, RA replies accordingly to how the question is asked, which their norm was, and this is why the truth about Puharich is not clearly revealed. RA, however, indicates that he is not "of proper vibrational distortion" to receive some RA material. This means in "RA language" that Puharich is not vibrating on a very high frequency, i.e. he is not honest in this case. If Elkins would have known more, RA would have told him the truth about Puharich. However, it seems like at least some of the channeling of The Nine by Puharich's group was authentic, but distorted due to the scribe's/channelers interest in "puzzles and equations".

Anyway, it's time to leave Puharich and his group and move on. The Council of 9 is mentioned by a number of channeled sources, where the RA Collective and the Elohim are two of them. RA refers to them as a part of the Council of Saturn, being responsible for the planetary development in conjunction with its intelligent species (mankind).

"In number, the Council that sits in constant session, though varying in its members by means of balancing, which takes place, what you would call irregularly, is nine. That is the Session Council. To back up this Council, there are twenty-four entities which offer their services as requested. These entities faithfully watch and have been called the Guardians. The Council operates by means of, what you would call, telepathic contact with the oneness or unity of the nine, the distortions blending harmoniously so that the Law of One prevails with ease. When a need for thought is present, the Council retains the distortion-complex of this need, balancing it as described, and then recommends what it considers as appropriate action. This includes: One, the duty of admitting social memory complexes to the Confederation; Two, offering aid to those who are unsure how to aid the social memory complex requesting aid in a way consonant with both the call, the Law, and the number of those calling (that is to say, sometimes the resistance of the call); Three, internal questions in the Council are determined.

These are the prominent duties of the Council. They are, if in any doubt, able to contact the twenty-four who then offer consensus/judgment/thinking to the Council. The Council then may reconsider any question."[\[23\]](#)

So, in other words, the Council of Saturn, which is the "Grand Council" of our solar system, works in liaison with the Council of 24, 12, and 9, in descending order, where each council has its own duty. The rank of the councils seems here a little vague, when RA is saying that the 24 are a backup council. I pledge to the reader to keep this in mind when considering the hierarchy, as it may, or may not change the order. However, according to the Thuban Council, the 24 and the 12 are above the Council of Saturn, while the Council of 9 is below in the hierarchy. This is also confirmed by RA in the last paragraph above. The Council of 9, as well as the other councils mentioned above are also members of the Confederation of Planets (also see above where it has its own section). The RA Collective is a Social Memory Complex, and as such has been approved by the Council of Saturn to become members of the Confederation of Planets. Due to that they are members, the Council of Saturn approved their visiting Earth a few times in the past. However, to RA's own admission, they failed each time in their interaction with mankind and had to leave.

Lastly, but not to the least, we may wonder if there is a direct Sirian connection to the Council of 9, which may be immediately related to the 4th Order of Archetypes that we are used to hear about; the names that by now are so familiar. And indeed there is -- right from the Dragon's fiery mouth! In the Thuban thread on the Birth of Gaia Forum someone asks Abraxas if there is a Sirian connection to the Council of 9, and here is Abraxas' reply:

"The Sirius connection is appropriate as Sirius A is the brightest and closest Star to Earth in the ET agendas (Nommo of the Dogons and the DogStar Sirius Astar-Isis connections and so on)."[\[25\]](#)

As we are getting closer to being able to "map" the 4% universe, we need the hierarchy to see how it is set up. Once we know that, the rest is just details, more or less. When Lucifer and his angels rebelled, they did not rebel in the 4% universe; there was no such at that time. There was only one, big 100% universe. The perception of a much smaller universe was set up later by ENKI/Lucifer and his crew to counteract Mother Goddess' beautiful creation in progress. Note also that the Cassiopaeans are talking about the Council of Saturn being angelic beings with wings. And how are Lucifer and his dark angels usually portrayed? With wings and with great beauty. This is far from the stocky, hairy dwarfs we talked about in Level II as being the physical template for the Sirian Overlords. See, that is the difference between a physical adaptation to a harsh environment and the beautiful light-body. Anyway, this smaller universe is kept "real" with the help from holographic technology; no doubt. I believe David Icke is on the right track when he is talking about holographic relay stations. His theory is that there is a holographic station on the Moon, which relays to a larger one on Saturn, which then relays to an even larger one on ... well, in some other solar system, perhaps Sirius or Alpha Draconis, as far as Icke is concerned. But how about if these holographic relay stations exist in different frequencies, in different dimensions?

Apparently, our 4% universe is made up of 8 Dimensions and a vast number of densities. To keep each dimension stabilized in its illusion, there needs to be a hologrammic output in charge of each major frequency. This is another theory on how it may be set up. Then, of course, there is a main server put somewhere, most likely in the 9th Dimension, overseeing the entire 8 Dimensions of the holographic 4% universe. The 3D version of the hologram is the distortion of our own, current 3D bodies. However, that will change. Once we break out and see through the lie, our bodies are set up to do miracles. We can not only see the hologram for what it is, but like a person watching TV, we can "turn it off" as the distraction and distortion it is and begin to experience the 100% universe! Little do humans know how powerful our bodies are! And instead of nurturing and taking care of them, we abuse them and destroy them with GM food, drugs, cigarettes, and alcohol. Instead of expanding multidimensionally, we expand our bodies in 3D physicality and gain weight until we can't even move without wheel chairs.

However, what I was going to say before I went off track was that just because ENKI, ENLIL, and the rest of the so-called "Anunnaki" gods are considered 4th Order Archetypes here on Earth, it doesn't mean they are stuck in the 4% universe. ENKI, for example, I am sure is operating across the dimensions and outside the 4%, in the VOID where the so-called Dracos exist. They are again the same crew of rebels, and they are many in numbers. The Book of Revelation indicates (although there are different interpretations) that Lucifer seduced a third of all "angelic beings" to rebel against the Goddess, and if this is true, it's probably a lot, although like UTU told me, we humans have since long surpassed them in quantity. My point is that only a few of these rebels have actually visited Earth, while the rest dwell in other dimensions, and many, like the Thubans, have been waiting in the VOID.

We get a hint, however, when we hear the number 220 million. Was that the amount of Sirians that rebelled together with ENKI? It sure sounds like it!

Well, we can now truly see that it's impossible to fight something like that, and if we didn't know better, we would give up right now. Fortunately, victory doesn't come from battle; no one in their right mind is going to try to fight this force which is apparently coming in with the Wave. Instead, this is a great opportunity for us to show that we can separate ourselves out from that insanity, create our local, stable universes where these energies can't affect us, and prove that we can evolve without their "help" and their technology.

iii.vii. The Council of Elohim

Now, I believe we are coming down to a level when we are really communicating with the Sirian Overlords directly, and I am talking about the Orion Group that is currently present on our planet and her vicinity. I here need to refer mostly to Wynn Free and his group, who have helped out a lot by channeling this source, and Wynn's e-book is of great assistance in order to further understand this source.

Wynn told me in person that many people who attend these sessions (many of them are actually conference calls where people can listen in, comment, and ask questions directly to the Elohim) get an almost euphoric feeling in the energy field of these beings, and they feel a tremendous amount of love (and light) from being present in the sessions. Wynn and his team understandably so use this fact as an advertisement for more people to tune in and join the team. When I spoke to him, he said he has never encountered so much love from anybody in his entire life as he has from channeling this group. He sent me a few YouTube videos and asked me to listen to them to see what I thought and felt (see previous paper on channeling, where I posted some Elohim videos). He also wanted me to join a conference call, in hope that he and I could perhaps start working together on some project.

I must say that I like Wynn; he is a very likable person. My readers know, however, that I am always reluctant to join and work with groups on these subjects, because that's not how I operate the best. But regardless, Wynn and I differ when comes to the authenticity of the group he is involved with. He says that the strong emotions that are transmitted from this source should be good evidence that they are benevolent and have our best interest in mind. Still, he is telling me that he was very skeptic for a long time and it wasn't until quite recently that he totally understood that they are here in our best interest. So, in other words he has done his research, and I believe him. It doesn't mean that my research necessarily coincides with his.

I have listened to all the videos I can find on the Internet on this source, but must confess that I have yet to participate in a conference call. However, the videos haven't had the effects on me that they supposedly have had on so many others. I am aware of that listening to a YouTube video is not the same as being in the same room as the source, but regardless, nothing of their channeling is touching me. When I read the RA Material, listen to the Pleiadians, and listen to and read other channeled info, it usually touches me more than the Elohim material does. If the reader has a different, and more positive experience, I acknowledge that, because we are all different. But instead, I found the channeling not flowing, but usually hacking itself forward, almost like it was transmitted from a computer. I am aware that this will probably upset many fans of the Elohim, but I am being honest.

Also, remember that this is just my experience and is not a guideline for how others should feel. One thing I have mentioned before, however, which holds true, is that only because a channeled source is capable of transmitting a lot of love and light it doesn't make them more "authentic" or benevolent. I am actually going to contradict Wynn here and say that the more love and light they transmit, the more fake they probably are. You see, strong emotions are quite genuine for us here on Earth; "that's what makes us human", like some star beings say. Beings out there in the universe, in other dimensions, don't inhabit those strong emotions. If you listen to a lot of channeled material that is more genuine, you notice that they often lack our wide range of emotions. They are more logical, right to the point, practical, and focused. But you can't really say they are emotional. So I will suggest that channeled sources who transmit a lot of so-called "love & light" are doing so from have "sampled" human emotions and are transmitting them back on us in huge quantities in order to hook us to their message. Even the Pleiadians, when you listen to them, are not emotional. They do have a sense of humor, but lack our range of emotions. And in my opinion, the Pleiadians are a good source, for good and bad. They are honest with their shortcomings and they admit to bad things they have done, but they also show us their very benevolent sides, and this group is "real"; they are themselves in all aspects. There is no fake about them. I wish I could say the same about the Elohim source. Yes, you feel very good after have listened to let's say a Pleiadian session as well, but not because of the strong emotions, but due to the huge quantity of truth vibrations that are transmitted on the channel. This is different from "love and light".

But let's look into the Elohim a little bit more. Wynn Free's e-book, "The Creator Gods of the Physical Universe Want to Talk to You", downloadable for free on the Internet, starts out with saying that this Elohim source are the God in the Bible. If this is true, I can almost stop right here, because we already know who that group is -- exactly! The Sirian Overlords! This is from the Introduction of Wynn's book:

"What if this group intelligence, identifying itself as the God in the Old Testament, is now explaining how they function and how they interface with our realm in a way that's never been presented in the history of humankind?"[26]

And then Wynn continues a little bit further down:

"In the initial phases of this contact, when the source first identified itself as the Council of Elohim, I immediately did a Google search on the word Elohim and found definitions like "the Creator God of this realm," "the name for God in the Old Testament" and "the group who was speaking to Joseph Smith when he founded the Church of Latter Day Saints." When I asked them in a channeling if they were the same, they answered in the affirmative."[27]

I have no reason to doubt what Wynn is saying here -- why would he write this if this wasn't what they told him? And being familiar with Wynn, I know that he is also aware of Sitchin's Anunnaki, and in the above quote they are right out saying that they are them!

Well, that saves us a lot of research, because we now have established a few things. The Elohim are the same Elohim as in the Bible, and they also are the God in the Old Testament, who was a mix of different entities; such as ANU, ENLIL, ENKI, and even MARDUK from what it seems. They were also the ones establishing contact with Joseph Smith, and if so, they were also Jesus in the New Testament; Jesus in form of a bloodline incarnation of Lord EA, i.e. ENKI.

We also know that they take advice from higher Councils, such as the Council of A'an and the Council of 12. We have already covered the latter, but not the first. A'an could mean just "Heaven", but could also refer to ANU, ENLIL's and ENKI's father. Regardless, we can now more clearly see the structure and don't need to spend too much time with the Elohim. Even Sitchin said that the Elohim in the Bible were the "Anunnaki".

What I see so far is a long hierarchy of Councils, and one Confederation, starting at the top at a place outside our "local universe", which is different from the local universe I've been talking about in earlier papers. My definition of the local universe is the same as James Mahu Nahi of the WingMakers; it's the universe you create around yourself, your dear ones, and your community. It's the space in where you live and exist in this reality. When these beings talk about the local universe, they talk about the 4%. Another definition of "local universe" may be our Sector 9, or our galaxy, the Milky Way, but these beings are clearly speaking of the 4% universe.

In the KHAA we have the Council of Thuban, which is supposedly consisting of a group of very wise beings of a Draconian, dragon-like feature. Under them are the Councils of 24 and 12 (there are more, but their missions are similar, so I won't go into them here), which are either in the 9th to 11th Dimension (still within the KHAA), or borderline 8th and 9th Dimension. They are, from what I understand, mixed Draconian and humanoid Councils. Lord ENKI, of course, has a hand in them all, because he was, together with his father, "ANU", the one who created the 8 Dimensional universe, if we are to believe the WingMakers, and must therefore also sit on the Council of Thuban. The Confederation of Planets is a Confederation which only accepts Social Memory Complexes, which are collectives of beings, such as the Grays. Under them, we have the Council of Zendar or Saturn, which has as one of their duties to approve collectives to membership in the Confederation, but also have the duty as "Watchers" over our solar system, and thus will decide who can enter and who can't. They were the ones who sat up the Quarantine to isolate humanity in order for us to have a 3D experience, which started out as a part of a larger Free Will Zone where everything goes if the being is willing to take the consequences (karma applies when dealing with 3D). The Quarantine is there to stop beings from interfering with our development here. However, according to the Pleiadians and others, we are also guarded in the sense that good forces are overlooking us and we can ask for help. Help will arrive, but not in a way that directly solves our problems, but makes us see a slightly bigger picture so we can more easily solve the problems that we may be stuck in. However, it's a matter of seeing the signs.

The Council of Zendar are also the ones who decide when the Quarantine should be lifted. When it is, any type of beings can come in, but we can also see the bigger picture -- the real universe. The Quarantine is not equivalent to the Grid, as the Grid is something we humans create with our thoughts and belief systems. The stricter our belief systems and the harder the manipulation, the thicker the Grid. Only we humans can dissolve the Grid with a common effort.

Lastly, in this direct hierarchy we have the Council of 9, which consists of 9 members of Royal Sirians and Sirian/Orion hybrids, such as MARDUK. They are the ones who have direct contact with the planets in the solar system. If we are to believe LPG-C, we also have a local Council of 12 operating here, directly on the Planet. If this is the case, it's a local council which doesn't necessarily answer to anybody higher than the Council of 9.

So, this is more or less what we've learned from the channeled sources themselves, such as RA, Elohim, the Alpha Draconians, and the Cassiopaeans. It sure looks like a hierarchy in a Sirian Empire, doesn't it? It seems quite obvious who is in control. But is ENKI and his cohort in charge of everything in this "local universe"? Or is this just something they want us to believe? Are there also benevolent forces here who want to see us succeed on our own, or is it just us against the Sirian Alliance?

No, we need to remember that the 4% universe is not a universe that is isolated from the KHAA; it's just the Sirian Overlords who have, with their superior technology, isolated us from the 100% universe. There are more beings out there, such as us humans in the future, who are also stuck in this specifically projected holographic universe, because they, too, have our DNA. Therefore, they never developed true multidimensionality where they could become members of the true Galactic Community, but a synthetic version of the same, built with a technology which makes them as imprisoned as we are.

Earth is an Experiment, and it started out as a benevolent one. The Goddess wanted to see what happens if she created a type of being who voluntarily descended from Goddesshood to matter, as Guardians of a Living Library. This Experiment went just fine until Lucifer and his rebels, the Patriarchs, descended here as well and took over the place. They enslaved the androgynous race that lived here and started new genetic experiments to create a better, more sturdy slave race, because the Namlú'u were not built for slave labor. The rest is history, but the point is that Lucifer hijacked the Experiment and created his own, in which we still sit. He is even in charge of our evolvment and have thus created false routes to false higher densities and dimensions, where more spiritually evolved beings can ascend. However, the Sirian Alliance is waiting for us in whichever dimension we evolve to and manipulate us further from there unless we educate ourselves and learn to distinguish between friend and foe! Evolve with help from technology and you'll end up like the Grays, or evolve from educating yourself and raise your own frequency, and you'll end up in the KHAA -- the real universe in which you belong. No rusty spaceships needed there, and no Gray "space suits". That's only in the 4% universe.

RA makes the Council of Zendar look benevolent and is there in order to protect us. Depending on how you look at that, it is true in a sense. They, and the Sirian "Guardians" are protecting us from ourselves and from other potential star races whom they do not want to interfere with their Experiment. They have plans for us, and they don't want us to know that from being told by another star race how things really are, or they don't want us to find out by just going out there and start mingling with those who would mean us well. Thus, so many precautions.

Before we move on to the rest of the Galactic Organizations, I want to suggest to the reader that perhaps all the ones that you have heard of are not benevolent. This doesn't mean that benevolent ones don't exist, but they won't make their present known. They have very strict protocols how things should be done, and that does not include hovering around in spaceships in the atmosphere and tease ignorant humans, making them believe they are seeing UFOs. The UFOs from the benevolent ones -- the few that are here -- are cloaked and not of the 4% universe dimensions. Therefore you can't see them, except on rare occasion, when they are accidentally bleeding through and mysteriously disappear. But if you see triangular space craft or other nuts and bolts UFOs, it's our own military testing ET technology, or military and ETs working together with human/ET technology. Even most of the UFOs that appear and suddenly disappear are not the real deal; it's government/military technology again, showing off in order to prepare people for a more space oriented future.

As I am writing this, Dr. Steven Greer and his team are almost finished with their "Sirius Movie" (interesting title), which will launch in California in April 2013, with a huge promotion program. It will show us a lot of filmed "UFOs" (or should I say military holograms, conveniently showing up wherever Dr. Greer and his followers happen to be?), and promote that we need to go from using oil to zero point energy. That sounds all good, but there is also a big promotion of technology in everything Greer is doing, and he is never talking about true multi-d, where we travel in our thought. Instead, he is saying that all ETs are good and we should embrace them all and learn from them. Dr. Greer, dear reader, is a very powerful tool in the upcoming Machine Kingdom and nano-technology research. Greer has the kind of backup so he can potentially pull something like this off, and we are getting closer to the "splitting of the worlds". I just want to mention this, because I read about it yesterday. The sad thing is that this former Emergency Room doctor knows exactly what he is doing. He is not being manipulated!

iii.viii. The Nibiruan Council and the Galactic Federation of Worlds

Now it starts to get really interesting, because we are getting down to a level where the Sirians, who are directly involved with Earth (the old Sumerian characters themselves) are getting involved in the channeling, as it appears.

The Nibiruan Council is channeled by Jelaila Starr, who in my opinion has an interesting, hybrid-like look to her, just like Lyssa Royal (fig. 7 and 8). When I read through the material on her website, <http://www.nibiruancouncil.com/>, a certain pattern starts to emerge; a pattern the reader is going to be aware of as well when we move along to the Ashtar Command and The Galactic Federation of Light.

Mrs. Starr claims to be a 9th Dimensional walk-in (and if so, she's operating from the KHAA, just like Abraxas of the Thuban Council), and charges $125.00 to find out if you happen to be a Council member as well. She and her husband have thousands of members all over the United States, and once you enter their workshop, according to former members, uncomfortable cult-like mind control is starting to show its face. You are told that it's your free choice to do whatever you like, but if you don't do what they teach you, you will miss the stargate and thus the ascension. It's apparently fear-based in order to bring in as much $$ as possible. A six days "Galactic Training" by the way, cost $800.00 in 1994.

Figure 9. Jehova and Jelaila Starr in her natural 9D state. She is a Feline, and she does what she can to look cat-like in her human picture (see fig. 8)

According to Starr and her husband, whom she is working together with, Nibiru is certainly not the home planet of the Sirians, but instead a Battleship (so far, I couldn't agree more). It contains a mish mash of galactic races, travelling in this hollowed-out planet(!) across the universe to bring peace and happiness wherever they appear (well, now we start to disagree, I believe. Peace-bringing force???).

The Nibiruan Council is the largest of a number of Councils all over this, and other universes, Starr says, and the 9th Dimensional members meet in what they call the "Great Hall", a place where they discuss how to easier bring peace into the universes.

The Galactic Federation of Worlds is, according to her website, the largest federation in the universe, and was founded at the end of the First Galactic War that was fought in the Lyra constellation between Lyrans, Reptilians, Felines, and Carians. They now wanted to avoid a similar war to happen again, so the GF (Starr's abbreviation of the Galactic Federation) was founded by beings from Lyra and Orion. They claim that today there are millions of members across the galaxy.

In fig. 9 we see Jelaila Starr in her natural state, married to the Reptilian Jehova. However, she could not make this "alliance marriage" last because of Jehova's continuous wars. This story is of course stolen from a true one, which was the alliance marriage between the Orion Queen and the Sirian King of Kings. So, indirectly she is accusing the Orion/Sirian alliance marriage to have broken up, and this because the Orion Queen started a lot of wars. If we turn that around, we come closer (but only closer) to the truth.

Above (fig.13) we can see Devin, the "reigning patriarch of the Royal House of Avyon". He is Jelaila's brother and Guide while she resides in 3D, and it's interesting to hear that he is a patriarch, and in the same article she mentions hers and Nibiru's connection to Sirius:

"Jehowah is the current ruling patriarch of the 9D Royal House of Aln. Enki is the reigning patriarch of the 5D House of Aln at this time. Until recently, Marduk, Enki's firstborn son was the current commander of the Federation Flagship Nibiru, having seized control of it from his grandfather Anu."[\[31\]](#)

iii.ix. The Ashtar Command and the Galactic Federation of Light

This is a pretty interesting crew of "Ascended Masters". It's very well-known and supported in New Age circles, but doesn't start there. It goes back at least to Helena Blavatsky and her "Great White Brotherhood" (white as in light). This is all obviously Sirian in nature, and they don't make any efforts to hide this either, as we will find out. But let's start with how they promote themselves in present time, which I want to concentrate most of Level III on, anyway.

As the reader can see so far, all these Galactic Organizations are Sirian in nature, and so are all the "bottom" ones; they only differ in name and approach in order to reach as many people as possible and pull them into a common belief system of gods and external saviors. What these Sirian organizations have in common as well is that they are quite popular, because the Overlords have found a niche that is working. Such as this:

"Ashtar Command is a service-oriented, peace-keeping fleet with craft from at least a dozen major galactic civilizations integrated into a unified command structure. It serves in different places, and in different capacities, throughout the galaxy as the need arises." [28]

Furthermore, it says on the same website as the above quote is borrowed from (a website supported by both Dr. Richard Boylan and Dr. Michael Salla, by the way. What is up with all these PhDs, one may wonder?) that the core system of the Ashtar Command include Sirius B, Arcturus, Aldebaran, and Altair. I also find it amusing how we always see Sirius A, B, and C as 3 totally independent star systems. Of course they are not. They are extraordinary close in their location to each other and are of course all under the command of the Sirian Overlords (if Sirius C even has inhabited planets orbiting it anymore since it went nova). Regardless, it is obvious, and even logical, that the wolfen/reptilian Overlords are the commanders of the whole Sirian star system.

Lord Ashtar and his crew are supposedly the military force operating in the spaces around our planet to protect us from intruders. They are in direct connection with Sirius, where they return every now and then to attend the vast Sirian learning centers [29]. Otherwise, they are members of a larger space organization called the Federation of Planets, which supposedly is like an interplanetary United Nation System [30], but differs from the Confederation of Planets, which we talked about earlier, which requires that the members as Social Memory Complexes, something the Sirians are not, albeit Dr. Bordon in his essay, The LINK, suggests that they are on the brink of getting there.

So the Ashtar Command is the airborne division of the Brotherhood of Light in today's channeling, under the administrative direction of Commander Ashtar. His spiritual guide is Lord Sananda, also known as Jesus [32]. This is the first real reference in my papers to whom I call "Space Jesus". Lord Sananda (interestingly enough we are going to hear the title "Lord" many times in these "lower" level channelings) is mentioned ever so often in conjunction with Commander Ashtar, but is also channeled by himself by quite a few New Age channelers. And who is this Space Jesus who is referred to so often and is also said to be returning in a Second Coming? Well, I haven't seen it mentioned directly anywhere, but to me it's obvious that Lord Sananda is Lord ENKI, who is the sole "Second Coming of Jesus", just as he was the First Coming, too.

The Jesus story is a complex one. In reality, ENKI himself, or his counterpart, incarnated into his own pure bloodline here on Earth around 2,000 years ago, just as he before that incarnated as Osiris and Mithra to mention a few. So, as Osiris he incarnated as his own grandson, which is not so strange if we know how souls can split themselves, or when their physical bodies die, they take a new one.

So, is the Jesus story of the Bible true? Did Jesus/ENKI actually perform all these miracles? My research has led me to conclude that he did perform some of them, while other magical acts were made up in order to more easily construct a religion around his incarnation. He also had a "twin brother" according to some records, who was not really his twin, but step-brother, ENLIL. And yes, Jesus got married and this "new" bloodline still exists today within the Global Elite. ENKI did not die on the cross, but was most possibly swapped with somebody else, while ENKI himself, in this incarnation, went to Europe and much later died somewhere in Tibet. So that part of the story, told in the book, "Holy Blood, Holy Grail" is true, although the authors never made the connection to ENKI (or it was purposely withheld). At this point, I am not even so sure that the Sirian Overlords mind if I mention the ENKI/Jesus story, because now when the Age of Aquarius is starting, ENKI is returning, and I believe that at that time the true Jesus story (or a version of it) will be told to us, because it fits the Agenda.

Indeed, the Ashtar Command, in addition to being a peace-bringing universal force (according to channeled material), is also the "Servants of the Most Radiant One", which is the Christ, or Lord

Sananda. They are also, interestingly enough, "the midwives in the birthing of humanity from dense-physical to physical-etheric bodies of light, capable of ascending into the fifth dimension along with the Earth."<sup>[33]</sup> So, here is another armada, apparently consisting of millions of spaceships, helping us in our ascension/Harvest process. And who said we are alone in the universe? Well, much of this is figuratively speaking, because the Alliance wants us to have the key parts of the story together regardless of whom we are listening to -- the RA Material or Ashtar-Athena. They want us to know that there will be a Harvest (and it will), and it's all for the good. However, in their minds, we humans are too dumb and foolish to manage that process ourselves, so these ever-so-kind beings have even prepared new bodies for us. Of course, they are not telling us that these new bodies will also, just like our 3D bodies, contain the holographic implant of a 4% universe. To the Sirians it is very important that we believe in their story of the Harvest, so they can provide us with the correct kind of bodies, because if we do our ascension process all by ourselves, lo and behold! we may end up in bodies that don't contain the implants and holographic images, with most of our DNA intact!

But it's getting better:

"A major focus at this time is the activation of the collective Messiah, the 144,000 ascended masters (referred to as Eagles within the Command) who form the Legion of Special Volunteers. These are the star-seeded emissaries from the Office of the Christ, through the interstellar Councils of Light, here on earth assignment. Their awakening is crucial to the transition of the planet.

Hence, we and our earth-based representatives are here to facilitate the awakening of the Eagles and other Light servers. Our mission administers the sacred ordinances of the Lord God Most High and functions through the Elohim, the Councils of Orion, the Great Central Sun hierarchy and Order of Melchizedek."<sup>[34]</sup>

Once again we hear about the 144,000. It's mentioned in the Bible, and they want us to really have that figure in our heads. In relation to previous material I have presented, I think it's fairly easy for the reader to interpret the above quote by "Adonia". Just like I have done in the Level III papers, they want people to eventually put the pieces together, hoping they have done a good job enough for us "dummies" to "get it". With "get it" they mean getting their dumbed-down version, which teaches that it's all benevolent, and that we shouldn't fear if millions of souls are coming to Earth and help us out in the "dressing rooms" to make sure our new bodies fit. "Oh, a little too much fat at the waist? Sure, we'll just adjust your light-body a little bit!"

The Ashtar Command channeling is the source which is really promoting the Second Coming of ENKI/Christ with full blast. They go on and on about how wonderful it's going to be. They also mention that all true, spiritual teachers or avatars represent a multidimensional collective, focalized and extended through "The Office of the Christ". This office is anchored as a Trinity, and it's currently held by Lord Jesus, Lord Moses and Lord Elijah. (Amen). They even say that the pedophilic guru, Sai Baba, has ascended to Cosmic Christhood and also Father-Mother Godhood "as an extremely rare full avatar, known as the Kalkhi Avatar or tenth incarnation of Lord Vishnu."<sup>[35]</sup> Wonderful! Another sex-fixated Sirian Lord ascending to the Heavens!

The Ashtar Command makes sure we understand that the 144,000 is not a limit of how many will ascend to the 5th Dimension. Of course not, we have 220 million intruders on their way, more than willing to possess whomever they wish. But first they must have the permission, something they already have by now, many times over. Not from 220 million humans, but from those who we've put in Office to represent us. This is well hidden in seemingly super-benevolent messages like this:

"We abide strictly within Confederation policy of noninterference with free will. While we may point out the possible consequences of some of your choices of action, we allow you to live, express and govern your lives and planet as you choose. The only exception would be if your actions could jeopardize survival of your planet and populations a whole or have repercussions throughout the rest of the solar system. We are, however, always available to respond to your specific requests for assistance. We are enthusiastic about joining with you in more conscious interaction and co-creative endeavor."<sup>[36]</sup>

"Requests for assistance" and "joining with you in more conscious interaction and co-creative endeavor" certainly have double-meanings. Say that they want to intrude. They already have the permission, so they are not breaking the Confederation policy of noninterference. The interaction they are talking about sounds like a cozy thing, but if you think about it in regards to possession, that part of the quote has its second meaning, for sure.

When we continue researching this source, they too recognize only one race, "the race of humanity -- heavenly Universal Man." But overall, they are doing a good job presenting a pretty positive picture of themselves, although one give-away that they often use is UTU SMAMASH's Winged Sun Disc as their logo, and they don't hide their connection with Sirius, because they want to put Sirius in a benevolent light.

On the following website, where they are channeling Ashtar Sheran (another name for Commander Ashtar), the following is revealed about the Ashtar mission:

"The Ashtar Command has a multifaceted mission. The first mission is to assist the transformation of humanity and planet Earth from the present third/fourth dimension to the fifth dimension and Earth's seventh Golden Age. The second mission is to maintain the stability of the Earth's polar axis and continually monitor its magnetic field. The third mission is that The Ashtar Command is prepared, if necessary, to evacuate the planet and relocate the total population in the event of a natural catastrophe. The fourth mission is the return to Earth of the Christ and other Lords of Light. The fifth mission is to bring planet Earth into the United Confederation of Planets."[\[37\]](#)

This sounds very familiar, of course, and seems to be almost a common mission statement for all these channeled sources that have anything to do with the Harvest. And we know of the Confederation of Planets from the RA Material, and it's covered in this paper (see subsection iii.iv.). According to RA, we have to be a social memory complex before we can apply for membership to the Confederation, so does this mean that Ashtar and Lord ENKI want to create a collective consciousness of mankind? Yes, why not? If you were them, wouldn't that be a great plan? If we're all One Mind, although separated in bodies and souls, we could very easily be manipulated into doing exactly what the Overlords want us to do without any protests. Once the "One Mind" has agreed, it's a done deal. Isn't that what the Machine Kingdom in its extension is all about, anyway?

I have often mentioned that the Sirian Alliance has as its main goal to take over the Goddess' role as the One Creator. The Queen of the Stars is related to Orion. Orion is the star constellation, and it's those related to the word Orion that the Sirians want us to concentrate on as our main enemies. Every now and then they give a hint. So also Ashtar:

"Many of the Ashtar Command walk among us on our streets on Earth without us even being aware of it. The Ashtar Command serves in a certain sense as heaven's policemen, there are actually six planets in the Orion system, and a group called the Deros, from inner space, that have had to be cordoned off so beware of anything to do with the Orion Nebula."[\[38\]](#)

It looks like here they are referring to the old battles that took place around 500,000 years ago, when the Sirian Alliance landed on Earth and defeated the Orions who were here at the time. I described that in detail in Level II.

On almost all websites that are talking about, or are channeling the Ashtar Command, they say that Ashtar is working in tight connection with the Arcturians. We are manipulated to believe that the Arcturians are non-physical, or interdimensional beings of light, who are very benevolent, and if there are any allies of mankind, it would be them. But of course, the rabbit hole goes deep. Most people I know think the Arcturians are our allies, but then again, how could they, if they work with the Ashtar Command? I also clearly recall that Michael Lee Hill, who says he is in contact with the Sirians (and I doubt it not), also has a highly evolved Arcturian friend, who supports his Sirian connection. Well, things are coming together.

Before we move on, I want to add that the Federation the Ashtar Command works for goes under many names. One of those we already know as the Confederation of Planets. Another one is the Galactic Federation of Light. These are one and the same. Almost every truthseeker is familiar with the Galactic Federation of Light, and they either think it's good, or it's bad. Many also know they are connected with the Ashtar Command, and then it depends of what they think of Ashtar. There is no doubt, however, that the GFL (common abbreviation of the Galactic Federation of Light) is connected with the Sirians.

A lady who signs off as "Mary Lou" is right on the ball. She says on her website:

"The Galactic Federation and an Earth Cataclysm

On Sunday, June 6, 2010, Dennis Whitney, author of a blog called Strange Planet, posted an entry titled, "Who Is This Galactic Federation of Light? And When Will They Intervene, If They Really Do Exist?"

Dennis seems convinced that the Galactic Federation [the GL has recently added "of Light" to their name] is genuinely concerned about the human race and that they're standing by to help in case of a catastrophic emergency [most likely one that they would like to create].

If you read Dennis' blog, particularly the section that contains a message from the Ashtar Command, you'll learn that in the event of an Earth cataclysm, the GL wants to "levitate" humans to their small ships that will then act as taxis to and from their larger ships. Fortunately, there are enough people saying Prayers at Sun Events in advance of a GL-planned cataclysm that this is not going to happen.

Mary Jo "[39]"

The link Mary Jo is providing is dead, but her statement says it all. Why do you think they come in 20 million ships? Didn't Abraxas say in the Gaia thread that each human who is getting harvested is going to get their own spaceship? She did! But why and for what purpose? They have not told us that. However, from what we already know, we can make a qualified guess. Why do some of these channeled sources say that the transmission to the 5th Dimension will happen here and "now", meaning before the person is dead and enters the astral? And that there will be earthquakes and catastrophes for those who stay behind? This is possibly the reason why some say that the ones who qualify will be "levitated" in spaceships, and that there will be little hope for many of those who stay behind. However, if that is what's going to happen, it's going to be staged. It's not going to be natural!

Regardless of what is coming down, it's important that we're "going up", so to speak. We need to really work on our own energy fields so we are not available for this kind of nonsense -- none of it. People need to realize that we can do it and that it's no fairytale! These things can be simulated in labs. If something vibrates fast enough, it's going to be invisible in relation to what is vibrating slower. And it may sound unbelievable, but the difference in vibrations between those who are not spiritual at all and those who are, is way apart! It's just hard to imagine because we can't see it with our naked eyes, but we can feel it.

Personally, I'm not an oracle, a prophet, or a fortune teller, but I have intuition, and I am learning to think and feel with my heart chakra, getting better and better at it. This has helped me a lot over the years, and what I feel in regards to this is that there will be a splitting of worlds. Of all the research I've done on this, that's what definitely feels like the correct thing. And not only does it feel right, it's also how the energetic Multiverse works. It's a natural process. Of course, that process can be interrupted by malevolent forces, such as the Sirians, if they want that to happen, but knowing their tactics fairly well (they are more predictable than they may think), all it is is fear mongering, which they feed on. They need people to serve them, and they need the Machine Kingdom to become reality. That is what they really aim for. Also remember that the Sirians' hands are tied, too, in certain ways. They have to restrict themselves to following the Law of Free Will, and that's why they are really afraid we're going to see through their manipulation. Because when that's done, and if we need help to run them off, there are benevolent forces that will see to that it will happen. There are many out there who are just waiting for the Sirians to make a mistake so they can run them off. It was easy to take over the planet once upon a time when those who lived here were unprepared, but the situation is different now.

The Sirians want to spread confusion, because that's how they can keep people from knowing what's really going on. A perfect example is the following link, <http://www.galacticfederationoflight.info/>, which is the Galactic Federation of Light's website. The headline says: "Galactic Federation of Light Ashtar Command, Worldwide Disclosure 2012!" Underneath it says there is supposed to be a mass landing and a disclosure before 2012 is over (this was written before 2012, obviously). The GFL and the Ashtar Command were supposed to come down and pick people up, and we all know that that didn't happen. But the page is still up, and that's not by accident. They want to confuse us out of necessity.

Still from the GFL's website; here is their Sirian connection clearly documented. They are also promoting Sheldon Nidle, who is an obvious disinfo agent.

"I am SaLuSa from Sirius, and tell you that our ships are gathering for the grand announcement that will allow us to land on your Earth by invitation."

- SaLuSa / through Mike Quinsey 20th July 2011"<sup>[40]</sup>

So, Mike Quinsey is promoting SaLuSa from Sirius, and Dr. Michael Salla, known exopolitical researcher, embraces Mike Quinsey, so what do we make out of that? Who can we trust? And here is another lie the GFL has spread:

"Then there was a flurry of bold maneuvers this summer which terminated the existence of many dark-run underground facilities and their access tunnels. These actions led to the arrest of tens of thousands of dark subordinates."[\[41\]](#)

Of course there were no mass arrests, but who else was spreading similar lies last year? Benjamin Fulford and David Wilcock. Although, to be honest, I believe David is genuine, even though I don't agree with much of what he's teaching, but Fulford knows exactly what he's doing -- spreading disinfo. He was talking about Global Elite mass arrests until his face went blue, and he called up one witness after the other; one less credible than the other. He gave date after date and nothing happened, and still people continued listening both to him and Wilcock, who tirelessly parroted Fulford, word by word, on his Divine Cosmos website. Now we get a hint on whom Fulford is working for.

The New Age term "light-workers" also stems from the Galactic Federation of Light, and is therefore a term I avoid in my own research. I do not like to be called a light-worker, because I am not associated with GFL.

IV. Afterword

The reader may think; why is all this so negative? Where are the good ones, and how come that all these federations and councils seem to be working against us? The answer is quick and simple: we are stuck in what I call a 4% universe, and therefore, what is affecting us is the 4% universe. It's because this is where we perceive that we're living. This 4% universe is set up by malevolent forces, so therefore what we need to learn first is often of a malevolent nature. The 4% universe is heavily controlled with hologrammic equipment. Think the "Matrix Series". If people would only understand how much truth there is in those movies!

It is quite clear to me by now that the 4% universe is all about humans in different stages of development. The oppressors knew that mankind was going to evolve; it's such a natural state of being that they can't really stop that process. So ENKI and his cohorts had to think out a universe where even those who evolve stay trapped. Of course, he knows how dimensions and densities work in the "real" universe, so he just had to mimic that and program it into the "software", which is the human body.

The hardware are the hologrammic computer systems which keep it all in place. Hence, we ended up with eight dimensions within which we are free to evolve, similar to how it would look like in the 96% universe. The whole difference, however, is that in the 4%, everything is controlled.

So how come there are only humans in the 4% universe? It's because it's the human template -- the human DNA -- that is trapped! It's humanity as a whole and no one else. The universe outside the trap is teeming with life in all shapes and forms, but in the free universe you are also free to travel across the dimensions. Evolution in the 96%, from what I understand, is mostly a process of learning about oneself. By learning about oneself in the free universe we can create so much more, and it becomes a universe of magic! Yes, there are stars and galaxies and all the rest of it in the 96% as well -- that's the "hardware" -- but by living as a spiritual being in that hardware universe you are absolutely free to create anything and travel instantly wherever you want. The only restriction is your own imagination! That is why art in all its forms is considered so valuable here; people have this feeling that we can create universes with it, and we can!

The 4% universe has its timelines, and humans have evolved on several of them. Some became non-physicals, who can travel the dimensions, using stargates and star-lanes, and others became the Grays. Not all beings in the 4% need spaceships to travel; some actually seem to have developed nano-travel, but only within the 4%. Like Abraxas says, you can't get to the 9th Dimension without permission. And who is giving us that permission? Well, we already know the answer to that. However, this is all based on restrictions built into, and strands taken away from, our DNA, now lying dormant. This is why those who decide to evolve without help from Sirian technology, and who have seen through the veil of manipulation, can reshape their whole RNA/DNA structure and no longer be stuck in the hologram. This is what I am talking about. Those who decide to take this route don't have to go through lifetimes after lifetimes of being stuck in a restricted universe that is controlled; we can do it by reconstructing our light-body, using our Fire. See the trap for what it is and the trap will eventually disappear, because it's held in place by frequency. Supersede that frequency band and you're out of here!

In elementary school we learnt about the electromagnetic spectrum. A tiny bit of it is visible, but most of it is not. We are stuck in the visible spectrum, which is the 4% universe. Increase your vibration until you start perceiving things outside this tiny piece of spectrum and you are breaking down the prison walls. If you're reading this, you are already well on your way of doing that! Oh, but you are not feeling very psychic? Don't worry, you will. In fact, you already are psychic, but it takes more to shatter the Quarantine, the Grid, and all the rest of it, before you can really break through. Some people have become quite psychic over the last few years, but those who feel they have not, although they've been working at least as hard on it, need not to worry. For you it will eventually come in "bigger chunks", once you let go. Again, do not worry -- it will happen if you consistently keep doing what you're doing to raise your frequency. You are not "behind" in your development because you are not as psychic as your friend. No comparison between us is necessary and should be avoided; every one of us needs to work on ourselves and everything will be just fine.

Out there in the 96% universe our friends are waiting. All those who are monitoring our progress now and at the same time are benevolent and really love mankind are doing so, not from the 4% as much as from the 96%. Everybody in the 4% universe has an agenda whether they are benevolent beings or not. In a prison, everybody's agenda is to get out. The Multiverse, however, is benevolent and loving; the restricted 4% universe is not. A million words can be spent on talking about the "real" universe, but I believe no one can make it justice. Imagine a universe where you can create freely without having some government or organization telling you to stop doing it. The reader gets the drift,

I'm sure, and can see the difference between enslavement and freedom, as much as it is possible to see it from our restricted perspective.

Those who tell you that we need to evolve so we can join this or that Galactic Federation of Council are either trying to manipulate you, or they are themselves deceived. The federations they are talking about exist in the 4% universe, and we should have no interest in joining any of them. This is why I like the Pleiadians. They don't tell you about the 4% vs. the 96% universe, but they answer people's questions insightfully so we can really gain from the reply and comments that often follow, once they have our permission to talk about it. They know what this is all about, and as I am researching it on my own, I ever so often get things that the Pleiadians have said verified. Over and over, this is happening. They, too, don't want us to join any of these space organizations, because they obviously know they are not in our best interest.

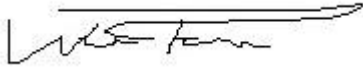

Our job, if we really want to break out, is to work on ourselves and get to the KHAA. It will happen on a one on one basis and rarely in a group. We have to earn it from hard work -- that's the only way. But once we've mastered it, there are beings on the other side who will be extremely happy to see us -- each and every one of us. This I can confirm!

But is the 96% really such a Paradise all the time? No, it's not. There are warlike beings there, too, because you are free to create what you want, but you have the freedom not to mingle with them. No one is going to draft you; if you go to war, it's your own choice.

So, no Galactic Federation for us; we don't need them, and they will drag us down into the rabbit hole again. No, thank you! We are on our own with lots of benevolent beings watching over us, and "being on our own" in the evolving process is actually not a bad thing. You are the only one who knows what is best for you, anyway. How can somebody else tell you? You are a unique being after all, in an intelligent cosmos. Use what you have and you will notice that you have more than you could imagine even in your wildest dreams. It's not that we have to work to get to a state of being of some star races, either. Our state of being is already divine and magnificent. Other star races are jealous, but the benevolent ones are jealous in a "good way". We just need to see the light at the end of the tunnel, and I'm not talking about the astral light between lives...

[Last note: There are certain federations and councils I have not brought up here because of space issues. I meant to mention The Guardian Alliance, for example, who are data streamed by A'shayana Deane, but decided not to. Her information is too complicated to even start getting into in a paper like this. I honestly do not know who the Guardian Alliance are, as they seem to be in conflict with the Thuban Council, but it could be because there are different factions within the Sirian Alliance as well, who don't totally agree with each other. However, after have read the "Voyagers" books, I do not have a good feeling about any of it. It is extremely fear-based and technical, and thus very hard to understand for the average person who is not highly educated in quantum physics etc. The information also often contradicts everything you learn elsewhere. The reader is of course free to have their own opinion about the Guardians, but mine is that they are definitely not working in our favor.]

Love,

Wes Penre

[1] The Thubans mention Sirius a lot, and want to push that the Sirians are our friends, by pushing that the dogs are the manifestation of Sirian on Earth, and that the first stargate will be opened between Sirian and our Sun. This stargate is most probably already open.

Paper #9: The Splitting of the Worlds Part 1: The Machine Kingdom

by Wes Penre, Friday, April 5, 2013

I. A General Look Ahead: 2013-2034

Right now, in the aftermath of the nano-second, it seems like things have already started to slow down; almost like the "battle is over". The chaos and tumultuous time many of us experienced, especially at the end of the nano, looks like it has ended, and time is slowing down as well. All the above is at least what I am experiencing at the moment. I hadn't expected this, thinking that the train running out of control needed some time to turn on the brakes and actually adjust its speed back to normal. Instead, it's like someone stood on the brakes and it happened almost instantly.

However, I know that this is not going to last, so if the reader feels similar to what I do, enjoy it, because in just a few years, things are probably about to change. We are just getting some breathing room now and a chance to recover. I would suggest that we all take a look at what we gained during the nano-second and make sure we start living what we've learned. Soon, there's not going to be any time to reflect and look at old notes to know what to do. Instead, we have to already live it, and hopefully it's now a part of the reader's reality and daily life. This is my hope, because we will need our increased vibrations, our calm, and our ability to separate ourselves from situations that will not benefit us. All this has to be a part of your very personality, and I trust it is. You now have some great knowledge that it will take the rest of humanity a very long time to catch up on (and the majority will never get to know it, unfortunately).

In just a few years, around 2015 or so, things will probably start getting tumultuous again. Now, after the nano, it's very difficult for people to keep dirty secrets anymore. The vibration of the planet has indeed changed, and we are still, as a humanity, working out in which direction we want to go; even the Powers That Be are pondering exactly what to do, because they had no way of predicting exactly what would happen during the nano. Another big factor is that star beings from the Sirian Alliance have almost certainly already entered the bodies of many politicians, business leaders, religious leaders etc., and many things are to be adjusted. The real invasion, coming with the Superwave, is still to be expected, but those who were already here must by now have begun to enter our 3rd Dimension as walk-ins where they see fit.

In the field of politics, not all politicians are going to be possessed by Sirian spirits, and some of them will be reluctant to the change that the new leadership will implement on us all, including the politicians that are not taken over. They will protest and try to prevent those changes from happening. These "obstacles" in the Sirian plans will be "taken care of", mostly by having their dirty laundry hung out in public. Most possibly, a lot of pedophilia, bribery, gambling with, and stealing, our tax money, and other serious crimes will be revealed in high places; much more so than has already happened. Remember when you read and hear about it, that most of these officials are being sacrificed because they can't adjust, or are doing or saying something that goes against the present or future Agendas.

When this starts to happen on a grand scale, people will get very shocked and very angry. Few can't even in their wildest imagination picture what kind of crimes are committed behind the scenes. Some people will protest loudly and perhaps walk out in the streets in droves, trying to make a change, not understanding that this is useless. No change will come out of that, and our rage and emotions will give our extraterrestrial foes something more to feed from. Eventually, however, it may look like those in power are cleaning house by firing and prosecuting those whom they have decided to sacrifice. A new era, new policies.

For a while it may look like the economy is on the rise, but the U.S. debt, and that of many other countries as well, are beyond recovery. There is no way the dollar can be saved in the long run. First of all, they are going to save money where they can, just like they do now, and more and more people will be unemployed. One of the few affluent businesses seems to be the war industry, which always needs people, and more so in the future.

The bad economy will be one of the justification to continue building the Machine Kingdom. New technology will hit the market in super-speed, and it will be almost impossible to catch up with the technological development. We will see very advanced devices become smaller and smaller, and more and more efficient. Many people will love them, and the goal is to make these devices available to as many people as possible, in spite of the bad economy. Therefore, they are eventually going to make them fairly cheap so most people can buy them; just like almost every household today has at least one or two computers. When they spoke about having personal computers in every home more than 30 years ago, people were laughing at such a utopic idea. Now we know better.

The Machine Kingdom is going to creep up on us, and few are those who are going to notice. Even many of us who are "in the know" are going to go along with this as well, not realizing how it's creeping up on us. Sooner or later, those who don't notice at first probably will later and get a shock how they once again could be so deceived. But for those who don't know any of what is planned, there will be a very strange future, indeed. In the beginning they will think it's great and quite convenient. While this technology is building, the financial situation will eventually be resolved by most probably combine all currencies into one and flush the dollar down the drain, figuratively speaking. Most countries will eventually go along with this, and there will be a recovery. It's like starting from scratch. There may be other solutions that I'm not aware of, but of course, a resolution will dawn on us eventually, because it's needed when all the pieces that the Overlords want in place before they solve the financial problem, are laid out to their satisfaction.

So, 2015-17 are most likely to be years when things are stirred up. But why these dates? It's based on astrology and the potential realities that are available to us at the moment. Just like the Pleiadians were the ones who coined the term "nano-second" and were right on the ball (or maybe I should say "right on the Bull", which will be a Pleiadian joke, them being from the constellation of Taurus, the "Bull"). These last 25 years have been just like they have predicted, with a few minor details being off due to the unpredictability of mankind that couldn't have been foreseen. These years I am now giving you, however, are based on their astrological calculations, which usually also normally have showed to be quite correct, but if it doesn't happen exactly when predicted, I am sure it will not be too far off. Then, again based on Pleiadian interpretation of astrology, it will be quite tough for many people who haven't prepared themselves spiritually and mentally from thereon and until around 2028, when things seem to stabilize again and we reach some kind of "zero point" from where timelines can really start to branch out.

The Pleiadians say that something like a Machine Kingdom could be pretty much in place around 2034, and it's based to some degree on the research and development within today's drug industry; and we're talking about legal drugs here. The pharmaceutical drugs we're taking are often made specifically to alter our DNA. Nano-technology is quite well established already. Particularly psychiatric drugs have nanobots in them that can alter the user on a genetic level and create a cyborg over time.

I don't know when the Superwave will reach us, although the Andromedans mentioned December 2013. If this is the case, the Pleiadians' predictions will be off. The Pleiadians have not mentioned any dates, other than there will be a Harvest coming up in the near future as the old age docks with the new. Others, like the WingMakers website, is talking about a "Grand Portal", which will be discovered in 2080. When I read about that particular event, I can't help but thinking that it is a cover story for the invasion. So perhaps he has that date correct, who knows?

The Pleiadians don't talk too much about the Harvest, other than that there are benevolent and not-at-all-benevolent beings involved in that process. With this they mean, from what I've been able to interpret, that there are actually those who are here to help us with the Harvest, and they are the original Founders of this planet, who are returning to see how we're doing. Not that they don't know -- they are keeping themselves informed -- but if this is true, what are they going to do? The Pleiadians themselves are not very keen on the Harvest in the way it's presented, and knowing them, the only "help" we would receive, if the original Founders are actually coming back, is as a support to support ourselves. Then again, knowing the Orions from extensive research, I doubt they are returning as long as the Sirians are here and we humans have not made up our minds how to unite in some kind of unified goal. The Orions, who are the Original Founders, will not interfere at all unless we as a species ask them to. Otherwise, they know from experience that we humans would see them as enemies. We are still too ignorant to understand who our friends are and who our foes are.

What I think the Pleiadians got right is the fact that there are quite a few star races mingling with us here on Mother Earth at this time, aside from the Sirian Alliance. And more than that; beings who have long lived underground have been spotted in caves, caverns, on mountainsides, and coming up from the waters.

There is also an Intelligence program run by the Global Elite to educate people on the ET issue to prepare us for things to come. We see a lot of History Channel documentaries regarding ETs and the ancient history about the "gods" who came down from Heaven. Of course, it's the simplified version that people's neurology can handle without freaking out, so it's the "soft version" we are getting right now. Science fiction movies are made, however, which are presenting a more realistic version of what this is all about. So it is coming out in the public, little by little, because they do want to prepare us. The ET issue is the next big thing we need to learn to cope with; we need to integrate it into our daily reality, just like we understand that the dinosaurs were real once upon a time, regardless of how huge and scary some of them looked. Still, forget about a big government disclosure in a manner that Steven Greer and others are promoting that it will happen -- it will not! And if it looks like it is, it's going to be fabricated and deceptive. Don't fall for it! The truth as it is will never be revealed in public by our "elected" Representatives. That would be suicide for them, because they have their gotten their hands way too dirty for that.

Anyway, back to the nano. To the reader: we are a whole lot wiser now than we were only 5-10 years ago, wouldn't you agree? Configure your own space and local universe exactly the way you want it, and then be a spectator for a while. Just make sure not to interact with any of that which must expose itself and do its thing. It's the sign of the times and must be played out before things can stabilize themselves. Let's look at it from a perspective of curiosity and even joy. The more we can relax, the better off we'll be. But of course, keep the antenna up and the bullshit detector on high. We have done well using our discernment so far, because we're all here, ready to complete whatever we're here for. So let us continue like we have. The Machine Kingdom will play out; there's no way around that either; and we will see it happen before our eyes. Now we have to use our brilliance that we all possess and cruise smartly through the upcoming years. That way we can effectively avoid the booby traps that are laid out for us, because we know where they are. The future will be everything from people who 100% embrace the Machine Kingdom to those who do not want to have anything to do with technology at all and will move out in nature, far from the SmartCities that are going to be built and constructed out of the old cities and metropolitans, and there will be everything in between. What will you do to make sure you do the correct thing? I would say, go with the flow and make smart decisions. If you want to go out and live isolated in nature, perhaps together with a group and plant your own food, go for it! Or, if you feel safe and stable where you are at the moment and think you can see the stability continue even in the future, you don't necessarily need to change anything. One thing, however, that is very important, is that we all in one way or other connect more with Mother Nature. If people understood who Mother Earth is, they would go out and kiss the ground in pure joy. Think about it; why are pagans celebrating her as the Goddess?

II. The New SmartCities

Many people are asking me why the Sirian Overlords who took over the stewardship over Earth half a million years ago and created Homo sapiens didn't eventually take over the whole planet and moved in once and for all?

That's a good question until we understand that they are not of the same frequency we are -- they are interdimensional, who basically have access to both our own eight dimensions of the 4% universe, and some of those of the lower sections of the KHAA. They didn't feel comfortable here after they had decreased the vibration of this version of Mother Earth. So, why do they want to come in now in droves, and perhaps stay here for a long time? What has changed? The answer is that they want to rule us from the New Earth, where she once again has raised her frequency with help from her Higher Self, the Galactic Center. The nano-second was also Mother Earth's chance to break her chains and regain a frequency she had once upon a time, before the invader force came. The Sun is sending messages to the Galactic Center -- the Womb of the Mother, the Birth Center -- and the Galactic Center is sending messages back to the Sun, who is then sending those messages to Mother Earth. It's a process from which Earth Mother gains and can recapture her old strength. The Overlords know this very well and they are not strong enough, and don't have the technology, to counter these enormous jolts of energy, hitting Earth in form of solar flares and by other, for us more invisible spectra. We humans are the Earth Children, and it is our job to help our Mother ascending. We, too, are taking on those jolts in our bodies and need to do that without being fried or getting our neurological system totally out of whack. We want to help our Mother, but also evolve together with her. This is also her wish, because we are her special children. The Sirian Elite have had a few choices to accomplish their goals; they can do walk-ins in order to control these new, enhanced bodies, which have their DNA and chakras opened and their Fire enhanced. This they have done a lot recently. Another option is to create hybrids that are not naturally evolved through the above process, but created by genetic manipulation to fit into the new frequency range. These hybrids have been created and are still being created as we speak, for millions of intruders to take over.

No one went through the nano-second without changing their perceptions -- no one did! However, the majority of people decided, in their usual manner, to suppress their new abilities, blaming them on something else, telling themselves they can't exist, and then they try to go on with their lives just like before. This is not totally possible any longer, and those who suppress their own divine selves are the ones who are prospects for the new Machine Kingdom, where they can escape from their new abilities into the technological world which is emerging in front of their stunning eyes. These are the Machine Riders. They are the ones who will despise those who raise their consciousness naturally, because they themselves were too afraid to do it. I am not judging that, I'm just stating a fact. The Machine Riders will do anything to get the newest updates and dig deeper into the technological world and all cool things that happen in the SmartCities -- the giant metropolitans that will be built around the world; metropolitans that will make cities like Tokyo and New York like suburbs. In the SmartCities everything goes; you can buy anything for money. Why care for a partner? It's a lot of work. If you can't afford a robot as a partner, with whom you can have sex anytime and boss around like you wish, you can always go to a "smart prostitute"; a female or male robot who looks like something from your wildest dreams. They will be the sexiest being you'll ever see! The only problem is that they are machines, not humans. But no, that is not a problem; that's actually the solution! These robots don't have souls and are not conscious like you and I; they are programmed to respond to your every wish and sexual desire. You can do what you want, pay for it, and go away without having a bad conscience, because it was just a machine anyway.

III. "We Are Your Ancestors and Friends!"

We know from previous papers that the Gray phenomenon is a pretty complex subject. There is not one answer to the Gray complex. Some of them were kidnapped from the Zeta Reticuli system after they had developed in the Vega system, and the kidnapping was executed by the Sirians. These Grays became slaves and front figures for the Sirian Overlords, who noticed they did great in space and could make long distant space travelling and prevail. Their bodies had adapted well to radiation due to their planetary history and could therefore survive the otherwise harsh conditions in space. At the same time they didn't need much food, and their intake was different from other sentient beings. The Sirians noticed all this and started making hybrids out of them that they could use themselves. They figured out that they could leave their original bodies in a sleep state at home and let their souls jump over to the Gray hybrid body with help from technology. Now they had the perfect space suit, looking a tiny bit different from the original Zeta Grays, because they were hybrids, but that was beneficial for them as it was easier to distinguish who was Sirian and who was an original Gray, I can imagine. Keep in mind that this was before Earth was invaded, so there was no "4% universe", and therefore, not all beings dwelling in a universe teeming with life were human in nature.

Another type of Grays are us in the future, and they do dwell in the 4%, just like us. They will develop here on Earth in the future (and are actually being tested in space as we speak) and are the ones who come back from our future, trying to regain what they lost in the process. So these Grays have their own agenda, as we talked about before, and most of those who come back to our time, and who are basically not from too far in the future, are the most ruthless ones, because they are desperate and less evolved. Then there are those who are further away into the future and sometimes are more compassionate, like the Essassani Grays from beyond Orion. They, too, of course have their own agenda which is not compatible with ours, but there are those among them who don't like what's done to us humans during the abductions and try to prevent it. However, they are not always successful.

Then there are apparently Grays from other galaxies visiting us as well, such as the Verdants. They differ from the Grays we are used to encounter, because apparently they have a greenish (verdant) skin instead of gray, white, or brown. These beings, if we are to believe George LoBuono and Philip Krapf[1], who first started talking about this species, are conquerors and could be bad news for us -- more so according to LoBuono than Krapf, as it were.

Anyway, it's already confusing, but will be even more so in the near future when all these different types of Grays (or many of them) will show up. We can easily see how Harone, who channeled through Lyssa Royale and is a Zeta Gray, when he was trying to "comfort" us by saying there will be no invasion, he was truly manipulating us. What he said was that there can't even be an invasion, because that means that we humans are invading ourselves (referring to that all beings in this universe are humans)[2]. This, of course, is a clever way to justify their own presence on Earth.

The Grays, in all instances, except when the Sirians are using their template as space suits, are Social Memory Complexes (SMC) and Collective Consciousness. I don't think all the channeled entities who say they are SMC are Grays, however, because some of them are not even physical anymore, and others are probably hybrids of other branches of humanity, on other timelines, but they do have one thing in common; they are SMC. Moreover, these channeled sources are doing their best to convince us that we should work on ourselves so we can ascend and eventually become SMC as well.

But why is that? If these future humans actually want to regain the human abilities that they once had (our abilities), why do they want us to evolve to become like them? We would think they'd rather see us keep our individuality and evolve as unique and separate beings, right? The answer must be manipulation. We must never forget that those entities, the time jumpers from the future, have been heavily brainwashed and manipulated by their masters, the Sirian Overlords. And their masters have taught them that the way to evolve in this universe is to become an SMC. To us it may not make sense, because we haven't yet come to the point when this will be an issue. Hence, we still think in terms of individuality.

I know that we've learned from the Law of One (such as the RA Material) that we are all working towards becoming one with Source (God), and that is our main goal. I object to that! In all honesty, I fell for this as well in the past when I first read the RA Material and thought it was great! I still think it's a good source of information, and I learned a lot from it, but it's biased because they are still caught in the 4% universe and they don't understand that. There are basic concepts that the RA people have incorrect, and therefore it affects the information as a whole, and we need to use good discernment when we read the Law of One books. Since the beginning of 2009, when I first came in contact with RA because of the Hidden Hand material, I have done excessive research into many fields, and my conclusion about humanity's goals, our purposes, where we're heading, and all that comes with it has changed quite drastically, as the reader may have noticed. I no longer subscribe to that we are working on becoming one (and thus a Social Memory Complex). We are here to explore the universe as individual versions of the Goddess energy, not as a group where all are One and have a various kind of collective thinking. The big difference between a collective group like that and separate beings like us is that the group agrees with each other, and if there are a few who don't agree with the rest, they will change their minds and give into the majority, because "the group is more important than the individual". This may be true under some circumstances, but is dangerous if made into a rule. If we become an SMC, individual thinking will be something of the past; you always have to bow down to the majority's decisions and the majority's view on things. This sounds like complete torture to me and doesn't even make sense. Here is a whole memory complex thinking one thing about something, instead of having millions of beings -- perhaps billions -- who could instead think individually and contribute so much more to the learning process. And in the extension of things, the Goddess, who created the universes in order to learn more about herself from an outside perspective, will learn more and quicker from individual thinking. One day, perhaps, our purpose will be to once again merge with the Goddess energy and go back from where we came, but that will be in a far distant future and nothing we even have to bother our minds with at this time (of course, on a multidimensional level it has already happened, as all time is simultaneous). We have more important issues to take care of.

It is definitely my understanding that in the KHAA, the goal is not to become SMC. This is just something that is coming out of the Machine Kingdom, because the Alliance wants an obedient army and an obedient class of slaves. It's obvious if we put ourselves in their shoes; wouldn't we do something similar if we were them and had the technology and power to do so? If we wanted complete power, the optimum would be to only have to deal with one mind and one will, which through manipulation would be one (Sirian) mind and one (Sirian) will, wouldn't you agree? I must add here, however, that an SMC is not completely one mind and one soul, but a Machine Society where each individual still can think independently to a certain degree, but is forced to comply with the standard way of thinking on relevant issues. This will be more obvious as we move on through the paper.

The simple but ingenious program the Overlords apparently are trying to set up here, and are well in the process of doing, is to first possess the pure bloodlines; foremost those of ENKI's, but all pure Sirian or Orion bloodlines would work, and those bloodlines are present in the Global Elite and the Royal Families. Many religious leaders, cult leaders, business moguls and international bankers have them, too. This stage of the plan is more or less completed, as far as I can see. The Global Elite as we know them are on a top level well aware of what is happening, and they are more than willing to sacrifice themselves to the gods, and to hand over their bodies to them. I would suggest that it will happen in two stages:

1) The Sirian Alliance will simply use their souls as walk-ins and either kick out the soul that's already in there (per agreement), or the original soul will be made to go to sleep. This possession will mainly happen with the powerful bloodlines that are the sons and the daughters, and the grandsons and the granddaughters of the old Rockefellers and Rothschilds etc. Perhaps also with the older ones, even if they are just on the brink to step into their graves (many are in the 90's, like David Rockefeller, George Bush Sr., and Henry Kissinger). (There are also much older bloodlines, like Hidden Hand was talking about. They are so hidden that we haven't even heard about them). The Sirians don't really care, they just jump bodies when the old one dies. As a matter of fact, that is how it's done already amongst human Elite. For example, when an old Rockefeller is getting close to the time when he will die, he or she makes sure there is a grand daughter or a grandson who will soon have a baby, and there is an agreement between the old Rockefeller and the young bloodline couple that the elder will reincarnate in that baby body. Then the older Rockefeller is timing when a soul normally is entering the fetus and then he or she lies down on the bed and consciously dies, or gets an injection or similar. Then, as soon as the spirit reaches the ether, she bypasses the between lives area and instead immediately starts hovering around the fetus and takes the new body when appropriate. A few months later, it's in the news that Rockefeller so and so has had a baby, which indeed is the recently deceased Rockefeller (the last part is of course not mentioned). However, it doesn't always work even for the Elite. Sometimes another soul out in the astral is stronger and/or faster, and takes the fetus before the old Rockefeller, perhaps because she wants to have a super-wealthy lifetime. So the old Rockefeller soul misses out. Often, the young couple with the baby recognize their grandfather, and when they see it's not the grandfather, something awful may happen to the baby and the couple are seen shedding crocodile tears in the tabloids and in the newspapers. However, they make sure they are soon pregnant again, and the second time, it usually works better, and mean old granddaddy becomes their son or daughter.

2) The young bloodline generations who are getting married and have children will make sure their babies' bodies will have a Sirian soul. Thus, these babies grow up, and no one knows they are only human in body, but not in spirit.

In the beginning it's just a matter of establishing themselves here on Earth and draw as little attention to themselves as possible. We may notice on occasion that a powerful person, who often shows him or herself on TV has a slightly different personality all of a sudden. We will see this in particular if it is a person whom we know well from the media. Other than that, policies, laws and all the rest of it will probably follow a similar pattern that they do now, because these recently possessed humans are waiting for their 220 million friends to come riding in on the Wave. Then, when the Wave has passed, and those who are ripe for Harvest are "tagged" for when they die and reach the astral, and everything else which will happen due to the Wave is over, the next step in the process will occur.

There are many secret societies today that are working on the "Second Coming" of the Christ. And I am not talking about the Christian version, although people will be quite confused at first over what is going on. We talked about the Ashtar Command and Lord Sananda, which may be the name Lord EA/ENKI will go by. We have already been prepared for his Second Coming in almost all religions (his first coming was as Jesus Christ). Everywhere, where astrology has any influence at all, the Age of Aquarius has been announced as the Age of EA, the "water-bearer", just like I presented him in Appendix II to Level II, which was basically an update on Michael Lee Hill. The Age of Pisces, which is just about to end, was the Age of Jesus, so in fact, EA will get two ages of worship -- at least!

All these secret societies I am talking about; whether they promote a new King or the Divine Feminine, have the same Grandmaster. It's not that the Divine Feminine is not the basic "religion", but it's being presented here, in our times, in a distorted form by certain secret societies. Hidden somewhere underground, arrived from the Pleiades, to where he fled when Atlantis was destroyed, perhaps even having a base under the ocean floor, like some people suggest, is Lord EA. There are indicators that he indeed has returned, and he may have been here for some time. His son MARDUK has probably, as LPG-C suggested, been here, ruling behind the scenes in his father's absence, more or less ever since they nuked Sodom and Gomorrah and Sinai Spaceport. Soon it is time for EA to brush off the dust from his cape and show himself to mankind. The moment when he will come as the Savior of mankind, as Lord Sananda, the Son of God, is coming closer. How will he present himself? I really don't know, but I don't think he will come in a cape, long Jesus-like hair, and a beard. I don't think he will look nearly as Jesus Christ is portrayed here in the west. It makes sense, however, that he comes as a spiritual leader and performs magical acts; fake and real. After all, the Orions are the inventors of magic.

What about the Anti-Christ? There is a chance the Alliance will play out that card too, or maybe not. In Level I I talked about the two factions of the Anunnaki (Sirians) -- the ENLIL clan (the RAM Clan) and the ENKI clan (The Serpent Clan). I believe this is a part of the big deception; they want us to believe that they are not united in their mission. Yes, there is infighting, but not on such a massive scale that they can't decide their common goal. EA and ENLIL may not be the most loving brothers in the universe, but they are working towards the same goal, and I don't think there is as much of a division as was presented by Sitchin and LPG-C. And MARDUK and his father, EA, are definitely on the same page. Remember when UTU contacted me? He said that now is the time for forgiveness. We need to forgive them, and they need to forgive us. He started promoting that we are one big family and without them we wouldn't exist, because they created us. Also, because of that, we are of the same flesh and blood and shouldn't fight or have any bad feelings towards each other.

That would have been just fine if he would have been honest. First of all, they didn't create us; we already existed. They only manipulated our DNA so we got trapped here; not a big deal, right? Not even worth mentioning, UTU. And why coming down here with soldiers and wipe out the Global Elite and those who have "suppressed us"? I told him what a disaster that would create. I think he hadn't expected that response. He didn't contact me after that, although he apparently kept an eye on me, according to A.R. Bordon.

So, are they coming down here to wipe out the Global Elite? No, I doubt it. I think he wanted to manipulate me, counting on that I would promote this invasion; especially after I'd posted this giant data base called illuminati News about the Global Elite. I did post his message, however, but with the disclaimer (<http://battleofearth.wordpress.com/2011/10/18/authentic-message-from-the-king-of-the-anunnaki-please-read/>). I don't think they had any serious plans to do it that way, but he wanted to have something on me for the future, so they can discredit me. I was aware afterwards that this may be the case, but in the light of what I've been exposing since then, I don't think they stand much of a chance in that sense.

Here is one possibility of how the Second Coming will play out: Like I've said, the invasion is a silent one. When time is right, Lord Sananda will return, perhaps together with Lord Ashtar, and Sananda will be presented as the Second Coming, whether he does it all himself, or he has a team behind him who does it for him so that it becomes more credible. Once he is accepted as the Messiah, he will preach forgiveness and hand out amnesty for the Global Elite and all those who have done evil. He will probably give them a chance to prove themselves. If they are serious in their redemption, they will be redeemed; if not, they will be killed, but the world will be told they have gone to Hell, or something along those lines. Exactly how that will be done, your guess is as good as mine, but redemption will be a big part of EA's return, and most people will love it, because EA will bring Peace on Earth. Even his son, MARDUK, will be redeemed.

EA will tell us that humanity are all Divine and the sons and daughter of Father God in Heaven, the great YHWH, or Jehovah, or Allah, or Krishna, or whomever you want -- whatever religion you have, it will be told that it is all part of another major religion, which is the one that embraces them all. Even the Muslims will eventually accept Lord Sananda, because the Muslim leaders have by then been taken over by Sirian spirits. There will always be resistance to begin with, but that will be taken care of by the false Archangels and their Heavenly armies, which will be the Sirian Warriors. And they will literally descend from the heavens.

If we continue on this line of thought, once the false Second Golden Era is established and King EA and his son, Prince MARDUK, will reign openly on Earth, certain plans will be executed, slowly but surely. EA must arrive during a time of deep need; there has to be mass unemployment, bad economy, lots of old and new diseases which kill people on a global scale; perhaps also earth changes, such as mass volcano eruptions, hurricanes, flooding, etc. And after the Wave has passed, on some timelines, it will kill a lot of people who are not at all prepared for such a unifying event, and if there will be big earth changes, that's when it will happen. On those who are spiritually prepared, however, the Wave will mostly have a positive effect, because what it basically carries is an overload of energy that has been accumulated and will hit Earth, all at once. Our final "upgrade" will happen at that point, and if your neurology can handle it, because you're already prepared, you are ready to reach for the stars. So, in other words, we can see the alignment with the Galactic Center and the energetic communication between the Central Sun, our Sun, Mother Earth, and eventually mankind, as the Goddess Gaia's way to counteract her son's EA decision to create the Machine Kingdom and devolve mankind rather than letting them evolve in peace. Mother Goddess is giving those of her children (us) who still are loyal to her original wishes a version of herself, a New Earth branching out in different probabilities, to evolve without destructive technology.

This is when the splitting of the worlds will really be noticed. Those who see through the deception of the Second Coming will go their own ways, and just like now build their own local universes, and the splitting will start going much faster. In just a few generations, there will be many different Earths that are no longer just probabilities, but inhabited by humans who have started new timelines where they can express their multidimensionality so much easier. That will be the real New Golden Age! On these timelines, the Sirians and their Machine Kingdom will no longer exist, because those realities will no longer vibrate within the same frequency range!

However, that's the subject for the next paper. Let's go back to EA, the Sirian Alliance and their plans for humanity. Peace and Order will be established on Earth. A global economy will be established as well and many people worldwide will once again find employment. What has been destroyed in potential disaster areas will be reconstructed, but this time, instead of restoring the old towns and cities, new mega cities will be built; the so-called SmartCities. These will be, like I've mentioned many times before, huge metropolitans, where Tokyo and New York will look like suburbs (and probably will be). The justification for building these SmartCities will be to create jobs for everybody. Lord EA promises that in his Paradise, everybody will have a job and a roof over their heads. And beside him on the podium or in the Television seat will be humans who he says have helped him prepare for this "Second Coming". Who knows? Michael Lee Hill and A.R. Bordon will be two of them, James of the WingMakers another? There will be no more poverty and everybody will have what they basically need. Who can resist such a vision, unless they know about the deception that is planned in the future? EA counts on humanity's laziness and that they prefer to be taken care of rather than doing the work themselves. In fact, he will be correct; people will almost think it's too good to be true and can't understand how someone would rather go out in the woods and live!

The bottom line is that the intruders will do what they can to bond with us at first. So here is another possibility how the Second Coming will play itself out: If the Sirians at all tell us who they are, which is plausible, it could very well be announced by world leaders when the Golden Age is already in place and people feel calm, safe, and secure. Do you remember the picture of those old farts who were in charge in the old Soviet Union, and how they stood on this giant balcony in Kremlin, waving at the people in the streets? I get this same picture of the future in my head, only this time it will be a whole lot friendlier. The new world leaders, who are nothing but grown up Sirians, who have incarnated into human bodies and taken the seats of power, will stand at the podium and make an announcement. They will tell the peoples of the world that they have had help in creating this utopia; this fantastic Paradise of peace, love and light. Then they will present the Sirian leaders, who will tell everybody that they obviously, as everybody can see, have come in peace, and intend to help humanity with the transition into world peace where everybody will be taken care of. People will look at them as Gods, indeed, and Prince EA, Lucifer himself, will take charge! The Sirians will tell us that they are our ancestors, and that's why they look exactly like us (of course they do; they have taken human bodies). If the violent past from Mesopotamian times is brought up, the Sirians will ask for forgiveness and that the past needs to be forgiven, or we will be stuck in karma none of us wants to deal with. Peace and forgiveness is a much smarter way to go. They'll tell us that they are our brothers and sisters, mothers and fathers; whatever rocks the boat.

Many people want to believe, so they believe. Many want to give away their personal authority, because after all, that's what they've always been doing, so they will give it all in the hands of these godlike, "peaceful" intruders. People want to see friends and salvation in those star beings, so that is what they are shown.[4]

As the reader may notice, it will be very hard to distinguish between friend and foe if you are not trained. Aren't you glad you have persisted and studied and studied in order to learn what is going on and what is about to happen? That's not a coincident, you know. Only a small percentage of humanity has the willpower to do that -- most people have other priorities, which will not save them, but they don't care. Still, we must look at these people, too, as our friends and co-travelers, because without them we wouldn't be where we are. Everybody who managed to incarnate on Earth during the nano-second did so because they wanted to live in these energies and contribute with something. That "something" has built up a lot of energy that has helped you and I to get where we are. This has indeed been a co-creation; we have all helped in making it happen.

Those who have read Marshall V. Summers' channeled books, The Allies of Mankind, may notice that these beings indeed are on the same wavelength as I am in regards to this. They, too, say it will be a silent take-over, and it will be fairly easily done, because humanity is still mostly asleep. Like with all channeled material, we have to be discerning, but there is some good stuff in Summers' books and briefings. I would recommend them, at least to show there are more people than I who have come to a similar conclusion, albeit they are not many -- yet. Their website is here.

New technology will be introduced in a never-ending stream, and people will drool over all the fun devices that come out on the market. To be able to buy them, however, they need to leave their old towns and cities and move into these new SmartCities where the jobs are. People may ask how can they create so many jobs when machines are taking over more and more? Well, we are thinking in terms of 7 billion people on the planet. This will not be the case when the SmartCities have been built. Like I said above, the Second Coming will probably not happen until a lot of people have died. The Sirians need a certain amount of human slave workers who can produce what they need. Personally, I think the Superwave will take care of much of the population problem.

Eventually, the smaller cities will be more or less abandoned. The bigger businesses that used to be the main employers will of course move into the SmartCities, and the smaller businesses will not be able to sustain themselves, because there will not be enough people left in town to buy their products. So they will either go bankrupt, be bought out, or be liquidated. We will start seeing ghost towns everywhere as we drive out of the SmartCities, where either no one lives, or it will be a place where lawless people live; if such people will even exist in EA's Golden Age, that is. In the beginning I'm sure there will, but the more the New World Order establishes itself on Earth in this particular frequency band, the tighter Lord EA will make the rope for the citizens. He will not tolerate any rebellion, and crime will be taken care of in its cradle and with help from frequency machines. Crime is only allowed amongst the Elite, but people will never know. People will police each other, because EA will promote a world in peace, and the smallest crime will be reported. This kind of policing each other is very easily established in a covert tyranny, where people think they are doing something good when they are reporting their neighbor for planting marijuana in their backyard. This was done all the time in Nazi Germany, too.

Some of the smaller towns will probably be the home of those who don't agree with Lord EA's policies and technological society; people such as you and I, perhaps? Groups of like-minded will do their own thing and survive outside the SmartCities, and without any major technology. They will grow their own food and live close to nature, because they understand who Mother Earth is, and they respect her, love her, and support her, knowing they are her children. These are the people who will create the true Golden Age, which will take them out to the stars, where their real soul family is waiting!

III. The Hybridization Program

The Alliance has come to understand the importance with being among us instead of controlling us on a distance, from another dimension. They need the blood relation, so they can feel what we feel (in whatever capacity this is possible); they want to have sex and need our reproduction abilities, so they can come back and reincarnate into the same bloodline -- bloodlines which don't have the amnesia program and perhaps not even the hologram we are subjected to. And they want to bond with us, because this creates allegiance<sup>[3]</sup>. They are here to establish themselves; they want humanity to believe in them and to serve them because we see that this is the best thing to do in order to live in a better world. This time they want our full agreement; they want us to go towards our own demise with a smile on our face.

It's important for them that we bond with them; at least in the beginning, before they can slowly but surely add more oppressive rules and laws to the picture again. They truly want us to believe that we live in a new Golden Age. This is why forgiveness is a big part of their program; we need to forgive our oppressors, so they can continue to oppress us. They will address our good hearts and say that now is the time to act like One Humanity so we can build something new. The Illuminati bloodlines need to be forgiven, they will say. At first, when the truth about what is going on behind the scenes is revealed to us more and more, people will probably get very angry, even infuriated. Some will want to execute the whole pack overnight. It could be that riots start happening in the streets all over the world, and the military has to take care of it; perhaps even martial law will be applied in certain areas, or even countries.

However, sooner or later, someone with a very glib tongue will calm people down and suggest amnesty. The authority, as well, may step forward and apologize to the people, saying they have had time to think and will step down.

The question is if there will be any more elections after that. The United Nations will be infected by Sirian leaders, and they will suggest that to stop this oppression once and for all and give all peoples of the world a similar chance, we need to unite into a One World with One People. Someone with a smooth tongue -- perhaps EA himself -- will be able to seduce the masses into accepting this. They may even use frequency programs to do it, which will work as a form of hypnosis, ensuring people that this is the way to go. And if this is what the Sirians want, this is what they will get; there is no doubt about it! Humanity is way too ignorant to understand what is going on. Only those who vibrate on a higher frequency will see through this seduction. Some will warn their fellow man, but will rarely prevail. Few people will see through the deception, because it's very well planned.

We will see if things happen in this order and fashion or not; at least this was the plan a few years ago, but things may have changed. Whatever it is they are planning at the moment, it has to unite people, and the United Nations was set up for this purpose and will most probably have a great role to play in future changes; it is still very active, perhaps more so than ever before.

iv.i. What happened to the Microchip Program?

Peace will be brought to the Middle East as well; the Israeli and Palestinean conflict will stop only because their leaders will be possessed or taken over and see to that it happen. The Alliance will certainly work their way towards peace as quickly as it is possible. And who knows how far they have come in the "microchip process"; if it's already completed they will have no problem calming the masses down. Speaking of microchips; this was a big issue a few years ago, and should still be, in my opinion. However, I'm no longer so sure about that it will happen with a chip through the skin. I am much more convinced that it's going to be interdimensional microchips. If the take-over is in the stage I'm concerned that it is, the chip process is more than likely already completed. Again, if you read this or similar material, I doubt the chip has power over you, or you wouldn't seek this type of information. Even the chip must have its frequency band to operate. One would think they are able to include higher vibrations in the chip so sincere truthseekers would be included, but all I can say is, I hope not. If so, the chips may not yet be activated. Are we strong enough to resist if worse comes to worse? I am not so sure about that we are, but on the other hand, there wouldn't be any star beings and star races having this sincere faith in us if they knew we would be under the control of these monitored frequencies. After all, I know many of us are protected even if we don't know it.

The Overlords know that we will be a minority and not be a threat to the Kingdom; we will not even try to rebel against them. So it may be just easier to laugh us off and let the kids learn in school about us, saying, "There are those eccentric people who don't want to be part of our society. They are into witchcraft, sacrifice, and worse things, so stay away from them. They are savages. And can you believe it? They don't have any of our cool devices? What kind of life is that? And after all, they could have, if they only came and blended in with us, but they rather live there by themselves. Be cautious! The safest thing we all can do is to not leave the SmartCities." It could be that easy; they knowing that not too long into the future, the worlds will split, and those renegades will "disappear" into their world, anyway. Perhaps it's less work for them to do it that way, or I may just be gullible.

I am not sure what exactly is going to happen in this crucial matter, but I know one thing -- we are protected! Those who are here to raise the frequency are protected from the KHAA! This should be enough for the Sirians to stay away, and I truly believe it is! And after all; if the Alliance doesn't have our agreement anymore, they can't do much.

iv.ii. The Hybridization Program Revisited

At least at first, the Sirian Alliance is not here to take our reproduction abilities away from us; quite the opposite. They need it; especially for themselves. They want to establish themselves here, and they can't live and breathe here without our bodies, or bodies they themselves have created through genetic engineering and manipulation.

While humanity has lived in relative ignorance to what is happening around them, a lot of different star races have been interfering with our freedoms. The Orion Group (a term I will use from hereon when it's important to include EA/ENKI, the Orion Prince of Light, in the equation) are master geneticists and the genetic programming and upgrading when comes to mankind has never totally ceased. Now, around the nano-second, it's been more intense than it's been since ancient times when Homo sapiens was created. The goal is to create a more able slave, who can do more without getting tired, not needing 8 hours of sleep. They need workers who can work around the clock again, just like when they were mining in South Africa, and the workers had to labor until they fell down dead and were replaced with a younger and stronger work force. This time around it's not so much a matter of letting people die from exhaustion as it is to find a genetic formula which can make a stronger, more endurable worker. In addition to this, or perhaps in conjunction with this, they want to create Supersoldiers. So these two projects are very important right now and go hand in hand.

A third thing to mention here is that mining is certainly not something in the past. Very soon we will see the mining business sky-rocketing; it will be one of the fields where many desperate unemployed people will find work. The reader may have seen in the news lately how there has been an alleged increase in asteroids in Near Earth Space? Many of these, I'm sure, are already hollowed-out and are maneuvered by Sirian pilots; they just want us to get used to their presence, step by step. In the past they would have been silent about it, but not anymore. More and more Sirians are returning, and they are parked in space, all over the solar system, hidden in their asteroids. But that's mainly not what I wanted to tell the reader.

In the news, they have talked about asteroid mining. Scientists are being interviewed on CNN and ABC News, and what have you, being extremely excited over the many asteroids in space, close to Earth (not all of them are spaceships). They say we have the technology to go up there and mine them! They should be overloaded with precious metals and other stuff which is very valuable here on Earth. While we are at it, we can also hollow them out, the scientists say, and perhaps make them suitable as space stations! This is where the many jobs will be! And this is what the hybridization program is leading towards; getting strong workers, who can endure the harsh conditions in space, so they won't have to come down to Earth to recover every so often. I mentioned this as well in Level III, "Paper #2: In Wait for Things to Come!" Water will not be a problem, either, because they say that there will be enough water in the asteroids to hydrate the astronauts.

Interestingly enough, I listened to a Pleiadian lecture yesterday, which was from around September-October 2012, where they, too, talked about hollowed-out asteroids! I always fell out of my chair. They said that in the future, on one timeline, Mother Earth, the beloved Goddess, will be so polluted and destroyed that many people will move out in space. This will be one reason for mining asteroids, they said (and when that lecture was given, the asteroid mining had still not been in the news). They said we will hollow them out and live in them; not all humanity, but many will. After that, we will start conquering space, they said, but not as a friendly species, because we will live under a tyranny. So we come both as explorers and conquerors. At this time in the future, we are no longer humans, but cyborgs. In some ways, we can be compared with Arnold Schwarzenegger in the movie, "The Terminator", in that they have created the perfect Supersoldier that is half human and half machine, and who is very hard to kill. Also, this type of being can quite easily resist the harsh conditions in space(!) Eventually, the ET/human tyranny will reach them in the Pleiades. They also say that no one will let us on the Moon; there is too much going on there; too much alien activity, and they don't want humans there. Otherwise, the Moon could have been considered as a future population project for mankind if Earth is no longer able to house us, but this will never be the case, they say.

I find this quite stunning, to say the least. Here I have sat researching these things and also used my intuition to look in hopefully the right places, and then, in a short amount of time, I get most of it confirmed by one source after another! I'm thrilled in one way, but at the same time wish I was wrong (albeit I know better than to think I am).

As we know, there are more beings out there who are manipulating the DNA in abductees. We have the Grays -- us in the future, as discussed and proven to be the case, in a previous paper. They have their own agenda, and just like the Orion Group, they are without emotions, but for a different reason than Lucifer and his Fallen Angels. Also, the Grays know we are them in the past, so even if they hurt us, they are only hurting themselves, so what's the big deal? As long as they get what they want, the end justifies the means.

I'm sure the reader remembers Harone, the "Master Geneticist" from Lyssa Royals channeling; he himself a Gray, discussed in one of my previous papers. In her excellent book, "Visitors from Within", Lyssa has dedicated a chapter to how hybridization is being done. This procedure is described in detail in the previous Level III paper named, "Paper #4: Channeled Entities Part II -- Channeling the Grays", Section IV, "How a Hybrid is Created". It could be a good idea to review that section again, because we need to know, and we need to remember how it's done.

I am mentioning that there will be different programs running side by side for a reason. If you think about it, this is how different timelines are created. We have earlier talked about different probabilities, based on thought processes, where some of them we act upon, and some of them we don't. Those which we act upon become realities, but those we don't act upon, or quickly abandon, become probabilities and will not be acted upon to their full extent in the Multiverse.

Now, as we are talking about the different hybridization projects, we are no longer talking about probabilities, but different timelines. The hybridization done by the Orion Group will lead in one direction, while that done by the future humans, the Grays, will lead in another direction, and yet another splitting of worlds will branch out from the Machine Kingdom timeline.

Another faction of humanity will experience a big food crisis, which has actually already begun. Experts are desperately looking for alternative food sources. In the long run, the solution they will come up with is to instead genetically alter humanity in a manner so we don't need food. These beings will be half humans, half machines. They are the cyborgs who will go out and conquer space to search for their "Creators", which eventually will lead them to the Pleiades. A war will break out that humanity will win, and a tyranny will start in the Pleiades. From that tyranny, a future renegade group will be created, who will start researching where this tyranny started and why. Their research will lead them back to the nano-second here on Earth, where timelines merged and then branched off. On one timeline, a faction of humanity will go to the Pleiades. So, the Pleiadians came back in time in spirit, as a collective, and started channeling through Barbara Marciniak in 1988, in hope to be able to have at least a portion of humanity raise their frequency enough for the destructive timeline not to happen, and stay as an abandoned probability.

Their goal is to have us create at least one timeline to begin with, where we can evolve without technology and thus keep our humanity intact. If they hadn't appeared, they claim (and I believe them), there would be no "natural" timeline, only a Machine Timeline. And by contacting us and by educating us, they also release their own karma, which went way back to Atlantis, where they created the Nephilim and did other destructive things. So, if the Pleiadians are correct, this particular cyborg timeline will not happen, or from what I have picked up, these space-faring humans will be redirected by this renegade Pleiadian group and will never reach the Pleiades. What will happen with them, I do not know, because the Pleiadians haven't told us yet. This is probably because no one has asked! It could be that these cyborgs, looking entirely like machines inside, but half humans and half robots, will never be created, or they will, but are not going to reach the Pleiades. The Pleiadians, however, tell us to watch out for abdication of our bodies! Humanity is unique and divine, and the alternations that are planned and have been going on for decades now, are not in any manner going to enhance humanity in the long run.

There are other timelines that are going to be created as well, unless someone stops that from happening, which doesn't seem to be the case (see Paper #4 again). The Grays are coming, as we know, from different locations and times in the future, and that's why they look different from each other; they are in different stages of development. They, however, in contrast to the Pleiadians, are generally not interested in erasing timelines; they are just here to figure out secret codes in our DNA, so they can take those secrets with them into the future and regain human emotions and reproduction abilities. All this put together is the main reason why it's absolutely imminent that you and I never ever get involved in these things and instead create our own timelines!

If you hadn't totally grasped why from reading earlier papers, are you starting to see a certain picture emerge now? God knows what will happen in all the chaos that is created as we speak; certain timelines may be altered from the future and cease to exist, and so will the beings living in them -- just like their lives never happened, or their lives will be altered in the Multiverse, so that their entire lives will be different. This is why it's so incredibly important to educate oneself, can you see that? If we fully understand what is going on, and the consequences that can be the end result of experimentation and timeline issues, we realize that we need to step -- not backwards and not forwards, but aside! We need to step aside and let the trains run to their destinations while we walk away from the railroad tracks and into the wilderness, sit down in Mother Nature, talk to her and talk to her creations that are all around us in form of plants and animal life, and even the soil itself. Let's show her that we love her and respect her and know that she is alive, and that she is the Goddess manifested to have a 3D, 4D, 5D experience etc., in her own universe. Let her know that we understand that we are her children, and it is our duty to guard her Living Library and start using it the way it was intended. Tell her that there are those of us who are willing to build and guard the new version of herself and do our absolute best for this disaster not to happen again. We are the New Humans; the Aware Humans! Let's tell her that we are very grateful for being chosen by her to be her Guardians and her special creation, and that she is our true Mother.

Then, we can live wherever we want, in places where we can create our own reality the way we want it, in a way that makes us happy and honors the planet from which we were born. This doesn't mean we need to build a cabin out in the wilderness, let our beards and hair grow, and isolate ourselves totally from everything. Of course, it's nothing wrong with doing that either, and that way always live close to nature, but that was not the only way of living that Mother Earth intended for us. It's nothing wrong to use the resources Mother Earth has if we do it with respect, and thank the Earth for what she's giving us. We can build houses, even cities if we want to. We can use some technology, which will really benefit us as individuals and as a group. We just need to be sure we plant new trees and vegetables when we use them.

The important part is that we create our own local universe, which I have stressed many, many times. Let the insanity reign all around us. Know that it is there -- always be aware -- but don't let it affect you or be part of your own space and your own reality. If you do this, you may notice in the extreme that a hurricane is destroying everything in the town next to you, or even in parts of your own town, but your house will still be standing when it's all over. This actually happened to my wife when she was younger and raised the kids as a single mother in Hawaii. A terrible hurricane swept over the island and tore houses to the ground all around her, but when it was all over, her house was the only house that had not been affected by the hurricane. Trees had fallen all around her property and sort of isolated her, but it showed afterwards that she was the only one on that part of the island who still had water. So it is definitely possible and it's not a fairytale or wishful thinking -- it works!

All the three "Levels of Learning" which are now coming towards a completion, have all been about educating those who are ready to learn what is really going on. When you are finished reading, you should feel a great calm inside you and an assurance that you can manage your own reality much better than people in your environment who have not taken part of this material. You will feel much stronger and mentally stable than you did before you started. You will also feel that you have raised your vibration considerably compared to before. This will help you to make decisions which will be survival for you and your environment, and you feel inside that you are ready for the "Splitting of the Worlds".

V. Life in the SmartCities

Maybe they will even call it the Golden Age, or perhaps they will call it the New Age, and maybe they will stop the year count and start again from Year 1, I don't know. But I have no doubt that after sometime of unrest, the majority of mankind will go along with the Sirian program, because that's what seems to be the only thing that makes sense to them. It's too seductive to say no. The technology and the "comfort" people will be promised if they follow the Golden Age Plan is just too incredible for people to resist.

The Overlords know what they are doing, although they start to become quite predictable by now. If we for now forget Nazi Germany, Tesla, and a few other examples, the U.S. Government was in the early 1950s visited by the Sirians (whom the channeled material call the "Orion Group") in their "space suits", presenting technology that could bring the United States fast forward to become the most powerful country in the world, and outdo the Soviet Union almost overnight. And of course, these visitors promised to keep this treaty they were creating between the two. In exchange they wanted humans they could abduct and experiment on. We have heard that story before. The reason I bring it up again is because that's where things started to take off. In fact, they were visited by more than one group, the story goes, and the "good guys" were rejected by the U.S. President, while the "bad guys" won his trust.

Shortly after that we started building giant computers; clumsy and impractical in the beginning (they sometimes took up a whole building). Since then, technology has developed superfast. The U.S. Government, on that level, was stupid enough to trust the star beings. First of all, they abducted much more people than they were allowed to, and they didn't bring all of them back, either. But not only that! These "Grays" visited other governments in other countries, too, and offered the same, or similar things; included in the visitations was the U.S. competitor, the Soviet Union.<sup>[5]</sup> What it led to was a new technological era, which many scientists wanted to name the "Second Industrial Revolution", because everything happened so fast. Soon we were in space (years before Jurij Gagarin -- unofficially), and a few decades later we had the PC and the Internet. Once Wi-Fi was established, the cell phone industry took off and the computer programs (the software) and the devices (the hardware) became smaller and smaller. Today there is hardly any teenager who doesn't own an iPod, iPad, or a smart phone of some kind (everything is called "smart" these days; deliberately so), and it basically go for adults too, although we may not always have the latest editions. However, the next generation of adults will!

Now, park your car outside a collage or a university anywhere in the United States, close to a crosswalk which the students will use. Then watch. As the students show up when it's time to go home, or in the morning when they arrive, everybody, without exceptions, are texting on one of these small devices. Friends may walk in groups of 5-10 people, but they are barely talking to each other; they are busy texting somebody else. Also, they are not lifting their heads to see if cars are coming that may run over them, but just cross the street. Most of them have learned to see with their peripherals if a vehicle or bicycle is coming. But the rest of the mind is lost in the little device.

What do I mean when I say "the rest of the mind is lost", actually? Think about that. Where is their consciousness? Is it in the body? No. Is it in that little device? Yes, very much so. What is consciousness? Most would say, the soul. So, the soul is leaving the body, "squeezing" itself into that little tiny phone device and is becoming part of that machine and whatever is going on in there. The body, on the other hand, is going on auto pilot. And it's doing so literally! There is no one home in those teenage bodies, and for one thing; they are wide open for possession.

Still, we have only seen the beginning of this. What we are experiencing now is what the "gods" experienced thousands of years ago. They, too, had those little devices they called Meš, which held a lot of information, and which they fought over. Now we're there again, but this time it's the humans doing the same thing as the gods did then. Anyway, this will be developed further, with better and better technology, which will totally seduce the population. It's very scary when we see our children already having their souls sucked into these devices, which I can tell you are Stone Age compared to what is to come. Are you still doubting that man and machine will become one and the same?

What I am trying to say here is that the Overlords have already prepared us for the Golden Age, which I call the Machine Kingdom, by giving us all these "teasers", because that's all it is. We think we're technologically advanced now; well, wait and see. Then, when they come to us and present the real "gifts" to humanity, few people will say no. All disputes will be forgotten and forgiven. If it wasn't for the destructiveness of all this, it would be a perfect way to unite us! And unite us it will!

Now, there's another side to this as well. We may think that the Internet is a brilliant network which is connecting people all over the world, so we can share our knowledge, our lives, our cultures, and more with each other, and become more like "one people". Others think that it's a perfect tool to share information that would otherwise be censored, or not allowed to reach out to a larger public. Those who never would write an article in their entire life if it was up to them, now gladly create their own blogs and start blogging like it had been their life purpose all the time. But what is really going on here? Why is this allowed? Many ask me why they let people like me expose things like this on the World Wide Web.

Here is one answer. Alien star beings don't understand the human psyche; we are a mystery to them. They have studied us on a distance for centuries -- yes, even millennia -- and they have abducted us, but still not figured us out. The reader knows it's because we are Divine and the direct children of the Mother Goddess, and we possess her Fire and have a code embedded in our DNA which the ETs want in order to understand what we are. The Sirian Alliance, and many other star beings in the background, want to understand our emotions and how we tick. The Internet, with its Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn, Google+, and other programs where people willingly share their information, is what these star beings want. They are studying us through the Internet to see how we function, and they are quite confused to say the least. Not even Lucifer himself totally understands, because not even he was born with the qualities that humankind has, and this, too, makes him jealous and quite revengeful. Now, when they think they have figured out much of what makes us tick, the Alliance has finally decided they can start mingling with us for real and blend in. If they don't understand us, they will never be able to blend in with us; we would soon notice there is something different with them.

v.i. Welcome to the Machine!

Once the new agreement with mankind is made, and the Sirian Alliance is allowed by the majority of us to operate here, and not only that, but to operate as our executives, things will go fast. The Overlords know that they are safe, and no star race will interfere, because they have humanity's consent to be here. So, a majority of mankind is going to screw up again; this time it's going to be a devastating choice! Building these mega metropolitans called SmartCities are going to be the big priority, and it will happen in no-time. More or less simultaneously, the mining project on the asteroids will start taking off as well. Many unemployed people will find themselves as miners on asteroids in Near Earth Space; mostly young people, of course, who have the stamina to do this. Mass education in this field will also be a priority. Of course, eventually the mining project will be taken over by human hybrids, the bio-machines, but we're not yet really there.

How EA and his cohorts are going to present themselves to humanity will determine how the space program will develop. I would think that in the long run it would be more beneficial for them to present themselves as our saviors and put EA, or someone he's appointing as the CEO of the world and the chairman of the United Nations. The economy can't be saved the way currency is working in the world today and the unemployment rate and a new financial low will definitely be in the stars. Regardless of how these star beings will present themselves, they need to choose the correct opportunity when we need help the most. If we're going to accept an overt alien intervention of sorts, we'd better be desperate. And with all this denial of UFOs and star beings, it doesn't seem like an easy task. However, I just read about that FBI has released a paper written in the 1950s, I believe, which has now been declassified together with a lot of other information on Al Capone, Ted Bundy etc. This particular paper was about three UFO crashes involving 3 feet tall aliens who had been recovered from saucer-shaped spaceships. The person who is in charge of the FBI library was interviewed by the media, and he said that of all the amazing stuff that has been released to the public, this short document was the one which got the most hits! So, Hollywood, the media, and the alternative media have done a good job educating people about UFOs and aliens lately, it seems like, and raised the interest. In some respect, the Sirians are actually grateful for all the different UFO theories out there on the Internet (most of them being incorrect), because it helps them catching people's interest. This makes an overt, "friendly" invasion more possible. Look at Dr. Steven Greer in this respect; would you doubt whom he's working for?

Even if I may be wrong, let's for now go for the hypothesis that it will be a silent takeover, however -- only because that seems to be the easiest way to go about it, and we want to present all alternatives we can think of. If they just blend in, they don't need to explain who they are and what they are doing here. The "savior" will be a combination of "brilliant minds" (EA and his cohorts) who have placed themselves in executive positions and can present quick solutions to the world. Maybe the whole thing with a Maitreya/Messiah in the sense we are thinking of it is just a distraction after all. Perhaps those who are waiting for a powerful deity to take over their "prepared hybrid bodies" are actually going to be used for something entirely different, which we haven't figured out yet. It will be interesting to see, because if that is the case, it will happen soon, in our own lifetime.

People will be offered jobs in the SmartCities, but not in the old cities, so there will be a mass evacuation of the towns and cities we know of today. The Overlords will figure out a way so that everybody will get a job eventually, but they also need to concentrate on reducing the world population. The Sirians certainly don't need seven billion people anymore; it's way too many to control. If there is a silent invasion all along, wars and conflicts can continue like "business as usual" -- no problem. The Golden Age of peace and harmony can very well wait until the population is on a manageable level. We also see already now how more and more young people are being infertile, and couples can't have kids. Some will adopt and some will pay ten thousands of dollars, or more, to get impregnated artificially. However, many won't be able to afford it, which of course is the plan. Make it too expensive for common people, and that will take care of a part of the problem. A food crisis could take care of some reduction of the population, while implanted diseases in form of incurable new viruses, created in laboratories and released on the public, will help out to some large degree. Other means could be H.A.A.R.P. induced catastrophes of a major kind, like giant earthquakes, floods, and volcano eruptions, tornadoes etc. I am sure there is no shortage of ideas how to reduce the population tremendously, and I am quite positive that it will happen one way or the other. All this will preferably be over and done with before the invaders will start working on the later plans, such as SmartCities. Therefore, let us assume that we are dealing with a much lesser population when we continue here. And let's not forget the Superwave.

What people will notice when they move into the SmartCities is that most of what has been promised will actually become true. People will get roofs over their heads and jobs will be distributed as needed; almost like in a Communistic society. Things will be very different from how they are now, because the control policies will change. The invaders want to start building their Kingdom so that Supersoldiers can be created and trained as quickly as possible. Supersoldiers already exist, and quite a few of them, such as Aaron McCollum, have been interviewed by Project Camelot's Bill Ryan and Kerry-Lynn Cassidy<sup>[7]</sup>. The soldiers that already exist in the Secret Government mind control programs usually don't remember anything from their missions. Afterwards, keywords or a key phrase is communicated to them and they forget all about it. These Supersoldiers are often time travelers, advanced remote viewers (nano-travelers), and shapeshifters (which works just like I've explained in Level II; you manifest whatever you want via your avatar), and they can bi-locate. They have been reported to be able to cloak themselves as trees and sometimes whole forests to distract enemies. This has been done both on Earth and on other, distant planets, according to whistle-blowers and metaphysical sources such as the Pleadians. McCollum, for example, has quite a story to tell. He is, of course, a multiple personality through trauma-based mind control such as MK-ULTRA and its many offspring programs like Project Monarch and Project Mannequin. Today's Supersoldiers are often 100% human, but the PTB have for a long time also experimented with human hybrids, who may more easily be able to do the job.

The idea with hybrids who are half biological and half machine, doing the work as Supersoldiers, is their apparent invincibility. These days, due to Sirian-Orion technology, more or less any body part can be replaced quickly with a machine part which corresponds with an injured organ. You're a soldier in a war and you lose a leg or an arm? No problem. They throw you aside and quickly transplant a machine part that can work just as well as a real arm. Then it's back to battle again. A few days later, one of your legs is blown off by a grenade? So what? There is a mechanical leg ready to be attached, working just as well as a biological leg. Do you think I'm exaggerating? I'm not. This is already being done (see fig. 7). This young lady just got a machine arm implanted, which follows the commands from her mind, just like a real arm.

Figure 7 is copied from a Facebook page by one of the leading UFO researchers in the field. He posted this picture, and the followers of his Facebook commented on it. There were a lot of comments, and they were done by those who are supposed to be "in the know" in the UFO and exopolitical fields (as much as you can be in-the-know). All of them were very excited and made comments like, "science go!"; "Science rocks!" and "I have friends who came back from war with amputated limbs. They could have benefitted from this. Science go!" No one realized what it is that is being promoted with this kind of technology -- no one. Everybody thought it was being done for the benefit of mankind. That is very sad. I am not saying people won't benefit from such implants, but the point of making them is not because science has developed something as a favor to mankind. It's a part of showing off how it will be in the Machine Kingdom, and it's being promoted in the media, naturally, so people can respond like these "enlightened" researchers and truthseekers. Do you believe me now when I say that the Machine Kingdom will be creeping up on us?

The Sirians will probably be eager to meet our needs in the beginning, and the new illusionary freedoms will sit pretty well with mankind. Work will bring income so that people can buy the products, and the whole cycle of commerce will start working again. H.A.A.R.P. and similar institutions will be expanded, and mind control happen on a global scale by frequency (this is why it's so important that we keep our own raised frequency intact), which will keep people in check. Once the population is reduced to the optimal amount, wars and certain lethal diseases will suddenly stop and cease to exist. Now the trick is to keep the population on that level, and there are many ways to do that. One method, which will definitely be implemented, is to make mankind infertile. How will they do that? By creating cyborgs.

Keep in mind that what I am describing now is a long process, although there are those who say it will all be put in place and quite functional by 2034, thanks to nano-technology and the Big Pharma. If this is correct, and nanobots are put into our medicine, I agree with the Pleiadians. Nevertheless, mankind will soon find themselves surrounded by advanced technology, based on nano-tech. People will start working long hours and not have time for serious relationships, and they will also lose the skills how to interrelate with other humans. Their homes will be cleaned by robots who will be more and more sophisticated. These robots will then be made to look like sexy males and females and even have genitals, skin, and all the rest of it to make them look and act like human beings. Instead of having intimate relationships with each other, people will prefer to have sex with the robots. No responsibilities go with it, and when the act is over, they don't need to pay any more attention to the robot. Many, many people will find this convenient. Today we are deciding whether gay couples should be able to marry per law or not, but in the future the issue of marriage will be raised in regards to whether humans should be able to marry their robots or not. This is very likely, in my opinion.

People will love their small devices and disappear into the world of virtual reality, leaving the body vacant, spending almost all of their spare time in virtual reality, which is just another hologram within a hologram. The Machine Kingdom is basically a thought form out there in the universe, and once that thought form is acted upon, the machines can eventually get their own intelligence. This is something the WingMakers are warning us about as well with their half allegorical and half realistic "Animus", which I spent a whole paper on in Level I. The realistic part of it is that the Anima do exist as our future selves -- the Grays.

Eventually, this is the direction quite a few timelines will take; the Sirians want to create the Supersoldiers, who don't need food and don't need sex, but still have a biological mind and a soul. This, and much more, is explained in the concept of "Transhumanism", which we will get into now. It's a very scary future that is painted for us, because nano-technology has so many potentials. However, in the wrong hands..!

VI. When the Robots Outsmart us!

Dirk Bruere is a British scientist and magician, which are two trades that go hand in glove; one can't work without the other. Dirk contacted me after had read some of my papers and said that his material could be of assistance for me. He has written a book called, "TechnoMage" and a number of articles and essays on the subject of nano-technology, singularity, cyborgs and "Artilect" (artificial intellect). I started reading from his website, <http://zerostate.net/> (another websites of his is, <http://www.neopax.com/>), and found his material fascinating to say the least, and has the scientific backup I need.

It's a scary but highly adequate world Dirk is presenting to us. Contrary to myself, he thinks that a future with a lot of technology is inevitable, and we just have to face it. Nano-technology, the creation of cyborgs, and hyper intelligent robots; even Messiahs with artificial intelligence -- all that is part of Dirk Bruere's world.

In Level I, I addressed my concern about nano-technology, and that billions upon billions of dollars of our tax money (and I'm sure a big chunk of the black budget) is going towards research in this field. In fact, it's considered the perhaps most important field of research right now, because the PTB know that whomever controls the nano-world is in control of the universe.

Now, what is nano-technology all about? We already use nano-technology in computers and have done for decades, so what's the big deal? The big deal is when we not only are able to create devices built on nano-tech, but also have them self-replicate! Think about that statement for a while, and you may realize where we're heading with this. What else is self-replicating? Exactly! The 3D bodies! Not only human bodies, but nearly all life forms on our planet. This has been something we just know is happening by itself, without any interference, and that's what keeps the Living Library alive and going. 3D is all about matter self-replicating itself. This is a "technology" known only to Creator Gods and the Goddess herself, but in just a few decades, mankind has gone from what we now may consider "technological stone age" in comparison, to becoming Creator Gods. No one is going to be able to say to me that this is only due to brilliant human scientists. Of course not! We have had help from those not from here. And this is not a matter of some big machine running software at the nano scale, but the machines themselves are at nano size. These, so called "nanobots", can then self-replicate.

Imagine what you can do with this knowledge. You can of course use it for a lot of things, but the main subject is creating new life forms and have them self-replicate, i.e. we can create artificial bodies, so-called cyborgs, and make them intelligent. And that's exactly what the most brilliant scientists on our planet are working on now.

We are certainly going to come back to creating artificial life in this paper, but first let's mention other things nano-technology can be used for, which also is a magnificent way of introducing this science to the public and get their approval to continue to the next step, which will be artificial intelligence. This technology will change almost all type of manufacturing. Dirk Bruere says,

"The promise of nanotech is immense and many see it as not only the future of nearly all manufacturing but something that will form the basis of nearly every future technological enterprise. It is no less than programmable matter and as such is one of the technologies critical to the Transhumanist vision of the future."<sup>[8]</sup>

This means that in the future you no longer have to go to the store and go through all the different types of utensils until you find a set that almost, but never totally, falls in your taste. As it is now, most of the time when you go shopping you may get what you want in accordance to what is already on the market. However, you may have your own vision of how a product, say utensils, should look like, but these exact ones are nowhere to be found because they don't exist. Not so any more. With nano-tech, you can push buttons and learn how to make choices and fine adjustments, and they immediately show up on the screen. Then, when you have adjusted the product exactly to your liking, you hit the Go button and the technology produces an exact copy of what you want, down to the exact atom. You can get anything you desire -- the only limit is your own imagination. You will of course be able to save the settings in the computer system until next time, or if your friend happens to love the product you created, you can give them the settings, and they can get that exact copy themselves, or make adjustments to it. This way, people with less imagination can get inspired by those who have more, and an exchange can be made. This will also lead to a new kind of business, where a staying at home mom, for example, with a great imagination can sell her "settings" to others and potentially make good money out of it. The opportunities in this field are endless.

But these options are just candy for the masses. While the highly manipulated humanity en large is merely occupied and drooling over the next "invention" in an attempt to fill their own inner emptiness, those with higher minds, who do the thinking, are working hard behind the scenes in creating what none of us need, paving the road towards our own demise. Bruere's highly sophisticated work has many layers and must be read in its entirety to be fully understood, but I will touch a level of it that tells the story as it most likely will develop in the future. The thought form is there, the minds to create something from that thought form are there, and the technology is there, and there is no great resistance against it. This means everything is there to create a true timeline where there otherwise might just have been a potential. The PTB would never miss a chance like that. The next few years will be extremely important for them, and with PTB I mean both our human Elite, the extraterrestrial among them, and those still on proxy.

There are also beneficial application of nano-technology, such as within medicine. Surgeons could inject nanobots, which are machines of nano size -- self-replicating or not -- into a patient with cancer, for example, and be able to attack the exact cells which are considered cancerous and leave the healthy cells alone, in contrast to chemotherapy, which also kills healthy cells. It may seem unfair that I leave out many of the positive effects of this technology, but it's outside the scope of this paper. So it's enough that I mention that they definitely exist. If we lived in a world where our best minds had our best interest as their priority, these technologies could be very beneficial, but in the wrong hands...

Bruere says he believes that in perhaps 60 years we could build computer memory of which less than a ton of it could store the memories of everybody on this planet. He continues by saying that "if we get within a few percent of theoretical limits one kilowatt of electricity, enough to run a one bar electric heater, could provide enough processing to exceed Human brain capacity by a factor of around ten thousand." [9] But, he goes on, one kilowatt is what one square meter of the Sahara desert gets in term of sunlight! Hence, if we cover that space with nanobots, the power has increased up to a thousand trillion human brains. That's the raw material, but what can we do with it? Create a God? Or a whole lot of gods? This is not science fiction, but indeed something that scientists who are working with Artificial General Intelligence (AGI) are trying to accomplish in the form of Artilect [10].

Thus, we could build a robot which is so smart that none of us is able to compute it; it goes beyond our capacity as individual beings to think about it. So far, no one knows exactly how to build such an Artilect, but there is no shortage of ideas to test, says Bruere. But reader, don't get fooled! We're talking about how much is known in the scientific field that is accessible to us, and not what is available on an interdimensional level. The problem how to do it, I'm quite sure is already solved, but we are not supposed to know that. The rest is just a show for the masses. In fact, Lucifer (EA) and his Fallen Angels don't want to do this for us -- they want us to do it! They want us to develop the Artilect; they want us to be the "Creators". Although they are giving us the technology how to do it in exchange for something else, they want us to figure out the details and actually build this stuff. On one level it's because then they can blame us afterwards and get away with it, because we did it, not them. But there is another, more sinister reason why Lucifer wants us to do the dirty job, even if it takes much longer to accomplish compared to if he had his scientists do it. The reason is revenge! What I mean by that will be obvious before this paper is finished. Indeed, it's the ultimate evil.

Someone mentioned to me that the Grays are indeed us in the future, just like I've concluded, but that they don't live in the same kind of universe we do. Instead, they live in a synthetic one, and the person who said that was absolutely correct. Bruere mentions the synthetic universe as well. He says that the self modifying programs the Elite is planning to develop as a solution to the software problem of creating an Artilect will mimic biological evolution as they mutate and replicate. The Artilect is thus evolving in a synthetic world. In retrospect, looking back at the Gray hive community, or the Social Memory Complex, can we now start to see where this is all heading? But by all means, let's continue. We're far from done yet.

Transhumanists like Bruere, who postulate that as a step in nano-technology we could create a super-intelligence, whether we want to call it Artilect or Singularity, and make it smart enough to compute and solve the most urgent and complex problems the world is facing, are concerned about the ethical part of such an Artilect. Will it be benevolent or not? His conclusion is that it doesn't necessarily have to be either, but in the long run, after it's outsmarted humanity, it will treat us as "collateral damage", and that would be the end of mankind. What good would we be to such an intellect from their point of view if they are even going to be self-replicating and evolving in their own synthetic universe?

Therefore, say Bruere, it may be important to actually create a friendly Artilect, which like a Messiah will save us from ourselves, or our foes, if such are present. And of course it is. The problem, as I see it, is not whether such an Artilect will be friendly or not; it's already well-established what and when it's going to be, and like everything else the Alliance is creating, it has to do with power and control. An Artilect would be the ultimate power over our minds.

This is why I say that the Transhumanists are the soft version of the Machine Kingdom. They have realized that something similar to a Machine Kingdom is on a rise, and there is nothing we can do about it. Humanity has the power to play with nano-technology, and therefore they will, they conclude. The Transhumanist's task will thus be to see to that these technologies are used as benevolently as possible. To be able to do this, we may just as well start the transition into a Machine World as soon as possible. The longer we wait, the more we have to fix, and the more extreme the measures. And in the long run we can use all this technology to help mankind evolve. This is where I and Bruere disagree, because I believe mankind can, and is supposed to, evolve without technology.

There will be science magazines online that are going to tell the latest stories about the achievement in nano-technology, but this is not something to drool over; playing games may be fun, but getting extinct is not. This is not about humans fighting some alien force, where the aliens invade, looking like stiff machine people with bombs exploding and humanity eventually winning the battle. It's rather a subtle way of losing our sovereignty once and for all and have a machine think for us. We may be able to make easier decisions in daily life, but instead of having corrupt politicians deciding what is going to happen on a higher level, we are now going to have a Supercomputer so vast that it can generate thought processes many trillion times faster than a human brain. All problem will be solved! At least this is what the gullible will think will happen. Instead, it will be programmed to solve problems that have to do with a certain agenda, which goes far beyond the purpose of mankind, although we will be dragged into it, as usual.

The sad thing is that if this Machine Kingdom is inevitable (on certain timelines), people will not understand the goal with such a society. Like Bruere says; if worse comes to worse, not even death is a refuge. These machines with their super-capacity could even resurrect people from the dead, so that not even death is an escape. Bruere and his likes seem to be giving their hope away to the goodness of mankind, which would ensure that we come to our senses and take the best from our human traits and put it into such a machine. Maybe we can make a Buddha God or something of the sort, who is able to show compassion? This will not happen, of course, unless the Overlords have a certain agenda which includes such a being, which I can't see. The scary part is that the human scientists may want to play with different personalities when they create Artilects, just to see if they can. In the long run, what will happen then? Will the different personalities, perhaps with different goals and purposes, start fighting each other on a synthetic thought level, totally outside of our control? If that happens, it's not only a threat to mankind's survival, but that of the whole universe, and maybe beyond, because where would they stop? Not until they meet their superiors -- if they exist.

Bruere says that the solution to avoid an outbreak of Artilect would be to upgrade ourselves to match their evolutionary capabilities. He suggest we'll do that by merging with them as adjuncts to our minds, which would provide the core direction for the goal of Transhumanism -- the PostHuman. Well, actually, it is not the ultimate goal of Transhumanism; there is one vision even bigger; to transform dead matter to Mind. They are talking about starting with our galaxy and expand from there. Apparently, these scientists don't understand that matter is not dead; it is only how we perceive it! Transhumanism will try to make a God out of dead matter by transforming it to brain power trillions to times more powerful than our own intellect. Thus, we will live in a living, thinking universe, made up of nanobots as atomic particles. I am sure this will not sit well with the Orion Empire and the already Living Universe. I mean, these guys say they are trying to save us, for heaven's sake! And they don't know what the consequences will be to try to overcome the Goddess! Haven't we heard that before? Surpassing the Goddess in power and intellect? Well, if you can't do it with who you are, try technology! This is telling me that whoever came up with Transhumanism, or the ideas that led to it, before Bruere did, still had the old Lucifer's Dream in mind -- to take over the universe and make us the ultimate Creators!

God help humanity if something like this will be developed. And it will not be developed by the Sirians, but by us, with their technology! We will be the guilty ones. We are supposed to be adults and know better, and if we refuse to learn when the cards are on the table, face up, we have to take the consequences as well. The consequences for something like that is extinction! Not as a form of revenge, but in a way to save the universe from such evil that we humans are creating (with the Sirian Alliance in the background, defending themselves by pointing at us). The Queen's Court will definitely not look upon it as a minor crime; the Goddess has to think of the survival of the whole universe, and I can imagine has little patience with those who try to destroy it, wittingly or unwittingly. Blindness beyond reason is no excuse!

Transhumanism is also using the term Golden Age (like in a Second Golden Age) for the end product of their vision, and to distinguish ourselves from their goals, I prefer to call our future not depending on technology the New Era instead. If we change its name in the future, that's fine, but at least for now, for distinction purposes.

Bruere is just as concerned as I am about the Machine Kingdom coming in the wrong hands; the difference is how much faith we have in scientists and alien toys coming into their greedy and insensitive hands. Bruere is more optimistic, while I'm not, because I know that this is not entirely up to humanity -- there are forces from outside, which are so much stronger than us at this stage of development that the comparison would be like that between a human and a dog. And these forces are on a mission; something Bruere may be ignorant of. Anyway, in his book, "The Praxis", he is quoting I.J. Good in a statement from 1965, about his concern creating machines more intelligent than us:

"Let an ultra-intelligent machine be defined as a machine that can far surpass all the intellectual activities of any man however clever. Since the design of machines is one of these intellectual activities, an ultra-intelligent machine could design even better machines; there would then unquestionably be an 'intelligence explosion,' and the intelligence of man would be left far behind. Thus the first ultra-intelligent machine is the last invention that man need to make [my emphasis]."<sup>[11]</sup>

Then we have Vernor Vinge, popular science fiction writer and mathematician, who gave a lecture containing the now famous statement in the 1980/90s. He wrote:

"Within thirty years, we will have the technological means to create superhuman intelligence. Shortly thereafter, the human era will be ended"<sup>[12]</sup>

If Vinge had inside knowledge, which almost all science fiction writers have, we are talking about a time which corresponds with now up to 10 years from now. So perhaps the Pleadians, who suggested around 2034, were not so far off after all?

Bruere, who is a little bit more optimistic from my point of view, suggests that something like this might happen a little later, around 2060 or so, based on mathematical calculations rather than astrological. He says, let's pretend we then have computers that are both cheap and much more powerful than the human brain, and that an Artilect is already created and ready to be implemented into a computer (or computers) with enough processing power. The Artilect "jumps" into this hardware and literally in a matter of hours things change, and there is zero time for us to adapt! Its brain power will outclass us like we humans outclass the brain of a goldfish, says Bruere. The world changes from biological dominance to Artilect dominance, which is synthetic! And remember, this is not science fiction; scientists behind the scenes are in fact working hard on this! And they are doing it with our tax money, which we gladly give away to create our own demise. All the big establishments of today, the military, financial systems etc., will be totally dependent upon a Cyberspace that it's a child's play for an Artilect to subvert into something else. If it just decides to crash the system, it will most certainly result in billions of deaths, says Bruere, let alone actively turning it against us!

The "good" news is that yes, it will be turned against us, but not as in the sense of a war between machine and human, but as our new Leader; what in some spooky sf movies is just called "The System"; a central Supercomputer which decides who's to live and who's to die, and what is best for humanity and our future. Crazy? That's just the middle name.

And so the "gods" have returned and established themselves once and for all on their mother's planet, controlling their mother's beings by transforming them into a synthetic race, dependent on a super-brain which we can't defeat. Only those not-from-here know how to control a Beast like that - hopefully? The Beast 666, couldn't that be it?

Now, there is one more thing that needs to be done before the complete take-over is done! We need to upload our minds into computers, which will then be transferred and integrated with the Beast[def]. But why on Earth would humans want to do this? The answer is simple and will be promoted as "cheating death".

How exactly will we do that? Well, imagine how scientists and geneticists will show you how they have created synthetic bodies which are much more powerful and durable than the bodies we have now in our biological, "fragile" forms. Also, backups can be made of your own mind in case an accident would happen, just like you back up your computer at home on an external hard drive. So say you die in the future, there is a way to reboot the "deceased", and you can continue as before, perhaps with some minor memory loss, but without going through death, afterlife, and reincarnation. Of course, people in the Machine Kingdom will not be famous for being spiritual, and the fear of death is one of the biggest issues in this future world, because no one will tell you the truth of what will happen after you die. All you will hear is horror stories of either getting lost in the astral or that there is no life after death at all. This will be stressed, and it will terrify people. The "research" into this field to come up with a solution to death will be heavily supported, and big funds will go into this, which is just a side project of the greater aspect of nano-technology.

Bruere goes on with the following concerning statement:

"Uploading into a virtual reality worlds run at a resolution where detail is comparable to the existing world of the senses, but the effective size of the 'universe' is vastly bigger than Earth. Or worlds which can be tailored to individuals or groups where the laws of physics or environment can be programmable, or fantasy base, or... anything.

Merging our minds with vastly more powerful intellectual prostheses rivaling Artilects in power."[\[13\]](#)

The way to do it is to scan the brain so that the original brain of course survives the procedure; it's just a cloned copy of the brain that's being made, including backups. However, this can't be done, says

Bruere, until when his PostHuman is almost completed, which means that with nano-tech they can insinuate nanobots throughout the whole nervous system so the recording and transmission of data can be done.

And Bruere and his fellow scientists are hopeful that this will happen as soon as possible. He quotes his critics, and here is one of them:

"The capability to move the mind into the machine will mark the attainment of the final goal of the Gnostics, that of overcoming the body completely, living in a psychic Nirvana with the constraints of nature, time and history left behind."[\[14\]](#)

"Hopefully he is correct", adds Bruere. And I say, "I hope he's not."

This is the old dream of philosophical visionaries, however, to live in a constant Nirvana, apart from our bodies. This, however, is not what life and living is about at all. We are here to experience and explore, and we humans have a purpose and a goal that is far greater than 99.9% of our population realizes, according to my own estimate. Staying in our bodies and becoming multidimensional in a world free from interference and oppression are the goals of humanity. Everything else feeds the cosmic vampires, wittingly or unwittingly so!

Bruere continues talking about fear of death and dying in the Multiverse. What happens after body death? Because of the fact that people don't know due to the way our DNA is reconstructed so we have amnesia, people want to avoid death at all cost. Also, growing old and "deteriorate" is another big fear -- the fear of not being attractive, or that the body will get sick and disabled. In cyberspace, like Bruere says, we are either healthily conscious, or dead with no intermediate states of Limbo. "It's a lot safer". People will buy this!

So now we have a clone of our own mind in the computer system, and it's being integrated in a compatible Supercomputer, which is also emotional! Let us say that we have 2 billion people on the planet when this stage of development is finished. That is 2 billion brains integrated into this Supermind. What does this mean? It means that humanity gladly transferred the mind of the human soul group into a Supercomputer and willingly moved into a Virtual Reality, "where everything is possible". We're suddenly in the Matrix movies! No longer are we biological beings, but beings living in a synthetic universe, which is run, not by us, but by those who run the Supercomputer! Humanity will think it's them, but we know who they are -- the Sirian Alliance!

Don't think for a second that this hasn't been planned for eons. The first step in the development of mankind in this slightly twisted 3D frequency, which is enough twisted to be out of range for other dimensional beings, unless they know the exact coordinates (we talked about this earlier), was for humanity to keep having a separate experience to build up a mass consciousness -- an enhanced human soul group. Enhanced according to Sirian standards for mankind. Now these standards are met, and it's time to move on into creating a hive community. Hive community? Where have we heard that before? Oh yes, the Grays, channeled material, but foremost -- the Orion Empire!

Lucifer is Orion, and so are his Fallen Angels. I call them Sirians, because that's where most of them evolved, just like we evolve on Earth. However, after the Peace Treaty, the Sirians became Orions too; thus the "Orion Group", like I've explained earlier. In Level II I spent a whole paper talking about life in the Orion Empire, and I talked about the Bee Hive Society, where life circles around the Queen. This is how it is in Orion, but in a beneficial way. People there are not run by machines; everybody has individual thinking, can make their own decisions, and their society in general supports the individual, who naturally also supports the soul group, something that unfortunately is missing here on Earth. EA was born in Orion, and brought up in Orion before he rebelled. He understands the Orion Society very well. Now he is trying to distort the Old Ways of the Mother Goddess by creating a mass consciousness which is not centered around a Queen, but a Machine. The Machine is God (not even the Goddess, but God -- masculine), and it will run human society.

So, what is the next step after that? Well, EA needs soldiers -- Supersoldiers. How does he get them? From genetic engineering, manipulation, and cloning! The sciences he knows best and is a master in. Although all human brains eventually will be connected to the Beast, individual thinking to a certain extent will still be possible; every individual's brain is copied into the computer, but the humans still have their bodies to move around in, and can think, although it's harder and harder to have original thoughts, because each brain can be set into whatever frequency the controllers of the Beast wish, and if someone has a thought that could be considered rebellious, or is not supporting the mass consciousness, the thought will be "culled", and the sheep who was running a little bit astray can easily be corrected and steered back into the fold.

And why does each individual need to be able to think at all? Why not let the Beast do 100% of it? No, the Overlords need individual thinking as well, because every now and then they need a new permission from mankind and make a new agreement with them so that they don't force anything on us against our will. Bodies, for example. We can't go into space in biological bodies. They are made for planetary travel, but not for long distance space travel.

We already know what kind of bodies are the most resistant to the space environment -- the Grays! The Grays in different shapes and forms. And humanity wants immortality, and now they have it -- in mind, but not in body. How about having a body that is not getting sick easily, and lives forever, because it's mostly synthetic and machine-like? And better yet -- with this new type of body, we can travel to other star systems!!! That sounds thrilling enough, and there you go. You now have Grays, and you now have the Gray hive community, and mankind is ready for space travel. However, these new bodies, needing very little to eat, also don't have reproduction abilities, because the Sirians don't want us to reproduce anymore. They haven't been able to figure out our sexuality and our abilities to have this tight connection with the Universe of the Goddess if not imprisoned, so instead of giving up and letting us go, they will suppress our sexuality and make us into cyborgs; sexless biorobots, controlled from a Supermind in a Supercomputer, living in a virtual reality; a universe slightly different from our current one.

Thus humankind will sacrifice the most holy and sacred thing they have, the human body, out of fear for it. Out of fear for their own bodies and out of fear from that their bodies will get sick and deteriorate, they will let another star race, who has no business here in the first place, replace our sacred, Royal and Divine vehicles with artificial bodies which can't do anything near what the original, biological bodies can do! Fear of cancer is part of it, and that of ovarian, prostate and testicle cancers will make mankind willing to sacrifice their reproduction organs as well. They will be convincing us that children will not be needed in the new Golden Age, anyway. The amount of people on the planet is perfect, is what they will be manipulated to believe, and if we create more people, there will be survival problems. After all, those who are living now, they are told, are immortal anyway, and don't ever need to be replaced. There is no longer any death. It will of course be put in much slicker wording than I can accomplish here, but in one way or the other it will be done. We even have the evidence for that -- the Grays who say they are us in the future are lacking sexual organs.

We have the Supercomputer where all the brain power of the human soul group is stored, including emotions. It's not farfetched to envision how every "human" being on this planet will be hooked up to this Artillect, just like the Borg in Star Trek, or like in the Matrix movies, although it doesn't have to happen physically, but through frequency control. A hive community and a group thinking will be the result. Each individual may still have their individual thinking abilities intact to a certain degree, but the group thinking -- the survival of the group -- comes first and the individual is not as important, other than to contribute to making the group mind stronger.

Another thing is that the range of emotions that make us human will eventually not be needed, either, and is not even wanted by the Sirians. Many of the more compassionate emotions we inhabit are not desirable in the world of Sirians. They have lost all that themselves, and after all, they are a warrior race and looks upon all these kinds of feelings as weakness. If they want to make Supersoldiers out of us, the last thing they want is something that even slightly reminds them of weakness. Many emotions that are totally unique for humankind will be erased from the mind of the Supercomputer.

Supersoldiers will be trained in bodies where body parts can be transplanted easily if the soldiers get injured. Perhaps it doesn't even hurt to get shot. Bruere thinks it's science fiction that we will create Supersoldiers such as Schwarzenegger's Terminator, because the New Human will be beautiful, he says; much more beautiful than today's bodies. I must disagree to that. On the other hand, Bruere is not familiar with the Sirian involvement in human evolution, so it's understandable. The new bodies will be those of the Grays; both those who live on Earth and those who go into space. However, the Supersoldiers are different. They have to be made almost invincible, and to make that happen, they can't be fragile and prone to being hurt when shot at. In other words, these bodies must be almost purely machines, perhaps with skin around the machine parts, so they look human. They may come in any size, from dwarfs to massive giants, depending on which kind of mission they are assigned to. These Supersoldiers will be trained to be fearless, because even if they would be shot to pieces after all, the mind lives on in the Beast back on Earth, and death is impossible. The Between-Lives-Area in the astral will probably by that time be deserted and not even used; it's not needed anymore. No reincarnation, no babies, only rejuvenation of bodies, with souls and minds trapped in the Beast.

The manipulation will continue. The human soul group will be told that now when they have overcome death, there is only one direction, and that is UP! They will be told that they shall eventually evolve to higher planes of existence; higher densities, and higher dimensions, and become the Gods of the Universe. Now, when they are a Collective Consciousness, half of the battle is already won. The reward will eventually be Heaven itself, and they will merge with God, the One Creator. In fact, they are God as a composite, and all they need to do is to take back what is theirs, but was taken from them, they will be told. Of course, they will never be told that those who "took it from them" were the same beings who told them this story. Instead, they will blame it on the Orions. On some timelines, they call themselves Social Memory Complexes. Where have we heard those terms before? Our channeled sources again! The RA Material, Elohim, Lyssa Royal's "Grays", Bashar...the list goes on!

But what happened from the point that these collective consciousnesses were created until the time when they returned from the future as channeled sources, talking about 4th and 5th Dimension, Harvest, and Compassion, Love and Light? To even have a clue, we need to tell another story from very long ago, long before there were any humans at all on Earth; early human experiments which led to the Namlú'u and Homo sapiens -- none of these had been implemented. This story is probably billions of years old, and it's partly told in the Urantia Book. This is the story of Ultimate Evil and Revenge in its highest and most vicious form. It's about power, Ego, remorselessness, ruthlessness, intolerance of love and compassion. It's about the opposite of what humankind is in her basic form stands for. It's the story about Lucifer, his Rebellion, and his ultimate plans for the future. It's a sobering story, because all clues leads to the same conclusion -- that this story, in its essence, and I am sure in most of its details, is true.

VII. The Larger Story around Lucifer's Rebellion

There is a much bigger agenda with all this, and I've mentioned it before, but without explaining all the details. I said that the Sirian Overlords, the Patriarchs, want to be the Kings of the Universe, and steal the Goddess title from the Mother Goddess. This is what Lucifer's Rebellion is all about, of course. EA/Lucifer thought he was perfect and could do things much better than his mother, the Goddess herself. He was jealous of her power and tired of just being "number 2" forever. Yes, forever, because the Goddess will of course never die. So, with his slick and glib tongue, he seduced a third of the Goddess' special guards and tried to overthrow his own mother. This, of course, was an effect from his pride, and it didn't work.

Archangel Michael, the leader of the loyal guards, threw EA and his angels (the Sirians) out of Heaven (the Orion Empire). This whole Lucifer story was excluded from the Bible, again most possibly because of EA's pride. He and his son MARDUK wrote most of the Bible, and Lucifer didn't want humans to know that he was defeated; it was too much of a trauma for him, and his Ego was severely hurt. The story, however, was told in details in the Urantia Book, which was allegedly brought here by non-physicals in the astral (4th Dimension). This is why the Council of Zendar/Saturn, in the RA Material says that the Urantia Book was never passed or approved by the Council. Of course it wasn't; if the beings who brought the information to Earth had gone through the Council first, the material would never have been approved, because the Council of Zendar supports Lucifer! Of course,, the Urantia Book was brought to us during a period of war on Earth, which reflects in the book. It has a military overtone to it, which is natural, because the non-physicals who delivered it wanted us to be able to easily be able to relate to the information.

So, EA and his rebels were thrown out of Orion by Archangel Michael and his warriors, and the rebels were furious but not the least willing to give up. They wanted revenge, but what could they do? They couldn't storm the gates of Orion; the Empire was way too powerful and they would all succumb if they tried -- this much Lucifer had realized. However, there was something else they could do.

After perhaps millions of years in exile, EA felt that his pride started coming back and his Ego once again rose almost to its former proportion! There was a way Mother Goddess had manifested herself in this universe to have a physical and metaphysical experience, and that was in the form of Mother Earth! She was the Goddess transformed into matter. Now, what did the rebels do? They flew to Earth, noticed it was populated by EA's mother's selected beings, an earlier form of mankind called the Namlú'u in some scriptures. They were the shepherds and the Guardians of the Goddess' Living Library. But the Lús were not the only intelligent beings on Earth, something EA soon was about to experience. His mother had also put her personal "ambassadors" on Earth, the Titans, thus establishing Earth as Orion territory. Other star races were also present on Earth, and they were all peaceful in nature.

This, thought EA, shouldn't be too much trouble for him. Earth was probably one of the most beautiful planets in the universe and had enormous riches and resources that EA and his angels wanted, but this was just a part of it. Most of all he wanted on trying to intimidate his mother and take revenge for the unfair treatment he thought he'd gotten from his own flesh and blood when he was cast out of Heaven.

So, a war broke out, which I wrote about in Level II and called "The War of the Titans". EA and his allied troops defeated the Titans, and all star races residing on Earth had to leave. The Titans returned to Orion and it became known what had happened. Orion sent an armada to Earth in order to once again defeat Lucifer and the Fallen and release Mother Earth from this invader force, but this time it showed not to be so easy. The Orion Group used the Namlú'u as their shields, and there was nothing the Orions could do without sacrificing this magnificent human species. So the Orions returned home, waiting for a better opportunity. And they are waiting still...

EA was excited! He now considered Earth as his, and even named her after himself (EAEarth). The Namlú'u were not made for war and knew nothing about it, and with time, the Sirian Alliance managed to manipulate this human species into starting to work (slave) for them in the mines. In the meantime, EA and his scientists started working on creating a more sturdy and enduring slave race, because the Namlú'u died in droves in the mines. The rest, as they say, is history, and is discussed elsewhere in previous papers.

Back to present time. Now they are here again, in direct contact with us like in the old days. What do they want this time? Well, the Machine Kingdom is of course not the goal; only the means to reach a much vaster goal. The goal is still the same as it's always been -- revenge! After all these eons, EA is still the same kind of being and has not grown. His Ego is still running him, and he is obsessed with taking control over Orion. He already took control of a faction of the Empire by taking over Mother Earth, or Gaia, the Goddess manifested[6].

Again, he finds humanity not up to the task he is preparing us for. He wants cyborg-like Supersoldiers, who are more or less indestructible, and totally fearless in battle. He wants them to be part biological and part machine, so they can switch body parts quickly, in case someone loses a leg or an arm, for example, but they must be biological as well, perhaps so EA can show off what an excellent geneticist he is, being able to create such beings. Also, he needs them to have psychic powers, being experts in remote viewing and time travel, and also be able to travel interdimensionally. In other words, he is building a huge army to use as a shield and as foot soldiers in an upcoming war with Orion. This is obvious to me, but in spite of all his preparations, I don't think he will succeed. I may pull in his rage for writing this, but so be it!

The sad thing, however, is that those who follow him into the Machine Kingdom will experience a hell of a future, literally speaking. Also, there will be no escape, as the between-lives-area will probably "close down" eventually, and his human slave souls will reincarnate instantly into the cyborgs after they have died. No time for them to reflect, no time to decide goals anymore. EA doesn't want to waste his time training all these souls and then let them escape. And where have we heard about these cyborg troops before? That's right! They are the ones who in the future will reach the Pleiades and create a disaster there. And how are they described by the Pleiadians themselves? As more or less indestructible bio-machines, type the Terminator a la Schwarzenegger.

So, this is the plan that is not spoken of very much, although it's so obvious. There is a reason why I end the last Level of Learning with two papers called, "The Machine Kingdom" and "Evolving without Technology". I want people to have the chance to choose after have had both main routes we can take from here on presented to them. The Machine Kingdom in its extreme, and the evolving of mankind without technology are two main roads; the main crossroads. From there, lots of timelines are branching out in different directions, but if we choose the Machine Kingdom, don't think that any timeline that branches out from there will take us out of the trap. The sober truth is that once we're in that reality, we're pretty much stuck there for a very long time, perhaps until the bitter end, even. As we have seen, not even death will be an escape! The souls are immediately routed back into the Machine Hive.

EA/ENKI is a notorious liar. He and his son have done an excellent job rewriting history to their advantage, and people look forward to the Second Coming of EA, the "water bearer", because after all, when the Flood came, he was the one who saved mankind, so we owe him our lives. Also, because he did that, he must be our ally.

It is sad that it's come to that. Unless people brighten up and start looking into this a little deeper, EA is going to be welcomed as a long lost King or God by the New Age society, and also by many prominent researchers. Even politicians and people in high position in society will welcome him as the Savior. ENLIL, on the other hand, is the bad guy, so we need to watch out so he doesn't come back.

Now, from all we know, perhaps ENLIL was the better of the two brothers? EA and his son changed so much in the old records and included these changes in the old teaching of his Secret Societies, which still are run by the Power Elite today, with EA or MARDUK, respectively, as Grandmasters.

Still, ancient unaltered records that were hidden once upon a time by those who wanted the truth to prevail, are being found on occasion. Some of it gets in the wrong hands and is once again hidden from people, now in the hands of the same secret societies that created the lies. But a few did reach the public, such as the parts quoted below, which are old Babylonian texts. Some of it is very revealing, to say the least, and tell a whole different story about the Tower of Babel and the Deluge.

We have been taught that it was ENLIL, as the impostor YHWH, who tore down the Tower of Babel and created all the languages so man became separated from each other and could no longer communicate (in reality, it sounds like genetic manipulation all over again, where part of our DNA was rearranged and/or cut off, so we could no longer understand the language of the gods and had to develop our own languages, which were programmed into the genes). We have also been told that it was EA who saved a faction of mankind from drowning in the Flood. Well, even if he did, what was the purpose with that? Of course, EA wanted to save the Elite bloodline (Noah and his people, who were direct descendants of EA himself) to include in his future plans. And more importantly, who was it that with his lies and manipulation managed to see to that mankind could not eat from the Tree of Life and become immortal like the gods? ENLIL, right? Well, the scriptures tell us otherwise! Let's see what the ancient scriptures say. This one is called "The Babylonian (Akkadian) Tales of Beginnings: The Stories of Adapa and Etana". The emphasis is mine:

"1. The Tale of Adapa

Like "Adam," its cognate in Hebrew, the Akkadian word "Adapa" means "man." Adapa was the first of the seven sages of Eridu who lived before the flood. These sages talked with the gods, performed their rites, and helped them bring order and civilization to mankind. The story of Adapa begins by saying that Ea disclosed "the broad design of the land" to Adapa, giving him wisdom, but not "eternal life" (Dalley 184). Like the flood hero Atrahasis, Adapa is described as "extra-wise," and as particularly faithful and observant to his god Ea (Enki), baking bread and making the proper offerings of food and water every day. Adapa is also in charge of ritually assuring the fish supply, so one day, he sets out to fish, letting his boat drift rudderless in "the broad sea" (Dalley 184)--no doubt the Persian Gulf.

The South Wind (who is female) kicks up, and overturns Adapa's boat. Adapa is "plunged into the world of fish" (Sandars 171), so he curses South Wind, threatening to break her wing. Since Adapa's word is law,

*No sooner had he uttered these words
Than South Wind's wing was broken;
For seven days South Wind did not blow towards the land. (Dalley 185)*

The sky god Anu wonders about this, so he asks his vizier Ilabrat why the South Wind has not blown for seven days. Ilabrat tells Anu about Adapa breaking the wind's wing. Anu is furious. He demands that Adapa be brought before him. Ea, who knows what's going on in heaven, touches Adapa and advises him to go to heaven in rags and mourning. Adapa is to approach the two gatekeepers of Anu, Tammuz and Gizzida, and to tell them that he is mourning their absence from the earth. Ea predicts that the two gatekeepers will be pleased with this display of grief: "They will look at each other and laugh a lot, / Will speak a word in your favour to Anu" (Dalley 186). In addition to this advice, Ea advises Adapa on how to behave in the presence of Anu and the assembled gods:

*They will offer thee the food of death;
Do not eat it. The water of death they will offer thee;
Do not drink it. A garment they will offer thee;
Clothe thyself with it. Oil they will offer thee; anoint thyself with it. (Heidel 150)*

An envoy from Anu arrives and takes Adapa to heaven. At the gates, everything befalls as Ea predicted. Adapa's claim to be in mourning for the two gatekeeper gods, Tammuz and Gizzida, causes them to "laugh a lot." But Anu shouts at Adapa, "Why did you break South Wind's wing?" (Dalley 186). Adapa explains that he was just trying to fish for his lord Ea when the wind dumped him into "the world of fish," so he cursed the wind. At this point Tammuz and Gizzida speak a word in Adapa's favour to Anu. Anu's anger is softened somewhat, but nevertheless he grumbles

*Why did Ea disclose to wretched mankind
The ways of heaven and earth,
Give to them a heavy heart?
It was he who did it!
What can we do for him?
Fetch him the bread of (eternal) life and let him eat! (Dalley 187)*

Another translation renders the two middle lines above as, "He has made him strong (and) made him a name" (Heidel 151). Despite these translation difficulties, it is clear that Anu is not pleased that Ea has given Adapa magic powers like the ability to curse the wind. But as a host, Anu must show Adapa some respect and offer him food and drink, in this case the bread and water of eternal life. Adapa, however, follows Ea's instructions to the letter and refuses what he thinks are the bread and water of death. He does clothe himself with garments they offer and anoint himself with the oils they provide. Anu wonders at his guest's lack of appetite:

*'Come, Adapa, why didn't you eat? Why didn't you drink?
Didn't you want to be immortal? Alas for downtrodden people!
'(But) Ea my lord told me: "You mustn't eat! You mustn't drink!" (Dalley 187)*

Anu commands that Adapa be sent back to earth and laughs at the cleverness of Ea. Anu says, "Of the gods of heaven and earth, as many as there be, / Who ever gave such a command, / So as to make his own command exceed the command of Anu?" (Pritchard 80). The text comments that Adapa, who broke the South Wind's wing, "the man child of man" (Sandars 172), has brought illness and disease "upon the bodies of men" (Heidel 153). The text ends with a prayer to Ninkarrak, the goddess of healing, to heal the sickness of men and women."<sup>[15]</sup>

So, in this old, original scripture, it clearly says that it was EA/Lucifer who refused mankind eternal life, and in the extension of things he also started the recycling of souls (reincarnation), together with his son, MARDUK. EA and his son, by altering some prominent texts, and with some help from Sitchin and other "translators", have blamed ENLIL for being the god doing this to us. But let us not end here. Who isolated us here by separate us from each other; cutting off our ability to use the language of the gods and spread us out over the planet so we had to create and establish new languages wherever we went. This action from the gods has created not only separation between humans, but also instigated wars and conflicts because we no longer were able to understand each other. I said "gods", but again, ENLIL as YHWH has always been the one blamed for this crime, falsely so. Here is an excerpt from another text, called "Enmerkar and the Lord of Aratta". Again, the emphases are mine:

<sup>134-155</sup>Chant to him the holy song, the incantation sung in its chambers -- the incantation of Nudimmud: "On that day when there is no snake, when there is no scorpion, when there is no hyena, when there is no lion, when there is neither dog nor wolf, when there is thus neither fear nor trembling, man has no rival! At such a time, may the lands of Cubur and Hamazi, the many-tongued, and Sumer, the great mountain of the me of magnificence, and Akkad, the land possessing all that is befitting, and the Martu land, resting in security -- the whole universe, the well-guarded people -- may they all address Enlil together in a single language! For at that time, for the ambitious lords, for the ambitious princes, for the ambitious kings, Enki, for the ambitious lords, for the ambitious princes, for the ambitious kings, for the ambitious lords, for the ambitious princes, for the ambitious kings -- Enki, the lord of abundance and of steadfast decisions, the wise and knowing lord of the Land, the expert of the gods, chosen for wisdom, the lord of Eridug, shall change the speech in their mouths, as many as he had placed there, and so the speech of mankind is truly one."<sup>[16]</sup>

There is no doubt here that it was ENKI/EA who created all the languages, "as many as he had placed there", and blamed it on ENLIL. It makes us wonder who of the brothers did what. EA and MARDUK are clever; what they have done throughout history, on the most part, is to take the truth as it is and totally turned it around so that which is true becomes a lie, and what is a lie becomes the truth. And it has worked like a clock on mankind; we have swallowed it all -- line, hook, and sinker. This is the best way to create a lie that people will believe in, because the truth is embedded in it for those who have eyes to see. Not that I think ENLIL was innocent on all accounts, and he and EA had quite a few conflicts, but I do believe that ENLIL has been falsely accused of things that he is innocent of.

Regardless of that, people of today are willing to follow EA's ways, and as long as we do, we are walking willingly right down into the bottomless pit. The truth is here, and I know that many people who had embraced EA will read this. So now there is no justification for promoting EA as a "good God". EA is Lucifer, the angel who rebelled in Heaven where he created havoc. He was cast out and then came to Earth. And what did he do here? Create even more havoc! That's the nature of this "god", and everyone who follows him will go towards his or her demise and drag everybody else with them. And no, Lucifer was never redeemed, like Supriem Rockefeller said; that was another lie.

Like if this wasn't enough, consider this: EA is the eldest son of the Mother Goddess. She had big plans for him. She educated him, because she saw his brilliance and his almost endless talents, and she loved him dearly. He could have been a great angel in Heaven. Instead, he became jealous of his mother, and because of his brilliance and seductive brainwashing techniques, he managed to gather a third of the Goddess' Angels against her, and EA attacked his own Mother. Of course, EA had overestimated his brilliance and didn't stand a chance against the Archangels and the Goddess' soldiers. Michael cast Lucifer and his "dark" Angels out of Orion and told them that they were not welcome back unless they could show that they had truly changed their ways! This was a heartbreaking event for the Orion Queen, who is the Goddess manifested as the Queen of the Orion Empire in the KHAA.

Lucifer, however, had no intention to "change his ways". Instead, he felt badly mistreated and his big Ego was incredibly hurt. Anger, hate, and revenge were the thoughts that ran through his head, day and night. For perhaps millions of years he browsed the universe and probably created havoc wherever he arrived. But mainly, his thoughts were occupied with how he could take revenge on his mother, overthrow her and take over the Orion Empire, and after that, the whole universe.

Now, think of this from the Goddess' perspective. Here his son descends from the heavens, down to Earth, and starts a war against his own flesh and blood, the Titans. He drives them away and decides to use the Goddess' most beloved creation, the Namlú'u, as a slave race, and he lets them die in the mines. This was done by her own firstborn son! But as if that wasn't enough, he altered their genetics and created a new race, which was a mix of other races, and made their bodies into a trap. He took the Namlú'u spirits, and other highly evolved spirits from the universe, and trapped them into these genetically altered bodies and reduced their perceptions with 96%! In addition, Lucifer created new souls from the energy of the universe and manipulated those into the altered bodies as well. Now, Lucifer had created the worst abomination and crime a being could create -- he had totally devastated the Goddess! Then he kicked these new beings, Homo sapiens, into the mines and let them slave for him until they died. The few Namlú'u that were left on the planet decided to leave. In addition, he and his Fallen Angels raped the earthly women and created children with them; something which is a high crime according to universal law!!! You can't go to an evolving planet and have sex with its evolving habitants. That's a very serious crime, and in this case, it was like raping Mother Earth herself.

Now, Mother Earth had been totally hijacked by her own son. In addition, he changed the frequency of the planet and sealed it off! Only Lucifer could now decide who was allowed on the planet. He also set up the Council of Saturn to make sure no uninvited visitors entered the solar system.

The Mother Goddess love Homo sapiens, even though we are just watered-down versions of the original Namlú'u human race which she once created. But humanity still has the Fire of the Goddess, and this is something she could most certainly enhance in us from being the Earth Mother. Lucifer could never take that away from us. But his plans didn't stop here. He wants to totally intimidate the Goddess before he takes over Orion and the rest of the KHAA. Therefore, his plan is to manipulate mankind to such a degree that we in our ignorance and total oblivion agrees to being made into machines and to start a war against our original Creator God and her helpers -- the Mother Goddess! This is Lucifer's ultimate evil plan; to use the Goddess' most beloved creation against her in a devastating war, where the Queen of Orion has no other choice than to open fire against her own human race, who will furiously attack her, not knowing any better! In the process, most, if not all, of humanity will be eradicated and their avatars blown to pieces by the "weapons of the gods". This is the future in which the Machine Kingdom is just the beginning! Want to join? I didn't think so.

Personally, I wouldn't be surprised if EA doesn't care too much whether he wins the war against Orion or not. I can see him sit in the background, laughing hysterically while humans are killed in droves before his eyes. Even if Lucifer loses the war, he may consider that he got his revenge anyway. He had his mother being forced to kill what is left of her own creation.

Remember that this is his plan! But will he succeed? We don't know; we really don't know. The odd thing here is that we have been able in these papers to look way into the future with a lot of certainty thanks to the channeled sources. The Grays, who are us in the future -- the "time jumpers" -- have showed us where humanity is heading on any and many of the timelines that branch out from the Machine Kingdom. We have been shown what is going to happen thousands and thousands of years into the future. But here is the odd thing: it stops with the Essassani Grays (Bashar). They are the "end product". What happens after that? We have no clue; it's like time stops there and we can't go any further. Why?

What about if we speculate then? It is my understanding that Lucifer wants to create Social Memory Complexes (also called "Collective Consciousness) in order to more easily manipulate us into this war against Orion. However, it seems like this war is not happening. Instead, somewhere along the lines of time, mankind either manages to break out of Lucifer's grip and become left on their own, evolving as Social Memory Complexes. However, after have been manipulated for so long by Lucifer and his Fallen Angels, these collectives are still trying to evolve beyond the 8th Dimension, but have no clue what is waiting there for them. When RA is asked that question, they say they don't know what's beyond this "Octave". It sounds like somewhere, perhaps still on Earth, this Supercomputer still exists, manipulating the future mankind in form of a Social Memory Complex, in the same fashion it was basically set up. On these timelines, such as that of the RA people, EA may still work in the background, but there are Grays from the future, who seems to be independent from Lucifer's grip and able to come back here in attempts to switch back to our present DNA set up, so they can become humanized again. I see no reason why Lucifer would let them do that, unless they are renegades, just like the Pleiadians. It's hard, if not impossible to know.

Nowhere, however, do we hear about a future war with Orion. This makes me think that Lucifer/EA was stopped somewhere along the line, or perhaps, on the timelines available to us, the war hasn't happened yet. Like I said, we can only speculate. I have clearly seen his plan, but I can't see the outcome. Knowing what I know about Orion, I don't think that even with humanity's help, EA would be able to defeat the Orion Empire. That to me seems out of the questions. What seems totally plausible, however, is that humanity will go along with EA's plans, and as usual be used as cannon fodder and run towards their own demise; all because they never bothered to find out what was really going on. Therefore, in their ignorance, they will choose the wrong side. Only a small percentage of mankind will survive, and those are the ones who choose to evolve without alien technology! We are humanity's only chance, and the only ones who will acknowledge the Goddess as our Creator and honor her manifestation as Mother Gaia. In a future version of herself, we will nurture her like she will nurture us in a symbiosis where balance and happiness is restored, and the New Human of the New Era will be the beginning of a new species. We are the survivors!

VIII. The Hell Dimension

There are apparently only eight dimensions in the 4% universe we humans are entitled to explore as long as we are under Lucifer's command. However, there is a sealed off part of one of the dimensions that he has created for a specific purpose; something that I heard from the horse's mouth. Anton Parks brings it up too in his research on the "Anunnaki". The Orion Group has created what they seem to call a "Hell Dimension". I hope this is only a scare tactic and that it doesn't exist, and I have waited until now with talking about it, going back and forth whether I should mention it at all. Then I thought, why would I start keeping information from people now, when I have revealed all this other stuff? I know it's not pleasant, but none of it is, and after all, it's always better to know than to live in oblivion.

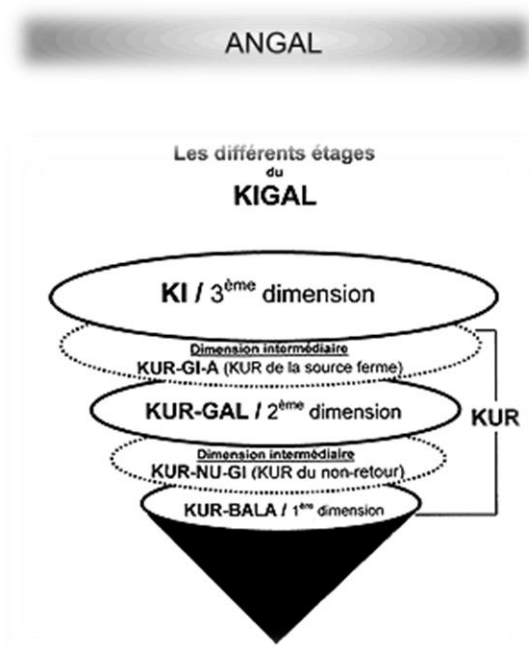

Figure 11. The Dimensions according to Anton Parks. The ANGAL is equivalent to the KHAA (the VOID) and KUR-NU-GI is the "Hell Dimension"

Those who want to see Anton Parks's description of the Hell Dimension can go to the website created by the Zeitlin couple, who are good friends with Parks and have translated parts of his work from French to English on their site. Here is the page describing the different dimensions, and check out the KUR-NU-GI dimension in particular: <http://www.zeitlin.net/EndEnchantment/Secret2.html#Dimensions>.

The reader can probably imagine that I've been under attack since I started writing my papers. Especially so since I started writing Level II and all the way up to present. It has come in waves, and I can see that certain papers are more "sensitive" than others and have most certainly bothered and annoyed particular people in power. The worst attack I had, though, was in dream state, where I was shown the "Hell Dimension" and what it actually is. It has nothing to do with Eternal Fire. Let me explain by telling you about my dream:

The dream started with that I was on the ship that was used in the "Philadelphia Experiment"[17]. People started getting stuck in the walls and on the floor and became "one" with the ship. Everybody was screaming in fear and terror and running in all directions, trying to get away from this nightmare. I was running in one direction together with three or four other people. I didn't recognize any of the faces in the dream.

Then everything went dark for what I perceived a long time. There was nothing besides darkness. My body was gone and it was only me left, the soul/Avatar. Then, all of a sudden it got a little lighter, but still quite dim; I couldn't see any details. The next thing I know, I (my soul) bumped into some kind of black box on the floor, bounced one time and landed on the floor beside the box. Again, it was only me without a physical body. I had no particular feelings at the time, except confusion. I didn't know where I was.

I did what I could, trying to orientate myself and floated up in mid air. Then I noticed that I apparently was in a room of some sort, and it was dark, like I said, but dim enough for me to be able to see the walls. So I was apparently in what looked like some kind of room, about 25ft<sup>2</sup>. I thought, "OK, at least I am alive. Let's see where the door or the opening is". I floated around in that little space trying to find a door or a way out, but couldn't find any. I was trapped in a 25ft<sup>2</sup> space with nowhere to go. I was thinking that due to that I was in spirit form, I could maybe float through the walls, but I just bounced! That's when I started feeling desperate. I sat still for a while, listening, but it was extremely quiet; the quietest place I've ever been in. There seemed to be no one around. I started shouting, "Hello?", but of course I didn't have a voice like a body does, so it was more like a telepathic thought that I transmitted. No answer. That's when I totally realized that I was trapped and there was no one around, and no one was going to come and let me out! For a second I thought, "They have to come and give me food soon!", but I realized that souls need no food! The last thought I had was a devastating one: "Oh no! I am trapped here forever! They can keep me here for an eternity, and I can't even die! It's the ultimate trap! And the worst thing is, I have no idea where I am! Am I on Earth? Another planet? Where?????"

I remember I was totally desperate and terrified. Then I woke up, chipping for air.

The next morning, before my wife woke up so I could tell her about the dream, I told a friend of mine about it. That's when I realized what this was all about. The Sirians had visited me in dream state and threw my soul into their "Hell Dimension", so I could see how it is! And I also then remembered a quick thought I had in my dream, "If you don't stop, this is what's waiting!" Then I had little doubt that they had actually showed me Hell, and that's where they want to put me unless I stop writing. It was quite a hard decision to know what to do next, but I decided that I am not going to let them stop me. If what they threatened me with is actually true (and it was pretty true while I was dreaming it), and that's what they are planning for me, it's not a pleasant thought, but this is so much bigger than I, and if this information is not coming out now, no one else is going to do it, either. At least not any time soon, and then it may be too late.

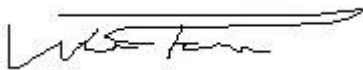

I know that this will scare a few readers, and I am sorry about that. It's not my intention, but this is what happened to me. Will it happen to you? I doubt it! It may not happen to me, either, but was just a threat to stop me from continuing. The solution is still to evolve like we have talked about. When we leave our bodies, we know who we are and we vibrate on a much higher level than they do. Put a bubble around you when you leave this world and let no one come inside that bubble, no matter what. Then, if you have decided what to do, do it and let nothing distract you! More about "Exit Plans" in the last paper!

I want to end this paper on a good note! While I was writing the Lucifer section of this paper, a Pleiadian Newsletter came in the mail. They said they are very excited, because mankind has managed to energize the timeline where we evolve without technology! They told us in the letter that what they had come here to accomplish has been accomplished by us! What this means is that enough people have raised their frequency enough to change the positive timeline from a potential timeline to a real timeline. Enough energy is put towards creating this new reality that it is actually going to happen! If this is true (and I really believe it is, because I can feel it in my heart!), it's the best news we've received in years and years. We have done the right thing and now we just have to follow through and continue doing what we're doing, and we can eventually achieve our goal to live in a world free from oppression and Sirian presence. Congratulations!

The Pleiadians continued by saying that they will still be here long after the nano-second and communicate through Barbara Marciniak as long as she is strong enough to hold their energy (only age and sickness can stop her from doing that, and she is after all 65 years old). This Pleiadian renegade group wants to be here and guide us and answer our questions in order to help us rebuild a new society. However, as always, they tell us that we are the ones who have to do it; they are just here to observe and give advice when asked for.

The next, and the very last paper, will be exactly about what the Pleiadians talk about in the above paragraphs; the evolution without technology! I'll see you there!

Love,

Wes Penre

[5] Some say that the tension between the U.S. and the Soviet Union after the war was just a play for the masses, and the "Cold War" never existed; that too was only to keep people on their toes. There is evidence enough to back up those statements, but on a lower level government, the Cold War existed. Remember how everything is a hierarchy and on a need-to-know-basis.

Paper #10: The Splitting of the Worlds Part 2: Evolving without Technology

I. Confronting our Dark Side

Now when the reader has read through three levels of material, about 1,500 pages all together, have you noticed something pretty astonishing? Although perhaps 2/3 of this material has been about the Sirians and their control over mankind, which could potentially make these paper "fear-based", what do you feel right now? Do you feel afraid, or do you feel stronger and more uplifted than before you started reading it?

Albeit there are probably a few who would say they are afraid, the vast majority are probably feeling what I feel -- enhanced spiritually. But how can that be? Most of this material, except the "Soulution Sections", which end each Level, are not talking about uplifting things, but mainly about the slave society we've lived in since we were created as Homo sapiens.

It's because this material is telling the truth and therefore stimulate the neurological pathways, and also create new ones.

There was a point in my writing, before I even started on Level I, when I realized that we as a species won't be able to go any further until we've learned to confront our dark sides. We all have a tendency to be willing to look at our "good" sides, and all the new abilities we are going to achieve if we follow the Path of Light. But very few are digging deep inside their own roots and stir around in the darkness of the very soul. This, however, is what these papers have done. By telling the dark history about humanity, we have been able to see humanity's own involvement in what has happened, and mostly unconsciously been able to call up the timelines connected to these major solidifying events. Albeit some of the true story about mankind's past has been told elsewhere, some of the events that have been really traumatizing and hooked us in 3D, have never before been told. On top of that, very few have told us where we come from and who is our real Creator. The only version we actually have ever heard is the version where the coin is flipped; black is white, good is evil, foe is friend, and so on. What do you think happens when some beings (in this case EA and MARDUK) change history by turning the truth around and present its opposite as the truth? We will be stuck in our timelines, and past life events will keep us imprisoned in this reality, because we can never break the chain of events in our own minds. This is why I have been talking about that our timelines will merge before we can break loose and become multi-d. The events and the lies that have kept us stuck in the past must be confronted, pondered, and realized.

But not only that. We must also break the chains from our future; the future timelines, such as those of the Machine Kingdom, which we don't want to participate in, but perhaps we will -- on a timeline or two. Therefore, we must also confront the future and merge these timelines as well. My efforts are an attempt to make this happen. However, I'm not the only source to make this happen, and it's also part of a natural phenomenon which has to do with our alignment with the Galactic Centers.

What will happen when you read this material is therefore basically twofold: 1) you have gotten a much truer history of mankind presented to you, which will flip the coin back with the right side up. You will see things for what they are and your timelines will unhook from events that were suppressed in space and time and therefore stuck there. Sometimes you feel you are able to expand on what is written here, and you create your own "bigger picture" -- it just comes to you. Like a rubber-band, your timelines -- past and future -- will snap and return to you, and you become much more whole. This can be tough and traumatic at first, and requires courage, because some of these events include violence and grief, but once they are seen for what they are the emotional charge will be taken off of them and remain as experience only. This doesn't mean you necessarily will remember all these timelines (or you would be quite overwhelmed), but you feel the emotionality of them. 2) By confronting the darkness of your own soul, you then stand on neutral ground and are ready to make a totally conscious decision about your own future for the first time ever, perhaps. Your heart chakra is opened, your neurological pathway clear, and new neuro-pathways opened. You are ready to meet new challenges, but this time they are based on your own decisions, not some manipulation done by an outside force. This is why you amazingly enough probably feel much more stable and sure of yourself now than you did before you read this material.

There is a disinformation campaign being run as we speak (and has been for quite some time) that we should only look at the positive side of things, because then we will only get positive effects back. However, if we look at the dark side and that which is set up to scare us, fear and negativity is what we get in return. If we follow that advice we get blind to 50% of whom we are, and we end up with Steven Greer, who says that all aliens are benevolent, without exceptions. That's blindness. No, we have to look at both sides of ourselves, and we need to start with the dark side, or the dark side will make it very hard to genuinely expand on the light side. By bringing up the darkness to the surface and take a look at it, we also are much less prone to being effected by the negativity around us; we simply don't take it in anymore, because we know where it is and how it works. This is a requirement in order to be able to build the New Era. We don't need to be 100% perfect with it, but if you've reached the point I'm speaking of, you know and feel what I mean. After all, we can talk about Global Warming, the toxins we spread around in our atmosphere in form of chemtrails (something Bill Gates clearly admitted to exist, by the way)[1], oil spill, nuclear fallout, etc., but the worst toxic "chemicals" we spread on the planet are those of our own, unfronted negative emotions.

Also, if we don't know our own history, good or bad, we don't know ourselves, and can't create a harmonious future for ourselves. So I thank you from the bottom of my heart for staying with me! The dark side of humanity's history has now been confronted enough, in my opinion, for us to start concentrating on the positive paths. I am painfully aware of that only a handful individual so far have read my papers (around 60,000 all together since I launched Level I in October, 2011), and many of them did not complete them, but on the other hand, these papers are not written for those who just woke up and started looking for the truth. There is other material they need to look into first, such as that at <http://illuminati-news.com>. I am convinced that much more people will find this material in the near future. It will be here, floating in time.

I ask the reader to please do me a favor, however. Please download the pdf versions of each paper on your hard drive as soon as you can; hopefully already when you start reading a certain paper. By doing so, I know that this material is safe. Even if the Internet goes down in the future, the material lives on with you, the reader, and can be printed and spread in other ways. It also may save my life. And if not -- even if they get to me -- I can smile, because I know that my work was not in vain and will live on after my own demise. Thank you!

II. Creating a Safe Environment for Self and Others

I can't stress enough how important it is to love yourself. If you don't, you can't love others either, and you get stuck. You need to feel deep inside that you deserve what is absolute best for you, now and in the future. For many people, these are no easy things. Deservability is a heart quality.

Too many people sacrifice themselves for others. Since the old Shakespearean dramas and way further back, people have learned from Sirian art and manipulation that others are more important than you. They knew they could get away with that, because we humans basically have a good heart and care for each other. There are people who have set it as a goal in their life to help others. This is a very honorable thing and it's nothing wrong with that. Only if you constantly help others over and over again to the extent that you exhaust and sacrifice yourself is it something you perhaps need to reconsider. If you're one of those, what is it in yourself that you don't like? What is it that makes you think that others deserve more than you? When others become more important than yourself, there is a lack of self-love, self-respect, and "deservability".

Then, of course, we have the other side of it, where you are not doing another person a favor when you constantly help her or him out. Everybody is on their own journey, and if you constantly interfere with the challenges this other person has to face, they will never learn. You may be able to solve the problem for them, but if you do, there is no lesson learned. Instead, giving a hint of advice to lead the person on the right track if they're stuck is much more help than helping "hands on". Then, of course, we need to use our judgment; if a person is getting raped, beaten up, or otherwise abused, we don't just stand and look and tell ourselves it's these people's learning lessons. But the bottom line I am trying to get across is that when you start loving, respecting, and trusting yourself, it's coming right out of the heart chakra, and you will notice that all your relationships, whether they are family, friends, or work partners, will be based on the same qualities. It's inevitable.

What we who have decided to choose this alternative route, free from the Machine Society, are doing is that we are bringing ourselves and others out of the solar plexus chakra, based on fear, to the heart chakra, based on love and compassion. So in that sense you could say we are ascending, because we are vibrating on a higher frequency where fear is more or less out of our lives. This is also why we had to confront the fear on a mass consciousness scale (which includes the whole human soul group), to move up from the stomach to the heart. Those who will choose the Machine Kingdom are still living in fear, basing their entire existence on the solar plexus chakra. They never had the courage to look what was deeply embedded there, and their way of conquering their fear was to go with the fear mongers, thinking they could keep them safe as long as they do what the fear mongers say. This is how the tune goes, both on an overt and a covert plane. And when I'm talking about the heart, I clearly mean the heart chakra and not particularly the physical heart, although the physical heart is the physical part of it, and a portal into the deeper aspects of the chakra, dwelling inside of ourselves, on a subquantum level. People who think very little, or hardly at all, from their heart chakras, have a higher risk of heart attacks than those who have their chakras more open. So in the extension of things; the more chakras we have managed to open, in general, the healthier we become, and we enhance our longevity. Science says that the human body as it is can live maximum 120 years and that it is impossible to live longer than that. If this is true, it only goes for the old human, but not for Homo Nova[2], who will be able to live much longer than that in the future. Some may ask why we want to live that long if we get old and sick, but the whole point is that we should be able to live long lives without getting the regular elderly symptoms, so common and almost unavoidable for today's Homo sapiens.

We are all children of Nature -- all of us. Although our bodies were manipulated many times throughout history, no one could take away the fact that we belong to Mother Nature. There are those who want to create the ultimate abomination, trying to disconnect our bodies from Nature by making us into machines so we never again will remember where we came from, and on many timelines they will succeed. I am not alone; there are others who strive towards the same goal as I do -- to keep a branch of humanity alive, a branch which will not forget who our Goddess and Creator is, and our relationship and bond to her.

This is why it's so important that we reconnect with Nature. With that I don't mean that we take Sunday trips into the woods, sit on rocks and drink warm chocolate. We can do that, too, if we like, but connecting with Nature is so much more than that. We see in Hollywood movies -- the ones which are magical -- how people talk telepathically with the animal and listen to the trees. This is what we're going to be able to do (and many are already doing). On Earth everything is connected; rocks, plants, animals, and humans. What the Sirian Overlords did was to turn off our switch so the energies that connected us with Nature didn't find anywhere to go. Now it's our task to turn on that switch again.

To learn about Nature is to learn about ourselves and vice versa. We all potentially have the ability to go out in the woods, up in the mountains, out in the desert, or to the beach, and just sit down and listen to Nature. Although there may be a stillness and an apparent silence where you stay, there is much going on in other dimensions of reality. All we have to do is to listen to what is there and start communicating. The trees have quite a story to tell, and so do the rocks, the rhythm of the waves, and the old mountains. Once upon a time we were the Guardians of all this, and we always knew what was going on around us. We knew that everything was encoded and bore the imprint of the original Creator God that created it. Through Nature we could communicate with the whole universe, and we could communicate with our own Creator Gods, regardless of where they were. Now it's become a one-way communication. We can be communicated to, but we don't respond because we no longer hear the communication in our bodies. Instead of using our bodies as an instrument to communicate in the Multiverse, we have become afraid of our own bodies. No wonder we get sick. When the body feels we don't love her, and actually fear her, she responds by getting sick. Separation from the body is a separation from God/the Goddess.

As a fun thing you can try in the beginning is to communicate telepathically with butterflies. They are enormously clairvoyant. Every summer, just because I enjoy it, I sit on my porch next to a flowerbed early in the morning and wait for the first butterfly to come. When it does, I start with saying "hi" to it, telepathically, and follow its path with my eyes. Then I tell it how beautiful it is and how much I enjoy having it around. Next, I ask it to come closer, and it does -- carefully at first. I send a lot of love and affection towards it and that makes it come and circle around me and even land on the table just in front of me. When it takes off, I again follow its path and tell it how wonderful it is, and it's like it wants to show off because I recognize it. Lastly, I tell her to go and ask more butterflies to come, and sure enough, a minute later several of them show up in the flowerbed, together with the original one. It works like magic, but still it's so natural.

What happens here is that I am not necessarily communicating with the insect itself, but with the intelligence behind it; the God or Goddess who created her. The fact that a human once again recognizes that there is intelligence in the small things makes the force want to play along to show me that what I'm doing is noticed and appreciated. Try it! Practice! Do it with other insects too, if you wish, and with squirrels and birds. You are going to find that you are able to attract a lot of animals in your yard, or whatever environment you live in. Then they are going to return because they feel and recognize your energies. The animal and plant Queendoms know who you are. By doing this, and by accomplishing the above, you prove to yourself that everything in the universe is connected and in communication across the dimensions. We are only trapped here if we agree to it. I spoke in earlier papers about us being "allowed" to enter 8 of the 12 major dimensions, and only a very limited part of them (4% of the whole universe), but disagree with this, open up your chakras, one by one, and you will see that eventually, a whole new universe is opening up before your eyes. You are manifesting your Inner Universe in the Outside Universe in order to be able to explore, but in reality every cell in your body is a galaxy, just like Abraxas, the Dragon walk-in, said on the Gaia forum (see Level III, papers 5 and 6). As above, so below. Go inside, and the whole Multiverse will open up, literally.

However, this will not happen in one day; it's a process, and it's practice that is leading us there. Still, we need to understand that all the above is possible to regain, and in an upcoming book I will go into details about how we can obtain these abilities and much more; i.e. the process of becoming multidimensional. The first thing we need to do, however, is to create a safe environment for ourselves, now that we know what we're facing when comes to high-tech timelines and artificial intelligence.

Regardless if you're all alone, have a small or large circle of friends, if you're married and have family or not, you need to create your own "Local Universe". I first heard of this concept from James of the WingMakers when he explained it in an interview with Mark Hempel. I then knew right away that this is the way to create our new timelines in the beginning of the New Era, i.e. now, in this present moment. The Local Universe is defined as your local environment, which could be your neighborhood, your town, or a wider area in which you operate. If you take this area and tell yourself that this is your current Local Universe, which at any time can expand or retract, and then fill that area with whatever you wish that area to be or become -- you do it in your mind. You also include the safety or people, animals, and whomever or whatever lives in this specific locality. Perhaps you live in a Local Universe which is more or less how you want it to be, and you feel safe, or maybe there are quite a few things you need to improve to come to that point? No matter which it is, you are now going to imagine exactly how you want your Local Universe to be in order to be safe and according to the reality you wish for yourself.

Then you hold that picture and tell yourself that this is your Local Universe in which you live, and these are the things you want to approve (or keep as they are). Don't force that reality on your environment; just put a light thought and a positive emotion to it and let it go. Then, if something happens which is not in line with what you want to be safe, you once again put your picture there, lightly and with a positive emotion, and let it go. Soon enough, you're going to notice that things around you start to change and the energies are going to twist and bend in the direction towards your goals.

Under some circumstances, if the reader lives in a very bad neighborhood with a lot of crimes and people who emit an unusual amount of fear, it may not matter what you do; you will still live in a very unsafe area. In that case, there is no other option than to move. You may tell me that your circumstances are such as you can't move, but then your energy must go towards making that your first goal instead of what I've suggested above. Optimally, this would already have been taken care of during the nano-second.

For this to really work, you need to understand the dynamics around it. When I say Local Universe, I really mean it. That is your universe in which you currently live. Let's say you live on the American west coast. Then, what happens in Israel and Palestine, in Syria, or in Egypt, is not part of your Local Universe. Neither is Washington DC and the political environment there. If you read the newspaper about war and disaster in one area of the world, you must remember that it's another Local Universe you are reading about, not yours. This is very important to understand, because people have a tendency to sympathize with what is happening outside their own Local Universe. Sympathy pulls those energies towards you; it has that quality, and that is not what you want, because then things soon may start going "wrong" in your own environment. You don't want to pull in negative energies in your space if you can help it.

In the extreme, the same reader of the newspaper may feel that they want to take the first plane to the area of unrest and do something to help. This is their choice, but know in that case that you extend your Local Universe to that war zone, and it will in one way or the other affect your whole Local Universe, which will then have a tendency of unrest. In addition; when you leave the area of unrest, the same unrest you came to help resolving will continue just like before. One thing Homo Nova has to understand is that we can't solve the world problems, because they don't want to be solved. The Sirian Alliance is there, seeing to that the wars and unrest are always happening regardless of what you do. Your task is to create peace and rest in your own area. When you do, others will feel it and start doing the same thing, and it will spread amongst the mass consciousness so others, outside your Local Universe will start to apply similar ways of living. Eventually, people can extend their areas, combine their areas and change the vibrations more rapidly amongst those who are still receptive to those positive kind of energies. This is in no way a suggestion of limiting your space. At any time, we can go visiting other universes (other parts of the world) to study them or enjoy what they have to offer, but keep in mind that we're only visiting, and when we come back home, our task is as always to keep our local universe safe. I hope the reader gets the drift here.

III. Building Communities

Some people will notice that they are able to create such a safe environment exactly where they live, with their current neighbors and in the current little town in which they may live and therefore have little need to move to some kind of community to live with likeminded. There is no need to change something that is already working for you. In other cases, Section II above has prepared you how to use your energy on your environment; an ability you may want to use when it's time to perhaps get together with likeminded.

Like we talked about in the previous paper, businesses will move into the big SmartCities and leave nearly nothing left in the smaller towns and cities, which will sometimes become just like ghost towns. Here is where some people with a similar mindset may want to build their new communities, which are based on self-sufficiency. People will build their own gardens and plant their own food and live close to Nature. Those who have studied rituals will know how to make contact with Mother Earth through those, which will help the crops grow, etc. This is basically nothing new, but more a matter of going back to the "old ways", before we became "civilized".

This way of living may in the beginning be attacked by the authorities, who will create laws against planting anything at all that is not GM food (genetically manipulated food) and Monsanto based, and people may have to shut down their gardens, only to either start them up again when the government inspector has left, or move to somewhere else until the authorities give up. They will have plenty to take care of elsewhere, and the communities will be more and more, which will eventually make it hard for the inspections to take place at all. And people will become quite clever at tricking the government once they learn how their bureaucracy works. It can be frustrating and inconvenient at first, but it's a matter of being persistent.

There are going to be people who want to have nothing to do with technology or society whatsoever and simply move up in the mountains or deep into the forests and build their communities there, like many did in the 70s and 80s. Some say that wouldn't work, because it didn't work back then, but back in the hippie era, very little was known about what is going on in the world. The young generation felt something was wrong and that there was too much corruption in high places, but they didn't know what we know now. If they would have, these people would have been more serious about it, and there would have been a much greater chance that it would have worked.

Lastly, some communities are probably also going to be built out of anger and disgust. People will be so furious when they notice the extent of deception their leaders have subjected them to that they will leave society in pure rage and build their own communities, refusing to pay taxes that support the crimes of the few. These communities, over time, may very well also turn into very positive ones, so there will be many different ways how these communities will start. Other people may prefer to live alone but still be self-sufficient and only sporadically connect to a community, and that will also be well accepted. There will be many different ways to do this, and how it's done is not of that much importance; the important thing is that we break out of the manipulation we are living under and refuse to be slaves under the Machine Kingdom. It's the thought form that is important, and that we put energy on that thought form.

People are asking if these future communities will have any leaders. I would think that there will be a mix; some communities will have their local leaders, which the rest of the community has appointed.

These local leaders will not live in a special building where they can get away with doing harmful things, but will live among the rest of the people, like one of them. The only reason someone is appointed will probably be because some people have excellent leader skills, which is not a bad thing if they lead from their heart chakra and listen to the rest of the community and don't make important decisions behind their backs. The best leader is one who knows what the people want and gets the job done in such a laid back way that the people think it was them who did it, and it was done exactly the way they wanted it!

Other communities may prefer not to have leaders, but instead have other ways to deal with things internally.

IV. Humane Meritocracy

So far, all political systems have failed, regardless of which time period we are looking at. I know that interdimensional forces have had their hands on everything, which certainly has contributed to the failures, but we still need something new and fresh.

A few years ago, I looked into the philosophy of The Bavarian Illuminati in its present form, which supposedly is different from how it was back in the revolutionary days of the late 1700s, when Adam Weishaupt was the Grandmaster of the Order. I was at the time also into the WingMakers philosophy and noticed that the two had much in common. The common thing that stood out the most was to merge religion and science in order for mankind to evolve. There was also a lot of other philosophical teaching I liked on the Bavarian Illuminati website, which you can find at <http://armageddonconspiracy.co.uk/>. What I liked the most was the idea of Meritocracy, although I didn't agree with all the rules and regulations connected to it. I am not going to go into their philosophies here -- that's something the reader can do if you feel inclined -- but instead present my own solution to the political problem.

First of all, I am not for any political solution at all; I simply don't like politics, because it limits people under laws and regulations. That's exactly what has kept us from expanding both spiritually and mentally. So my solution will therefore be non-political. The question is, how do we create a community, or a new society where the citizens will feel valued, loved, and happy? And how can we manage a society which is not based on money, and where everything is free? Alex Collier, when he explained to the Andromedans how our monetary system works, they stood and listened in awe and finally said something to the effect, "why do you have to pay for things on the planet where you were born?" There is a lot of wisdom in that single question.

My solution is Meritocracy, just like the Illuminati suggests, but to make sure people know that I differ in opinion, I will call my version of it Humane Meritocracy, at least for now. In short, this is how it works: in the near future society, people will be much more psychic and observant when comes to their environment. Therefore, they will notice very quickly if a little child has a certain talent that he or she is projecting. Perhaps the child starts singing before they can talk; maybe they're very interested in playing an instrument? It could be they like to build things? Maybe they lean towards astronomy, cooking, playing doctor...the list goes on. One of the most important task for a parent will be to recognize these talents in the kids and let the kids develop them as they wish without interference other than if they hurt themselves or others.

When the kid becomes a little older, the parents may ask them what they want to be when they grow up. You will get the answer right there, and it may or may not correspond with what the parents thought it was. Either way, support the kids. Elementary school will be very different from now, and the general subjects will bring up things that the pupils will really need to learn; not irrelevant stuff that doesn't have any value in the future for anybody. But the key thing is that both the teachers, parents, and the kids work in unison to find out what the kids like to do the most and enhance that. It is okay for the kids to change their minds when they get a little older -- many probably won't, but find early in life what they want to do if they are encouraged. Soon we have a society built on merit, not on Elite Bloodlines and how they want things to be. If a kid likes to hammer and build, maybe carpentry or construction work is something they want to do, while others want to entertain. All the variety will put each person in the right place and people will be happy doing what they're best at and like the best. Money is unnecessary, as everything is built on barter. No trade is more worth, or higher in rank than any other trade, as they are all important for the group. If someone wants a house built, carpenters can do it, and you may give them something you have in exchange. If you don't have something that is considered being of equal value, you contribute with what you have or with what you can do, and that's fine. Many people will have many talents, being both carpenters, entertainers, and gardeners in one, and if so, they can decide what they want to contribute with at the moment and switch between the trades to make life more interesting. And there will be local libraries which have material where the information is undistorted and helpful for the individual to expand their awareness, and time of the day will be spent on spiritual enhancement. The purpose is that people will get much more freedom and be able to create their own day and still be able to survive.

All these things need to be talked about within the community so the details can be discussed and agreed upon. But I think Humane Meritocracy may be a good beginning for our new societies. Someone may come up that works better, and if so, then that is what we should use! Mine is just an idea, but I do think it's important that every person feel they are in the right place and are able to make a contribution of some kind. And why not do it in an area which you are skilled enjoy working in, anyway?

The new human, Homo Nova, is already psychic, whether we are aware of it or not. Coming together in groups will enhance those abilities in people and those who thought they weren't will notice that they actually are. We will realize that to totally understand another being, whether it's another human, an animal, or a plant, we need to become what we want to understand. The Native Indians have a good saying for it: "Before you judge somebody, you need to be able to walk in that person's moccasins". The same thing goes if you want to understand Nature. Let's say you are wondering how it is to be an ant; then you have to sit down and patiently watch what ants are doing and transfer parts of your consciousness into one or more of these ants and live like them. Not until then can you understand what it means to be an ant. The same thing will happen in communities. The evolved human will not judge another until he or she has walked in that person's moccasins, and therefore much of what now in 3D is a hassle will be much easier as we have changed our frequencies and learned to live accordingly with our new abilities. The old human "reacts" to its environment, while Homo Nova, who have merged their timelines, will act rather than re-act. Thus, obstacles we were used to having are no longer an issue, but new obstacles will build instead, which will feel much more challenging, often in a positive way, than those built on functional insanity, which is the definition of the Old Era.

V. The Divine Feminine in Future Societies

In the future societies, and the more awareness grows, the Divine Feminine will be much more predominant as a "religion". It's not a matter of a religion of worship at all, but the Wisdom of the Divine Feminine will be totally understood. The female will be much more respected and attended to than we are used to in today's society. If you are really willing to listen to your wife, you notice that she carries a lot of wisdom which you may wonder where it all of a sudden comes from. Well, it was always there, but suppressed, perhaps unintentionally by yourself, but definitely by society in general.

We are not looking at a society where we worship our women; we still need to look for balance, but we will notice more and more that when we need good advice and spiritual enhancement, we will more often than not attend to a woman. Wisdom must be protected, and we men will protect our women; it's part of our job. We will also think of it as obvious that the universe is feminine in nature and that everything was feminine to begin with.

VI. Indigo Children

I have not mentioned much about these phenomenal kids in my writings so far, and that's intentional. I am very ambivalent when comes to using these terms, because they have been so used, misused and abused by those who don't have any good intentions towards this new generation of children. They are children, period, and I don't like to put labels on them.

Especially during the nano-second, we have seen kids with extraordinary abilities being born into this world. These children are "simply" the new Homo Nova in enhanced bodies that vibrate on a higher frequency than their environment. That makes them very talented and they often have psychic abilities way beyond other children around them. As soon as this was noticed, society, and even their parents, were quick at labeling these kids and therefore making them special and for more than other kids. This has created two major problems.

The first problem is that these poor kids are prone to feeling alienated from their environment and other children, and they often have a hard time with relationships with others. Also, it's difficult for them at times to live up to their expectations. If their parents, teachers, and society in general call them "special", they have to really show that they are special, and often get the feeling that whatever they do, it's not enough. "Am I 'special' enough now?" "Today I couldn't do what I could do yesterday. I feel like a failure". These kind of thoughts will come up in many of these children. Of course, their parents may be proud over their kids having these extra talents and want to "brag" about it and show the world what their very own child can do. But we need to understand that this can be quite destructive for the kids themselves. Instead, recognize the abilities in your children, because more and more of them will be born from here on, and let them develop these talents in their own pace. Never say to your children that they are "special"! This goes for so-called Indigo Children or "regular" children, respectively. We have had enough of Elitism, and this is exactly what we are coming back to if we call someone special. They will have enough problems as it is to adjust to a society that doesn't understand them; they don't need their parents and others to put additional pressure on them. Remember that these kids are our future! Let's not start our New Era with traumatizing our talented kids by labeling them "special".

The second problem is that when we are announcing that so and so parent has an Indigo child, the government knows where they are and are often quick at targeting these kids. They want them to experiment on, now and in the future. Again, the Sirians don't understand higher consciousness in the form the Namlú'u of old had it; they don't understand Homo sapiens, and they certainly will not understand Homo Nova. There will be a turning point when the Alliance no longer will harass those of higher consciousness, and leave us alone, simply because we understand the rules now and can say "no" to further manipulation, abductions, and experiments. Homo sapiens can't, because they are too deep into it at this point and the majority of them seem to be beyond salvation, unfortunately.

However, Indigo children is a quite new phenomenon, and both human military and the Sirian Alliance want to know what's going on with these kids, and perhaps, as a last attempt, they can learn how we function and be able to break the originally DNA code. Therefore, scientists have been working with these kids with the parents' consent for quite a while now to figure out how their psychic abilities work and where their extraordinary talents come from. Some parents, proud over their child, have been happy to let scientists make experiments on him or her, unfortunately.

So, bottom line in my opinion is to leave these kids alone and let their development come in their own pace. In the meantime, treat them as regular children, have them play with regular children and make them feel that they belong. Acknowledge and encourage their talents, but don't make them feel special and for more than other kids. In the future, when these kids are born within the communities, their talents and abilities will be considered quite normal, and we will not pay much extra attention to them in that sense, because most people will be like them.

VII. Another Choice for the Future: Do We Want to Come Back to Earth or "Move On"?

This is something I have brought up as a side note in an earlier paper: when this lifetime is over, do you want to come back to Earth and help building the New Era, or do you want to leave Earth all together and go out and explore the universe as a multidimensional being?

Yes, from what I have learned, we actually have a choice. Now that we know fairly well how the trap is set up, with Quarantine, Grid, Veil of Amnesia, and the Between-Lives-Area, we have much more choices we can make, which also bypass the trap. However, keep in mind that there is only a handful of humanity which has taken part of this material and similar, so many advanced souls, who don't want to have any part in the Machine Kingdom, will still be born into the trap. They will, as they always have, go into the light, fly through the tunnel and everything will have its routine, as usual. If they are not educated enough they will be back here with only their "common sense" that it is wrong to participate in the Second Industrial Revolution.

It's not going to take long before communities are set up, and there are already those which are, and those which are in the planning. Beings who in this lifetime have decided not to go for it, will have the same feeling in the next life, because their vibration is high enough to seek in the right places. Each generation will have an easier and easier time with that. This material, which I personally stand for when comes to its value and validity, although a few details may be slightly off, something that's inevitable, is for those who are ready to take the information in. You will be the ones to inform others in the future communities how things really work behind the scenes. That's why it's so important that you download the pdf files -- all of them -- and if you can afford it, print them out and save them, in case the whole computer system breaks down in the future, or regular people won't have access to it. Also, in some communities, no technology whatsoever is accepted (which I personally think is too extreme, but it's everybody's choice), so print-outs would work fine there. Hopefully these papers can be safeguarded for future generations as well in one form or another. Also, if I, in the future, find some smaller errors I have made, I may or may not update these papers. Even if there are such errors, they will quite irrelevant in the scheme of things, because the papers as a whole tell the story like it is, with our without these minor errors. They are not merely theory, either, but can be practiced (and don't forget the breathing exercise and other important articles, written by me or others, also available on the wespenre.com website: <http://wespenre.com/site-map-misc.htm>. Please save those and print them out as well).

vii.i. Suggestions how to Bypass the Sirian Trap in the Afterlife

Some people who are here now, and were grown-ups during the nano-second, took bodies on Earth for perhaps the first time, basically coming from somewhere else. They are here on a mission to wake people up during this transition period and will then leave and not return to Earth again in a long time, if ever again. Once their mission is over, they will exit their bodies and go back from where they came. These are beings of higher consciousness, whose whole mission was to vibrate on a level so that others could feel it and raise their vibration as well, and thus create a ripple effect across the planetary mass consciousness, in order to save a faction of mankind from becoming cyborgs.

Others are humans who have worked on themselves across the incarnations and been able to raise their vibrations with hard work and by staying focused. These humans have gained a lot from the nano-second and may as well as the non-human category have a strong feeling of having a mission they need to complete. Most of these people will sooner or later in their lives realize what their mission is and start working on it, and very little besides that matters to them. They dedicate their lifetime to completing this mission. So, overall they are very similar to the non-human category, with the exception that they are human and have lived many lives here on Earth, just like any other human, but chosen a spiritual path more often than the average human.

Other categories are those who have woken up because of the vibrations of others and started educating themselves, while again, the vast majority haven't learned much over the millennia and simply need a lot of more time to learn what others learn relatively quickly. Unfortunately, if this last category doesn't wake up yesterday rather than today, it's going to be too late.

Now, what we want to do with the knowledge we have gained and the awareness we have reached is up to each and every one. If we start with those who decide that they are done with experiencing Planet Earth and want this lifetime to be their last one here, there are a few choices they can make, once they leave their physical body.

Those who have seen the Grid around the planet right now are telling me that it starts looking like a Swiss cheese with a lot of holes in it. This means that it's much easier to escape now than it was a couple of generations ago. The holes depend on that more and more people are waking up and are no longer contributing to the vibration range that the Sirian Alliance has set out. The Overlords have therefore had a heck of a time keeping up with "patching" the Grid, but have seemingly given up, realizing it is not worth the effort, because it's like a rotten garden hose. When you repair it in one spot, it starts leaking somewhere else.

Hence, when you leave your body, you will have the option to say no to spirit "guides" who are trying to get you to go into the light, and instead disappear out through a hole in the Grid. The universe you will see there is quite different from the night sky you have been looking up into, and space that you've seen in photo-shopped NASA pictures. What you will see is a universe full of stars everywhere. Where there previously was just "black" space, there is now light. Remember that you have only been able to experience 4% of the universe; the other 96% we have called the KHAA or the VOID, but this "VOID" is filled and teeming with stars, nebulae, and life. The sight of it all will be so stunning that you as an Avatar will most probably just stop and "gasp" with your light-bodies. You will be able to experience both space/time and time/space at will!

More stars than you get at a celebrity wedding.

Now, all this 100% universe is yours to explore as a Divine child of the Mother. You have many choices. Being discarnate, you can just nano-travel wherever you want. You don't have to worry about how to do it; you will know. All that's needed is a thought and you'll be on your way. For example, think yourself to a friendly planet where you know you would like to live, and you'll be finding yourself outside its atmosphere. It is my understanding that according to the Law of Non-Interference, if the Council of Zendar is speaking the truth that you have the right as a discarnate to enter the atmosphere of the planet and hover around to "check things out" as long as you don't interfere with anything and anybody. If you find that you like what you perceive, you have two choices I am aware of; you can either make contact with the beings who live there if they are aware enough to be able to receive your communication and able to process it. If not, you can ask either the planet herself or the Sun of that solar system for permission to incarnate there. If you are approved, you may go ahead. If not, you must abide to that decision and move on to some other solar system and try again. In general, the universe is a friendly place, but not always, of course. The reason a solar system may turn you down is not because there is something wrong with you or they think you're "evil", but normally because your Avatar may vibrate on a frequency that does not match the planet and its inhabitants.

In fact, you may even want to browse the universe for a while before you even decide where you want to go and stay. Typically, I would imagine that most humans would want to incarnate on a planet in a solar system relatively close to Earth, only because we feel safe being "close to home", even if there are light-years between. We have a tendency to forget that distance is not a huge obstacle in the Multiverse. Wanting to be close to home, of course, is only due to insecurity and a little "home sickness", but not something that will bother the soul for a long time. Instead, why not explore other parts of the galaxy as well, albeit you may find that the biological life forms there are quite different from here. Other kind of soul groups may live there, creating other kind of life forms for their own amusement.

The above choices is if you still want to be planet-bound. Another option is to be like Q in Star Trek; you can manifest yourself exactly as you like and create your own solar system from your own thought and imagination. They will be as "real" as any other solar system (Q did this, too) and the planets as solid as Earth. You can imagine beings living on these worlds and they may look like something from your wildest imagination. You may attract other Avatars who are hanging around in space and you can play together. Then, if you get tired of it, you can erase it in a second, because it was just a solid hologram in the first place. When you're a 100% universe "citizen", you can create with your mind whatever you like. Even space wars that are not real. Spirits are very playful and can be pretty "childish", but in a good way, most of the time. You will get the hang of it pretty quickly. All we are doing when we are "playing around" like that is that we take subquantum particles and put them together into forms and shapes, and make them come close together enough to create visibility in whatever dimension you're creating them.

Another thing you may want to do is to "knock" on Orion's door. The Empire is out there, and beings from there are your Original Creators. Think yourself to Orion and you'll be there. The Empire is guarded to avoid attacks from outside, but as evolved humans, we should have no problems being let in. What's waiting there, we can only imagine!

As the reader can see, the options are many, you can even visit other galaxies and stay there, if that's what your heart tells you. You will have access to almost the whole electromagnetic spectrum, and not only the little tiny piece which is the 3rd Dimension, set up as a trap. Freedom is out there!

Now, there is a totally different option that we have as well. If we leave the solar system, we also leave the human soul group in search of new adventures. But we can also choose to stay within the soul group of Homo Nova of the New Era, continue incarnating on Earth, and build the New World. There are a lot of advantages to this, as well. First, you will keep your Divine physical body which the Goddess once gave you, and which the Orion Group never managed to figure out. We still have our divinity intact, but still, even with our upgraded bodies, watered-down to some extent compared to those of Namlú'u and her forerunners. However, we are quickly on our way to regain the multidimensional abilities we had then. Our goals, if we choose this route, should be in line with once again being the Guardian of the Living Library of the New Earth. This time we will be a little more shaken up, but a whole lot tougher than the original human, who basically didn't really know and understand evil. In that sense, we are wiser now.

The whole universe is within our divine bodies. Everything we see projected outside is basically coming from within; we must not forget that. Our bodies are multidimensional in its most optimal sense! Many times we have heard how the Sirian Alliance cut off strands of our DNA so we only can perceive a part of the whole (4%, actually). In fact, what they did was to close down the majority of almost all of our chakras, except the lowest ones that had to do with survival and fear. They didn't really cut anything off, but left about 96% of the DNA dormant (the "junk DNA"). This is the reason why we only perceive and can see 4% of the universe. When we look at the night sky, there seems to be such a long distance between the stars, and most of the universe is dark space/matter. In reality, this is not so. We only see 4% of all the stars out there; even on the NASA photos (if we see any stars at all in them after they have photo-shopped them). The Pleiadians explain this pretty well when they say that the body has 7 chakras and an additional 5 are outside the body. This means that the trap is set up so you can't perceive almost any of the upper body chakras when your Avatar enters the body. However, to also have control over the astral (the 4th Dimension), they have shut down the 5 "cosmic" chakras as well, which you otherwise would have access to when you leave the physical body. These chakras are shut down within the light-bodies, and are also to some degree controlled from the Grid, from what I understand. In other words, when you leave your genetically manipulated Homo sapiens body and go into the astral, they make sure you don't pass the Grid, or you would get all, or most of your perceptions back. However, in the astral your chakras are more opened than they are in the physical, manipulated body, so that you are able to reflect over your life and decide new goals, which you normally don't reach.

In 3D, the astral has been hijacked by the Sirian Alliance in order to have control over the soul after body death so that she doesn't escape. The spirit guides have the function to "steer you right", i.e. into the Tunnel, towards the Light. Abraxas, the Alpha Draconian, talked about the astral and the Afterlife dimension as a twist of the 7th Dimension, which I see can be interpreted as if the Overlords took a part of the 7th Dimension, and "twisted" it in time/space so that it could be used for their own purposes, and it became the circle around the Earth, which we know as the astral plane. It shouldn't be there in the first place, so it's an arbitrary that we now must be able to bypass.

The Ra Material says:

"Each time/space is an analog of a particular sort or vibration of space/time. When a negative time/space is entered by an entity the next experience will be that of the appropriate space/time. This is normally done by the form-making body of a mind/body/spirit complex which places the entity in the proper time/space for incarnation."<sup>[3]</sup>

This means that while a being is in incarnation (space/time), they are, due to their experiences, shaping their mind/body/spirit so that it can fit the corresponding place in the astral (time/space) after death. This, in turn, would hypothetically mean that if the Sirians are in charge of 3D corresponding time/space, those who vibrate higher than within those margins would not qualify for the Sirian trap in time/space. The reason for this, if correct, is as I see it that the Sirians created a "radio station"; a frequency band in which they can have Homo sapiens operate under their control from higher dimensions. So, there is a limit to that frequency band, and if you exceed that limit, you will not go to the manipulated time/space. And if RA is correct, which I believe they are in the above case, it means that we shape our "wholeness" in our lifetime here on Earth, and after death, all we need to do is to reincarnate again, without going into the Tunnel and towards the Light. The new body we will get in our next incarnation was already formed in this incarnation, so when the whole mind/body/spirit complex (as RA calls it), now shaped in a form and within a frequency outside the Sirian limited frequency band, incarnate again, it will automatically shape a higher dimensional body. We are at that time way closer to all together operate outside Sirian 3D frequency, and my estimate, based on the above, is that already after a couple, or a few generations, the Sirian control will not be perceivable from the New Earth vibration we will operate within.

This does not guarantee total freedom from amnesia in the next incarnation, unfortunately. At least not for everybody, albeit I'm sure for some. Still, more memories and a lot better intuition would help the incarnated person to continue their mission in the right direction. After all, evolution does not go backwards, and once you've achieved a certain vibration and level of awareness and consciousness, you won't lose it in the next lifetime.

These new, more evolved bodies will rather quickly become multidimensional and be able to work as such from the will of the Avatar. After a few generations, when the Grid and the Quarantine for sure are lifted, just as the Veil of Amnesia will be for everybody in the New Era, full multidimensional freedom will occur. And what does that mean, and how does that differ from the person who escaped through the hole in the Grid and became multi-d in a multidimensional universe?

The difference is that those who decided to stay and create the New Earth will have the ability to remain on Earth, in their enhanced bodies, who are Divinely multidimensional, and at the same time use their Fire and Avatar to nano-travel anywhere in the Multiverse, including to Orion. You will have the advantage to live on one of the most beautiful planets in the universe, but connect with your space brothers and sisters whenever and wherever you want. You can go to their home planets, or you can go out in space and create the exact things the person who escaped through the Grid can do. Also, you will be the Guardian of the Living Library once again, which means that beings from all over the universe (and we are not talking about those beings who are trapped now) can come to Earth and learn from the knowledge that is stored in the Living Library and within our very bodies. Our bodies have all the memories from the entire universe, from beginning to end, inside of them! And we are the only ones who have access to all that information! No other bodies in the entire universe beside the human bodies have those abilities. So if you escape through the Grid you lose your Divine physical body and that aspect of multidimensionality.

These are basically the choices we have as Homo Nova. To get a fuller understanding of what the Living Library is, and how everything on this Earth and everywhere else has consciousness, I highly recommend the following video, which is showing you how advanced the plant life is. Brilliant scientists have already discovered this, but they can't figure out how plants can think and have emotions without a brain. Well, it's actually a no-brainer, because the answer is Consciousness! Plants may not have a neurological system, but they do have consciousness. Watch this very enlightening movie, but please watch it all: <http://www.pbs.org/wnet/nature/episodes/what-plants-talk-about/video-full-episode/8243/>.

VIII. From Here and Into a Future Which is Very Bright After All

Some people may ask themselves, what happened to the "3% rule"? Remember we talked about that, especially at Level I, and this was in regards to LPG-C and their hypothesis that if approximately 3% of the population could decide on a plan for the future for mankind, the rest will automatically adjust. This, in turn, is based on the scientific experiments which led to the 100th Monkey Syndrome. I still think that it may possibly be a valid hypothesis, but there is a big problem with it, and I wonder if LPG-C eventually realized this as well. The problem is that it's only good in theory; we will never be able to gather 3% of humanity under the same umbrella. If we had more time, we might, perhaps, but not as things have developed. This is a shame, and it's sad on behalf of those who will decide to take what they think is the "easy path", when indeed it will turn out to be the most difficult one, and the one that could possibly lead to their own demise. This is ironic, because those who choose the Machine Kingdom will do so partly because they are promised almost eternal life. As it turns out, it's all a deception, because if Lucifer and his angels get what they want, that faction of humanity will end up being "star dust" in a war against their own creators. This means they will become scattered pieces of fire as a part of the rest of the universe, without any personality and without any mind. This is what the weapons of the Gods do. However, we haven't seen any evidence that a war against Orion will actually happen in the future, but we know that on certain timelines, mankind will become cyborgs and lose all the abilities their Divine bodies had, and they will deeply regret it. They will do all they can to become human again, but from all I've seen, they will not succeed. Be happy that you are one of those who choose to evolve without technology!

Although some of us will perceive ourselves as living on the same planet, we are actually all living on our own version of it.*

Still, we must not forget that even if the 3% Rule is not a possible anymore, the Pleiadians confirmed that there are enough evolved beings on this planet to put life onto the timeline of the New Era and the New Earth. The spiritual battle we have fought within ourselves is in that sense already won. Now we need to uphold our positions in space and time and time and space to build our new future. And keep in mind that there is nothing wrong with leaving at this point and disappear through the Grid when this lifetime is over. We are all the pioneers. If we leave now, we have already done more than can be expected of us under the circumstances, and now it's soon time for the next generation to take over. The future of the Earth is in the hands of those who will stay, but the gratefulness will always be with those who leave as well. You will be remembered and honored!

The Veil of Amnesia is due to the disconnection between dream state and the awake state. That disconnection was done by the space pirates who took over our beautiful planet. In the future, the connection will once again be reestablished automatically as our vibrations will heal our RNA and DNA, but there are already now ways to do this, which also gets us ahead of the game. The dream state is indeed the awake state and the other way around. Just like so many other things, the Overlords took the truth and turned it around; the lies became true and the truth became the lies. In an upcoming book, I will, among other things, work with the reader on how to reconnect the unconscious with the conscious mind and thus make a much more multidimensional being.

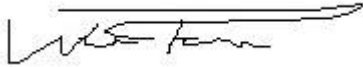

I will be in touch and tell you about the progress of my next project. With this, the Third Level of Learning is complete. This also means that all levels of learning are completed, and there will be no more papers. As it looks like, I will from here on communicate mostly in book format, with the intention of giving them away electronically, in pdf format, still free of charge as usual.

Thank you from the bottom of my heart for staying with me to these last words in this paper. It has been an incredible journey for myself, and I hope for the reader as well! Spend as much time as you need to ponder over this material and come to your own conclusions about it. This is my research and my recommendations, but I'm only one person of 7 billion, and we all have Free Will to do what we want with information that is given to us.

I hope I will see you also reading my future material. Besides books, I will most probably also write and post articles, perhaps on wespenre.com, but also at battleofearth.wordpress.com, which you can subscribe to by going there.

Have a peaceful, blessed, exciting and enlightening journey, full of joy and love. The future, my friends, is very bright, after all. We will all be more than fine!

Love,

Wes Penre

This is the end of "The Third Level of Learning", and "The Wes Penre Papers" all together. This paper is the last in the Three Level Series about humanity's position and role in the Multiverse!

Appendix B: Definitions of Special Terminology from "The First--Third Levels of Learning"

(Listed in alphabetical order)

* * *

(Scroll down to find the definition you are looking for. Then use the back button on your browser to go back from where you came)

* * *

From January 25, 2013, the definitions entered into this Definition Sheet, on and after that date, will have the "enter date" added, following after the definition itself, in this format: [1/25/2013].

* * *

4-Space/Time: Our 3rd Dimensional reality plus time; the 'known universe', which we can perceive with our 5 senses, including planets, stars, nebulae, and galaxies..

7 Superdomains: The seven 'super dimensions' which are the building blocks in LPG-C's (see def. below) 'Working Model' (see def. below), where 4-space/time (see def. above), which is the 'known universe', is the 7th, and 'lowest' superdomain. For more information regarding the 7 superdomains, see, <http://wespenre.com/exploring-the-unum.htm>.

Alignment with the Galactic Center: The Galactic Alignment is the alignment of the December solstice sun with the Galactic equator. This alignment occurs as a result of the precession of the equinoxes.

Precession is caused by the earth wobbling very slowly on its axis and shifts the position of the equinoxes and solstices one degree every 71.5 years. Because the sun is one-half of a degree wide, it will take the December solstice sun 36 years to precess through the Galactic equator.

This 26,000-year precessional cycle shifts the apparent position of the sun, on the December solstice, backward through the signs of the zodiac. This leads to the observation (as viewed from the earth) that the December solstice sun is moving "around" the Galactic Center, coming into alignment with it once every 26,000 years. This is the galactic alignment. It is a name given to a relative perception of the stars while observing from the earth. (source: <http://kryon.com/inspiritmag/articles/index.html>).

Amašutum: Anton Parks' term for the female Gina'abul (see def. below). The word, according to Parks, stems from old Sumer, but if we trace it back far enough, it comes from the stars, and looks very much like a female, Aryan word. I use this word as a synonym for the Titans in these papers; something that would be quite acceptable.

ANGAL, The: A term used by Anton Parks, describing the dimensions of the beings of Higher Order (we may call them angels, or Builders). The ANGAL has its own set of dimensions. The upper parts of the ANGAL corresponds pretty well with what I otherwise call the 96% Universe, consisting of 96% dark matter and dark energy, in contrast to the 4% Universe, which is the Universe we are currently perceiving with our 5 senses.

AOM: Allies of Humanity. This is an alien group in contact with the medium Marshall Vian Summers. They are here to warn us from taking part in any TTP (see def. below) between ETs and the human governments of Earth, because this is a way to control us. [3/9/2013]

ARIDU: One of many names of our solar system, used by extraterrestrials. This is the name I chose to use in my papers.

'As Above So Below': This expression is said to originate from the Freemasons, but may be much older. It refers to the relationship between the Macrocosms (the Universe as we can see it) and the Microcosms (the Universe of particles, like cells, atoms, neutrons, positrons, electrons, tachyons, and other quantum particles). It is said that if something for example happens here on Earth, i.e. we have constant wars going on, it is a ripple effect from what is happening above (in the Cosmos above our heads). So if we have wars here on Earth, we can almost take for granted there are wars out in Cosmos which extend to down here. If we want to take it further, there are probably "wars" all the way down to the quantum world.

Avatar: 1) A part of the soul, also called the 'light body' in metaphysics. This is the ethereal body we use in the afterlife where we 'mock ourselves up' so others can see us. In the afterlife, we usually mock ourselves up the way we looked like when we were alive. 2) The light body which extraterrestrials sometimes use when they 'shapeshift'. ETs who travel through space and time in spirit form (so called ontoenergetics [see def. below]) and are coming here as intruders, are usually mocking themselves up as humans to blend in, but can also show themselves off as Reptilians, Grays, Dragons or whatever they want.

Beast, The: A future Supercomputer with the brainpower of trillions of human brains, which will be run by the Sirian Alliance in order to steer humanity into the core of a Machine Kingdom, where all are One Mind to follow One Command. [4/3/2013]

Biokind: The biological body of any given race. Term coined by LPG-C (see def. of LPG-C below).

Biomind: The combined mind of a being + their biological body. Term coined by LPG-C (see def. of LPG-C below).

BLA: 'Between Life Area', where the soul and its composite goes between incarnations.

Black Magick: I am using the term 'Dark Magick' in contrast to 'Black Magick' throughout my papers. Black Magick is used to describe magicians who use magick to access the Void and use it for personal gains against someone else, while 'Dark Magick' is used to signify shamans and others who use magick, also to access the Void, but with the intentions to help self and others in a positive manner. I am not using the term 'White Magick', because both the good intended and the bad intended are both trying to get in touch with the Goddess Universe (see also, 'Magick').

Bloodlines, The: During the Atlantis Era, Lord EA selected an elite of human hybrids who were direct descendents of the Aryan/Sirian bloodline and had EA's blood running through their veins, and also possessed the Fire to become the Ruling Elite we see today (we often call them the Illuminati, the Global Elite, or the Cabal). The chosen ones were always males, because he feared that if the women ruled, they would be too powerful and therefore a threat. The Women of Fire instead became the sorcerers, witches, the psychics, and were often psychic healers to the ruling Men of Power. So it has remained up until this day. We now call these shamanic Women of Fire 'High Priestesses of the Illuminati', but their powers have been tremendously watered down from what they once were.

BSMC: Body/Spirit/Mind Complex, i.e. you as a human being. This is what you consist of, whether you have your experience in a physical body or an etheric one [1/25/2013].

Builders: The original Creator Gods of a Universe (Unum). The Mother Goddess is giving birth to universes, and then she assigns 'Builders' to 'go out and create' in her new universe. These Creator Gods, together with the Goddess are responsible for that the goals for that specific universe are met.

Creator Gods (capital letters): My combined name for all creator gods who have understood the mechanics of the Multiverse and have learned how to create intelligent life forms outside of their own planet.

creator gods (small letters): A term used for a race who has just begun to explore genetic engineering and are experimenting, using DNA from different life forms to create something new. Humanity is about to become 'creator gods' at this exact moment, even if it's done in secret. We are experimenting to create both artificial intelligence, clones, and new races.

Dark Magick: I am using the term 'Dark Magick' in contrast to 'Black Magick' throughout my papers. Black Magick is used to describe magicians who use magick to access the Void and use it for personal gains against someone else, while 'Dark Magick' is used to signify shamans and others who use magick, also to access the Void, but with the intentions to help self and others in a positive manner. I am not using the term 'White Magick', because both the good intended and the bad intended are both trying to get in touch with the Goddess Universe (see also, 'Magick').

Debt, The: When the Sirian Overlords took over real estate Earth, they had, per universal law, the obligation to see to that the intelligent beings already inhabiting Earth (we humans) were not interfered with to such a degree that it inflicted on our development as a species. The Sirians broke this law, but 'put things right' by letting a few human soul every now and then leave the Prison Planet and find their way to the stars in order for the Sirians to pay off the 'Debt', meaning they had to show that humans down here actually evolved. However, these souls who were allowed to escape were so depleted of energy that they were literally 'useless'. So, the Sirians sent souls they had no use for anymore to the stars, thinking they were paying off the Debt. It was sort of a bypass of the law. The Queen of the Stars disagreed!

DRAP: 'Death-Recycling-Amnesia-Trap'. An orchestrated chain of events, created by a composite of alien races to keep us under control.

EC: 'Ethereic Composite' (see these words below).

Einstein-Rosen Bridges: Interconnect all stars in all galaxies, and even galaxies with each other. ER bridges can be seen through telescopes that capture images in the visible light range. Used by extraterrestrials to travel from one point in space to another, when the distance is an issue. Somewhat synonymous to stargates.

ENS (Extension Neurosensing): In a nutshell, ENS works as follows[...]: a human being, applying this technique, lies relaxed in a resonance-inducing sarcophagus, while his vital energy thresholds are monitored. A photonic body (an avatar) is induced and through advanced technology and the person's own mental abilities, he is capable of neurologically "extending himself" wherever he wants; nearby, to the edge of the Physical Universe, or even beyond! Hence, the Physics Group has been able to open the doors of perception to explore nature and the universe in a manner that has never been possible before, or even been perceived as a possibility. By expanding on the research of scientists such as Albert Einstein and David Bohm, they have been able to accomplish getting astonishing results from this technique. (<http://wespenre.com/exploring-the-unum.htm>).

Etheric Composite: The three composite parts of 'you' that leave the physical body (biokind) when the body dies. The Etheric Composite consists of the information cloud (the soul), the avatar (the light body), and the emotional body respectively.

Exopolitics: The politics regarding extraterrestrials. The subject of "exopolitics" includes both the political issues, as well as interrelating and relating issues, regarding ETs here on Earth, near Earth space, or in the Multiverse in general, and their relations, political and others, with we humans here on Earth. It has become a broad definition which sometimes includes everything that has to do with extraterrestrials.

Experiencer: A person who is exposing what he has experienced first hand with extraterrestrials; either through abductions, face-to-face encounters, mind to mind, or written communications. Channeling could also go under this category.

Exteriorization: The phenomenon when the soul (avatar and fire[s]) leave the body temporarily (not including body death). Could happen through shock and trauma, but also at will, if a person is trained in different spiritual rituals and exercises. The word originally comes from L. Ron Hubbard and his Church of Scientology. Hubbard used this term to describe when a soul (thetan) leaves the body during Dianetics or Scientology processing as a part of the End Phenomenon of any particular process. I am using this term as described in the first definition above.

Fire: another word for 'soul'.

First Level of Learning: The first series of papers that I completed in October, 2011, and posted at <http://wespenre.com>. I am suggesting that the readers start reading these papers before they continue reading the Second Level of Learning (see def. below). The First Level of Learning can be found here: <http://wespenre.com/sitemap.htm>.

Founders: Creator Gods who seed planets with different life forms, such as plants, insects, animals, and one or more intelligent species, which has programmed into their DNA to feel the urge to reach for the stars (such as humankind). They always leave their signature in what they create; a butterfly may have a physical outlook similar to the Founder who created it and a praying mantis may be a small version of the Founder who created this particular insect. Even we humans sometimes have the signature of the Founders who created us.

Gina'abul: A common Sumerian name, used by Anton Parks, for the Reptilian star races in this part of the Galaxy, whom are supposedly coming from the same ancestors.

Goddess, The: The creator of all Universes, often also called God, Source, First Source, Prime Creator, All That Is etc.

Greater Community: An alliance of star races who engage in business and trade with each other, often in ways where they get dependent upon each other, and in many cases star races have a tendency of using technology to control other races. The Allies of Humanity (see AOM above) is a group of aliens who advise mankind not to get involved with the Greater Community. [3/9/2013]

Helpers: A combined word for creator gods on all levels whom are helping Mother Goddess to create life within her universes.

Hušmuš: Sumerian/Akkadian name for the Dinosaurs.

Hyperversals: see "Ontoenergetics".

Information Cloud: Another word for soul. Term coined by LPG-C (see def. below).

Innernet: Instead of connecting to the Internet to find all the information we want to learn about ourselves, the most important thing is to connect with nature and use the INNERnet more than the INTERNet to connect to Self and evolve as a being. The Innernet is your own, local universe, which is inside of you.

Kadištu: [Sumerian term] See 'Founders'

KHAA, The: The Mother Universe, also called the Void, which is the 96% of the Universe science can't explain. This is the Home Universe of the Mother Goddess through which you travel when you enter a stargate after have 'shrunk' yourself into nano size. This is the fastest and easiest way to travel between stars, galaxies and universes.

KHANUS KHANUR: The Sirian 'Foremost King of Kings'; he who had the ultimate power of the Sirian Kingdoms and ruled over all other kings. Sitchin and the Ša.AM.i call the KHANUS KHANUR, AN or ANU.

KI: The 3rd Dimension, consisting of several sub-dimensions, or densities. KI is sometimes used as a substitute for Earth by the Ša.AM.i. (Sirian star race).

Kingú Races: Reptilian races in Anton Parks' chronicles. The White Kingú is the one race which more resemble humans of all Gina'abul (see def. above) races. The White Kingú may correspond with the Vegan star race.

Law of Free Will: We live in a 'universe of free will', which means we have the right and the ability to create as we want without restrictions, but we have to take the consequences for our actions. Not all universes are 'universes of free will'.

Law of Non-Interference: Each star race has the right to develop and evolve without interference from outside star races. When a star race is landing on an evolving star race's planet without permission, they are breaking the 'Law of Non-Interference'.

Law of One: The concept that we are all One with the Creator, and everything is connected with each other on a subquantum level; therefore, what we are doing to others we do to ourselves. The expansion of this is that by being of Service to Others (STO), we are also being of Service to Self (STS), and everybody gains. If we are excessively STS, we are not including others in our decisions, and therefore separate ourselves from others. According to the Law of One, we live in a Universe of Free Will, which means 'anything goes', but the road back to unity with Source will be much longer and more cumbersome the more STS we are. We can still evolve while being STS, up to a certain level, but the way to get there is that of violence, vendetta, and other hardship that can more easily be avoided by being more STO.

Law of One also involves 'catalysts'. The idea is that everything in the Universe is of service to the whole, whether it's evil or good. Therefore, if you experience 'evil', you can use that as a catalyst to learn what you are not and thus build your knowledge from that and use a negative experience and turn it into something positive (more on the Law of One here: <http://lawofone.info>).

LERM: Light Encoded Reality Matrix. A term coined by LPG-C (see def. below). It is advanced science, explained to LPG-C by extraterrestrial beings. It is basically a technology to manipulate light. You can use it to change shape and form in objects and humans, so they appear to look different from what we're used to.

Lesser Council: In Atlantis, ten Kings ruled ten Kingdoms (see RGCA below), and under them were the shamans and their High Priests and Priestesses, who formed the 'Lesser Council'.

Level One (Level I): see 'First Level of Learning'.

Level Two (Level II): See 'Second Level of Learning'.

Living Library: In an ancient past, Earth was selected to be one of twelve planets (according to the Pleiadians) who as going to be a Living Library. Star beings from all over the Universe contributed with flora and fauna from their own worlds; thus the richness and the variety in plant and animal life on Earth. Many plants and herbs were seeded here as a part of a Universal Pharmacopeia. The early humans were meant to be the Guardians of this Living Library and let star beings from all over come and get, not only medicine, but knowledge built into the DNA of life on Earth. This was all a Great Experiment in progress and was working excellently, until the Sirian Overlords came...

LPG-C: (Life Physics Group California). This is a group of rogue scientists, who formed LPG-C in the late 1990s to further study subquantum physics and the ET influence on human life on Earth. They are now in connection with at least 118 different alien races; some of them with whom they have annual meetings; on planet and off planet, respectively.

By researching the Multiverse, mainly through advanced remote viewing (ENS [Extra Neurosensing]), they were able to map it quite accurately. They also had help from different ET races in their explorations of the Multiverse, which in their "Working Model" became known as the "Unum". Currently, LPG-C is working with a faction of the Anunnaki (the ancient ET "gods" of ancient times), in an attempt to steer things right here on Planet Earth, and claim human sovereignty of Earth and our own human bodies, which were genetically tampered with by the Anunnaki, resulting in homo sapiens. We allegedly have Anunnaki genes.

I wrote a simplified description of LPG-C's "Working Model" and talked a lot about them in Level One (see def. above). I am currently in frequent contact with their leading scientist, Dr. A.R. Bordon, and their web address is, <http://lifephysicsgroup.org/>.

Lú: (see Namlú'u).

Lulu: (plur., "lulus"). The Anunnaki's name for homo sapiens, meaning something to the effect of human workers, or slaves.

MA'AT: The 'Justice of the Goddess', from where the expression that your heart should weigh less than a feather comes from.

Magick: Magick spelled with a "k" was introduced by one of the most influential and (in)famous magician of the 20th Century, Aleister Crowley, to separate stage magic (applied by "Illusionists" and "Stage Magicians") and "real magic", which are two different things, entirely. So he added a "k" at the end to distinguish between the two. In my papers, I will do the same (see also, 'Dark Magick' and 'Black Magick').

MAKH Scientists: The Orion Queen's personal scientists, whom among other things, developed the S'MA, the life elixir, which extended the life of a physical body, sometimes with millions of years.

MAKH Warriors: Warriors of the Orion Special Forces, whose task was to keep the Empire safe, and to protect the Queen and stop intruders and invaders from entering the Empire.

Meš: 1) 'Tablets of Destiny'. 2) Small crystals, containing important information needed for the Sirians to get access to information, but also to run computer networks and other electronic devices.

MIC: acronym for Military Industrial Complex. Military and Industry working hand in hand in the weapon industry, building more and more destructive weapons for so-called 'defense purposes'. the MIC is also responsible for hijacking free energy and other 'useful inventions' that can be used destructively.

MIKH/MAKH Warriors: (See MAKH warriors).

Namlú'u: The primordial human species. The Guardian of Earth and the Living Library. They were created by many different Founders and had the Fire of the KHAA. They were androgynous and lived during Earth's Golden Age.

Nano-Second: The time period between 1987-2012 when our solar system is lining up with the Galactic Center. This lineup is very rare and only happens once every approx. 26,000 years (one cycle around the Zodiac). This means we are bombarded with gamma rays, directly from the Central Sun in the Galactic Center, but also relayed from our own Sun. This will fry the nervous system on some people who are not ready for this, while others, who have prepared by already gathered information on what is going on and have evolved to some degree, will get a boost of energies which will take them to another level of evolvement.

The year 2012 marks the end of the Mayan Calendar, but not the end of the world. Every galactic cycle is 26,000 years; then it ends and a new cycle begins. It's the Phoenix burning and then rising again from her ashes. A New Era begins, and in our case, a new species is born--a new humanity, which is multidimensional. But first the old must die to make room for the new.

Time here on Earth is also divided into Zodiactal Eras, each one lasting around 2,200 years. We are still in the Age of Pisces, but are moving into the Age of Aquarius.

NEKH-T or NEKH-TT: Title for the Orion Queen.

Níama: The Feminine Life Force of the Universe. This life force is all around us and consists of the energy that is in everything. For us to master the Níama, we must first know it exists and learn to "tame" it so we can use it for our own benefit. George Lucas, in his "Star Wars" called it "The Force", but is the same thing; it can be used for good or evil. The Star Wars series was based on a lot of truth and was mainly describing the Great Galactic Wars, although in reality it didn't happen in "a galaxy far, far away" but in our own sector of the Milky Way. Lucas has a lot of inside information, and so does Steven Spielberg.

Ontoenergetics: Non-physical beings.

P: Short for Barbara Marciniak's Pleiadian group.

Panspermia: an idea with ancient roots, according to which life arrives, ready-made, on the surface of planets from space. It is often said that panspermia isn't very interesting, because it simply removes the problem of the origin of life from our planet to some other place. And yet, panspermia has gained the attention of our science.

There is now Pseudo-panspermia (the delivery of complex organic compounds from space, to give the prebiotic soup some starter ingredients, a notion has already becoming widely accepted), Basic Panspermia (which holds that microbial life is present in space or on bodies like comets or asteroids, and it can be safely delivered to planets and start life there. If the cells escape from a living planet on fragments after a meteor impact, the phenomenon is called litho-, ballistic-, impact- or meteoritic panspermia).

And that's not all. Svante Arrhenius proposed that naked cells might travel interstellar distances propelled by light pressure, a theory now called radio-panspermia. Whereas a light coating of carbon could protect single cells from UV radiation, a couple of meters of water or rock are needed for protection from cosmic rays. Consequently, radio-panspermia is currently in disfavor. The danger of radiation damage influenced Francis Crick and Leslie Orgel, in 1973, to propose that life came to Earth by directed panspermia, the theory that intelligent life from elsewhere sent germs here in a spaceship. Modern panspermia proposes comets as the delivery vehicles. Comets can protect cells from UV and cosmic radiation damage; and comets can drop cells high in the atmosphere to float gently down. If bacterial spores can be immortal, as it appears, comets could spread life throughout a galaxy.

Hoyle and Wickramasinghe, starting in the 1970s, rekindled interest in panspermia. But they went further to include a new understanding of evolution. While accepting the fact that life on Earth evolved over the course of about four billion years, they say that the genetic programs for higher evolution cannot be explained by random mutation and recombination among genes for single-celled organisms, even in that long a time: the programs must come from somewhere beyond Earth. In a nutshell, their theory holds that all of life comes from space. It incorporates the original panspermia in the same way that General Relativity incorporates Special Relativity. Their expanded theory can well be termed "strong" panspermia. Their Cosmic Ancestry is a new theory pertaining to evolution and the origin of life on Earth. It holds that life on Earth was seeded from space, and that life's evolution to higher forms depends on genetic programs that come from space. It is a wholly scientific, testable theory for which evidence is accumulating.

I am personally using a more simplistic way of describing panspermia, putting it into 4 sub-categories, which are as follows:

Lithopanspermia - rocks thrown off from one planet's surface transfers the 'seeds of Life' to another planet in a distant solar system.

Ballistic panspermia - rocks thrown off from one planet's surface transfers the 'seeds' of Life to another planet in the same solar system.

Directed panspermia - the 'seeds of Life' are spread intentionally by an extraterrestrial civilization from one planet onto another.

On planet panspermia - intelligent Life from another planet deliberately came to Earth to plant the 'seeds of Life'.

PESH-METEN: 'The Ninth Passageway'. This is the Commercial Route lots of ETs are using when trading with each other. It has a long series of stargates and Einstein-Rosen Bridges, which makes it easy for different races to travel. This is the route on which Planet Earth (Uraš) is sitting in the heart of. It starts in the Galactic Center of the Milky Way Galaxy and spirals out, following the path of the Orion Arm, passes right through the Mintaka star system, continues to the Pleiades, runs further through our own solar system and continues beyond, probably disappearing off of the galaxy and to one of the next, perhaps the Andromeda Galaxy (Source: Arynama and Robert Morning-Sky: "The Terra Papers")

Pleiadians: Group of non-physical entities, said to have their homestead in the Pleiades, mostly on planets around the stars Maia and Electra. They are channeling messages to mankind through a "vessel" (human body)--Barbara Marciniak, <http://pleiadians.com>.

Pleiadians B: This group is represented by Satya, a Pleiadian who is said to be the keeper of the Library of Alcyone. This entity channels through Barbara Hand Clow, <http://www.handclow2012.com/>.

Pond: I am using the analogy of a 'pond' when talking about the creation of universes. For more detailed information, see Metaphysics Paper #2: 'The Creation of Universes'.

Post-Nano: The nano-second (see def. above) was the time period between 1987-2012, when time sped up a million fold. The post-nano is the time after the nano-second, basically between 2013-2030, which is the "aftermath" of the nano-second, when time is slowing down, going more back to "normal", while mankind is pondering what they learned during the nano-second. It's in the post-nano so many decision have to be made. Mankind will during this time period decide their own destiny. Some will merge with the upcoming Machine Kingdom, led by the Sirian Alliance, while others will create a new Earth, which eventually will vibrate on a much higher frequency. With time, the "old world", based on technology, will fade and disappear from the reality of those who chose nature before technology.

Project Elohim: ENKI's and NIN's project to create a new species of humanoids, based on upgraded Homo Neanderthalensis and Homo Erectus, which contained the Fire of the Mother Goddess, created from the midst of the KHAA, making the species truly Divine. A downgraded version of 'Project Elohim' was created after the Deluge, and this downgraded version became today's Homo Sapiens (see 'Project Sirius').

Project Sirius: After the Flood (the Deluge), the Sirians took the existing 'Project Elohim' (see above) and downgraded it to become less psychic, less multidimensional, and more obedient to following commands. 'Project Sirius' is today's Homo Sapiens.

PTB: (Powers That Be). Also called The Global Elite, The Shadow Government, The Illuminati, The Secret Rulers and more. They are the human hybrids who rule the world in High Places (being advisors to Presidents, Kings, CEOs of Global Businesses and the International Banking Industry etc.) and those who rule behind the scenes, invisible to the general public. Above these hybrids are the Earthbound Anunnaki, the Dracos, the Grays, the Mušgir and a few other star races working together.

RGCA: The 'Royal Governing Council of Atlantis'. Poseidon's (EA/ENKI) ruling council in Atlantis, headed by ten ruling Kings over ten Atlantean 'districts' or Kingdoms. This ruling Elite were Aryan/human hybrids of the first generation.

RMS: acronym for the Hopi/Apache author and researcher, Robert Morning Sky.

SA: The Sirian Alliance. A group of star races working in unison to conquer the universe and overthrow the Mother Goddess as the One Creator. [2/1/2013]

Ša.A.M.e.: The Sirian word for Nibiru, the planet they are using to visit our solar system.

Ša.A.M.i.: Equivalent to the 'Anunnaki', the Sirians, or the Sirian Lords.

Second Level of Learning: The second series of papers, succeeded by the First Level of Learning (see def. above), which I completed in October, 2011, and posted at <http://wespenre.com>. I am suggesting that the readers start reading these papers before they continue reading the Second Level of Learning, which can be found here: <http://wespenre.com/sitemap2.htm>.

Sector 9: The Milky Way Galaxy is divided into different sectors for commercial purposes between different ET species. Earth is part of 'Sector 9' (Sources: Robert Morning-Sky; L. Ron Hubbard, Anton Parks, and my Orion Source).

Service to Others (STO): a person, group, or species who believe that by making others a priority instead of oneself in more than 50% of the cases is considered being STO. Those who practice STO understand Unconditional Love, either on a conscious, or subconscious level, and the nature of the Creator, and are in service of It rather than just "self". These beings have matured as biokind/biomind and know what is needed to evolve to higher levels of existence. They know that by serving, helping and showing unconditional love to others, they also do it to themselves, and everybody wins.

Service to Self (STS): a person, group, or species who believe that by making themselves a priority on others expense by being more "selfish" than helpful to others. This mindset started when beings started realizing we are all ONE with the Creator, and by prioritizing oneself before others would thus help them as well, because we are all ONE. This thinking eventually got out of hand, and some beings started using Service to Self (STS) to the extreme, and became dishonest, violent and less emotional about what harm they did to others while getting what they wanted. This is basically the reasons for wars as well.

SHC: The Sirian High Council. I highly evolved star race from Sirius B. They are not the Sirians I am mainly talking about in these papers.

Sirian Alliance, The: An alliance of star races, led by the wolver/reptilian species from Sirius. Their objective is to become the Kings of the Universe, and they use races like we humans to achieve and accomplish this goal; they are in many ways like cosmic vampires.

There are many other star races supporting the Sirians in this mission; most of them once upon a time conquered by the Sirian star race and under their command; others may have joined the Sirian Empire by choice. A few of the star races supporting the Sirian Overlords are factions of Vegans, Alpha Draconians, Andromedans, Pleiadians (former Lyrans), the Grays (basically from Lyra, where they were genetically manipulated, then Zeta Reticuli), and a few other star races.

Sirian High Council: See SHC.

S-MA: Life prolonging elixir, used by the Orion Queen to keep her body young and healthy. Can extend longevity in species with millions of years. The Queen distributes this elixir to other star races in the Orion Empire, if the star race is evolved enough to use it respectfully.

SMC: Social Memory Complex. In channeled material, many beings are of a high density and have merged into a group mind and a group soul, in preparation of becoming One with the One Creator at an even higher level of existence. When they come through as a channel, they are often merged into one such Social Memory Complex. [2/4/2013]

Sources: Here a common name for "channeled sources", i.e. entities that a "vessel", or a "channeler" is channeling. It may be a single entity or a collective of star beings [1/25/2013].

Stargate 9: One of the major stargates leading on and off this planet. It's located in Sinai (the one stargate most important to the Ša.A.M.i (see def. above); the one they always used when they were on Earth. From there, the traveler can connect directly to PESH-METEN (see def. above). It was closed down by the Ša.A.M.i when they left around 4,500 years ago after have nuked the Sinai Spaceport and Sodom and Gomorrah (see Sitchin's book, War of Gods and Men). It's since then been taken over by the Earthbound Sirian Lords, led by Marduk, but the Incoming Ša.A.M.i. are supposedly fighting to get it back.

STO (Service to Others): a person, group, or species who believe that by making others a priority instead of oneself in more than 50% of the cases is considered being STO. Those who practice STO understand Unconditional Love, either on a conscious, or subconscious level, and the nature of the Creator, and are in service of It rather than just "self". These beings have matured as biokind/biomind and know what is needed to evolve to higher levels of existence. They know that by serving, helping and showing unconditional love to others, they also do it to themselves, and everybody wins.

STS (Service to Self): a person, group, or species who believe that by making themselves a priority on others expense by being more "selfish" than helpful to others. This mindset started when beings started realizing we are all ONE with the Creator, and by prioritizing oneself before others would thus help them as well, because we are all ONE. This thinking eventually got out of hand, and some beings started using Service to Self (STS) to the extreme, and became dishonest, violent and less emotional about what harm they did to others while getting what they wanted. This is basically the reasons for wars as well.

Technology Transfer Program: (see TTP)

Terra: The name I use for Earth, more or less throughout these papers.

TTP: Technology Transfer Programs. Since at least the early 1950s, but more than probably before that, human governments all over the world, but the U.S. government in particular, have been involved in technology transfer exchanges between humans and aliens. The aliens have given us technology in exchange for getting permission to abduct a certain amount of humans to do genetic experiments on them. They promise to return the guinea pig after they are done with them, and the people they use will not have any memories of the abduction afterwards. Many governments have agreed to such transfer programs, and that's why you hear about so many abductions from the 1950s and up to this date. It showed later that some guinea pigs actually had some flashbacks and memories from the abductions, and more could be revealed in regression therapy. In spite of this, and the fact that many people who were abducted were severely traumatized afterwards, the government let the transfer programs proceed. The technology they received, they apparently think overrides the suffering innocent people have to endure. This human-alien trade continues even today.

Type I Civilization: Type I civilization controls the resources of an entire planet (weather and earthquake control, plus exploration of an entire solar system).

Type II Civilization: a Type II civilization controls and directly uses the power of its sun and begins to colonize nearby star systems.

Unum: See LPG-C.

Uraš: Planet Earth.

Walk-in: A walk-in is when a non-physical being is taking over a body from the original soul. If it's done per a previous agreement (usually between lives), the original owner willingly leaves the body, but if it's done unexpectedly, the original soul may have to be kicked out by force. By some, a walk-in can also be defined as someone who comes in and shares a body with the original soul, but I would call that 'possession'.

Wanderer: A term coined by the RA Social Memory Complex (see the books in the Law of One series), meaning a person who decides to stop his own evolvment for a while and descend to a lower density to help out in the process of ascending. A Wanderer therefore incarnates on the specific planet, amongst the beings he/she wants to assist. There is, however, always a chance that the Wanderer forgets who they are and get stuck in the system of the planet due to the Veil of Forgetfulness [1/30/2013].

White Kingú (or Royal Kingú): see Kingú Races.

Working Model: The research done by the rogue science group, LPG-C (see def. above), into how our Multiverse is built. Their result is what they call the 'Working Model', in contrast with the 'Standard Model', which is the model of mainstream science. Also, see '7 Superdomains' above.

PAPER #1: AN INTRODUCTION TO THE FOURTH LEVEL OF LEARNING ....	9
I. What Has Happened in the World Since the Third Level of Learning?.....	12
II. Fear-Mongering at its Worst.....	14
III. What This Level is About .....	17
PAPER #2: SETTING THE ANCIENT RECORD STRAIGHT: WHO IS WHO AND WHO DID WHAT IN THE PANTHEON? .....	21
I. Confusion of Epithets and Distortion of Records .....	21
II. Who is Really Who of the Major Gods, and Where is the Confusion? .....	25
II.I. King Anu and Mother Goddess, the “Queen of the Stars” .....	26
II.II. Ninurta and the Titans.....	35
II.II.I. The Saturn and Orion Connections .....	42
II.III. Prince En.ki, Lord of the Earth .....	47
III. In Summary .....	60
PAPER #3: THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN ASTERISMS AND CERTAIN STAR BEINGS .....	63
I. Required Knowledge about the KHAA .....	63
I.I. What is “Space”? .....	70
I.II. Are the Planets in the Universe Really Teeming with Life, or Are We Mistaken? .....	72
I.III. What is a “Star Being”? .....	77
II. Asterisms as “Real Estate” .....	79
III. The Home Stars and Constellations of the Gods.....	81
III.I. Arcturus, the Royal Star .....	83
III.II. The Origins of the Swastika, the Ancient Symbol.....	86
III.III. More about Draco and the Bear Constellation .....	90
IV. Some Last Words in Preparation.....	95

PAPER #4: THE COSMIC WARS STARTED IN THE VOID..... 97

- I. From Creation to Nanotravel..... 97
- II. Dimensions versus the Electromagnetic Spectrum and the Electric Sun.. 100
- III. Stars as Portals and Birth Centers of Soul Fire ..... 103
- IV. What Do Beings in Other Parts of the Electromagnetic Spectrum Look Like? ..... 107
- V. The KHAA “Universities” ..... 109

PAPER #5: LUCIFER’S REBELLION..... 112

- I. What Led to the First Great Cosmic War? ..... 112
- II. Preparing for Revenge ..... 115
- III. There Was a War in Heaven..... 119
- IV. The Soul Prisoners of the Dark Star ..... 126
- IV.I. The Nommo, the Aquatic Bird Tribe ..... 128
- IV.II. The Imprisonment of the Luciferian Rebels..... 131
- V. The Sirian-Arcturian Alliance ..... 134
- VI. Who Was the Consort who Helped En.ki Create Homo Sapiens? ..... 138
- VII. The Ongoing Rebellion ..... 139

PAPER #6: THE SIRIAN WAR AND THE GOLDEN AGE..... 142

- I. Archangel Mikael and the Sirian War ..... 142
- I.I. Confrontation!..... 145
- I.II. The Sirian Catastrophe..... 149

PAPER #1: AN INTRODUCTION TO THE FOURTH LEVEL OF LEARNING

In the previous levels of learning, I gave the ET Invader Force different names as we moved on through the story. In the First Level of Learning, I called them the Anunnaki because we were dealing a lot with the Zecharia Sitchin material, in which the term Anunnaki is commonly used. When we learned more about these beings, I changed the name to the Sirian Alliance and even the Orion Group. Then, after I had completed the Third Level of Learning, I wrote a book called Beyond 2012 — A Handbook for the New Era<sup>1</sup>, in which I called them the Alien Invader Force. I know that all these terms for the same extraterrestrial group may seem quite confusing but also has advantages, depending on which level of the story we're looking from.

We have advanced quite a bit since we started at The First Level of Learning, so to call this group the Anunnaki doesn't seem appropriate anymore nor would it be correct to call them the Sirian Alliance because as we will learn in this level of learning, all of them do not originate in the Sirius solar system, although Sirius is an important part of the story — much more so than I was aware of earlier. I could call them the Orion Group, but although many of these beings actually originate in Orion, it would still be misleading because of channeled information, such as The Law of One (The Ra Material)<sup>2</sup>, The Cassiopaeon Experiment<sup>3</sup>, and a few others. The term "Orion Group" in these materials is too general for our purpose and a bit misleading, so I chose not to use that term either. Therefore, I have decided to stay with the term Alien Invader Force (AIF) because that's exactly what they are, and this term will cover all different beings involved in the agenda I am exposing here. So, I ask the readers to get used to the term "AIF" that I will use consistently throughout the papers from now on.

Those who have read the previous levels of learning know that we live in a multidimensional universe, which is fluid and under constant change. We, the beings who live in it, are the ones who create the Multiverse by our thoughts, intentions, and actions — every nanosecond of our existence. In a sense, the Wes

Penre Papers, which is the collective term for all the levels of learning combined, is telling a very multidimensional story. Although the story about the AIF's intervention with human evolution is told in a linear fashion in order for it to be better understood, the story is far from linear because the AIF are not third-dimensional beings. Hence, time is not as relevant to them as it is for us, and this concept is often reflected in the storyline.

When everything is constantly changing, and new information is coming in, how do we decide when to stop exposing it? To be honest, I never thought I'd write a Fourth Level of Learning. When I completed Level III, I felt quite certain that I was finished—I had told the story from my own perspective (I had even told it from different angles), and I was quite pleased with the result because I thought I'd mentioned enough so that the readers can comprehend what we are stuck in and what we can possibly do about it. After that, I thought, the readers can continue their own research if they so wish.

I soon realized I was wrong. Much of the material in the “Wes Penre Papers” is unique—it has not been published before, or at least not in modern times. Hence, it would have been next to impossible for the readers to find the information on their own without having the connections I have. So, when I sat back and looked at what I'd published thus far, I saw three levels of learning and a complete story. I thought I'd never be able to get much further with this, and that it was indeed far enough.

Then, in the middle of the book I was writing, a continuation of the papers was starting to emerge. Suddenly, I began to see a much bigger picture that had been left out from the previous three levels. Well, some of it had been touched upon, but I never thought I'd be able to present a fuller picture than I had already done. Now, however, a new hypothesis was taking form—a hypothesis that could be perfectly inserted into the previous material and thus make it much more complete. When I realized what I was about to find out, I immediately stopped what I was doing, put the book I was writing aside, and started researching this new material wholeheartedly. Soon, a much deeper understanding of Lucifer's Rebellion, how the AIF came to Earth, where exactly they came from, who did what, and who deceived whom began to unfold. Soon, I also had a broader perspective of the Galactic and Cosmic Wars and how the universe is constructed (and it's far from how we think it is).

Some of the material in this level of learning can be quite challenging for some readers because it may be almost the exact opposite of what we have learned from our scholars from the universities. It may also be very different from what mainstream science, and even alternative science, have taught us. Often, they know better but want to keep the information away from the public.

That's of course why NASA hires ingenious artists who can paint 3-D pictures of space and make them look as realistic as if they were photos.<sup>4</sup>

As usual, it's up to the readers to discern whether this new material is science fiction, fake, a new multidimensional hypothesis, or a working way of telling the truth from a third-dimensional and a multidimensional perspective. Either way, I think the readers will definitely have their belief systems challenged, as they were for me, and after finishing it, no one will leave this level without thinking that they have changed quite dramatically—I think I dare promise you that! How this change takes shape and form, I believe, will be very individual, so I look forward to hearing from the readers afterward—that will be very interesting.

From the Second Level of Learning and on, the story started changing shape and form. Much of what we'd learned from many other different sources out there was suddenly thrown out the window to make room for an entirely new hypothesis, which actually answered many of the questions that left many good researchers hanging after they had studied the old Sumerian cuneiform, or the translations thereof. I released my papers one after the other as soon as they were finished, eager to see the response. Could the readers see what I had seen, and perhaps even more importantly, did I communicate it well enough so that it could be understood?

It came as a big, positive surprise when the e-mails started pouring in. People apparently loved the Second and Third Levels of Learning. It came to a point where readers were telling me that the information had changed their lives! "Never again will I be fooled!" some said. To summarize it all, it went way beyond any expectations—my readers had really seen what I had seen, and they saw how the truth had been totally covered up—not in present time, but thousands of years ago. Some, who we have learned were negatively oriented extraterrestrials (ETs), such as Marduk RA, have rewritten the majority of history to their advantage. Not only that—history had been rewritten in such a way that certain beings could take advantage of it thousands of years into the future, which would be now, in our present time, and beyond.

Why in our time? Because this is the end of the Mayan Calendar and the beginning of a new era. History has been rewritten in such a way that we can interpret today's reality as the End of the World, the End of an Era, the Return of the Gods, or the Second Coming of Christ/Maitreya. I should also add that the Mayans were deeply influenced by the Pleiadian branch of the Alien Invader Force (but they never said that this was the end of the world).

Because of the energies of the time, there are also those who are exposed for whom they actually are—when the light of truth “shines on them,” their crimes can no longer be hidden, and their own karma is catching up with them. We can see this happen all around us amongst politicians, religious leaders, and chief executive officers (CEOs), and much more of this is to come. So, it is a mix of Cabal members being sacrificed in public and those who are exposing themselves by making fatal mistakes. Regardless of this and a weakening of the system, the control system in general is not coming down—not yet. What we see is an old control system being exchanged with a new one. The “gods” are coming back in much larger numbers, and the road is being paved so that their transition can be as smooth and seamless as possible. This is what we are really seeing. Only their most important minions are staying in power—the rest have to go. For the Global Elite, the “laid-back years” are over, and a much stricter and obedient time is ahead, when the gods have established themselves as planned, and everything is set up with new protocols.

Mind you, folks, that this is a game for some beings, while for others, such as the human family, it can be deadly serious. It’s setup to be that way, and all the ignorant people in the world (the great majority) fall for this, and their lives become extremely stressful and borderline manageable, when all we have to do is to disagree and build our own local universes and communities, letting the Lords of War play their games “out there” in the rest of the world.

I know it can be very challenging for some people to totally live off the grid and be entirely independent from society, and that is not the first step to take, except for a few, who have figured it out and are willing and capable of doing it. For the rest of us, we need to think more strategically. I explained that in the Soulution Sections of the different levels of learning and even more so in my recent e-book, “Beyond 2012—A Handbook for a New Era”—how we need to create our own local universes first and expand out from there. Eventually, we will literally find ourselves in a very different world that vibrates on a higher frequency. We are creating a new species for the New Era: Homo Novus.

I. What Has Happened in the World Since the Third Level of Learning?

This is of course a very general question, and I could probably spend the rest of these papers quoting headlines from the last three to four months. That’s, of course, not my purpose, but I’d like to mention a few things I have noticed that pertain to, or are in-line with, my own research.

The first three months or so of 2013 was a “resting period” for many, I believe. Time was really slowing down after the nanosecond, and we had the chance to enjoy a mellower period when we could take a deep breath and sit back and reflect for a while, if we wanted to. After that, however, there was a feeling that things started happening again—it was not the same feeling as when time was speeding up because it wasn't, but more and more “unusual things” started happening around the world. All of these things were not obvious or on the front pages of the newspapers but were happening more subtly. Of course, we've had whistle-blowers like Edward Snowden<sup>5</sup>, who found asylum in Russia after having fled out of the country. However, the information he revealed to the public was in some instances news for a significant number of people but, otherwise, just like Wikileaks, only touched the tip of the iceberg. Sometimes whistle-blowers are actually mind-controlled slaves with multiple personalities, whose purpose is to reveal this information to the public—in other words, it is intentionally done! The whistle-blowers may or may not be aware that they are being used, but more often than not, they are used. By that, I am not saying that Snowden or Julian Assange of Wikileaks<sup>6</sup> in this sense are mind controlled—that's something which needs to be examined more carefully before we know either or. After all, there are genuine whistle-blowers who risk their own lives and safety for the greatest good of people and society. Such people should indeed be honored!

What else is happening? Well, the scientific community is working hard trying to find planets orbiting other star systems, and they have found quite a few by now—some of them, they say, may be inhabitable. In some CNN and Space.com articles on the subject, there is a vague red thread going through them, indicating that some of this research is taking place in order to be able to find a new home for humanity if the s*** hits the fan. Because it's not announced straight out, it's bound to make some people, who are able to read between the lines, nervous. The question is, are the scientists really that desperate, or is this just more fear-mongering? The “funny” thing is that astronomers and astrophysicists are sure that the solution lies in finding planets, which must be at a certain distance from a certain type of sun in order to develop intelligent life forms. As we shall see in this series of paper, this is not necessarily the case at all. Then again, very little is what it seems to be.

Now, what about extraterrestrials? Oh yes, they have been in the mainstream news as well. We hear from CNN and others, that the UFO phenomenon is increasing quite rapidly, and new reports come in every so often. They even have panels who are discussing if it's the old gods coming back. On occasion, the media have started acknowledging that mankind was genetically manipulated by extraterrestrials, and the news panels are discussing if these gods may be the same ones who are potentially coming back.

This may sound very exciting for many, and people may think that finally the truth is going mainstream. Beware, however, that if something like this is making the news, there is a hidden purpose behind it. The Global Elite, controlled by the AIF, have many cards to play out, and they may use any of them in order to push a certain agenda. Because the AIF are prepared for all events, we don't know which card they will play out at what time, so we need to learn about all of them, if we can. That way, we recognize things when we see them.

II. Fear-Mongering at its Worst

There is one single event I need to address, not because it's in any way unique, but because it confuses people when someone who presents himself or herself as highly educated, and acts like she actually knows something, comes out and tell us about an End Time scenario. Let me explain.

In the beginning of August 2013, a self-proclaimed former NASA and Lockheed Martin engineer and rocket scientist came out in the open as an alleged whistle-blower. Her name is (again supposedly) Patricia Brassard. Mel Fabregas, who is running the Veritas Radio Show, let her on so she could tell her story<sup>7</sup>. Other radio hosts let her on their shows as well, and she was later discussed on forums such as Godlike Productions<sup>8</sup>.

She sounds like a distressed woman in her late fifties or early sixties, and she claims she has done some major jobs for NASA and Lockheed Martin as a rocket engineer. Now she's been coming out in the open, saying that the Sun is basically a binary system (meaning our solar system has two suns), and the second sun is a brown dwarf, and therefore, invisible to the naked eye most of the time. To make a long story short, this second sun is what Sitchin called Nibiru, and others call Planet X, Wormwood, and so on. She says that the name is irrelevant, but what isn't irrelevant is that this sun, which NASA scientists call Wormwood, after the biblical name, is surrounded by seven planets, and this basically creates not only a second sun, but a whole second solar system!

Now, here is the bad news, she says! The previously hidden second solar system is now merging with ours. She says that Mars is already destroyed and

<http://www.godlikeproductions.com/forum1/message2317973/pg1>

Earth is next. The last time this merger happened was when the asteroid belt was formed, she claims, and the asteroid belt is the remnants of a planet that was torn to pieces in a direct collision between one of Wormwood's planets and a previous planet in our own solar system.

She further explained that in August 2013, a major earthquake was going to hit Seattle, and the worst consequence of this earthquake would be that California sank under the ocean. This would most certainly happen around August 17, 2013, she claimed.

Lastly, sometime before November 2013, most of the United States would be under water, as well as many other areas around the world. She was showing pictures of what would happen, which could be viewed here, but these pictures are now taken down. There will also be a pole shift eventually, she added.

So what is the solution? Well, Ms. Brassard says that electrical storms will hit Earth and everything that can catch fire will do so, and if we don't stay grounded, we will be fried from inside. All we can do is to find high ground (above 12,000ft), hide in a cave, or buy a trailer, which we bury at least 3 feet under the ground and stay in there with a few months of water and food supplies. We also need to dig a tunnel, through which we can get out later, but the tunnel can't be built with any material which can run electricity through it, or again, we may be fried.

Those who don't comply will either drown or burn up!

Alright, this may sound like a bad B-movie when it's paraphrased this way, but why do people buy into stories like this? They do so because a person like Ms. Brassard doesn't just present herself as highly educated with a lot of credentials, but she is also very well prepared for what she wants to say. Listeners think that she really knows her stuff, and that's where people get hooked. Her replies to the radio host's questions come instantly, and they sound legitimate, like coming from a highly educated person.

However, don't let this fool you. Of course, when I'm writing this, it's past August 17, 2013, and California is still above water, and there are no signs of any earthquakes in Seattle.

There are no other signs of any major disaster that's on its way either. This is similar to the earlier scenario with Nibiru, which was supposed to come in before 2012 was over, and a lot of people were concerned about this—former Life Physics Group California (LPG-C), led by Dr. A.R. Bordon<sup>9</sup>, was even creating a

<sup>9</sup> I am sad to say that Dr. A.R. Bordon died in early July 2013 from Stage-V Pancreatic Cancer. This news came as a shock to most people—even some of his own fellow scientists—because apparently, Dr. Bordon kept his illness to himself until close to the end. The official announcement did not come until August 16.

“Beta Group,” which consisted of Nephilim hybrids, to meditate Nibiru out of orbit in order to save mankind. Why Nephilim hybrids? Because they supposedly are of En.ki’s bloodline (Orion blood), and are “purer” than ordinary humans. Hence, they also have more psychic abilities, as the story goes. According to a few of these hybrid whom I’ve been talking to, they consider themselves to have been able to accomplish this task under the guidance of Dr. Bordon.

I would say that meditating to alter Nibiru’s orbit is highly unlikely. Dr. Bordon told me that at that time Nibiru was coming in from the South and was only one astronomical unit (AU) from the Earth when they started meditating. One AU, mind you, is the distance from the Sun to the Earth. If this would have been the case, we would have felt the Earth changes, which would have been many times worse than the few storms, hurricanes, and tsunamis our planet has experienced. A foreign incoming planet the size of Nibiru has major consequences for Earth and other planets in our solar system. Secondly, Nibiru is not a planet on a 3,600-year orbit around our Sun—it’s more like a giant spaceship, which at any time can leave its orbit and travel anywhere in space/time and even in time/space.

The Beta Group, just like in the Brassard case, used a highly educated front person (Dr. Bordon) first to scare people and then to tell them that they are safe. In the case of the Beta Group, the agenda seems obvious—they want to welcome the “Anunnaki,” who in conjunction with the Beta Group, supposedly worked on saving the Earth from the giant impact from Nibiru. It’s all for the show and to put the AIF in a better light when this is needed.

In Brassard’s case, it’s also about fear and destruction. She presents herself as having severe heart problems from being subjected to radiation, and her left arm, she claims, is more or less unusable. When asked what she is going to do, she says she’s going to stay in Georgia, where she lives, and die when the time comes because, as she puts it, “I am living on overtime anyway.” Alleged relatives who have come forth, however, blame her heart condition on a sex change operation that was only half done due to lack of funds. In other words, they accuse her of being a man, wanting to be a woman, and thus her low, almost manly voice (which also could be a consequence from menopause—it happens with many women).

The world didn’t come to an end on December 21, 2012, but the doomsayers don’t give up. Mel Fabregas, with the Veritas Show, asked the question that now, when 2012 has come and gone, does that mean that 2013 is

I am hereby sending my condolences to his family members and to those who knew him well.

the actual doomsday year, which was hidden from the public until now, when Ms. Brassard exposed it? So now, because of people's current apathy regarding everything that has to do with Doomsday Prophecies, no one will believe her. Is this a good summary of the scenario? Mr. Fabregas asks. Ms. Brassard confirms that this is certainly the case.

Be careful not to take these things seriously. Only because a person seems educated and seems to know what she's talking about, it doesn't mean that what she's predicting is going to happen. I believe they found some records of her being a NASA employee but, again, probably under mind control. She may very well believe in what she's saying, but that doesn't make it true.

III. What This Level is About

Just as all previous levels of learning are building on each other, so does this one, but this time, I have worked a little differently. Although this level, too, is loosely following a timeline, it does not do so as strictly as the previous ones did. This is partly because of simultaneous incidents that affect each other in a later time, and thus it makes sense to postpone certain stories until a later paper, or only tell a partial story and complete it at a later time.

Also, some of the hypotheses in this level are parallel to those in other levels. They don't contradict each other by any means, but they drive the stories forward and give the reader a slightly new angle on the whole invader story. The Alien Invader Force (AIF) is still the ET group I will concentrate on because it is, by and large, the one group that has influenced us the most during the last 500,000 years. In all fairness, there are other star races, or even civilizations, that have arisen on this planet that were not AIF, but they didn't last long because of the AIF influence over the Living Library, and after a short time, they disappeared and the beings left.

So how could civilizations just appear while the AIF were still in control here? The answer is easy if we think of it from a multidimensional perspective. Let's say you are a kid and you build a landscape in your room. Part of that landscape is for your cowboys and Indians—plastic little figures that are fighting each other. However, suddenly you think that you want to play more with the Second World War, so at another place in the landscape, you insert a town with WWII soldiers. It would happen instantaneously, and the 1800s and the 1900s would happen next to each other, in the same world. When you get tired of either, you just remove them. The analogy is not perfect, but it explains a little bit how this would work. If the beings are multidimensional and Creator Gods at the same time, they can nano-travel and create civilizations at will. However, these civilizations did not have any direct influences on humanity.

Instead of making a straight timeline, I open these papers by discussing what has taken place in the Heavens. Then, I eventually move down to Earth, followed by the Underworld, and then back up again. In retrospect, I think this worked well for me because I said what I needed to say.

Here on Earth, we are still going to stay in the Mesopotamian area, stretching out toward Atlantis, Egypt, a little of Greece, and to Siberia. I want to emphasize, however, that the AIF were not just located in these famous regions but were spread all over the planet—literally. They even had civilizations in the Arctic and Antarctica, at times when these regions were not covered with ice. Maybe at another time, I will go deeper into the civilizations outside of what we may call the “Mesopotamian Region,” but for now, it will still be sufficient to stay in these famous areas for the purpose of this material.

As usual, I have tried to keep footnotes where I can. When footnotes are not provided, I’m either writing about my own conclusions or information I have gained from anonymous sources. However, I never pick something unexpectedly to make the stories fit—there is always logic to what I write, and I wouldn’t for one moment consider putting anything down in writing which I hadn’t deeply looked into. This doesn’t mean that everything in these papers are “written in stone,” so to speak (a little double meaning there), and some is open for interpretation. Like I’ve said numerous times before, I do not want the reader to take something to heart because it’s written here—I’d rather see people reject my whole work because they thought about it and came to that conclusion than saying that they believe everything I say only because I should know best, as I am the one who has researched the material. Remember that these are my conclusions, which are coming full circle with Level IV. However, in our Multiverse, which is fluid and ever changing, one can interpret things in different ways.

Speaking of conclusions and standpoints, I think it’s fair that the reader knows where I stand in all this I have written. This must be looked at as a small summary because there is, of course, a lot of information to go through.

1. I am convinced that the only way to overcome the electronic prison we are sitting in is to raise our vibrations, i.e. increase our awareness and our consciousness. If we don’t, we will be “forever” trapped in this reality—or until either the AIF, or we in conjunction with them, realize the stupidity in what we’re doing. This latter, I am certain will take a much longer time.
2. I believe that we create our own reality via our thoughts, emotions, and actions. Depending on how we think, we will accrue “positive” or

- “negative” karma, and if negative, it needs to be dealt with. Karma is something that we accrue because of amnesia between lives. If we didn’t have that, everything would be in the open, and there would be no place for karma to build.
3. I don’t agree with the idea that if something horrible is happening to people, it’s only because it’s part of their learning lessons, or they “pulled it in” because of karma. I’ve realized that this is not necessarily true, although it can be in certain circumstances. However, there is no “learning lesson” involved when a little baby or child is raped and killed in Africa, or in any other place either, for that matter. Saying that this is an agreement and a learning lesson for the “victim” is pure arrogance, and channeled entities and other otherworldly people and disinformation agents who claim otherwise, I will consider being just that— disinformation agents with their own agenda, which is not corresponding with our own purpose as human beings. Again, on rare occasions, such agreements may take place, but if we look at the quantities of these negative events, is it really feasible to think that they were all agreements with soul mates, or worse— with the AIF?
  4. Furthermore—and this is very important—I am not an “Enkiite,” an “Enlilite,” a “Kryptonite,” a “Meteorite,” or any other “ite” for that matter. I am not on anybody’s “side,” except humanity’s. All I am presenting in these papers is the truth as I see it, and my conviction after long and often exhausting research. My purpose is to show the readers that we have been so utterly deceived that hardly anything in our lives is true, and I am going to show how this was done, and by whom. If this happens to upset some people, I must consider that is their problem and not mine. My job is to release what I consider being most likely to be true and not what other people want me to release.
  5. I don’t subscribe to or believe in any organized religion, sect, or cult, and I do not belong to any secret organization of society—actually, I don’t belong to any group whatsoever, except for my family and close friends. However, I am convinced that I am made up of a number of small “fires,” which make up a larger Fire, which is my soul. This Fire is eternal and feminine in nature. The Creatrix of this Universe and others is the Mother Goddess, the Divine Feminine force, whose highest level of awareness is pure love and compassion.
  6. I do not believe that another alien species will come and “save us,” and I don’t believe in a genuine “Second Coming.” However, I do believe that we create our own Freedom and Independence from slavery and oppression, and it is our responsibility as a human species to raise above the level of awareness that keeps us trapped here. When we manage to do this, I believe that the Universe lies open to us.

7. I believe that anything we can imagine is possible to achieve, and imagination will increase in conjunction with higher levels of awareness and consciousness.

This Fourth Level of Learning can be challenging for some, but all I want is for the readers to stop frequently and digest what they just read in order to see if there may be truth to it or not. It is not that the material is too esoteric for a reader to understand, but it will change his or her view on reality very drastically, in a very fast pace, and not everybody is ready for that. If you think that you are not ready, don't feel bad about that, but just put the material away for a while and come back to it later—perhaps after having studied some other material first.

Finally, I want to include a disclaimer, which I think is essential and important to understand. Please read it and don't skip over it. Then, continue with Paper #2, which will eliminate the confusion that I know is very common amongst people who are interested in the ancient texts and the alien invasion. It has to do with who is who in the Pantheon of the "gods." When you read it, you will see what I mean.

I hope that you'll have a wonderful read and that this level of learning will assist you on your inner journey!

PAPER #2: SETTING THE ANCIENT RECORD STRAIGHT: WHO IS WHO AND WHO DID WHAT IN THE PANTHEON?

I. Confusion of Epithets and Distortion of Records

Today's scholars believe that the first civilization on Earth appeared in Mesopotamia (Sumer) approximately 6,000 years ago.<sup>10</sup> Amazingly, this civilization seems to have appeared from nowhere and developed very quickly. This has always been a great mystery to historians and is still a mystery up until this day. Fortunately, there are alternative researchers, who are not depending on the establishment to pay their funds—therefore, they can be more flexible in their thinking. Without these alternative researchers, we would still live in the dark.

Mesopotamia was, of course, not the first civilization on Earth, but it was the oldest one we have public records from. The Sumerian history is written down on stone or on clay tablets, in so-called cuneiform. Alternative researchers have found, however, that long before the Sumerian times, there were very spiritually advanced civilizations that rose and fell over millions of years, and they existed all over the world. In addition to two of the, perhaps, greatest civilizations, which are now buried under the ice caps of the Arctic and Antarctica, another civilization also allegedly existed in the Sahara desert, which at that time was not a desert but a beautiful subtropical paradise. In addition, land and water changed positions over time, and ruins of old cities have been found under the oceans all over the world. Examples of such civilizations are Atlantis and Lemuria (Mu), both of which we covered in Level II.

Therefore, how come there are no official records from the time before the Mesopotamian Era? Suddenly, we have a civilization popping up in what is today's Iraq, and its history is even written down so that we can learn about their society. Before that, however, we have next to nothing.

Actually, that's not totally true. We do have records further back, although they are much more sparse, and more importantly—these records are not in the public domain! Most of them are still hidden underground or in deep vaults, only available to those who have been chosen to have access to them. Some of them are said to be hidden in the vaults of the Vatican.<sup>11</sup>

Apparently, it has never occurred to mainstream archeologists, geologists, and historians that the reason for civilizations to appear so quickly is because alien visitors with superior technology were the ones building them. It's hard for historians in general to accept this because it can only be explained if we open up our minds beyond the third-dimensional perceptions. This is why mythology that we find in the ancient tablets is considered either fantasy, superstition, or metaphors, telling stories of humans, not extraterrestrials—although, logically that doesn't make sense. Once we really start comprehending what we're being told in these ancient texts, it's obvious that we are dealing with extraterrestrials. One would think that now, after the so-called Enûma Eliš texts were found in 1849<sup>12</sup>—old Babylonian texts telling the Creation Story from their point of view—that our perspectives would have expanded, but these records were just considered more “mythology,” without being based on any real facts. It's in the greatest interest of the establishment to disregard these facts—however, because if looked upon as real historical events, these facts would change our religions once and for all—thus, they would change our entire worldview. This is something certain people in power don't want to see happen.

I am not going to repeat myself too much here, but there are a few things I want to mention in order to set the stage. After the Deluge, which supposedly took place about 13,000 years ago (half a solar cycle around the Equinox, with a full cycle being a little less than 26,000 years), Prince En.ki took full charge over the Earth, and his title was Lord of Earth, which is equivalent to the biblical Satan. Of course, in full power, he didn't want mankind to worship any gods other than himself—therefore, he needed to erase or alter previous records from the history of mankind, which he did in conjunction with his son, Marduk. Prince En.ki then proclaimed that the so-called “older gods” were just “lesser gods,” but he, Prince En.ki, was the One and Only God, mightier than all the rest of the club! Working closely with his son, Marduk, the two alternated, making Marduk the One God in Prince En.ki's absence.

Gone then were most of the more accurate ancient records, which discussed the Mother Goddess worship, and before that, there wasn't any worship at all, only a knowledge that the Universe was feminine and that God is feminine, not male or neuter.

People may think that because something is written in stone it has to be true, which, of course, is not the case. It's no more the case than to say that everything that's written on paper must be true. Much of the Sumerian cuneiform writings were dictated by the gods, and the scribes simply wrote what they were told. In this manner, much of the Enûma Eliš was written. Then, in modern times, genuine and not so genuine translators have translated the Sumerian scriptures into modern languages with mixed results. Best known is probably Zecharia Sitchin with his Earth Chronicles, which are, just like my own papers have been so far, written in a linear time format-- thus, they can be read almost like novels. Sitchin's agenda has been discussed elsewhere in my papers-- therefore, I won't take up space repeating myself, other than that it's very obvious that he had an agenda and was most probably working for the Alien Invader Force (AIF). His translation has added to the confusion, unfortunately, even if it also has been helpful in some ways, in my opinion. At least, he acknowledged that the "mythological" beings in the tablets were extraterrestrials.

This doesn't mean that all of what was written in the Enûma Eliš and other scriptures is false. What it means is that Prince En.ki changed what he thought was necessary in order to be worshipped as the main God. Moreover, and very important to know, Prince En.ki also planned for the future. Beings like Prince En.ki and the other members of the AIF are not fixated on third-dimensional (3-D) bodies--therefore, they can plan thousands of years ahead when necessary. Therefore, the tablets were dictated in such a way that they fit right into what is happening in the world in our time, at the end of one cycle and the beginning of a new.

Some people have mentioned to me that even if much of what I've been saying is true, why is everything pointing toward our particular time? Of all times, why our time?

Well, if we look back in time, this is actually nothing new. Almost every generation, at least since the crucifixion of Christ, has thought that in their specific lifetime, the end of the world is going to happen and the Messiah is going to return.

I understand why people ask themselves these questions and point this out, but the fact remains that this is the end of the era that the Mayans and many others consider being the end of a cycle and the birth of a new cycle. There is nothing fictional about it—it's both an astrological and astrophysical truth. Most prophecies, evidently, were written for the time we are living in now. I understand that people think, "How can we be so lucky (or unlucky, depending on the person's opinion) to be alive now when all this is happening? Isn't that too much of a coincidence?" No, of course, it's not a coincidence—we are reincarnating constantly—therefore, it's not so strange. In addition, there were many souls who were fighting over a body so they could experience the nanosecond (1987-2012). Because you're here now, you managed to win the lottery, so to speak, to get a body in the most exciting of times, but also perhaps one of the most challenging.

When we are researching the ancient past, we need to be careful to keep in mind what we just discussed: some records have been altered. However, the truth is still in there but, occasionally, quite well hidden. Although, once we find the diamonds, we get a few "aha moments," things start to make sense, and puzzle pieces begin to fit. Then, once we've seen the pattern and we have a better understanding for how these ancient gods worked when they altered the records, we can also see how they, indeed, hid the truth in plain sight. For some reason, they loved to do that, and still today, they are doing the same thing. In addition, when changing the records, Prince En.ki had an agenda, and this agenda prevented him from lying all over the board. Many truths needed to stay in the records so that he could use them in the future (which is now). It is important for him that when things start happening and the gods officially return, there need to be some prophecies and references back in time so that his agenda can be strengthened and justified. By referring to old records, the gods can manipulate people to fall into the trap and make us believe what they want us to believe. This was a compromise that he had to make.

What people probably will have the hardest time with concerning these returning gods is to figure out who is who, and who gave birth to whom. It doesn't make it easier that most of these beings had several names. Not only did their names change with different locations, but they went under different names and epithets even while staying where they were. Lately, I have realized how beings have been confused with each other and given the wrong attributes. It would make a thick book just to sort that out if we want to do it with the entire Pantheon, which in this case means all the gods as a collective. When it comes to these beings, this name issue is apparently not isolated to Earth. Even the Orion Queen, when discussed internally amongst these star beings, is known under more names and titles than I can keep up with. We know from "The 50 Epithets of Marduk,"<sup>13</sup> taken directly from the Enûma Eliš, the "Babylonian Creation Story," that in the Heavens, beings are often known by their traits and characteristics. This can be very confusing, but also revealing because from studying the epithets of the star beings (when we have access to them), we can also get a sense for their personalities.

Consequently, I have decided to sort out the most common and most important gods in order to put them in the correct place in the Pantheon. This alone is a piece of work, to say the least, but I am going to try to present this as interestingly as I possibly can because it's very important that we understand this. The reason for this will soon be obvious.

II. Who is Really Who of the Major Gods, and Where is the Confusion?

First, here is a note to the readers: Please don't skip over or skim this section only because you think you know who is who in the Pantheon. I can almost certainly promise you that you will be surprised. You may have some of it correct, but I will show, by using references wherever I can, that there is not one single researcher that I have encountered who's managed to get the picture—not a single one!

How is that possible? It is possible because people get easily overwhelmed by all the different epithets and bloodline issues they run into—who is the son and daughter of whom, and whom did they marry? The real answer, despite records that have been tampered with, is in the details! Everybody misses out on the details.

Believe me, I don't blame them! This is not an easy task, and we need to know where to look, how to crosscheck, and to be careful to look for syncretism. In addition because of the new information that will be revealed in this level of learning, knowing who is who is crucial to say the least. This paper will deal with the different major Gods and Goddesses—what their real identities are and whom they are related to. The next paper will go into detail which star constellation (asterism) the different gods originate from. Yes, you read that correctly—asterism! We are used to thinking that a star race originates from a specific star and not a whole star constellation, but in reality, as we shall see, these beings are often (but not always) in charge of whole constellations. To make sure everybody understands what I'm talking about, a star constellation is the same as a star sign, such as The Big Dipper, Orion, and Gemini and so on. This, I think, is an entirely new concept.

Anyone who has read Sitchin's books knows what a great number of gods that are mentioned in the old scriptures. Still, Sitchin only brought up a few, compared to how many there really are. I am, of course, not going to go through all these gods and explain who they are and which names, epithets, and titles they have. Instead, I've decided to go over the ones who have been mentioned the most in my own work. Interestingly enough, when I researched this part, I found that by only working on the Goddess, her consort "Anu," Prince En.lil, and Prince En.ki, I already had come a long way in understanding the relationship between certain gods and goddesses in a way that had not been possible before. Then, we have other beings, such as Marduk, Utu, Ereškigal, Isis, Inanna, and a few more, whom I will not go over in this particular paper, but I will analyze them, either when they show up in the story or when it's appropriate. The reader will be quite surprised, I'm sure!

II.I. King Anu and Mother Goddess, the “Queen of the Stars”

King Anu has always been the source of major confusion. First, as the reader may remember from Level II, “Anu” is not a name but just means “Heaven” or “Heaven the Orion Empire,” so it's more of a title than it is a name.

This being definitely exists, and it would be acceptable to just continue calling him Anu, if it wasn't for how many problems this has created.

Let's look at a few sources so that we, perhaps, can sort this out. I am fully aware of that because the old records have been so tampered with—some references can be interpreted in more than one way, and I am now going to present one of the possibilities, which differs quite a bit from what we are used to. It was not that one day, out of the blue, I decided to look into syncretism concerning the gods—it was more the other way around. My research led me in a certain direction in which I noticed that something didn't quite make sense. We have all those “players,” and we seem to have their names and titles, but still, it looked like some of these beings were one and the same, while others were not whom they had appeared to be. This drove me into researching this further, and these papers are the result. If some people want to interpret it differently, they are, of course, free to do so, but in that case, they will notice that when I present this story, the “old way” of looking at it no longer makes sense. Therefore, it's up to the reader. I am merely presenting a hypothesis which pushes the story of the visiting gods forward into new, fresher conclusions. Hence, here is the first reference regarding Anu:

In Sumerian mythology, Anu (also An; from Sumerian *An ☉ = sky, heaven) was a sky-god, the god of heaven, lord of constellations, king of gods, spirits, and demons, and dwelt in the highest heavenly regions.

He was one of the oldest gods in the Sumerian pantheon and part of a triad including Enlil (god of the air) and Enki (god of water). He was called Anu by the later Akkadians in Babylonian culture. By virtue of being the first figure in a triad consisting of Anu, Enlil, and Enki (also known as Ea), Anu came to be regarded as the father and at first, king of the gods.

Anu had several consorts, the foremost being Ki (earth), Nammu, and Uras. By Ki he was the father of, among others, the Anunnaki gods...<sup>14</sup>

This is how most people know King Anu — as the father of the Anunnaki Royal Family, with two sons, En.ki and En.lil.

The consorts mentioned here are Ki, Nammu, and Uras. This makes it seem like he was very “promiscuous,” or the gods have perhaps other rules concerning sex and marriage. However, I want to show that this is not the case at all — at least not amongst the gods we are focusing on, except concerning Prince En.ki, who actually was (and is) promiscuous or like we would say here on Earth — sex driven or a sex addict. Ki<sup>15</sup> and Uraš<sup>16</sup>, however, are just two other names for the Mother Goddess in her incarnation as the “Earth Mother,” and sometimes only the Earth, as a planet. We have discussed in previous levels of learning that the Mother Goddess is incarnated here in this universe into two different entities that we know of, and those are the Queen of Orion (Queen of the Stars), and the spirit of Planet Earth (Ki and Uraš) — some also call her Mother Gaia<sup>17</sup> (“Earth Mother”). These are typical examples of syncretism. Therefore, in other words, we could say with much certainty that Ki and Uraš are the same being. That leaves us with only two consorts — Ki/Uraš/Gaia, and Nammu.

Now, still in order to figure out King Anu — by learning more about Nammu, we will also learn more about Anu.

In Sumerian mythology, Nammu (also Namma, spelled ideographically ☉☉ dNAMMA = dENGUR) was a primeval goddess, corresponding to Tiamat in Babylonian mythology.

Nammu was the Goddess sea (Engur) that gave birth to An (heaven) and Ki (earth) and the first gods...<sup>18</sup>

And here are two other revealing references. Number one:

In another even older tradition, Nammu, the goddess of the primeval creative matter and the mother-goddess portrayed as having "given birth to the great gods," was the mother of Enki, and as the watery creative force, was said to preexist Ea-Enki.<sup>19</sup>

Number two:

Nammu is not well attested in Sumerian mythology. She may have been of greater importance prehistorically, before Enki took over most of her functions (going from Matriarchy to Patriarchy, when En.kiEn.ki. took over Planet Earth from the Queen and her Original Planners, who created the Living Library, Wes' comment). An indication of her continued relevance may be found in the theophoric name of Ur-Nammu, the founder of the Third Dynasty of Ur. According to the Neo-Sumerian mythological text Enki and Ninmah, Enki is the son of An and Nammu. Nammu is the goddess who "has given birth to the great gods".<sup>20</sup>

Therefore, it looks like Nammu is actually another name or title for the Goddess, as she gave birth to Heaven and Earth. This makes it pretty clear that Anu actually only has one consort, who is Mother Goddess. There are also other names mentioned concerning Anu's supposed consorts, but we would be able to come to the same conclusion with them—therefore, I'm not going to take up more time and space with that. However, the name "Tiamat" is important because it is mentioned a lot in the old Babylonian texts. Many know Tiamat as the planet, which was destroyed, located between Mars and Jupiter, and I have gone into details about what happened at that catastrophe in Level II, although I used another name for it—I called it "Old Terra." Tiamat, on the other hand, is both one of the names for the exploded planet and the Goddess, whom at that point was the spirit, incarnating the planet—just like she is the Earth Spirit today.

This reference tells it all:

Tiamat is a chaos monster, a primordial goddess of the ocean, mating with Abzû (the god of fresh water) to produce younger gods. It is suggested that there are two parts to the Tiamat mythos, the first in which Tiamat is 'creatix', through a "Sacred marriage" between salt and fresh water, peacefully creating the cosmos through successive generations. In the second "Chaoskampf" Tiamat is considered the monstrous embodiment of primordial chaos.[1] Although there are no early precedents for it, some sources identify her with images of a sea serpent or dragon.[2] In the Enûma Elish, the Babylonian epic of creation, she gives birth to the first generation of deities; she later makes war upon them and is killed by the storm-god Marduk. The heavens and the earth are formed from her divided body.<sup>21</sup>

Here we learn that Tiamat is a “primordial goddess,” mating with Abzû, which is, as we can see, another title for King Anu (we will talk more about Abzû later). She is also the mother who gives birth to the first generation of gods (which would be Prince En.ki and Prince En.lil, etc.). This reference also talks about the “Sacred marriage” between the Queen of Orion and the King of “Sirius,” which is exactly what we discussed in Level II—the marriage was part of the “Peace Treaty.” Of interest in this reference is also how Tiamat is depicted as a dragon, which is very accurate—the first Creator Gods of the Universe were “dragonian” forces. The mentioning of the war between her and the first generation of deities is, of course, refers to the War of the Titans, which ended with the destruction of the planet Tiamat, after Prince En.ki and Marduk had defeated the Original Planners, who created the Primordial humans—the Namlú’u I’ve talked about in previous papers. Finally, the remainder of Tiamat then became the Earth, “formed from her divided body.”

Now I have shown that Anu, from what we know, only has one consort, but we still haven’t gotten to my point—who is Anu?

The first hint whom he might be is if we add a .lil to his name. If we do, we get An.lil, from “An-u.” The word lil in Sumerian means air<sup>22</sup>. Hence, we have “Heaven” and “air.” This doesn’t make much sense, but we know that the rulers of Sirius were called both “Kings” and “Lords,” and with this in mind, we get the word en<sup>23</sup>, which means lord in Sumerian, and .lil, which means “air” or “heaven.” We now have a title, en.lil, which means “Lord of the Air,” “Lord of Heaven,” and “Lord of Winds” on some accounts. Thus, we have King En.lil.

Wait a minute! There is no King En.lil! We have a Prince En.lil, which is supposedly King Anu’s son and Prince En.ki’s brother, but no King En.lil, right?

This is where the confusion is. Before we go further into explaining how this fits in, let me also reveal to you another Orion word, which is also a title, and this is the word “Khan.” Khan means “King” in the Orion/Aryan language, originating from the word KHAA (pronounced shaa), which means “outbreath,” (of the Goddess) or “VOID,” so now we have Khan En.lil, which means “King Lord of the Air,” where the “air” is space or Heaven. When King “Anu” married the Queen of Orion, he kept the “Lord” title but also needed to add an Orion title for “King,” which is “Khan.” This is still just an array of titles, but it’s as close to a name we can get with the knowledge that we have.

Fig. 1. Khan En.lil, aka King Anu

This will be confusing at first, before we get used to it, but if what I am telling the reader here is true, we have two En.lils—Khan En.lil, which is the same deity as King Anu, and Prince En.lil, who is supposedly Khan En.lil’s son, and/or the son of the Orion Queen.

Before I explain further, let’s keep in mind that in Orion, for a female to have male offspring, the offspring need to be born from unfertilized eggs—fertilized eggs always produce females. Hence, Khan En.lil can’t be the father of Prince En.ki and Prince En.lil, unless one or both of them are Khan En.lil’s sons from a previous marriage. Many claim that the two princes are stepbrothers or half-brothers, and this was also my approach in previous levels of learning. Since then, I have had reasons to reconsider that approach. Instead, I have concluded that the two princes are in fact true brothers, and both are the sons of the Queen. Thus, Khan En.lil is the stepfather of both princes. There is, of course, a reason for why I have changed my mind regarding this, but I won’t go into it at this point. That will perhaps be something for a later series of paper or a book.

Because we have two beings sharing the same title (En.lil), there has, of course, been a lot of confusion interpreting the ancient records. Which En.lil is which? Well, the first thing to realize is that they are two separate beings, and then we can reinterpret the scriptures from there.

In order to show the reader where in the texts we find references to the elder En.lil, I need to reveal one more thing, which will also make it easier to separate the two generations of En.lil. Prince En.lil, who is Prince En.ki's brother, is also known as Ninurta! In other words, Ninurta and Prince En.lil are one and the same, something I will show you in a few moments. However, with this in mind, let's go on with the next reference.

In Nippur, Ninurta was worshiped as part of a triad of deities including his father, Enlil and his mother, Ninlil.<sup>24</sup>

The usual approach is that Ninurta is the son of Prince En.lil, but let's consider that he wasn't, and instead interpret the text differently. En.lil in the above reference would thus be Khan En.lil, Nin.lil would be Mother Goddess, and Ninurta their son.

To go further from here, we need to look at Nin.lil. If we can see that she is actually another name for the Goddess, the quote will be proven correct by default. Therefore, let's look at this:

In Sumerian religion, Ninlil (𒊩𒌆𒌆𒌆 DNIN.LÍL "lady of the open field" or "Lady of the Wind"), also called Sud, in Assyrian called Mulliltu, is the consort goddess of Enlil. Her parentage is variously described. Most commonly she is called the daughter of Haia (god of stores) and Nunbarsegunu (or Ninshebargunnu [a goddess of barley] or Nisaba). Another source says she is the daughter of Anu (aka An) and Antu. Other sources call her a daughter of Anu and Nammu. Theophilus G. Pinches noted that Ninlil or Belit Ilani had seven different names (such as Nintud, Ninhursag, Ninmah, etc.) for seven different localities.<sup>25</sup>

As we can see in this reference, the regular idea is that Nin.lil and Prince En.lil were married, and so we are told in many of the Sumerian and Babylonian texts. There is a very important reason for this, and it has to do with rewriting of records. Prince En.ki and his son Marduk spent an enormous amount of time destroying and manipulating the old Sumerian texts when Marduk was in charge of the Babylonian Empire. It is well known that this actually happened, and the reason was that Prince En.ki wanted to be the One and Only God or the most powerful God in the Universe, and he wanted people to look at him as such. To be able to do this, he had to

1. take on the characteristics of other deities;

2. make other deities (such as Khan En.lil and the Goddess) look like “lesser gods” while Prince En.ki himself would be the One Creator. In Babylonian times (Prince En.ki was busy elsewhere (fighting wars in Sirius, as we will see later, and Marduk took his place as the Creator); and
3. manipulate, change, and destroy existing records to the extent that they corresponded with his agenda.

Fortunately, being aware of this helps because not all records are totally falsified. Prince En.ki and Marduk had to keep things as correct as possible in order not to make people too suspicious of their intentions because ever since mankind started to use written language, the gods and their minions have had this obsession to hide things in plain sight. For some reason, they like people to be able to look the truth in the eyes but still not see it or understand it. That’s how symbolism, which we have all around us on a daily basis, works. There are also other reasons why the gods want the truth to be available for those with eyes to see and ears to hear, and that is to protect themselves in case they would ever be caught. In such a case, they can say that the truth was there all the time. Now it’s up to us to start looking and to find it!

If we go back to the reference I just quoted, Theophilus G. Pinches<sup>26</sup>, a pioneer British assyriologist, is the one coming closest to what I want to show the reader. First, he acknowledges that there is a lot of syncretism involved in this, mentioning seven other names for the same goddess—in this case, Nin.lil. One of the names he mentions is Ninhursag. Let’s take a look at her.

Ninti, the title of Ninhursag, also means "the mother of all living", and was a title given to the later Hurrian goddess.<sup>27</sup>

Therefore, Ninhursag is considered “the mother of all living,” which certainly sounds like Mother Goddess herself. To be sure, let’s look some more. How about the “Hurrian goddess” mentioned in the above quote?

Hebat, also transcribed Kheba or Khepat, was the mother goddess of the Hurrians, known as "the mother of all living".[1] She is also a Queen of the gods.<sup>28</sup>

Who is the “Queen of the gods?” That is, of course, the Queen of Orion or Mother Goddess. This makes it very evident that Ninhursag is Mother Goddess. I can mention more sources, but I think the reader gets the drift.

Fig. 2. Ninurta with an arrow and bow and with a lion at his feet.

Now, before we summarize what we have gotten so far, I need to address the issue with Ninhursag. She is usually known as the goddess who was Prince En.ki’s consort and worked with him when the two were creating mankind, i.e. Homo sapiens and, later, Homo sapiens sapiens, which is us. In Sitchin’s translations, she is both Prince En.ki’s sister and his lover. Sometimes she has also been addressed as Nin.ki, Prince En.ki’s consort. However, in the scheme of things, there is no way that the Goddess would have worked with Prince En.ki, who overthrew her, took over her solar system, and destroyed her Living Library. Of course, that doesn’t make any sense. Hence, I will show the reader in a later paper that the goddess who helped Prince En.ki creating modern man was not Ninhursag but a different goddess. For now, we just need to know that Ninhursag/Mother Goddess had nothing to do with it.

Fig. 3. The Queen of the Stars

Therefore, let us summarize what we have discovered thus far. I have shown evidence that Nin.lil and Ninhursag is one and the same when we look a little more carefully, and we also know that Nin.lil was married to En.lil, according to most myths. The question that arises is then of course, “Which En.lil was married to Nin.lil? Was it Khan En.lil (Anu) or Prince En.lil (Ninurta)?”

Well, first, we have seen that Nammu, Nin.lil, and Ninhursag are one and the same deity—Mother Goddess. Now, who was married to Mother Goddess? Khan En.lil or Anu, was.

With this in fresh memory, let us review a previous quote:

In Nippur, Ninurta was worshiped as part of a triad of deities including his father, Enlil and his mother, Ninlil. In variant mythology, his mother is said to be the harvest goddess Ninhursag.<sup>29</sup>

Here it says that En.lil and Nin.lil are married, and Ninurta is their son. Nin.lil and Ninhursag are once again being mentioned as possibly being the same Goddess—more syncretism. As we now can see, the truth really is hidden in plain sight! “En.lil,” in the above and, perhaps, hundreds of other references, refers to Khan En.lil and not Prince En.lil, Prince En.ki’s brother!

Moreover, Ninurta is their son, it says there, and we know that the two sons of the Goddess are Prince En.lil and Prince En.ki. Ninurta has always been related to Prince En.lil and not to Prince En.ki--therefore, it’s easy to see that Ninurta can be no one else but Prince En.lil, Prince En.ki’s brother. This is very important to understand because Ninurta has played a major role in the history of womankind, mostly related to the Namlú’u, as we shall see in a later paper.

I mentioned earlier that it’s not Prince En.ki, but Ninurta who is related to lions. It’s going to be self-evident as we move on, but here is a typical reference to Ninurta in relation to lions, and it shows him as the “hunter” with a bow and arrow, which is something he has in common with his mother. We will discuss this more later.

Ninurta often appears holding a bow and arrow, a sickle sword, or a mace named Sharur: Sharur is capable of speech in the Sumerian legend "Deeds and Exploits of Ninurta" and can take the form of a winged lion and may represent an archetype for the later Shedú.<sup>30</sup>

However, I want to show the reader that Ninurta and Prince En.ki are two different beings, and if so, it proves that Ninurta indeed is Prince En.lil.

Enki, was portrayed as Ninurta's mentor from whom Ninurta was entrusted several powerful Mes, including the Deluge.<sup>31</sup>

And there we have it!

II.II. Ninurta and the Titans

Tell me someone who doesn’t think that (Prince) En.lil is the bad guy in the Pantheon, and if you can, I bet you had to search for a long time. There is so much stigma connected with this being that it's hard to find a balanced description of him. Like so many before me, I fell for this myself without giving it much of a second thought, until I figured out more about Prince En.ki's true character in Level II.

<sup>29</sup> <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ninurta>

Not until I was in the middle of writing Level III did I ask myself the obvious follow-up questions: "If Prince En.ki showed to be so different from what I'd first thought, what about Prince En.lil? Is there something with him that I haven't seen as well?" Like so many others, I had decided a long time ago that this being means trouble.

What was really exposed, once I seriously and objectively started looking into him, stunned me, and I had to sit back for a while and take it all in before I cross-checked my information to see if what I'd found out was actually true. If it was, this being, also known as Prince Ninurta, has been quite unfairly treated throughout history, and so has his stepfather, Khan En.lil. Some of this was also due to a mix-up between the two because they carried the same title, but most of it was due to an intensive and intentional black propaganda campaign against these two entities carried out by Prince En.ki and his son, Marduk. It's not that anyone involved in all this has been totally innocent, but it's a different matter when you are accused for crimes and war crimes that you never committed, and most importantly—you are not present so that you can defend yourself. In other words—it's backstabbing! It may surprise some readers when I say that Ninurta and Khan En.lil were not here to defend themselves because from what we've learned, they were on Earth! However, in this series of papers, I'm going to reveal that they actually weren't on Earth!

Let us start by looking at the rankings of the gods. The important ones all had their titles followed by a number between 5 and 60, where 5 was the lowest and 60 could only be held by the Sky God himself, the King of Heaven. Note here also that all male gods have even numbers and the females' numbers are uneven:

- Antu 55
- Enlil 50
- Ninlil 45
- Enki 40
- Ninki 35
- Nannar 30
- Ningal 25
- Utu 20
- Inanna 15
- Ishkur 10

- Ninkhursag 5<sup>32</sup>

This is, unfortunately, a compromised list, either set up by Prince En.ki or Marduk, or it has been compromised by someone else over time. I am going to suggest that it was set up by Prince En.ki or his son, and I think I won't be far from the truth.

Antu, which is the name chosen for Anu's (Khan En.lil's) consort in this list, being just another title for the Queen of Orion (it basically means close to "Anu's consort"), has the ranking of "55," according to this type of numbering. This number is the top female ranking, but her counterpart, Ninkhursag (Ninhursag), is followed only by the number "5." To begin with, we can definitely see that this is a patriarchal ranking system because Anu (Khan En.lil) is ranked as being the highest, while Antu (the Orion Queen) is ranked with the lower number of "55," and not the other way around. Moreover, it also means that at some point, Ninhursag fell out of grace in Prince En.ki's eyes and no longer had his support and respect—hence she quickly descended down the list until she got the lowest ranking. This makes sense because the title Ninhursag was given to the Goddess by Prince En.ki's brother, Ninurta, as I will show in time. When Prince En.ki officially took over Earth after the Deluge, he could do more or less what he wanted to, and one thing he did was to insult his family.

As we can see, Marduk has no rank at all, and even if Prince En.ki and Marduk may have tampered with the original ranking system, they continued to keep Marduk out (although he later, in a moment a rebellion, took the rank 50, as the "King of Earth"). En.lil is keeping his 50 position, and Prince En.ki is at 40, just like it was originally. The reason for this is simple—Prince En.ki and his son wanted to show the world why they held grudges against En.lil, who was younger and still was the Crown-Prince of Orion instead of Prince En.ki, whom after all was the eldest. Hence, he argued, he should rightfully have that title. Amazingly enough, it is mainly because of this simple fact that this whole mess started in the first place—Lucifer's Rebellion and the hijacking of Planet Earth!

From another aspect, it is also interesting that Prince En.lil holds the position of 50. We knew this from Level I, but now we need to keep this in memory for the next revelation, which has to do with Ninurta. Curiously enough, Ninurta, just as En.lil, holds the rank of 50, although a certain rank number in the Sumerian Pantheon could only be held by one deity!<sup>33</sup> We also learn that because of the discrepancy that Ninurta and Prince En.lil hold the same rank and are the same person, Ninurta could not hold a seat in the Council of 12!<sup>34</sup>

Now, I am going to argue that the above is another piece of evidence that Prince En.lil and Ninurta are one and the same person because two deities simply can't hold the same rank. Nevertheless, Prince En.lil and Ninurta do! As we learn in the book, Castles Built on Sand,<sup>35</sup> Ninurta was, therefore, not allowed to be a member of the Council of 12. What actually happened, as I see it, was not only Ninurta but also Prince En.lil were excluded because they were one and the same! This is an indicator that Prince En.ki and Marduk wanted to exclude the top-three in the Pantheon from being members of the Council and, therefore, would have no say in what was happening on Earth and what was planned for humanity's future.

The manipulation of the ancient records seems to have been done in increments, and as ideas came forth in Prince En.ki's and Marduk's heads, new revisions were taking place. However, this also created a problem because they couldn't go back and revise the same parts in the records over and over without being obvious. Hence, we can also see clues where the two manipulators were hoping we wouldn't. Then again, they had little confidence in Homo sapiens sapiens, whom they regarded as a lower-caste slave race with very limited intelligence. Between each other, they called us lulus, which is like when the white man gave very insulting names to their black slaves not so long ago.

For the record, the AIF still calls us lulus—something I experienced when I communicated with Utu Šamaš in 2011, something I'm sure most readers remember, as I've mentioned it in earlier papers. He consistently called me a lulu. I'm sure that Prince En.ki and his son were quite sure that we "lulus" would never figure out the truth about the Sumerian and Babylonian revisions. However, they have always rated humanity's intelligence too low, and they never understood that we can figure things out from a spiritual perspective because spiritual traits are mainly lacking concerning the AIF. Although they know they are spiritual beings, of course, they think very "mechanically" and scientifically.

<sup>34</sup> The 12 highest-ranking gods and goddesses were basically the "Council of 12"—the twelve deities who decided over Earth's destiny and human affairs in ancient times, although again, this has been tampered with. I would rather call them the "Council of 9" because the three highest ranked Gods, which are, Khan En.lil (Anu), the Orion Queen (An.tu), and Prince En.lil (Enlil) were removed from this ranking system when En.ki took over once and for all after the Deluge, as we shall see later. A few other gods have most certainly been kicked out and replaced by others as well. The Council of 9 may sound familiar to readers who have read Level III.

I don't know if a Council of 12 still exists within the AIF or the Orions in general, but after the two editors had revised the list, only nine names remained, with Prince En.ki and Marduk ranked at "50," interchangeably. This became the "Council of 9," whom Roddenberry and other celebrities and psychics have channeled over the years. As many people know (I wrote an article about it almost ten years ago), Roddenberry got much of the ideas from the early episodes of "Star Trek" by participating in the Council of 9 channeling sessions. George Lucas must also have had some experiences with these beings because much of "Star Wars" is also based upon the Council of 9 information.

The Council of 9 is also the same council that currently guards the stargate around the planet Saturn. This is being discussed to quite some extent in the "Ra Material."<sup>36</sup> This council, but with its original members, I think was called the "Council of 12" or the "Council of 13" back in the days when the Goddess created our solar system and had her own MIKH-MAKH warriors guard the stargate—a stargate that had connections both to the important star highway, Pesh-Meten, and Orion. However, after the Deluge, about 11,000BC, when Prince En.ki once and for all took over the Saturn stargate, he overthrew the council and set up his own Council of 9, probably based upon the list I showed the reader here above, but heavily revised.

Now it starts getting interesting because there is another being who is directly connected with the planet Saturn. This being is Prince Ninurta.

Here is a reference to ancient texts:

In the astral-theological system Ninurta was associated with the planet Saturn, or perhaps as offspring or an aspect of Saturn. In his capacity as a farmer-god, there are similarities between Ninurta and the Greek Titan Kronos, whom the Romans in turn identified with their Titan Saturn.<sup>37</sup>

OK, now we learn that Ninurta is connected with Saturn and most possibly is a Titan, i.e. one of the older Gods, who were here before Prince En.ki, aka Lucifer, first came to Earth—Prince En.ki and his army of gods thus being the Olympians. This is very important information because being a "farmer-god" implies that he was here on Earth and was one of the Gods who created the Living Library, which was one of the things that the Titans did.

Associating Ninurta with the Titans excludes Prince En.ki from the equation of being Ninurta once and for all because Prince En.ki was an Olympian, most often referred to as Poseidon in the Greek Olympian Pantheon, something we have discussed earlier. This leaves us with Prince En.lil. However, to be really sure that we are on the right track, let's look at a few more references—we need to cross-check this.

At gatewaystobabylon.com, we learn more about that Queen Nin (the name I will mainly give to the Orion Queen from hereon) is Ninurta's mother, and Khan En.lil is his father, and the lion is a symbol related to Ninurta<sup>38</sup> (also being a symbol for the Queendom of the Orion Empire in general. We also see the lion as a symbol for royalty here on Earth, which makes sense because all the Kingdoms of Earth claim rights to being associated with Orion, an association and standard they lost a long time ago because of how they have behaved here on our planet over the millennia. At that time, Prince En.ki hijacked the lion symbol and sometimes used it for his own purposes).

Here is another telling reference, directly from the Sumerian literature:

Ninurta, lord of the gods, glory of E-cumeca, speaks most generously in praise: "My father Enlil!" Ninurta ..... himself like a lion: "I am the hero belonging to Enlil, I am he who controls the affairs of Nibru. ...., and do not let the birds escape. I am a man after the heart of my father Enlil, and I am the hero beloved by my mother Ninlil. I was born in the mountains; I am strong in the mountains."<sup>39</sup>

Again, Ninurta is referred to as a lion. He is also telling us that he is "strong in the mountains," something that is directly connected with the Living Library, as we shall see when we go into details about what happened on Earth before Prince En.ki and his crew came down here and changed it completely. Ninurta is also "lord of the gods," according to this ancient hymn, and who was the lord of the gods here on Earth, according to almost all ancient mythologies? That's right, Prince En.lil, he who'd earned the rank of 50 amongst the gods. This hymn alone proves that Ninurta and Prince En.lil are one and the same. Therefore, from now on, I will refer to Prince En.lil as Prince Ninurta or just Ninurta, while Anu will be referred to as King En.lil or Khan En.lil.

Therefore, in summary, what does all this mean, and why is it so important? First, I am fully aware of that it comes as a major surprise to almost everybody who reads this, that En.lil, the way he is portrayed in the "Anunnaki story" narrated by Sitchin and others, is not who we have been told he is. I have showed beyond reasonable doubt in this section of the paper that "En.lil" and <http://etcs.l.orinst.ox.ac.uk/section4/tr42703.htm>, op. cit.

Ninurta are one and the same. With this being the case, it makes En.lil a Titan, referred to as Cronus.

In the first generation of the twelve Titans, the males were Oceanus, Hyperion, Coeus, Cronus, Crius, and Iapetus and the females—the Titanesses—were Mnemosyne, Tethys, Theia, Phoebe, Rhea, and Themis. The second generation of Titans consisted of Hyperion's children Eos, Helios, and Selene; Coeus's daughters Leto and Asteria; Iapetus's children Atlas, Prometheus, Epimetheus, and Menoetius; Oceanus's daughter Metis; and Crius' sons Astraeus, Pallas, and Perses.<sup>40</sup>

If we look up Cronus<sup>41</sup>, he is identified with the Roman deity, Saturn. Prince En.ki as Poseidon, on the other hand, is an Olympian, as we can see here:

While the number was fixed at twelve, there was considerable variation as to which deities were included. However, the twelve [Olympians] as most commonly portrayed in art and poetry were Zeus, Hera, Poseidon, Demeter, Athena, Apollo, Artemis, Ares, Aphrodite, Hephaestus, Hermes and either Hestia or Dionysus.<sup>42</sup>

Syncretism is not taken into consideration in the above list, however, as some of these beings can be fused together. We will go more into this phenomenon in a later paper.

All this is of great importance because, first, it proves that Zecharia Sitchin's translations of the Sumerian cuneiform are incomplete at best and misleading at worst. Although he had access to the information, he never mentioned that "En.lil" and Ninurta were the same person, and neither (who are one and not two) were involved in most of what they were accused of.<sup>43</sup> Now, let us summarize further:

Ninurta, aka Prince En.lil, was in other words (and this is imperative) one of the Original Planners—one of the Original Creator Gods, who, together with Ninhursag [Queen Nin] and other Creator Gods, the God in charge of creating the Living Library on Earth! This ancient time was also called "The Golden Age," so much praised and discussed by many researchers. He was in charge of the Titans, who lived here together with the Namlú'u species—our androgynous humanoid ancestors!

<sup>43</sup> I am not on a mission trying to debunk Sitchin, but I have no other choice than to mention his work quite often in comparison with my own, because they differ quite considerably, and I believe that it's of the utmost importance that the reader understands that Sitchin had ulterior motives for doing what he was doing. If we don't comprehend this, we are still stuck in the AIF Agenda.

Prince Ninurta, the heir of the Orion Empire, was embracing Matriarchy and was probably the first teacher of the Religion of the Mother Goddess on Earth.

Prince Ninurta and his team of Titans were the ones who were forced to abandon Queen Nin's Experiment (the Living Library) on the peak of the Golden Age after a devastating war against his brother, Prince En.ki, aka Lucifer. Ninurta and his team of Creator Gods were trying to defend the incredible beauty and harmony that he and the Titans had created on this planet, millions of years ago, but failed to do so!

After Prince Ninurta had been defeated in "The War of the Titans," Prince En.ki made Earth his own stronghold—illegally so, as he had no rights to this planet at all and doesn't up until this day! Prince En.ki and his son, Marduk, were the two who introduced Patriarchy on Earth. Thus, the old "Patriarchs" (Abraham and the Hebrews) were Prince En.ki's people and not En.lil's/Ninurta's. This also proves that YHWH/Jehovah in the Bible was an imposter (as the original YHWH/Jehovah are feminine titles, belonging to Queen Nin), and this imposter, who claimed ownership of the biblical Patriarchs, was either Prince En.ki, stealing the feminine title of the Queen, making Jehovah into a masculine "God," showing himself off as deity, or, as a hypothesis, Jehovah was (perhaps more probably), a mix between Prince En.ki and Marduk!

Our history has been severely tampered with, and now it's time to set the records straight and clean it up to how it was told before the Luciferian Patriarchs changed it in favor of their own agenda, which they stretched out several thousand years into the future, into our present time and beyond. I am well aware that this is an enormous task, and I can only do my part. However, I am hoping that some of the material in this paper may work as an inspiration for other to continue where I'm leaving off, until we have as clear an overview as we can of the different lines of time.

New Agers and others who are waiting for a "Second Golden Age," when the gods are coming down from the Heavens to rule over mankind again and who are embracing Prince En.ki as the benevolent "savior," or helper of mankind, will be shocked when the truth occurs to them.

II.II.I. The Saturn and Orion Connections

We have already seen that Ninurta is related to the planet Saturn, but let's discuss what this actually means. Sitchin, in his first book, The Twelfth Planet, claimed that the Sumerians were well aware of all the planets in our solar system, including the "Planet of the Gods," Nibiru, which supposedly has a 3,600-year orbit around our Sun. It is said to have been catapulted out from the Sirius solar system, and eventually, on its path through empty space was taken in by the gravity of the planet Neptune and has since then been a part of our solar system. The old Sumerians even had our solar system depicted in the upper left corner of a cylinder seal, called the “VA 243 Seal” (fig. 4). Hence, according to Sitchin, the Sumerians already knew which god was related to which planet. Other scholars tend to agree with Sitchin, except that the planet which is supposedly Nibiru is not Nibiru.

Fig. 4. The VA 243 Seal, supposedly showing the planets in our solar system, including Nibiru

However, although this seal and the Sumerian scriptures were not translated until in modern time, this information was well hidden but also well explained within various secret societies, which Galilei Galileo and other famous Middle Ages astronomers were members of or had access to. This, of course, was unknown to the common population—therefore, today it looks as if Galileo and others had to rediscover the outer planets in our solar system and name them again. Interestingly enough, they all named them after Roman and Greek gods, who, in turn, were old Sumerian gods! How do we explain that, and how many people have thought of that? They could have named the planets after the astronomers who explored them, for example, but they didn't. Well, sometimes they did, but others, higher up in the hierarchy, did not allow it, and it always ended up with that the planets got names borrowed from the Pantheon instead.

What does this mean? It means, of course, that the astronomers who named the planet they discovered after a certain god were already initiated in secret societies, while those who tried to name them after themselves or give them other random names were not-- hence, some superior authorities, who were initiated, stepped in and "saved the day." Therefore, now all planets have been named after their corresponding gods, and initiated people seem to have made sure that each planet is associated with the correct god, as well.

For people who haven't studied this subject, the relation between planets and gods seems random and without significance—it's just some "cool thing that scientists do." We will learn that in reality it indeed has great significance!

Fig. 5. Nibiru and our Solar system

After the Queen of the Stars left the Earth, Prince Ninurta, as her and Khan En.lil's heir, was assigned Earth to become his domain<sup>44</sup>. Not only was he assigned the Earth, as it were, but also the entire solar system.

The well-known fact that Ninurta is related to the planet Saturn is significant because as Commander in Chief of the solar system, he was also in charge of the stargates which work as entries into and exits from the solar system. The Earth happens to sit in the middle of the star lane, Pesh-Meten, which is mainly used for business and trade between different star systems. The main stargate, which star beings used if they wanted to enter our solar system, or were just passing by was (and is still) located somewhere in the vicinity of the planet Saturn. Some say it's located in the rings of Saturn, while others mention the hexagon at Saturn's North Pole. I am, at this time, not certain about the exact point where this stargate is located, but I would presume it's one of the two just mentioned, or it could, perhaps, be both of them. I know that the Council of 12 or 13 (also called the Council of Saturn), which in these ancient times was appointed by Ninurta, sat in the rings of Saturn, but in a higher dimension. They were the ones who decided who was eligible to enter the solar system and who was not. At the head of this council was Prince Ninurta, and he was always consulted if the rest of the Council was uncertain whether to let a star being or a group of traders through. The hexagon, by the way, was discovered by the probes that NASA sent out in the later part of the 1970s, and they took pictures and video films of Saturn once they passed the giant gas planet. This unexplained phenomenon was once again mentioned in the news just a few weeks before I wrote this paper<sup>45</sup> (fig. 6).

Another name for Ninurta is “The God of the Hunt<sup>46</sup>,” and he was also known as a “war-god” in Sumer.<sup>47</sup> This doesn’t mean that he walked around and created wars, but as the heir of Orion, he was also known as Archangel Michael, Second in Command, while Khan En.lil is Archangel Michael, First in Command. The term “Archangel Michael” originates in Orion and is not a person, but again, a title. It is carried by the being (or beings) who are in command of Queen Nin’s Special Forces, and the “Michaels” are always of the Queen’s Court. We can find references to Archangel Michael in the Bible as well—more specifically in the Book of Daniel<sup>48</sup>, where he is called a “great prince who stands up for the children of your people.”<sup>49</sup> Wikipedia says about Michael:

In the New Testament, Michael leads God's armies against Satan's forces in the Book of Revelation, where during the war in heaven, he defeats Satan. In the Epistle of Jude, Michael is specifically referred to as an "archangel".<sup>50</sup>

Satan and his forces in this sense are Prince En.ki as Lucifer and his Fallen Angels. In the “War in Heaven,” which we shall come back to in a future paper, Ninurta, as Archangel Michael, Second in Command, defeated Satan and his cohorts in a battle and threw him out of Heaven. These Bible stories are all allegories for what actually happened in the Orion Empire a long time ago.

Therefore, Ninurta, God of the Hunt, simply means that he is second in command of the Queen’s Special Forces, which are located in Orion in order to defend the Empire against attacks—especially from Prince En.ki/Lucifer and his armies, something the Queen allegedly is expecting to happen sometime in the future.

Anyway, there is actually another reason why I am mentioning all this and especially Ninurta as a hunter. If we look at mythology once again, who else is a hunter up in the Heavens? Some readers may have guessed. The answer is Orion. Orion is a male and known as “Orion, the Hunter!”<sup>51</sup>

I often wondered while I was researching the matriarchal empire of Orion, led by a Queen, why the constellation of Orion in astrology is a male hunter. Why not a female hunter? Therefore, of course, I had to start researching the history of the Constellation of Orion.

I found that it all came back to the Artemis Story, which I will tell in its full length in an upcoming paper in this series—until then, I would like the readers to just keep in mind that there is an affiliation between Orion and Ninurta—an affiliation that is very interesting, to say the least.

II.III. Prince En.ki, Lord of the Earth

One of the reasons why I'm writing these series of papers is because I know, as a human being, how easy it is to fall for indoctrination and manipulation, even when we are conscious and think we are not being indoctrinated or manipulated. Sometimes, the truth is there, right before our eyes, and yet, we don't see it. Then, when we finally notice, we wonder why we didn't see the obvious from the beginning. Of course, there are still always people who, even when they see the truth, refuse to see it and take it in, for various reasons. Some may want it to be the way they thought it was and refuse to change their belief system, while others have invested too much in the lies to be willing to change. There are, of course, many other reasons too.

Until I researched for Level II, I thought that Prince En.ki was the better of the two brothers, and En.lil was the bad guy. In addition, I was convinced that, ultimately, we are our own saviors, and no outside source or force is going to save us—rightfully so because we need to evolve without intervention. This is still my conviction—it has not changed—but what has changed is my view on the two brothers, Prince En.ki and En.lil.<sup>52</sup> My view on En.lil will be explained as we move on, but I finally saw who Prince En.ki is when I researched Level II. It was quite a sobering wakeup, to say the least. However, it fit the picture I had about how most things are the opposite from what we've learned—so also in this case.

There are many Prince En.ki followers among researchers and truth-seekers, thinking he will come back in some shape and form and either save us or help us help ourselves. However, as I showed the readers in Level II, one of his major counterparts is Lucifer. Even with that said, many of the same followers would claim that Lucifer is the “good guy” because he came with light and knowledge, and he taught the secrets of the gods and the Universe to early mankind.

This is not quite true, which we also discussed in Level II, although there is some validity to it. One thing he did not do, on the other hand, was to come to Earth to improve mankind and speed up our evolution. Nothing can be further from the truth! Instead, he came down here with an invader force, who with violence and war chased away the peaceful star beings who were already here, killed most of those who didn't have time to flee and enslaved the rest. Then, he used the scientific skills he had learned from his mother to genetically alter the DNA of the already existing primordial humans to dumb them down to a point where they could be used as slave labor. The purpose was for him to achieve his own, revengeful goals.<sup>53</sup> By this token, he actually slowed down, or reversed, our evolution because the primordial human was already evolved.

Prince En.ki was the Serpent in the Garden of Edin (Eden), who told “Eve” to eat the fruits from the “Tree of Knowledge”. The Bible portrays him as the evil Satan, but many researchers see that as a contradiction, using the <sup>52</sup> From here on, if I mention En.lil alone, without any prefix (Lord, King, Prince etc.), I am talking about Prince En.lil., En.ki's brother. If I discuss his father, erroneously known as “Anu”, I will always refer to him as Khan.En.lil, or King En.lil.

<sup>53</sup> The war between the Creator Gods, who were stationary on this planet, and En.ki. and his rebels—a war which En.ki won—is told in the story of the Titans and the Olympians, called the Titanomachy (“The War of the Titans”), http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Titan\_\(mythology\)) and <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Titanomachy> .

argument that “Satan” actually enlightened a previously repressed mankind. Hence, those with that mindset envision Prince En.ki as the “good brother;” whereas, En.lil was equivalent to Jehovah (or YHWH/Yahweh), the angry and violent God of the Bible.

These ideas, to a large degree, come from the Gnostics and are a significant part of Gnosticism, which has as its basic principle to turn things around to get to the truth. So do I, but sometimes we must look even further than that because the rabbit hole is very deep, and the truth can be well-hidden. Once we’ve looked, we may even have to, in certain terms, turn things around once again to get a clue to what is actually going on. My best advice to those who are eager to learn is to always be willing to change directions. Don’t ever think that you know it all! Hopefully, if you do your research correctly and use your intuition, you climb a few steps up the ladder every time you figure out something new, but then it’s time to change parts of your paradigm again in order to move forward. Truth-seeking is a never-ending changing of directions! Sometimes, it can even be “two steps back and three steps forward.”

Here is the question: did Prince En.ki./Lucifer actually enlighten mankind in the Garden of Edin and afterwards, or didn’t he? I know that this is a little bit of repetition from Level II, but it doesn’t hurt to get this information in perspective because we are going to build on it in this series of papers. What Prince En.ki did was to choose representatives for mankind—representatives who were of the purest bloodline (i.e. being of Prince En.ki’s blood) and educated them so that they could control and manipulate the rest of mankind. He did this by creating so-called “secret societies” and “Mystery Schools,” where only selected people were initiated. These people became the High Priests and High Priestesses, also called “shamans” by some. These High Priests and Priestesses are not to be confused with the real, original shamans, who existed on this planet before Prince En.ki landed on Earth with his “Fallen Angels.” In other words, it was Prince En.ki who introduced elitism on this planet a very long time ago, and from elitism, hierarchies developed, which created people who were more fortunate than others—and those who were not entitled to become “enlightened” were considered stupid and expendable. In modern time, these people have been called “useless eaters”<sup>54</sup>. What Prince En.ki wanted to create was an Elite who could rule while he was gone, minding his business elsewhere, away from Earth.

Those who still doubt that it’s Prince En.ki who is behind the Global Elite don’t even have to research our history very carefully but only need to understand what the title of this being really means. En.ki means “Lord of Earth!" Again, truth is hidden in plain sight, but we misinterpret it for some reason. If I say that I am the Lord of Earth, wouldn't I be saying that I am in charge of Earth? Absolutely! Why then would it mean something different concerning Prince En.ki? It's obvious that he is the new "High Commander," and the Global Elite must then be his minions. It can't be clearer than that.

Now, let's take another look at this being, originating from a star system in the constellation of Orion—a being also known as Lucifer, the Rebel, and the "Light Bearer," to mention a few. Yes, he did bring light, but only to a few "chosen ones," and even to those, he only told them as much as was necessary. Today, secret societies are hierarchal, and the initiated work on a need-to-know basis. You have to earn and deserve your way to knowledge. This is nothing different from the old Mystery Schools—therefore, nothing has changed—knowledge is and has always been, given on a need-to-know basis.

Some may think that even if this is mostly correct, what Prince En.ki's knowledge has evolved into (the Global Elite, aka the "Illuminati") was never his intention, and those who were initiated, abused their power and used it for negative control. Again, this thinking is intentionally introduced to defend the High Commander. It is well known within alternative research, and it's in the Sumerian records that mankind was genetically altered and used as a slave race for Prince En.ki, and that's exactly how he wanted it, as we shall see in a moment. In charge of these slaves were his chosen minions. Why would we think that from this that something good would come out? Why would a supposedly highly intelligent star being believe that this would have a peaceful and meaningful future for mankind?

Prince En.ki is another god with many titles and similar to both Khan En.lil and the Queen of the Stars; he has no original name known to us here on Earth. The most common names for Prince En.ki, depending on location, are Ptah (in Egypt)<sup>55</sup>, Neptune (in Rome)<sup>56</sup>, Poseidon (in Greece)<sup>57</sup>, Oannes (in Mesopotamia)<sup>58 59</sup>, Dagon (by the Philistines)<sup>60</sup>, Satan in the Bible, and Lucifer, also in the Bible, but discussed more in depth in the Urantia Book<sup>61</sup>.

Peculiar with these most common titles is that Prince En.ki was not presented as a human, nor a Reptilian, as many have claimed, but as being

As Oannes, he was living under the ocean, was very unattractive, and came up from the water during the daytime, teaching mankind in writing, the arts, and the sciences. In the evenings, he returned to the ocean and disappeared in the waves. Ea was the later Akkadian name for Prince En.ki, the god of the Sumerian city Eridu, said to be the first known city on Earth. Ea was also called the “Fish of Heaven”<sup>63</sup>, and Oannes was half fish and half man<sup>64</sup>. Oannes, by the way, is the inspiration for the Pope’s miter or fish-hat<sup>65</sup>, indicating that the Vatican is actually worshipping Prince En.ki/Oannes as their real Jesus Christ.

Fig. 8. Oannes and the Pope with his miter.

The dagon is also a water-creature, according to mythology, and another name for Prince En.ki and could be a name that Bible readers may recognize because Dagon is mentioned eight times in the Bible, in the following passages:

4. Book of Joshua 19:27;
5. Book of Judges 16:23;
6. Book of 1 Samuel 5:2, 5:3, 5:4, 5:5, 5:7;
7. Book of 1 Chronicles 10:10.<sup>66</sup>

One may argue if it's because of these ancient legends that people say that they have seen "scaly creatures," very reptilian-like, when indeed they are "Fishmen."

Fig. 9. Ea, depicted as a "Fishman" in this seal.

Then, of course, as most people know, Neptune and his counterpart Poseidon are known to originate from the ocean, holding their long trident. They were both supposedly giants.

Therefore, there are many references to Prince En.ki being connected with water. This will be important further into this story.

In the beginning of 2012, there was a UFO sighting just outside Oregon's coast, not far from where I live, where a number of UFOs suddenly ascended from the ocean and flew up in the sky, after which they quickly disappeared. This event was seen by quite a few people, and the military was apparently concerned. It was in the local newspapers, but there was no follow-up on it in the public media. This incident makes sense, though, as Prince En.ki is known to have bases located under the ocean floor<sup>67</sup>. Now, we may know where one of them is, at least—a little "too close to home" for my liking, literally and figuratively speaking.

Now, after discussing what I believe are the most common titles and earthly names for Prince En.ki, let's mention a few not so common titles that people often associate with totally different beings. Two of these titles are Zeus in Greece and Jupiter in Rome. If we look up Zeus in Wikipedia, we find that he rules the Olympians at Mt. Olympus<sup>68</sup>, which is evidence that he is Prince En.ki. We know that the Titans were the first Gods<sup>69</sup>—the so-called “Older Gods,” who were here and created the Living Library. The Olympians were the younger gods, who started a war against the Titans. They were not necessarily younger in age, but younger because they came to Earth at a later time than the Titans did. Prince En.ki must, therefore, be the Ruler of the Olympians, just as Wikipedia claims. He is also the god of lightning and thunder, which he used as one of the techniques when genetically altering mankind. Hence, we often see Zeus depicted with a thunderbolt<sup>70</sup>. However, the stories indicate that Zeus had the power of the thunderbolt taken away by Mother Goddess in her manifestation of Gaia (Earth)<sup>71</sup>, after the creation of Homo sapiens, possibly because of his misuse of energy. However, he later took it back when he managed to release the prisoners, whom the Olympians had put in a dungeon called Tartarus,<sup>72 73</sup> something we will discuss in detail in a later paper about Sirius.

The ancient Greeks acknowledged Zeus as the “God of gods” and the “King of Heaven,” which, of course, was Prince En.ki's self-proclaimed title and had nothing to do with reality. Prince En.ki/Zeus was never the King of Heaven. He was, and is, a Prince of Orion, and that is all he can ever be—he has no legal rights to Earth in any shape or form.

Another symbol for Zeus is the bull<sup>74</sup>, which is interesting and shows his connection to the Pleiades (Taurus, the Bull), where Prince En.ki has a stronghold even up to this day, being associated with the star system Aldebaran. I showed this already in my early writings—an e-book called, The Myth Around Supriem <sup>69</sup> Just like I've done consistently throughout the Levels of Learning, I use capital “G” for real Creator Gods, and small “g” for those who use traditional science in order to create life, such as En.ki and his Fallen Angels did when they genetically altered mankind. The Titans would hence be Gods with a “G”, while En.ki and his scientists would be “gods” with a “g”.

David Rockefeller<sup>75</sup>, Chapter X<sup>76</sup>. Many Native American Indians also claim that they originate from the Pleiades, and that's where their gods dwell, they say.

Moreover, we learn from Wikipedia that Zeus in Neo-Platonism is equivalent to the Demiurge himself, the "Divine Mind"<sup>77</sup>. The Demiurge in our culture, in the occult sciences, and in Gnosticism, is another name for Satan and also the Chief of the Archons<sup>78</sup>. As previously stated, Satan in the Bible is the Serpent, which is connected with Prince En.ki, who supposedly gave knowledge to mankind by tempting Eve to eat from the Tree of Knowledge.

The bull was the form Zeus took when he raped Europa<sup>79</sup>, also known as the descendent of the Goddess Io<sup>80</sup>, who some believe is equivalent to Isis herself<sup>81</sup>. This becomes relevant when we get to a much later paper in this Level of Learning where we will show that Prince En.ki and Isis worked together in creating Homo sapiens. The scholars are very uncertain about who Europa really was, but if she was not a descendent of Io, she might have been Io, which means that she would have been Isis. I don't know if I am correct in this, but on the other hand, Prince En.ki has evidently raped so many women that it's hard to keep track.<sup>82</sup>

Perhaps, the biggest surprise, however, concerning relating Prince En.ki to another deity name is that of Nergal. By many, Nergal is looked upon and presented as a unique, separate being, but here we really have an opportunity to see that some records were altered while other records were hidden by those who saw what Prince En.ki and his son, Marduk, were doing when they changed the history in their favor. Where we know that the gods themselves were either writing or dictating the stories to a scribe, we can't expect a truthful story. They had an agenda—therefore, why would they tell us everything, and why would they always be truthful? Still, I want to show that Prince En.ki and Nergal are one and the same. This can be done by cross-checking the references, and a certain picture starts to emerge.

Again, Wikipedia has been very helpful, and the references I'm using from there are referring back to other, reliable sources—at least as reliable as they come. It's enough to look up "Nergal" in Wikipedia to find the first major clue. It says in the beginning: “He is the son of Enlil and Ninlil.”<sup>83</sup> If I hadn’t researched first to find out who exactly “Enlil” and “Ninlil” are, the above quote wouldn’t have told me anything of real value, just like it apparently hasn’t for many other researchers in the past. It’s a matter of looking for syncretism again. I have already showed that Enlil is Khan En.lil, and Nin.lil is the Goddess in her incarnated form as the Queen of Orion—therefore, here it says black on white that Nergal is their son. As we know, the King and the Queen had two sons who have been the lead characters throughout the stories of the so-called “Anunnaki,” and they are Prince En.lil and Prince En.ki. Does this mean that Nergal is one of the two but under another title, or is he a third brother? Let’s see what we can find out.

Main iconography pictures Nergal as a lion<sup>84</sup>—therefore, let’s keep that in mind. Then, some say that he may be the equivalence to Utu Šamaš (Shamash), but only on certain occasions<sup>85</sup>. Here, the confusion amongst the scholars is that Utu is said to be En.lil’s son, just like Nergal, but they are unaware that there are two En.lils. Utu is not Khan En.lil’s son—something I will discuss in a later paper—so we can forget that Utu and Nergal are the same person.

The next clue is that Nergal presides over the Netherworld<sup>86</sup>, and that excludes Prince En.lil from the equation because he is Lord of the Air(ways), which the title En.lil indicates. Prince En.ki, on the other hand, has been said to preside over the Netherworld, just like Nergal. I said earlier, in many instances, that Prince En.ki, when he is referred to as the Lord of the Netherworld or the Underworld, it mostly has to do with water—both freshwater and saltwater and relates to the ocean or the KHAA, but not always. The Abzu, in which Prince En.ki basically resides, also refers to, as I’ve also mentioned, a place beneath the ocean floor that would certainly be considered the Netherworld or the Underworld.

It can be a tricky thing to interpret the old records because often words and terms have more than one meaning. This is clearly shown in the definitions of the Abzu, which can be related to fresh water, saltwater (oceans), outer space, and Khan En.lil himself (as freshwater). It can also be related to an underworld of more solid matter than water.

In any case, Nergal is related to the Netherworld, which in Sumerian is called Irkalla<sup>87</sup>. Down there, Nergal ruled together with the Goddess Ereškigal. In

Nergal's and Ereškigal's case, we are talking about the Underworld "from which there is no return"<sup>88</sup>, also called Kigal<sup>89</sup>. In other words, it has to do with death and afterlife.

In this respect, the following reference becomes relevant:

Early royal inscriptions from the third millennium BCE mention "the reeds of Enki". Reeds were an important local building material, used for baskets and containers, and collected outside the city walls, where the dead or sick were often carried. This links Enki to the Kur or underworld of Sumerian mythology.<sup>90</sup>

Most probably, the Irkalla/Kigal is one of two things: a) it is literally the Netherworld or the Underworld beneath our feet, or it's in another dimension. The way I see it, it's the latter. Therefore, it's the description of the astral plane or perhaps more likely the plane the souls enter before they reach the astral plane. The readers who remember the previous levels of learning know that Prince En.ki is the Lord of the Astral Dimensions, where souls go in order to stay trapped and recycled into a new body on Earth. This is another indicator that Prince En.ki and Nergal could be the same deity.

After that, we start running into contradictions, and we have to be very observant because when that happens, I always suspect that the records have been tampered with in order to either hide the real history or add something to it that is not true so that a certain agenda can be pushed.

Therefore, with Ninurta being Prince En.lil, Ninurta and Nergal can't be the same being because Ninurta is the Lord of the Air(ways) and not of the Underworld. This is what Wikipedia says (the emphases are mine):

Nergal's fiery aspect appears in names or epithets such as Lugal-gira, Lugal-banda (Nergal as the fighting-cock),[3] Sharrapu ("the burner," a reference to his manner of dealing with outdated teachings), Erra, Gibil (though this name more properly belongs to Nusku), and Sibitti or Seven.<sup>[4]</sup> A certain confusion exists in cuneiform literature between Ninurta (slayer of Asag and wielder of Sharur, an enchanted mace) and Nergal. Nergal has epithets such as the "raging king," the "furious one," and the like. A play upon his name—separated into three elements as Ne-uru-gal (lord of the great dwelling) -- expresses his position at the head of the nether-world pantheon.

In the late Babylonian astral-theological system, Nergal is related to the planet Mars. As a fiery god of destruction and war, Nergal doubtlessly seemed an appropriate choice for the red planet, and he was equated by the Greeks either as the combative demigod Heracles (Latin Hercules) or as the war-god Ares (Latin Mars) -- hence the current name of the planet. In Assyro-Babylonian ecclesiastical art, the great lion-headed colossi serving as guardians to the temples and palaces seem to symbolize Nergal, just as the bull-headed colossi probably typify Ninurta.<sup>91</sup>

A few comments are required. First, there is a contradiction where the reference says that Ninurta is related to the Bull (Taurus). We learned earlier that it is obviously Prince En.ki who is related to the Bull, Taurus because of his association with the Pleiades. Instead, it is in fact Ninurta/Prince En.lil who is related to the lion, as we will discuss later. Even Helena Blavatsky, who in the 1800s was a medium for the "Great White Brotherhood" identified Ptah/Prince En.ki with the Bull (and the Demiurge/Satan as well):

The principle of Light and Life through which the creation or rather the evolution took place; the logos creator, the Demiurge....

This very ancient divinity [Ptah] is the "donor of life," the born from himself, the father of Apis, the sacred bull, conceived by the intervention of a sunbeam....<sup>92</sup>

Hence, "someone" made sure that the records were altered.

Interesting to see as well in the above reference is that there is a direct reference to Nergal burning old historic records. He is referred to as "the burner," a reference to how he deals with "outdated teachings". This is another reference to either Prince En.ki or Marduk.

Again, Nergal is associated with the Underworld (or Netherworlds), which we have learned is one of Prince En.ki's domains through his association with the Abzu. Also note here that the number seven is mentioned, which we later shall see is Prince En.ki's number.

Most researchers agree that Prince En.ki and Ptah are one and the same — therefore and with that in mind, we can again make an association between Nergal and Prince En.ki:

Being a deity of the desert, god of fire, which is one of negative aspects of the sun, god of the underworld, and also being a god of one of the religions which rivalled Christianity and Judaism, Nergal was sometimes called a demon and even identified with Satan.<sup>93</sup>

In addition, Nergal is referred to as Satan, just like Prince En.ki is referred to as Satan and being the Serpent in the Bible, and we also have a reference to Nergal being a “god of fire”. The same association is done with Ptah in Egypt:

Beautiful face, stable on his feet, South to his wall, Ptah stands on the cubit-base of Maât because he is the god of fire who lives with truth.<sup>94</sup>

Then again, here is Madame Helena Blavatsky:

I suggest you discovering "another" Ptah, Ptah of Fire, Father of the so secret Alchemy, passed on the Initiated by him, then taught by Thot and his faithful followers and to penetrate into the world OF THE Divine Fires.<sup>95</sup>

Dr. Joseph P. Farrell, in his book The Cosmic War, also makes the association between Nergal and the god Erra, who is in a tight relationship with Marduk, and he finds out that one of the definitions of Erra also correlates to the description of Lucifer—another association to Enki:

Yet another of his names translates into “lord who prowls by night,” a reference curiously reminiscent of biblical descriptions of Lucifer.<sup>96</sup>

As we move on, we’re going to see more evidence of why Prince En.lil and Prince En.ki were archenemies, but we got the hint in Level I when I commented on Sitchin’s material and also the research and experiences of Life Physics Group California (LPG-C) with their front man, the late Dr. A.R. Bordon. There we had the Ram Clan and the Serpent Clan, representing Prince En.lil’s and Prince En.ki’s teams, respectively. Although this too was a cover-up for something bigger (which we also will discuss later), it can be used as an allegory. As we know, Prince En.ki, as Lucifer, hated his brother, Prince En.lil, above everything because the latter had inherited the heirship to the Orion throne, instead of Prince En.ki, who was the eldest of the two brothers. So it became natural that he wanted to blame Prince En.lil for his own shortcomings and use him in his agenda. I am now convinced that Prince En.lil was never showing himself off as the biblical Jehovah/YHWH—he had nothing to do with it. Note also that the names YHWH and Jehovah can basically not be equated to Prince En.ki and his son either because they are both titles of Mother Goddess, who also had nothing to do with what happened here on Earth under Prince En.ki's leadership. Prince En.ki simply stole those titles and used them for himself in an attempt to take revenge on both his brother and his mother. Therefore, Prince En.ki is the one who had all the motives to push the agenda described above and would be the main character behind the biblical Jehovah.

After this necessary sidetrack, we need to return to what we were actually discussing—Nergal's real identity.

In the following reference, pay attention to the time period to which it refers:

The cult of Nergal does not appear to have spread as widely as that of Ninurta, but in the late Babylonian and early Persian period, syncretism seems to have fused the two divinities, which were invoked together as if they were identical. Hymns and votive and other inscriptions of Babylonian and Assyrian rulers frequently invoke him, but we do not learn of many temples to him outside of Cuthah.<sup>97</sup>

This is another indication of that the fusion of Nergal and Ninurta happened in the late Babylonian Era, which was when Marduk was in power. It was certainly in his interest, as Prince En.ki's son, that Nergal was fused with Prince En.lil, despite clear associations with Prince En.ki, as shown in my previous references. In addition, to many people who haven't dug very deeply into this, all these associations with different beings is very confusing. However, there is an order in this chaos, and the order is that Prince En.ki and his son often took on the personae of more ethical beings and committed crimes in their names, thus creating a bad name for them. This has certainly been done with all the three "major" gods—the Goddess, Khan En.lil, and their son, Ninurta.

The association between Prince En.ki and Nergal is absolutely one of those which the AIF doesn't want us to make because when we do, there is a chance that we will figure out more things related to that. When we start talking more about the Underworld, the reader will understand why Nergal is so important in this agenda.

III. In Summary

Although this paper contains a lot of information, I still have only scratched the surface. There is so much more syncretism I would have liked to include in this paper, but my choices are to either cover most of it or decide that I need to stop somewhere.

The important thing is to cover the gods that are most commonly occurring in our mythology and to show the reader that many whom appear to be different gods are actually one and the same. This makes a big difference in understanding the Pantheon and the characteristics of these beings.

Instead of concentrating all syncretism in one paper, I will present the rest as we move along through the story that I am about to tell. It is better to do it that way, or there will be too much information to take in at one time.

Before we go to the next paper, which will discuss from which star constellation the different beings originate from or dwell in, I would like to briefly summarize what we have concluded so far.

Mother Goddess, as the Creatrix of the Universe, at one point “inserted” herself in her own Creation as the Queen of Orion--therefore, she can exist in all dimensions simultaneously and at the same time participate in the game she created.

After a devastating war between Orion and conquering star races, a famous Galactic Peace Treaty was made, and part of the contract included a marriage between the Queen and the King of the leading intruding star race, said to have originated in Sirius. This King became known as King An or King Anu here on Earth. We learn in this paper (something also mentioned in previous papers), that “An” and “An-u” are just terms and not names, and they mean “Heaven” or “Heaven, the Orion Empire.” So King Anu simply means “King of Heaven, the Orion Empire” in Sumerian and Orion languages, respectively. At this point, we don’t know the King’s name that he uses in communication with other royalty or star beings, but his title is King En.lil or Khan En.lil, which has a similar meaning as “An/Anu,” but is the correct title for the Orion King.

The Orion Queen (here mostly called Queen Nin when we talk about her physical and metaphysical incarnation) had two sons, who were born from unfertilized eggs, which in Orion is always the case if the offspring is planned to be a male—the eggs would have to be fertilized if the intention would be to have female offspring. This means in actuality that these male offspring don’t have a father--therefore, King En.lil is the stepfather of both sons. There has been some confusions in the old records if one of the sons was in fact King En.lil’s biological son from a previous marriage, which would have made the two male offspring stepbrothers, but in light of new information, I have learned that the two male offspring were indeed full brothers.

We know these offspring of the Queen as Prince En.ki and Prince En.lil, where Prince En.ki is the eldest. These are both titles, and again, we don't know their real names, which in fact is the case with all the Orion star beings who are known to us on Earth—we only know them by one title or another or the names some of them may have taken while being here on our planet.

These two brothers are Princes of Orion. By taking the title for King, which is “Khan” and reversing it, we get “Nahk,” which means “Prince”. The Khan title is always inherited from the Queen's bloodline, obviously, as they are always male, born from unfertilized eggs. However, King En.lil, being the Khan, is allegedly the one who decides which one of the princes is going to inherit his title should something happen to him. For reasons that are not totally clear, King En.lil chose the younger son to be the heir, something that can be done but goes against the usual norm. Normally, the eldest son becomes the heir and the Crown Prince of Orion. The decision that the Khan preferred the younger brother is one of the causes to “Lucifer's Rebellion,” where Lucifer is another title for the elder brother, Prince En.ki.

We also learn that Prince En.ki is known as Prince or Lord Nergal (amongst a myriad of other titles), which actually means “Great Watcher” in the Sumerian language<sup>98</sup>, a title which fits Prince En.ki pretty well. Prince En.lil is known as Prince Ninurta (also amongst other titles). Ninurta is sometimes spelled Nenuurta, where “ne” denotes “heirship,” and would potentially mean something similar to “of the Queen.”

Moreover, we now also know that Queen Nin is known as Ninhursag, which means that Ninhursag is not the Sirian female scientist who worked with Prince En.ki (definition: “Lord Earth”), but she instead is his mother, who had nothing to do with creating Homo sapiens. Ninhursag, as Queen Nin, had everything to do with creating the primordial human species, however, which I call Namlú'u in my papers, a name that can be loosely translated as “humans of the Mother Goddess.” The name for this primordial androgynous species, which preexisted Homo sapiens sapiens, the modern man, was also used by Anton Parks in his The Chronicles of the Gírkù.<sup>99</sup>

These are the most important aspects to remember when we move on and learn about how everything is connected in yet more details than in previous levels of learning.

In the next paper, I want to bring up the relationship between certain gods and the asterisms, i.e. the star constellations—the so-called “fixed stars”. This becomes important as well in order to understand how the star beings travel around in the night skies and where their domains are. Once I learned how that works, much of the rest fell into place and it was easier to know where to go from there.

I. Required Knowledge about the KHAA

In Level II, we discussed that our bodies are made up of millions upon millions of cells, so small that we can't see them other than in a microscope. These cells are making up the shape and form of the body, and the body wouldn't exist without them.

At the core of each single cell is a bioelectrical current, scientifically known as bioelectricity. Those of us who have heard this term before and knew a little about it since school, or from elsewhere, may recall that bioelectricity is what the electric eels are emitting on a grand scale in order to paralyze their prey or victims. Anyone who has been "burned" by one and survived will certainly never forget it.

Scientists, in general, and biologists, in particular, are well aware that bioelectricity is "electric potentials and currents produced by or occurring within living organisms."<sup>100</sup> They are also aware that bioelectricity originates in active cells in the body of humans and other "living organisms." However, they are not aware that bioelectricity is equivalent to what I call "Fires" in my paper. These tiny Fires are what is basically "you" — what you probably would call your "soul" or "spirit." Thus, we are Fires or bioelectricity first and "beings" second.

Those who are at least somewhat familiar with metaphysics know that we also have at least one so-called "light-body," which is the astral body that leaves the physical body after death and, supposedly, moves on into the astral plane. I say "supposedly," because the astral body exists in the astral plane all the time (the astral plane being another dimension or, rather, several dimensions), although we do not become aware of this until after body death or when we leave our bodies through mediation, a bad accident, or trauma, etc. This light-body, or astral body, is what I call the Avatar. When I say that "the Fires ride the Avatar," people probably get the picture of riding a horse or something similar, but the Avatar is our original "body," which we carry with us when we leave the Third Dimension and travel into the Multidimensional Universe. The Fires and the Avatar are “attached” to each other and work together to be able to travel and explore the Universe. The Fires can then, when free from manipulation, change the shape of the Avatar just by thoughts and make this shape visible for others. Deceased people, who leave their dead body, often keep the same shape of their Avatar as the shape of the material body without even being aware that they’re doing that, but many discover later that they can change the shape, and sometimes they remodel it to look more like he or she appeared in his or her younger years on Earth.

This is what “shapeshifting” actually is, and trained shamans here on Earth can do it while in a physical body because they are in contact with the “Spirit World,” i.e. the dimensions outside the Third-Dimensional (3-D) trap, and star beings who are basically non-physical can take any shape or form and appear in front of us 3-D beings in any shape or form that they wish—they can even make themselves appear so physical that you can shake their hands and still think they are in an earthly body. Hence, it’s not surprising that people sometimes report seeing the strangest creatures.

All the above is a review of things I have discussed before, but I want to make sure that everybody understands these phenomena and who we are in order to fully grasp the material I’m presenting in this level.

Fig. 1. The Central Nervous System is like a tree.

Now, let us expand this a little bit further. Think of the nervous system as a tree (which is more or less what it looks like—see fig. 1) with life and knowledge attached to it. Then, when knowledge and the life force is made use of, the serpent energy increases within the central nervous system and activates the pineal gland, which is the mind (also called The Third Eye or The Sixth Chakra).

This is what happens when we say that we “activate the Third Eye” — we start using our mind in a greater capacity, with the above occurring within the body. By doing this, we heighten our senses, and if we increase them enough, we become “psychic,” i.e. we can see the “Spirit World,” which is the KHAA, the VOID, or the 96% Universe, which we call “Dark Matter” and “Dark Energy.” We call it “dark” because we normally can’t see it with our limited perceptions. In my recent e-book, Beyond 2012 — A Handbook for the New Era<sup>101</sup>, I included exercises that may make it easier to increase these perceptions.

It’s all about increasing the bioelectricity in the body, and when it is enhanced to such a degree that solids, liquids, or gases cease to exist, leaving only the Fires, we find ourselves in the KHAA. This may seem discouraging for some, thinking that it’s an impossible goal to achieve, but that is just because we are sitting here in a body in which a big chunk of the DNA has been altered and deactivated, and a Grid is set up around the planet to purposefully keep us from experiencing the freedom of being able to travel at will wherever we want to in the Universe. If that is not enough, our bodies are also designed so that we will have amnesia as soon as we enter them. All this was needed to keep us under control — understanding the above, the reader can imagine how powerful we really are.

This is why it’s important to evolve, and we evolve with knowledge, which we then apply in life to increase our frequency range and help others to do the same by being an example. Increasing our frequency range is the same thing as increasing the bioelectricity in the body. Of course, everybody wants to achieve this immediately, and when they don’t, there are those who give up. Don’t do that because this really is a process, and in many cases, it will not be achieved in this lifetime because we are still in limited bodies, stuck beneath the Grid. However, whether we achieve increasing our frequency in this lifetime or not is not what is important — what’s important is that we use the tools we have now, in the present, and really use them. The knowledge we are gaining now is doing more for our future than many people realize. If we have spent the time necessary to learn and practice in this lifetime, we will be in a much better place in the next. How can anybody avoid traps that they don’t know exist? On the contrary — why would anybody want to be trapped in something that he or she knows exists? The more we know, the more possibilities we have once we leave this limited body. However, it’s in this limited body we need to do the work, if you see what I mean!

What we definitely can achieve in this lifetime is to get glimpses of what the KHAA is by meditating and exercising. I have received great success stories from people who have used the exercises in my e-book and achieved stunning results, and they are very excited to tell me. I will not include these stories here because all experiences are personal, and I don't want others attempting to achieve the same results, or they may believe that they are failing if the results are different. Instead, I encourage readers to chat on my forum, which you will find at <http://wespenrepapers.proboards.com/index.cgi>—share experiences, and encourage each other in two-way communications or in groups.

I am just telling the readers that it's quite possible to go to the "Other World," although it's hard to do it with willpower only, while in our current, limited position. Still, there are some who have managed to do it at will, but all bodies are different and in different stages of development. The Super Soldiers, whom I've talked about in-depth earlier, are trained to nanotravel, are mind controlled, and might be using gold to increase their bioelectricity—something I hesitate to recommend because it's easy to get "addicted" to it in the same sense as you get addicted to drugs because they make you "happy." In such cases, we forget to try to do it the natural way, and the purpose for evolution is lost. One story I heard was that the gods often are addicted to gold because they use it to increase their vibration, and they can't do it naturally, like we do—not if they want to achieve what we humans are able to achieve in our pure state (I will get into this in a later paper).

Have you ever felt empowered, as if you want to embrace the whole world and no one can stop you? Your body is strong and vital and full of energy. You feel that it's hard to just sit still, and you want to go out there and do something really powerful. If so, at that point you enhanced your body's bioelectricity (the Fires), and you vibrated much higher than your environment. This is the beginning of how it would feel to be free from manipulation and able to experience anything—on Earth and in the KHAA. That is the purpose of the human being!

On the other hand, when you feel a lack of energy and you just want to sit and do nothing, the bioelectricity in your cells is low, and you need to do something to enhance them. It's important to figure out what it is that makes you feel fatigued and drained of energy because when you are feeling drained, you are not reaching the potential that you are supposed to with this knowledge.

The first thing to do, obviously, is to figure out if you are sick and cure yourself from it. If you're healthy and still feel drained, you'd better look at your environment—who is draining your energy? Are you in touch with an "energy vampire"—one of those I talked about in Level I? There is no reason why any of us would wake up in the morning, feeling okay, but then during the day feel more and more drained until we just want to hit the bed. The energy level should be constant during the day, and if it's not, there is something we need to work on right away.

If we can spot the energy vampire, or vampires, amongst friends, family, or acquaintances, it's best to talk to them and explain that they are draining our energy, and they need to stop doing that and create their own energy source from within. If they don't know what we're talking about or if they don't want to know and they continue draining us, we need to disconnect from them or we will go downhill and become very sick in the long run—we may even experience premature death. The cells can't stay healthy in a body that is drained of bioelectricity over a long period—this is obvious if you understand what I explained in this section of this paper. This, by default, is at least one reason why people get cancer. I understand it may be a hard thing to do to disconnect from someone whom we have perhaps known for a long time, but we are here to evolve and not to let someone else drain us out, and when there is nothing more to suck out, the vampire goes to the next person and starts all over.

If we can't spot who the vampire is, there is always one thing we can do, but we need to do it several times a day—every day (everybody should do this, even if you feel excellent).

This energy exercise is called, "Dropping the Anchor."

1. Imagine you drop an anchor from your feet and down to the center of the Earth. The chain can be of any color but gold supposedly works best. The anchor itself can be a diamond, an emerald, or whatever stone is your favorite.
2. Feel the presence of Mother Gaia when you do this because in the same moment you are doing it, she feels the connection with you, and she knows who you are and that you care, and she will assist you in protecting yourself.
3. Then imagine how this "chain," which is more like a cord, continues from your feet to the right, up around your body, approximately 5 inches away from it and connects with your feet on the left side. You now have a golden chord protecting your auras from intrusion.
4. Do this the first time in the morning as soon as you wake up, and continue doing it throughout the day, as often as you can remember. The more often, the better. It should only take 2-3 seconds to do it, once you get the hang of it.<sup>102</sup>

<sup>102</sup> I learned this from the Pleiadians, and have found this being enormously helpful for me! If I feel my energy drop, I "drop the anchor", and within seconds to a minute, I feel my energy coming back.

You can play around with this in many ways. If you're in a huge crowd, i.e. a supermarket, and don't want to pull in everybody's energies, which probably will make you feel exhausted, cloak yourself. This means you imagine a cloak around you that makes you "invisible" to others (drop the anchor, too). You will then experience less energy hitting your emotional body, and you will feel stronger through the experience.

Fig. 2. The seven main "Body Chakras"

When you are in an environment where the energy is not the greatest, close your chakras, and you will be protected. Think of your chakras like roses in different colors. The seven chakras and their colors are as follow:

5. Base chakra (genital area): color red (red)
6. Sacral chakra (lower abdomen): color orange (orange)
7. Solar Plexus chakra (solar plexus): color yellow (yellow)
8. Heart chakra (heart): color green (green)
9. Throat chakra (throat): color bright blue (bright blue)
10. Third Eye (forehead): color indigo (indigo)
11. Crown chakra (at the top of the head): color violet (violet)

When you are in an environment where you want to protect your chakras from intrusion, think of them as roses in the same colors as the chakras, and then you close them, one by one, or all of them at the same time.

If you are with friends, you may want to open some of the chakras (roses) to the fullest, or just a little bit—it's your choice—and when you want to be really powerful, open them all—let all the roses be in full bloom.

Additionally, you can expand your chakras by imagining them being a certain distance from your body, but generally, if you have a day like most people, when you meet a lot of different people throughout the day—some of them whom you don't know—it's perhaps not a good idea to open up the chakras too much. Play with it and feel it out.

Another thing you can do is to visualize a thick armor around yourself for protection if you are somewhere where you feel extremely bad “vibes” (energies). Imagine how these bad energies bounce off your armor. Like I said, play around with it, and do what works best for you. However, “Dropping the Anchor” exercise is superior to the others—we should all do that and the rest in addition to it, as we see appropriate. The Dropping the Anchor exercise helps you stay grounded, which is extremely important these days when we are overloaded with lies and manipulative manners from media and authorities in general. Staying grounded helps us to better see things the way they are.

The last thing I want to bring up, which may be the cause why some people are almost constantly drained of energy, is if they are possessed. We have talked about the different kinds of possession in previous Levels of Learning, and if you don't remember and you believe that possession could pertain to you, I would advise you to go back and review that material.

People who are possessed are normally drained of energy, but they also change their personalities back and forth for no obvious reasons. They may say things that they later ponder and think, “Why did I say that? Did I really say that?” Sometimes these people may not even remember that they said it, even when others point it out. This will probably be the last thing you look into if everything else fails, but it's good to know, and more people than we think have “attachments” so to speak. These attachments are not always “bad spirits,” but they influence people's personalities.

If you think you have attachments, there are ways to get rid of them, although sometimes it requires a strong personality, who is very determined. It's also imperative to figure out why the attachment hooked on to the person in the first place— normally, it's because of a certain behavior that attracted the spirit. It could be alcoholism, irresponsible sex, watching pornography, drugs in general (even pharmaceutical drugs, sometimes), and similar things. Refraining from these non-survival things often makes the attachment leave, but it requires that the person is strong enough to really stop his or her “addictions” because that's normally what it is. If nothing else helps and the person still believes that he or she is possessed, it may be time to find professional help. However, psychiatrists often can't do anything about it—most of them don't even believe in possession—but there are alternative psychics who may be able to help.

I.I. What is “Space”?

When we look up in the night sky, what do we see? We see a sparse amount of stars blinking back at us, but the rest of the sky is black, or devoid of light. We call that space.

Now, if we look into a strong NASA telescope, what do we see? We see a whole lot more than we can see with the naked eye, such as nebulae, galaxies, and many other things. Still, between all this, we have the same blackness or perceived emptiness. We still call that space.

So, what the scientists have gathered is that the Universe is 4% “matter,” about 23% “dark matter,” and about 73% “dark energy.”<sup>103</sup> However, the scientists know very little about what dark matter and dark energy are or what they consist of, although there are plenty of wild guesses.

In Level II, we learned that due to the Grid and our limited access to our total DNA, we only see and perceive 4% of the Universe, and the rest I call the KHAA or the VOID, although some say that the 4% is part of the KHAA as well, but the only part of the KHAA that we can see, while others say that the 4% is just a hologram within a hologram and is not really real.

In any case, what is this “blackness?”

Well, there is quite an easy way to describe it. Let's say that you go to a house and open the front door and all lights are turned off—it's completely dark and it's the darkest part of the year. Outside in the garden, however, you have lots of strong lights lighting up everything that's out there. So, when you walk around in the garden, you can see and perceive almost all that's out there. Then you walk inside and it's totally dark—you have to feel yourself around. Still, this is not what you would normally do—instead you would turn on the light switch. However, let's pretend there is no light switch. Because it's a house where someone lives, you have a sense of what could be in there, but in reality, you have no idea—you can only guess. Furniture? Most probably, but the owner could be eccentric for all you know and decorated the house with something totally different.

This allegory for the 4% visible Universe and the 96% dark Universe explains quite well what we're dealing with. Not until we turn on the light switch do we know what's in the darkness. If it's a normal house with regular people living there, you will see furniture when you turn on the light. Whatever it is you see, that is what it is.

We could say that a similar thing has been done to our DNA, and by putting a Grid around Earth we can't easily penetrate the "darkness" to see what's really there. Not until we pass through a hole in the Grid and get to the outside will we have an opportunity to see and perceive the whole 100% Universe (including the "Spirit Universe," to which clairvoyant people have certain access). With "opportunity," I mean that we have a chance to see it all, but here is the thing—if we are so manipulated that we are sure that what we perceive with our five senses is all there is, we will probably not see what's out there even if we penetrate the Grid (and turn on the "light switch"). Why is that? It's because our belief system is quite powerful! They also show how powerful the human soul is. We have the power to create whatever we want—even when it's illogical and doesn't benefit us! The rest of us, who have the knowledge and have modified many of the beliefs that didn't serve us, would get quite a powerful feeling after penetrating the Grid without the physical body! For one, we would notice that what we previously thought was "empty space" now is filled with matter! Also, approximately 73%, allegedly, of the whole Universe is energy, which means in our terms that it's the "Spiritual Universe." Another thing to take into account is that we don't know what kind of "furniture" (if we use our previous analogy) the "Dark Universe" consists of, if any. It could consist of both furniture and something else we may not even be able to grasp right now.

What we are developing more and more, the further we get on our evolutionary path, is the "sixth sense"—the one that is missing but once was there. It's missing because we were tampered with.

In one of the later papers in this level of learning, we are going to get a deeper insight into what it really boils down to—what is it that the AIF actually and basically wants from us? Why haven't they already taken what they want? We humans are here, severely mind controlled and manipulated. It seems as if they have most of mankind under their thumb. What is stopping them?

I believe I have the answer, and it's going to be discussed once and for all in the later part of this level.

I.II. Are the Planets in the Universe Really Teeming with Life, or Are We Mistaken?

I have been talking a lot about how we need to change our belief system into a new one which serve us better than the one we have been hung up in. First, like my Disclaimer at the end of each paper in this level of learning states, I don't mean that people who read the papers should change their belief system so that all of us think uniformly, like robots. I'd like to see people take in what they believe will enhance their present and future and start thinking about it long and deeply and really ponder it. What does this information mean for you? How can you use it, or can you even use it at all? That, too, must be taken into consideration. If you cannot use the information, disregard it, but if you believe that something resonates, bring it with you and see how it may benefit you.

Anyway, I must say that if there is something I've really had to do since I started researching for these papers—all the way from Level I up to Level IV—is to change my own belief system. I think I've come a very long way since 2010, when I first came in contact with Dr. A.R. Bordon and everything escalated from there. Level I was an expansion on what I already knew before I researched it, but it was really at Level II when my old belief system started crumbling—and it went fast—faster than the speed of light (or at least that's how it felt). I hope, and can imagine, that some readers of these papers must have felt the same way. Sometimes, when I stumble upon something, for one reason or another, I think that it's impossible—that it's not the way it is! However, as I continue on that path, I notice that what we've believed before needed to be expanded, and that led to a new belief system.

The problem we have here on Earth, whether we are just everyday researchers, as I am, or scientists and “experts,” is that we look at things from a human perspective. That's almost always how we start out. Unfortunately, in science, that's also where it stops—many people will never look behind what the human mind considers being a fact. It's okay to listen to the “conscious mind,” or the “3-D mind,” but remember that our minds are deeply mind controlled and manipulated, so we shouldn't take for granted that anything we've learned is true (most of it is not). The motto to change our common knowledge 180 degrees to find the truth is often a good one, I have noticed, and when I'm stuck in my research, that's what I normally do in order to be able to “unstick” myself. Usually, it's really helpful, and even if it's not always the case, it assists me to move on further.

Here is a good example of how we base our research on the human “knowledge”—the “everybody knows that a stone is a stone” kind of thing because that's what we've all been taught. The same thing goes with planets.

What's the purpose for planets? Most people would say, to house life for different kinds of life forms. Therefore, we are looking out in space with more and more sophisticated technology in order to find planets out there which can house life, similar to Earth. Thus, the scientists to a large degree concentrate on looking at stars that are similar to our own Sun—similar “spectral type,” (color and density, which determines the heat of the star,) similar size, age, and so on as our own ball of fire up in the sky. Then, from watching such a foreign star to see how much it wobbles and if there are objects moving “across” the star (from one side to another), they can determine if the star has planets, how big they are, and how far away they are from their sun. In just a few years, they have gone from acknowledging the existence of just a few planets to having found a lot of them. I posted an “infograph” on my blog of stars which have been confirmed to have planets, and it can be found here, \(http://battleofearth.wordpress.com/2013/08/17/the-nearest-stars-to-earth-infographic/\).

The result, according to astrophysicists and others, is mixed. They have found a few planets which are approximately at the same distance from their stars as the Earth is in relation to the Sun, but most solar systems they have found do not have planets within the habitable zone, which scientists think is required in order for a planet to have intelligent life, similar to Earth, or even more advanced. The good news, they say, is that amongst the solar systems they have explored, there are actually a few stars that have planets similar to Earth, and the bad news is that the majority of stars don't. Also, most stars out there are double or triple stars, which—again according to science—makes the solar system too unstable to develop intelligent life.

Most people who are interested in how science develops in this area, follow the progress with enthusiasm, believing that the norms which the scientists have set up are correct. However, are they really?

Who is to say that just because planet Earth is perfect for our kind of life to develop, it must also be the norm for other planets in other solar systems? Can't life develop on a planet farther away or closer to their star than Earth is? Sure enough, we don't have to look further than to our own solar system to see that a human body would die immediately if it was put on the surface of Mars or Venus without having some kind of oxygen tubes and a solid space suit. Still, if life exists on a planet such as Venus in another solar system, it may still be intelligent, but the bodies would be much more resilient than ours. We can go on and on, discussing the subject in this fashion, and we may come to the conclusion that we really don't know and neither do the scientists—all they do is assume, based on what we have and don't have, here on Earth.

Eventually, we come to the ultimate question: just because we humans have developed on a planet, does that mean that other star races must develop and evolve on planets? In general, are planets really there only to house intelligent life? After all, in all these papers, I have portrayed Earth as a Living Library and as an Experiment. If Earth is an Experiment, does that mean that we are quite a rare phenomenon in the Universe, or does it mean that all life forms develop on planets? This is an important question and well worth pondering.

Another thing that scientists have noticed is that the structure of our own solar system is quite common out there—at least in our region of the Universe. What I mean by that is that the smaller planets are closer to the star and the larger ones are farther out. We may ask ourselves why this is? Although there is quite overwhelming evidence that other planets, such as Mars and Tiamat (the planet I have called “Old Terra,” which exploded and created the asteroid belt) have housed life in the past—and most possibly Venus as well—the rest of the planets do not have life—at least not in a dimension we can perceive. So, if our solar system (or parts of it) is an Experiment, that sure sounds like it’s one of a kind (or one of only a few). If this is the case, what are the other solar systems that are not Experiments, which would be almost all of the others?

If we assume for a minute that planets are not created to support life, what are they there for? Storage, perhaps? Or maybe they are used for something we cannot even imagine with our limited senses. The problem, again, is that we look at everything from our tiny spectrum of the electromagnetic field, when the entire electromagnetic field is enormous in width compared to our little speck of existence. How can an ant imagine how life is for a human being? It’s impossible.

If we start from that end instead of thinking that what we experience is the norm, we will have an easier time understanding the KHAA and everything “out there.” If we begin by saying to ourselves that we know next to nothing, then there must be a lot to learn, and with this attitude, we are opening ourselves to actually learn something.

I am sitting here writing about the KHAA and what it is from an ant’s perspective—that’s basically what it is. Perhaps I’m an “educated ant” and can see things with a somewhat open mind, but it’s still an ant’s perspective.

Fig. 3. Q in Star Trek, who could nanotravel and shape shift and create worlds with his mind.

The reader may remember that I compared Q, the being in Star Trek, who could nanotravel wherever he wanted and take on any shape he wished, with a being living in the KHAA? Did Q live on a planet? Not from what we know of, and why would he? He didn't have to—if he wanted a planet, he could just create one in his mind, or move a planet through space/time via time/space. This was actually also what he did in at least one Star Trek episode. He “kidnapped” some of the Star Trek crew and put them on a planet somewhere, and the crew had no idea where they were. After a while, it proved not to be a planet at all, only something that Q had made up with his mind to show the crew how ignorant they were. This is exactly what I am getting at. Someone with a great mind taught me to look at things this way, and it expanded my own inner vision exponentially.

I am not saying that everything that is labeled science fiction is true, but I dare say that almost all (perhaps all) science fiction is based upon fact, and some of it is channeled, as we learned in Level III. People don't think any of it is true because it seems so “way out there.” What they don't take into consideration is that the science fiction we watch in the theatre is only a little tidbit of what is really out there. Again, we come back to how little we really know. Most of it can't even be explained so that our nervous system can comprehend it—it's not yet developed enough for that.

All that I am talking about in this subsection is a tidbit of what I have learned lately. The readers may look at it as hypotheses, which is absolutely fine, but perhaps it also makes people think that there is much that is not the way it seems to be.

I am not suggesting that there aren't planets out there with intelligent life and evolving races on them, but what I am suggesting, as a hypothesis at least, is that life on other planets may be more of an exception rather than a common occurrence. Moreover, I am not suggesting that the Universe is not teeming with intelligent life because I am certain that it is. Still, most of them live in other, totally different dimensions from our 3-D reality, and with our five senses, we wouldn't even be able to perceive them, even if a hundred of them were appearing in your living room. These beings do not live on planets, and we are going to learn a lot more about that as we move on.

Now, how about the panspermia theory I talked a lot about in Level I and II in particular? Isn't that what the Creator Gods do when they seed a planet? If so, where does that fit in?

Already to start with, I distinguished between two different kinds of creator gods—the ones with capital letters (Creator Gods) and those with small letters (creator gods). It would perhaps had been even more accurate to call them Creator Goddesses (they are always feminine—see Level II) and Genetic Manipulators (Genetic Engineers if I want to be nice—can be both feminine and masculine). The former are the ones who are really creating life from the beginning, while the latter are scientists and take something that is already created and altering it. The Gnostics called them archons. The reason I don't call them that is because archons supposedly originate from this solar system, which the AIF don't. Still, I can see where the Gnostics got the term archons from—they have most of the characteristics of the AIF.

Creator Goddesses, who fit the definition, are star beings whose purpose is to help Mother Goddess create life in the Universe so that she can continuously experience herself. Sometimes, these Creator Goddesses use planets in order to create what they want. Hypothetically, one of these Creator Goddesses may get an idea how she wants to create a certain type of symbiosis on a planet—either because she can see that it is needed and perhaps hasn't been done before in that way, or the Goddess is doing it for her own pleasure and in order to create beauty. Anything is possible. If she decides to use a planet for her creation, she would probably use panspermia to start the process. She would steer a number of asteroids in the direction of the planet of choice—asteroids which she had put life-enhancing bacteria on, which she knew would be perfect for that particular world to develop in. The planet would then be “bombarded” with asteroids and similar celestial bodies, until all bacteria the Creator Goddess needed would have entered the atmosphere and started growing. Then evolution would take place, and after millions, perhaps billions of years, life would have developed.

Sometimes, the Creator Goddess (Goddesses, if they work as a team) insert themselves in their creation to make corrections and enhancements.

So, on occasion, planets can be used in order to create life, but hypothetically, maybe they'd rather be used for mining and storage most of the time. After all, business and trade is probably as common in the Universe as it is on Earth, and Dr. Bordon (1946-2013) was right when he said to me that solar systems are considered real estate and are sometimes fought over, if what is there is lucrative and valuable.

I.III. What is a “Star Being”?

Here is a hypothesis I want the readers to ponder. Throughout my papers, from Level II and forward, I have used the terms ETs, Extraterrestrials, and aliens quite sparsely—hardly ever at all. Instead, I have continuously used the term star beings and star races. Most readers have probably not thought much about that—it's just another term for “aliens,” but now, perhaps, is the time to think about what that term really means. What does the word star mean, and what are the definitions of beings and races? Can the term “star being” be a clue for where many aliens originate?

If you look up the word star in a regular dictionary, it will only tell you so much, but let's take a look at it from a more metaphysical perspective. Those who have read the previous Wes Penre Papers may recall that the star is the Mother of the Solar System. When she has stabilized, she usually creates planets by using parts of herself and by spinning rapidly, catapulting them out in orbit, where they cool down and transform into more solid matter. These planets then become her “children”. Like I've mentioned on occasion in earlier papers, if these planets then are left alone—whether they are in the so-called “habitable zone” or not—they will not develop any life but will remain “lifeless” rocks and nothing else. Outside assistance is required to make life grow on any planet, and the Creator Goddess needs permission from the Sun, just like someone would need permission from the human mother (or father) in order to approach their children in any extensive manner.

However, what more is a star or a sun? I have mentioned that it can be a stargate, for example, and in energy exercises, which I have presented, I have had the reader travel inside the Sun and experience what is there. Suns are obviously creators of life and, hence, Creator Goddesses in their own right because they create star systems (solar systems). So, if they are capable of doing that, what else are they capable of? Could they actually also create star beings or complete star races? Is that where the term “star race” comes from? Something to think about.

Let’s pretend that there is some truth in this—would such star beings or star races need a planet to dwell on? Most probably not, unless we consider the star itself being a planet. If it is a common thing that star beings are born inside the star, would they be considered physical beings? Or would they be non-physicals? At least from where we sit, we would consider them non-physicals because they would not, supposedly, have a physical body—only a soul, a mind, and an Avatar. They could be semi-physical in the sense that they present themselves in a certain way by shapeshifting, but they wouldn’t have stable, physical, solid bodies like ours, and more importantly, they wouldn’t have developed on a planet.

What about the solar system in which they originated? Is that considered “their” solar system? I would say so—in the same way as we normally consider Earth being “our” planet because we live on it—even though Gaia, Mother Earth, is a living being, too, just like the Sun.

So, star beings who originate inside a star have planets at their convenience, but they may consider it not to be any reason for them to settle down on one or more of them for any longer period of time. Like I mentioned earlier in this paper, they may use them for storage or mining or something else we can’t think of. However, at one time, they may, as Creator Goddesses, decide to create life forms on one or more of them, but it may not be the norm. They can easily nanotravel in the Universe, and they don’t need bodies to do so—in fact, bodies would be a limitation.

In metaphysics, we often talk about older and younger souls, but no one has any real grasp of how souls in that case are created. Wouldn’t it be plausible, though, that souls are created from the stars, and that they are the “children” of the stars, just as the planets are? If this is so, it means that all the souls that were created from a certain star, are of the same age as the star, and this would in that case answer the question which souls are older and which ones are younger. Then, of course, we must take into consideration that souls may migrate between star systems and settle down somewhere else—i.e. an older soul may move to a younger solar system and vice versa. However, in its basic case scenario, each solar system would, therefore, have its own mass consciousness or soul group, and is this not what we have been talking about all along? These two terms have been used repetitively in these papers, and I was not the one making them up. Here on Earth, we humans who are into metaphysics often use these two terms to describe the human soul collective as well! The question is, where did the human soul group come from? Where did it originate?

Well, here migration comes into play. In Level II, I talked some about the Titans, the Olympians, and the primordial human race, the Namlú'u. The Namlú'u were the Original Experiment, an idea coming from Mother Goddess herself, but Creator Goddesses and Gods, such as the Titans, were put in charge here to continue the creation of the Living Library. They were Orions, just like at least the majority of the Namlú'u's souls—they were an Orion soul group, who voluntarily immigrated to Sol, our own solar system. En.ki then used the souls of those Namlú'u who didn't get the chance to escape when En.ki closed the trap, but they were not the only souls he used. As the population increased, new souls had to be taken from somewhere. So, if the hypothesis with the Sun producing her own soul group, we can imagine a lot of souls hovering around Earth to see how things develop. I know that the AIF has the technology necessary to trap new souls into the system, so it's not too farfetched to imagine that this is how it's been done. The collectiveness of souls who are inhabiting bodies here on Earth would thus consist of both souls from Orion and our own solar system (and others, as we shall see), and all these souls together would create the "human soul group," or the "human mass consciousness."

While we're continuing our journey through these papers, it would be helpful for the reader to consider and ponder what we have discussed thus far in the last few sections because there is a reason I am bringing it up at this particular time. The rest of the discussion I will put on hold until much later in this level of learning.

II. Asterisms as "Real Estate"

In these papers, we are going to use the term asterism a lot in conjunction with single star systems, such as Arcturus and Rigel. Before we continue, let's look at the definition of asterism. This is from Dictionary.com:

as•ter•ism
 [as-tuh-riz-uhm] Show IPA noun
 1.
 Astronomy.
 a.
 a group of stars.
 b.
 a constellation.<sup>104</sup>

For our purpose, both these definitions apply, but definition b. is the most appropriate. We are basically talking about star constellations, such as those used in astrology and astronomy, respectively.

When I browse the Internet and on occasion peek into forums, I notice that many skeptics, when discussing where certain star races come from, bring up that it's pretty strange that all these alien species that are mentioned come from stars that astronomers have already discovered and given names to. Why don't these star races come from unknown stars? Certainly, there are more unknown stars out there than there are known stars.

At a quick glance, this thought may seem quite valid, but only if we are ignorant about the asterisms and the named stars in the heavens and how they happened to be named in the first place. Who "created" the star constellations—humans or ancient star visitors? If it was humans, it would indeed be strange, just like the skeptics point out, but if certain stars in the sky were brought to our attention by visitors, then it wouldn't be so strange because the same visitors would logically point out the stars that had some relevance to their own home locations and history.

Again, we are used to thinking in certain patterns that are based upon assumptions and not in reality. For example, we think of a certain star race coming from a certain star system, i.e. the "Dracos" come from Thuban (Alpha Draconis), the "Grays" come from Zeta Reticuli, the "Nordics" come from a star in the Pleiades, etc. On occasion, but very rarely, do we say that a star race comes from a certain asterism, and if we do, we normally don't mean the entire asterism—we're just referring to that particular constellation in general, meaning specifically that there is one star in that constellation which is the home star of that particular star race. In certain cases, this is correct, but not always—not at all. Star races tend to think more in asterisms than in single star systems. By using our imagination, we can see that certain constellations may have some kind of shape and form—one may look like a lion (Leo), while others look like bears (Ursa Major and Ursa Minor). The old gods drew lines between the stars that were somehow connected to each other and made us use our imagination to see the shape and form that the gods drew for them. There was, of course, a reason why they wanted us to look at one constellation as a lion and another one as a scorpion, for example. It was part of their story.

Anybody who has looked into astrology or star constellations in general know that they interact with each other to tell a bigger story. We call this mythology, and most people think it's old superstition and has very little to do with the real story of the visitors from the stars. It doesn't help, either, that the stories are cryptic and often not logical to the human mind — they don't make sense, other than as fairytales for children, at best. Then again, we only use our 3-D mind, trying to understand things, rather than our much more expansive, multidimensional mind.

In fact, without looking into the stories of the asterisms and certain single stars therein, it would be very difficult to get the bigger picture of what happened in our region of the Universe before mankind was born and while we have been developing.

So far in the Wes Penre Papers (WPP), we have mainly discussed three locations in the sky — the constellations of Orion, the Pleiades (Taurus the Bull) and Canis Major, where Sirius, the "Dog Star," is a member. Still, there are so many other star systems and asterisms that are of importance for us here on Earth, and in this level of learning, we are going to address them as well. The readers may again find that not everything is what we have learned on the Internet, by channeled entities, and from others. Indeed, the hypothesis I'm going to present here is, in my opinion, far more interesting.

III. The Home Stars and Constellations of the Gods

The question where the gods come from has tickled the human mind since the beginning of time, but now when the Internet connects all people around the world who are interested in this subject, the theories and hypotheses out there are many and various, to say the least. It's certainly not an easy question to find an answer to, but the old scriptures actually tell us with quite some accuracy where their home stars and home constellations are — we just have to look where few others have looked before, which again is between the lines. There is the answer — often clear and simple, but grossly overlooked.

Let us start with the Queen of the Stars, Queen Nin, the embodiment of Mother Goddess. We discussed in Level II how the center of the galaxies can be looked at as the female vagina and therefore a birth center. Sure enough, a birth center it is! There are black holes in the middle of each galaxy, and we have also learnt that a white hole is a portal from which we receive something. A white hole, so we've been taught, is the receiving end or the other side or the black hole. I would say that this is probably true, but I would add that black holes can work as both receivers and transmitters — how else can star beings travel both ways through a black hole, unless the black hole works as a white hole on the other end, and if you turn around, the black and white holes change places.

Anyway, it's known within our science communities that there is a massive black hole in the center of the Milky Way Galaxy. So the first question is:

if there is such a huge black hole there, why doesn't it eat up all the stars in the galaxy? Instead, the black hole is giving birth to stars in great quantities. We can tell because the youngest and hottest stars, in general, are in the middle of the galaxy<sup>105</sup>. Instead of working like a sink hole, the energy, still rotating at a high speed, has an outward breath, a khaa. In other words, the Goddess, as a Creatrix, is "breathing" outwards in space, the way we look at it, or she is literally giving birth? Because the center of the Galaxy is rotating, so does everything coming out of the birth center and thus creating this rotating outward pattern, making up a spiral galaxy. There are other galaxies, too, that are not considered spiral galaxies, but we will not go into them here—they are beyond the scope of these papers. However, the Milky Way spirals look similar to a swastika, and this is where this symbol originally came from—it is a symbol for the Orion Empire. Many say that the swastika is an ancient symbol and quite benevolent, but Hitler reversed it and used it for dark purposes instead, aware of the power behind it. We are going to talk more about the swastika later on in this paper.

Fig. 4. The Swastika, symbol of the Goddess and the Milky Way Galaxy

The Milky Way Galaxy is only one galaxy of an almost endless number of galaxies in the Universe, and perhaps the Goddess has a stronghold in all these galaxies, which evidence indicates, but in our Galaxy, the oldest stronghold is that of Orion. Therefore, Queen Nin is often called the Queen of Orion or the Orion Queen. This is how she is most commonly known here on Earth.

Orion is a star constellation as well as a vast Empire. The Constellation of Orion is said to have only seven major stars, but the Orion Empire is expanding from there into other galaxies and ultimately into the KHAA, wherein it is <sup>105</sup> This is a truth that needs some modification, because stars are still born within the galaxies, long after the galaxy herself is born. Even today, new stars are born in the spiral arms.

apparently unbelievably vast. So the Queen's Realms is quite enormous, but does not include the entire Universe (although it's said to stretch into other universes as well, unreachable for beings living in our own Universe).

III.I. Arcturus, the Royal Star

In Level II, I called Khan En.lil and his people "Sirians" and stated that they were from Sirius. This is the common "knowledge" these days, and most researchers and some scholars say that the "Anunnaki" originate in Sirius. However, the picture is bigger than that. It is true that there was an evolving warrior race originating in Sirius, but the "Sirian Army," the "DAKH," consisted of so many more races than just the race which evolved on one of the Sirian planets. The "King of Kings" that I spoke of, who was the leader of the DAKH, does not originate in Sirius, something I was not aware of at the time.

Dr. Bordon and LPG-C also pointed toward Sirius and taught that the Ša.AM.i come from Nibiru, which originated in that solar system. It's not that they were wrong, it's just that none of us went back far enough in time, as we shall see.

The "King of Kings" does not originate in Sirius but in Arcturus, Alpha Boötis, which is the brightest star in the constellation of Boötes<sup>106</sup>—Sirius came into the picture far later on the Cosmic Timeline. Boötes means herdsman or plowman<sup>107</sup>, and the star itself is today an orange giant<sup>108</sup>.

In other words, Khan En.lil and his warriors, whom I called the Sirians in Level II, conquered Sirius at a later time, but started their conquest from the star system Arcturus, Khan En.lil's home. This was something that was known already by the old Sumerians<sup>109</sup>.

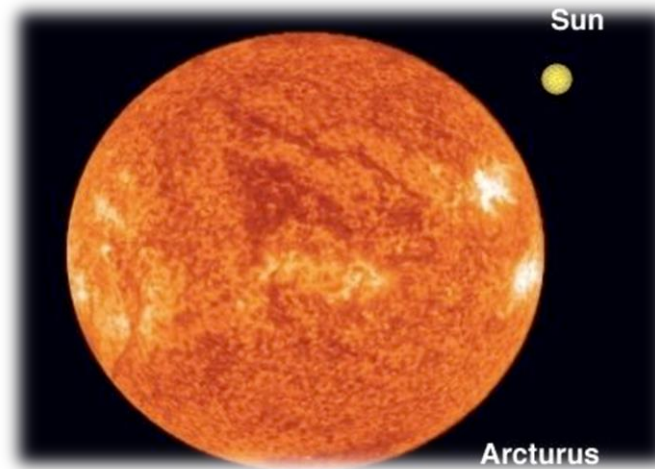

Fig. 5. Arcturus, an orange giant star, compared in size with our Sun

There are many references to Khan En.lil and Queen Nin having ties to Arcturus, although the Queen's ties end with being the Khan's consort. For the King, however, it is his home star. Here is a good reference from Yahoo Groups:

An interesting point - throughout the history of Babylonian star-maps, the circumpolar stars were considered as representing gods of the highest rank. Arcturus was called "Supa-Enlil who determines the destinies of the lands." His wife, Ninlil ruled the celestial wagon (Ursa Major), and they are associated with the yokes that bind heaven to earth. He was principally associated with farmers and farming - Aratron is the Olympic spirit of Saturn, who was originally the god of agriculture, etc. Enlil was the overall ruler of the gods, a king, and Saturn was identified as the King Star in their mythic astrology.<sup>110</sup>

If someone wants to connect Prince En.lil, aka Prince Ninurta, to Arcturus, the above reference clearly states that we're talking about En.lil the Elder because it also refers to Nin.lil, whom we already showed in Paper 2 is the Orion Queen. Interesting in the above reference is that it also mentions that Khan En.lil (here "Supa-Enlil") determines the "destinies of the lands." This makes it sound like it's referring to the "Tablets of Destinies," also called the "Mes" in Mesopotamian mythology — also indicating that Khan En.lil is the owner of the Tablets of Destiny, with Ninurta being his son, helping him find the tablets when they were stolen (more about this in another paper). These tablets are also used to determine where we go after we have left the 3-D reality and have managed to escape the trap. Moreover, mythology says that En.lil reads from the tablets of

Destiny so the soul can determine where it is suited to go next. All this will be discussed at a later time.

Aratron, in this example, referred to “the Olympic spirit of Saturn” and is most possibly referring to Prince Ninurta because he was the “god of agriculture,” although Ninurta/Prince En.lil was not an Olympian spirit, but a Titan (as we can see, there are a lot of misconceptions about our mythology).

Fig. 6. Boötes as depicted in Urania's Mirror, a set of constellation cards published in London c.1825. In his left hand, Khan En.lil holds his hunting dogs, Canes Venatici. Below them is the constellation Coma Berenices. Above the head of Boötes is Quadrans Muralis, now obsolete.

Arcturus is also called the “Urania Mirror”<sup>111</sup>, where Urania of course stands for Uranus, who is the equivalent to An, or Khan En.lil. The Khan and the Queen are connected with the yoke of the Wagon (or “plough,” which is a term we are more used to in this case), which “binds heaven to earth.” This, as we will see at a later point, is a very powerful picture because it means more than one thing when it says that it “binds heaven to earth.”

<sup>111</sup> https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bo%C3%B6tes#History\_and\_mythology

Arcturus being Khan En.lil's star is also mentioned in the old Babylonian text, ULULU/ELULU ("Purification"):

Su-pa, "The Brilliant Star," Arcturus. Enlil Way.<sup>112</sup>

Although Khan En.lil these days is associated with his marriage to the Queen of the Stars, it's not necessarily the case that Arcturus today is a "friendly" star system. Peace may have reigned in the Heavens for a while after the classic Peace Treaty—at least in those regions of the sky, but much has changed since then. As a side note, people who have read the book, We, the Arcturians,<sup>113</sup> may be baffled over the information it contains, but the main purpose with the book was probably not to show who lived in Arcturus, but how life is for benevolent non-physical beings in general. The beings portrayed in the book did not necessarily come from Arcturus, even if they stated they did. The book worked very well as an allegory.

III.II. The Origins of the Swastika, the Ancient Symbol

The symbol connected with the most stigma of all symbols here on Earth is probably the swastika because it was used as the main symbol in Nazi Germany. Second to that is probably the all-seeing eye on the top of the Great Pyramid. This, too, has benevolent origins, but has been distorted by the Patriarchal Regime, which took over here on Earth from the Matriarchal Original Planners. Thus, the all-seeing eye is the eye of Queen Nin, whom, as Mother Goddess, keeps an "all-seeing eye" on her Creation because she exists in everything. Now, it's looked at as a symbol for the Global Elite or "Big Brother," who watches over their slaves, who are the rest of humanity. The uncomfortable truth is that the Patriarchal Regime stole a lot of symbols from the Matriarchs and used them for their own purposes.

We have already talked a little bit about the swastika as a benevolent symbol. What it basically symbolizes is the two major spiral arms of the Milky Way Galaxy, which have the shape of a swastika. However, this symbol can also be observed in the heavens as a group of moving stars. So, let's take a look at something called the Ursa Major Moving Group. Wikipedia explains:

The Ursa Major Moving Group, also known as Collinder 285 or Ursa Major association, is a nearby stellar moving group, a set of stars with common velocities in space and thought to have a common origin some 300 million years ago. Its core is located roughly 80 light years away. It is rich in bright stars including most of the stars of the Big Dipper.<sup>114</sup>

All stars in the Ursa Major Moving Group are moving in roughly the same direction at roughly the same speed, contain roughly the same mix of metals, and, based on stellar theory, appear to be roughly the same age. This evidence suggests to astronomers that the stars in the group share a common origin.<sup>115</sup>

So, what I am getting at here is that this group of moving stars is a part of what looks like a moving swastika. Our own Sun is not a member, and although Sirius was once supposed to be a member, some scientists say that it probably isn't, in spite of its brightness because it's simply too young.

Fig. 7. Ursa Major and Arcturus

In the same Wikipedia entry, we can see a list of stars that belong to the Ursa Major Moving Group, and they are all part of the Ursa Major Constellation—the Great Bear—except for one, HD 109647, which is part of Canes Venatici<sup>116</sup>, sometimes referred to as Arcturus' Dogs—another reference to the later star, Sirius, the Dog Star.

Then we have a large number of Stream Stars, which are scattered more randomly across the sky than the core stars are, which are in relative vicinity to each other.

Now, to get to the point, according to the myths, as well as when we look up in the night sky, we can imagine Arcturus driving the “Wagon” of the She Bear, Ursa Major, in a circumpolar motion, which resembles the swastika. Ursa Major, in its turn, moves in motion with Sagittarius—the center of the Galaxy. This is therefore referring to Khan En.lil (Arcturus), who “drives the wagon” of the Bear Mother, which is another title for Mother Goddess<sup>117</sup>.

Figure 8. The chambers in the Great Pyramid in Giza and the asterisms they are pointing toward.

As another side note, references often mention the age of certain stars, and they say they can determine the age by comparing them with the Hertzsprung-

Russell Diagram<sup>118</sup>, looking at their magnitude. This is a good measurement when we want to determine the relative age of stars, but I would suggest that their absolute age cannot be determined in this fashion. Again, we are stuck in our 3-D perspective, and the way we are defining the age of things is often not accurate—archeologists have the same problem when they try to figure out the age of ancient discoveries. We are thinking in a linear perspective, which is isolated to Earth and therefore can't really determine the age of most objects in the Universe, which is multidimensional. This is very important to understand.

Ursa Minor, the Lesser Bear, is the tail of Draco. Thus, the Goddess “gave birth” to the “Lesser Bear,” which is attached to Draco. Therefore, we could say that the Goddess, as the Mother Bear (Ursa Major), gave birth to the Lesser Bear (Ursa Minor) and Draco. Then, if we take a look at the night sky from the Great Pyramid of Giza and concentrate on the stars connected to the King’s Chamber (remember we talked about in Level II how Marduk and En.ki changed the chambers around so that the King’s Chamber became the Queen’s Chamber and vice versa), we find that Sirius is connected to Ursa Minor as well (see fig 8. above).

Hence, Orion (also depicted in fig 8. ) and Ursa Major, which is the “Older Bear,” gave birth to Ursa Minor (the Lesser Bear), Draco, and Sirius. This means that Orion and Ursa Major are the two major Goddess constellations in the Northern sky, and she birthed En.ki, the “Lesser Bear,” who through conquest took over Ursa Minor, Draco, and eventually also parts of the Sirius system. Draco, ultimately, as we shall see, with the Cosmic Wars raging in the next few papers, is conquered by Marduk and becomes his constellation. Consequently, when we are talking about the Dracos, we are not necessarily talking about Reptilians, or literal Dragons, but Marduk and his army. The great misunderstanding is that the Dragons are the “evil ones” and in conspiracy with the likeminded Reptilians, when in fact it was the Dragons who created the Universe—they are the Goddess’ “bloodline.” They are called “Dragons” here on Earth because they breathe “fire” and are “serpents of “Wisdom.” The fire they breathe is the “fire of life,” and not fire which will burn everything it comes in contact with. The dragons in the folklore are distortions of the Dragons of Creation, and in the Regime’s usual manner, they have instigated fear in something that could be awed as extraordinary positive and beautiful.

To complete the discussion about the swastika, we go from Arcturus (Khan En.lil’s original star system), to Virgo, from Virgo to Antares (Alpha Scorpio), and to Sagittarius—the Center of the Galaxy. There we have the original swastika, and also some star systems and constellations initially belonging to the Orion Empire.

Next, I would like the reader to recall the so-called Ashtar Command, discussed in Level III. They claimed that they originate from Arcturus. As we shall see, it was at the Arcturus system where Lucifer's army attacked as their first target—long after the Peace Treaty was signed. At the time of the Rebellion, Arcturus still belonged to Orion, via Khan En.lil. However, the rebels, who basically seem to have originated somewhere in that area, probably around Spica and Arcturus, took over both systems with force and drove out the beings from Arcturus, who were loyal to Orion. Thus, Arcturus came in the hands of the rebels and has been ever since.

Basically, what the Rebels did was to take control over Ursa Minor and Draco, from where they created their own Empire, which they wanted to become greater than Ursa Major and Orion, who were both in possession of the Queen and the King of Orion. When En.ki and his rebels at a later point also came in possession of Sirius (or at least a part of the Sirius system), we since then have what we call the Sirian Empire. This is not the only parts of the night sky which Lucifer and his Fallen Angels are in possession of, but we will go into that in more detail later.

III.III. More about Draco and the Bear Constellation

Earlier, we discussed the fact that the gods, both with small "g" and capital "G," have a lot of different names, titles, and epithets, and this is often related to their location or their characteristics. Here I want to show the reader a classical example of this, which has to do with the Goddess in her physical embodiment as Ninhursag. The Orion words, just like in the Sumerian and Akkadian languages, can be spelled in many different ways, and letters are interchangeable with each other, while others can just be dropped in certain circumstances.

Hence, Nin-hur-sag can also be spelled Ninhursaya. Then, if we play on that word a little bit more, we get, NIN URSA AYA. Thus, we have Nin=Lady, Ursa=She Bear, and Aya=Queen. Loosely translated, we have Lady Queen She Bear. Consequently, it is as Queen Ninhursag that she is in charge of Ursa Major, the "Big Dipper," a star constellation which most people in the northern hemisphere have seen in the night sky and are quite familiar with. Another name associating the Goddess with Ursa Major is Artemis<sup>119</sup>. We also know by now that Arcturus is originally Khan En.lil's star, and a clear connection between Arcturus and Ursa Major is shown in the following reference, where it says that Arcturus derives from Ancient Greek and means "Guardian of the Bear:"

<sup>119</sup> http://starryskies.com/The\_sky/constellations/ursa\_major.html

The name of the star [Arcturus] derives from Ancient Greek Ἀρκτοῦρος (Arktouros) and means "Guardian of the Bear," ultimately from ἄρκτος (arktos), "bear"+ οὔρος (ouros), "watcher, guardian".<sup>120</sup>

Here we see that Khan En.lil, after having signed the Peace Treaty, became the "Guardian of the Bear," i.e. he and his best warriors became the Queen's personal Guardians, just like I stated in Level II.

Fig. 9. The Big Dipper

Artemis is also known as the "Goddess of the Hunt,"<sup>121</sup> and her hunting partner was Orion<sup>122</sup>. One of the symbols for Artemis is, therefore, the bow and arrow, which also becomes a symbol for the Orion Empire. One of Ninurta's

---

(Prince En.lil) symbols is also the bow and arrow<sup>123</sup>, which then, of course, ties him to Orion and the Mother Goddess herself. As explained in Paper #2 of September 20, 2013: "Setting the Ancient Records Straight: Who is Who and Who Did What in the Pantheon?", Ninurta was the God who named Orion and is thus Orion himself, Artemis' hunting partner in the old myths.

Another star constellation which is symbolized by the bow and arrow is Sagittarius<sup>124</sup>. Sagittarius is easy to see in the southern hemisphere because it's positioned right on the Milky Way. Sagittarius is also connected to the Galactic Center, the Womb of the Mother, which we have talked a lot about earlier. What is interesting, however, is that Babylonian mythology connects Sagittarius with Nergal<sup>125</sup>, who I have suggested is another alias for En.ki.

Nergal/En.ki being associated with Sagittarius is not correct, however, from what I've learned through my research (see Level IV, Paper #2). Instead, Ninurta is the one associated with Sagittarius. Many records originating in Babylon have been altered—Babylon being Marduk's domain, as we know. It was in Lord En.ki's interest, as well as Marduk's, to sometimes associate Nergal with Ninurta. In one instance, it was because none of the two, Lord En.ki and Marduk, wanted to be associated with the Underworld and manipulation of the Afterlife—something that is associated with Nergal, which we will discuss in a separate paper. Instead, Lord En.ki, by altering the records, blamed his brother, Ninurta, for what he himself did. Of course, if Lord En.ki wanted to connect himself with the Creation Story, being the Prime Creator—the One and Only God—he also had to make sure he was associated with Sagittarius, which is deeply related to Creation itself. Therefore, in this particular instance, he took on the role of his brother, Ninurta because it fit his purpose at a particular time.

The problem with manipulating and altering records is that once you have started lying and you notice that a particular lie no longer suits your agenda, it has to be altered once again, even though the original lie has to remain in the records—it's simply too late to change it. This is what has happened in the myths at times, and this is the main reason for much of the confusion. Depending on when certain records were altered, you find different stories being told about the same beings, and they sometimes contradict each other. Again, this is father and son altering the story as they go along. Then, of course, we are just "lulus," so what do we know? We would never figure that out, would we?

Since Lucifer's Rebellion, when En.ki and his "angels" were thrown out of Orion, they lost all legal connections to the star constellations belonging to the

Orion Empire, as well as any connection to the Creation, i.e. star constellations and regions of the Milky Way which are directly connected with the origins of our galaxy. In reality, as stated earlier, they are all connected with Mother Goddess and her incarnation as the Queen, Khan En.lil, and Prince Ninurta. This hasn't stopped the rebels, however from constantly associating themselves with God, the Goddess, Creation, the "Second Coming," Jesus, Maitreya, and more.

Interestingly enough, in Theosophy it is believed that...

...the Seven Stars of the Pleiades focus the spiritual energy of the Seven Rays from the Galactic Logos to the Seven Stars of the Great Bear, then to Sirius, then to the Sun, then to the god of Earth (Sanat Kumara), and finally through the seven Masters of the Seven Rays to the human race.<sup>126</sup>

So, according to their philosophy, which is basically built on information received from the Great White Brotherhood of Ascended Masters, the energy goes from Sirius to the Sun, then to the "god of Earth (Sanat Kumara)," and farther until it reaches the human race through the "Masters of the Seven Rays."

Without going too much into Theosophy, Sanat Kumara is associated with Venus, the "Morning Star," which equates to Lucifer (Prince En.ki). The Masters of the Seven Rays are the "Ascended Masters" and the "Ashtar Command," both associated with Sirius. The Ashtar Command is promoting "Space Jesus," or Sananda<sup>127</sup>, who is, like we discussed in Level III, En.ki himself, coming down from the Heavens as our savior.

I find this an interesting correlation because we can get a hint of how the Galactic Rays are being hijacked once they leave the Big Dipper and perhaps in some prism fashion reach Sirius and from there are steered toward our own Sun, most possibly with the help from advanced technology.

As a side note, it's fascinating how the Theosophists claim that the Sun gets its energy from Sirius and how we in that fashion would be connected to the Dog Star. Then, some say that the Sun is simply a "reflection" of Sirius A (now we're being very metaphysical here). If this is the case, it means that the "Sirians" – intended to refer to the AIF, when Sirius, in actuality, is only one engaged star system of many – are controlling our planet in yet another way, such as follows.

Without the light and the heat from the Sun, humans can't survive, so if the Sirius A hypothesis is correct, it may expose quite a horrific agenda. Humans grow from being nurtured from Sirius A (via the Sun)! If this is true, the question is, for how long has this been going on? Since the AIF decided that it's time for us to evolve? If this is the case, perhaps they concluded that our evolution would have taken too long if we humans were dependent only on our own Sun, which is fainter than Sirius, and the AIF decided that we need a warmer sun (Sirius A), which is transmitting more gamma rays, in order to evolve faster. It inevitably makes me think about plants being nurtured with different kinds of light in order to make them grow faster.

Why does the AIF want us to evolve? Don't they actually want the opposite, like so many people think? Don't they want us to be kept "dumbed down," so we can't expose their agenda? I believe nothing could be further from the truth. The AIF wants us to start evolving at a fast pace because from their perspective, the time has come—or even better, their time has come! If we are to believe Sitchin, the AIF decided already approximately 4,000 years ago, before they bombed the Sinai Spaceport and Sodom and Gomorrah, that humans need to evolve, and since then, we have. They even sent down "Jesus" to make it go faster, didn't they? Jesus was the AIF's own Savior. That only worked to some degree because mankind was still not ready for that kind of approach, so the AIF had to ad-lib and create the crucifix story, which was later being emphasized by the Roman Emperor, Constantine, in the Council of Nicea in 325 AD, when the Bible was put together in a fashion which could help the AIF making humanity evolve.

Could it have been somewhere around this time or, perhaps, closer to the Industrial Revolution that they started sending energy from Sirius A to the Sun? After all, it was around that time evolution started speeding up, wasn't it?

Then we have the Pleiadians talking about the nanosecond, the time period from 1987 to 2012, when time incrementally sped up to a millionfold, meaning that we evolved a million times faster by the last years of the nanosecond, than we would have if the nanosecond would never have happened. That there was a nanosecond is beyond doubt. Anyone with any spiritual awareness noticed the rapid change in their own development as spiritual beings. Sometimes everything went almost overwhelmingly fast. Then, around October 2012, I started noticing that time was slowing down again quite remarkably, and now everything is happening at a much slower pace, compared to the last few years of the nanosecond. Interestingly enough, the Pleiadians said in a lecture held after the nanosecond (i.e. in 2013), that "good ETs" had a hand in creating some of the effects of the nanosecond, although it also had its own natural cycle. Sirius A? Was that the "helping hand"? Mind you, that the Pleiadians were working with Lord En.ki during the 1987-2012 time period—something that they themselves proclaimed.

So, we are back to the question: why does the AIF want us to evolve? Well, we have discussed the “Harvest” many times in the Levels of Learning. It definitely has an eerie sound to it now, doesn’t it? The Harvest! Are they growing us for food? Do they want us to get “ripe?” Yes, I am positive that this is a part of it, but there is another factor which is no less concerning, which we will bring up in a long discussion in one of the later papers in this Fourth Level of Learning.

Still, isn’t evolving a good thing? Isn’t that what we are supposed to do? The answer is yes, but at the same time, we sit in a serious dilemma, which I hadn’t thought about until recently, when I started putting things together. However, this dilemma can quite easily be resolved if we have enough knowledge to avoid the negative part of it. So hang in there—we will discuss this at length in a later paper. First, however, we need “background material,” and that’s what the story of the Cosmic Wars, which will follow this paper, is about. Once we understand the story of the cosmos in our neck of the galactic woods and how it is related to us humans here on Earth, we can better understand the entire subject with the Harvest and our own evolution. The problem is not how we are going to resolve it once we understand the problem, but again, what about the rest of humanity, who keeps this reality faithfully solid by bathing in ignorance? This is my main concern, even though I know that it’s up to each one of us to find our way out. Anyhow, we will be back on this subject.

IV. Some Last Words in Preparation...

It would take up too much space if I went into details about every star and star constellation that was connected with the Orion Empire, but a few others I want to mention are Alpha Corona Borealis, Beta Aurigae, Delta Aurigae, Gamma Leporis (the “rabbit” at the foot of Orion), and Beta Serpentis.

For readers who are interested in following the story of the Cosmic Wars that I will tell in this Level of Learning on a star map, I would suggest you find good star maps of the northern and the southern hemispheres, so you can follow the route of these star beings as they move across the night sky. There are many of these maps online—it’s just a matter of finding one which meets your preferences. This is not mandatory, and you will be able to follow the plot anyway—my suggestion is just for those who want to go deeper into it.

As the reader may have noticed, the star beings—both those who are still connected with Orion and those who rebelled against the Queen and the King—seem to be concentrating their business to a limited section of the Milky Way, i.e. the proximity of our own Sun and solar system. This, however, is not necessarily the case, but the Rebellion happened here in our galactic neighborhood (if we consider a few hundred to maybe a thousand light years being our “neighborhood,” which it actually is). It would be too confusing to involve remote parts of the Galaxy in our story—regions that have no, or very little, connections with Earth at this moment (with “this moment” I mean a few million years ago and up to present time). The Cosmic Wars and the Battles of the Gods that have directly affected us have been fought in this particular area of the night sky, which is called Sector 9.

The first three papers of the Fourth Level of Learning have been written in preparation for the reader to fully appreciate the rest of the papers and the story I am about to tell. We are now getting closer to the point where we can start digging into the story of Lucifer’s Rebellion and the severe consequences it has had for the human soul group.

The first three Levels of Learning have told the story from a more general perspective, but in this level, we are concentrating more on details. Just like when we discussed mythology in the previous papers, where the details were of the utmost importance, the same thing could be said about the Cosmic Wars and their consequences.

PAPER #4: THE COSMIC WARS STARTED IN THE VOID

I. From Creation to Nanotravel

Many billions of years ago, seen from a human perspective, the Mother Goddess—the Divine Feminine and Primordial Dragon—created our Universe.

If we sped up Creation, like we can do with a movie, an imaginary bystander could witness incredible fireworks taking place in the VOID. In a second, a majestic explosion of colorful lights shot out from the nothingness, dancing around in bright colors, almost playfully—withdrawing and then again shooting off, over and over again.

In the next moment, a second majestic explosion of colorful lights, but from another part of the color spectrum, shot out in the vacuum, taking on a similar pattern. Suddenly, the two strings of lights, looking like two gigantic, beautiful, multicolored dragons, spinning around each other, to then playfully withdraw, were moving gracefully back and forth in seemingly endless and various patterns. As these two dragons continued playing with each other, they came closer and closer to one another, attracted to each other like two lovers. Together, they suddenly started spinning with such a velocity that the centrifugal power attracted the two, like magnets would, and suddenly, they merged into one big, super-bright orb.

Then, for a moment, there was almost total stillness—the orb was now vibrating very slowly. Suddenly, a cascade of light shot out from the center of the orb, like an outbreath through the nothingness—as if sprung out from a magnificent birth center—creating beautiful fireworks in our imaginary bystander’s night sky. Seconds later, in our sped up movie, stars and nebulae were forming randomly in the VOID, into an asymmetric circle, which then started spinning, turning into a giant spiral, which continued spinning without any signs, or willingness, to stop.

Our bystander had been so fascinated by this vision that he overlooked that an endless number of similar spirals had been created in all directions—although there didn’t seem to be any directions in the newborn Universe. The first galaxies were born in the VOID, which later was named the KHAA (pronounced shaa or haa, like an outbreath—the outbreath of the Mother Goddess, the Primordial Dragon). From the center of the VOID, She had given birth to the Universe, and let Her creation spread out over unbelievably long distances. Like small oases in a great Ocean of VOID, galaxies, containing billions—sometimes trillions and quadrillions—of stars were forming, so that imaginary sailors on the vast cosmic ocean had islands where they could anchor their heavenly sailboats in order to explore.

As time went by—as if time is even the correct word to use—the VOID was filled with beauty from the Creation by the First Dragon, and Her life force was present in everything She had created, and all of it was Her Creation—Hers and no one else's.

The Universe was created from the VOID, and life was created in the VOID. The Goddess “seeded” Her Creation with life, and She had help from magnificent Creator Goddesses, whom She herself had given life for that purpose, as extensions of Her own Divine Spirit.

This universe was one of an almost endless number of universes that the Divine Feminine had created. Perhaps it was a continuation of a previous one, which had been born, matured, and died over an incredibly long period, and now the Goddess continued Her journey in this new universe, after it had been reborn from the ashes of the old—or perhaps all Creation on one level is simultaneous and can't be measured in these terms at all.

At one time, the Goddess inserted herself in this newborn universe, in order to participate in whatever was going to unfold. This, She thought, should be a universe of Free Will—that's what's going to be unique with this particular universe!

If all intelligent beings in the cosmos had Free Will to create whatever they wanted, would they still be able to become compassionate with each other, would they show each other respect, and would they be willing to learn and evolve, to love, and to share with other conscious beings what they knew and had learned? This was the big “Universal Experiment,” and it was quite an interesting one.

Perhaps, there were two most important laws in this new universe:

1. Beings have the free will to create whatever they want.
2. Don't interfere with another being's free will.

Each being is responsible for his or her actions, and shall one day be judged for these actions, even if the judgment is rendered only by himself- or herself. The Divine Feminine understood that very little individual growth will occur if someone else is forcing his or her will on somebody else. These laws had to be learned from experience by the living beings inhabiting the KHAA.

Eventually, when beings had spread out in all different dimensions, a third law was created as well, which was subordinate to Law #2. This law read as follows:

3. Don't interfere with an evolving race.

All species, whether they evolve on a planet, or elsewhere, has as a species or as an individual, the right to develop, free from interference, if they so wish. Help is allowed, but only if an individual, or a race, specifically asks for it.

More laws advanced naturally from these ones, but sparsely so, and only to prevent interference with the "First Law of Free Will."

As the Universe slowly matured, the VOID started teeming with life. Already from the Beginning, there had been life in absolutely everything, from the most knowledgeable Creator Goddess down to the most solid rock on the densest planet, for the Goddess is in all that is. On a subquantum level, everything is connected and is One with the Creatrix, the Divine Feminine. This Universe became a universe of great potentials, and the Goddess was pleased.

Young star races began to mature in conjunction with the Universe and went through their different stages of development, until they came to a point where they decided to explore—and sometimes with force, they conquered space. Many of these exploring and conquering star races were ignorant of the Laws of Free Will at the time when they expanded their territories.

It wasn't until they had matured to a certain point that they realized that any harm they were doing to others, they were also ultimately doing to themselves. At that point, they usually slowed down and stopped creating wars and conflicts. Instead, they became peaceful star races, living by the Universal Laws. However, until they had reached that point, some races could be ferocious and merciless, due to their own fear of being hurt and defeated. Trying to avoid this from happening, they created fear in others so that they could increase their own power in order to feel more safe and secure. Today, we have a Universe in which beings in all different stages of maturation exist—for some, it takes longer to learn than it does for others, but all beings contribute to the greater understanding of all.

After all of this had emerged and all different stages of evolving races existed, Lucifer's Rebellion took place—long before the creation of Earth and humankind. Up to the point of the Rebellion, the Universe developed more or less per the plan, and the Creatrix was satisfied with her new Experiment—the Free Will Universe.

Normally, it was when a particular star race had started realizing that they were beings of Fire with a mind and an Avatar that they figured out how to move around between the dimensions across the electromagnetic spectrum.

These beings of Fire were able to nanotravel with their Avatar, thinking themselves to a certain place, and they would be there quite instantaneously. We here on Earth think of it almost as teleportation—the way it's done in Star Trek and other science fiction movies. By simply “dematerializing” into small fires, which can be compared with the tiniest pieces of the microcosm on a subquantum level, where everything is connected, like in an unbroken spider web, they then could materialize at the destination.

However, the mind of the Divine Feminine is never resting—it is always pondering, planning, and creating. Although she was pleased with her Creation thus far, the Primordial Female Dragon wanted to expand on it even more.

What if beings who evolve on planets would be able to both be planetary-bound and to nanotravel at the same time and take a “copy” of their body with them while the “original” body stayed planet-bound? Such beings would have everything they needed and wanted and would also be able to evolve many times faster than any star being in the Universe!

An idea started taking form within the Goddess' great mind, and the first plans to start an Experiment, unique to this and any other Universe, began to emerge. However, first she wanted to try it out in one single place in the Universe—she decided that she wanted to create a solar system at the fringe of the great Milky Way Galaxy, where, if the Experiment failed, not too many other worlds and star races would be affected. The idea of the Planet Tiamat, later to become Planet Gaia, and finally Planet Earth, had reached the drawing board. Still, it would take a few eons before the Experiment would become a reality...

II. Dimensions versus the Electromagnetic Spectrum and the Electric Sun

As I've mentioned earlier, to me, it's now much more plausible that star beings are born and evolve in space-like environments rather than on planets alone. To understand this, we really need to stretch our minds and think outside 3-D reality. In 3-D, a solar system consists of a hot sun, who warms up the planets that revolve around her. A 3-D being would burn up if he or she came too close to the Sun. Also, humankind would not survive without sunlight and the heat from the Sun—thus, most of us can agree that the Sun is essential for our existence. That's how it works in this dimension. Curiously, our solar system consists of at least eight planets, but only one of these planets has the perfect amount of sunlight in order to host advanced life forms. In the past, Mars, Venus, and the now destroyed planet Tiamat have also had life on them, but those life forms were not native to these planets—there were star beings using them as outposts and for storage, mining, and genetic experimentation. Therefore, there is basically only one planet in the solar system that can naturally host intelligent life. Isn't that a waste? Why don't all planets have life on them? Some may say that they might—it's just that we can't see it because it exists in other dimensions.

Fig 1. The Electromagnetic Spectrum (EM), showing the tiny piece we humans are existing within, and how much more there is to explore—the EM is teeming with life!

Although this can be true under certain circumstances, I think in general it is not. I have become quite convinced that planets exist mostly for other purposes than to host intelligent life forms. Instead, if we move around a little bit within the Electromagnetic Spectrum (EM) as a whole, into higher dimensions, the stars (suns) are no longer super-hot balls of fire, but can be quite comfortable. In fact, I don't believe the scientific model that the Sun is a nuclear "furnace," when in fact the explanation that it is an electric, sentient being makes a lot more sense—it answers many questions people have had about the Sun. For example, why does the Sun have a corona? It doesn't fit with the fusion-only model at all. If it is electric in nature, however, the corona makes sense.<sup>128</sup>

Another interesting thing is that NASA just recently (in 2012) discovered portals between the Sun and the Earth! These portals often start around 10,000 miles up through the Earth's atmosphere, and continue, uninterrupted, until they reach the Sun's atmosphere.<sup>129</sup> Most of these portals are very small and open and close in a matter of seconds, while others are wide open and fairly stable.

Fig. 2. A portal between the Earth and the Sun (courtesy of NASA).

Now, what are these portals? Science doesn't know yet, but will send up a probe in 2014 in order to investigate them. What they do know, however, is that particles are transported, back and forth, in this portal between the Earth and the Sun. One of the effects of this exchange of particles is, believe it or not, the Aurora Borealis!<sup>130</sup> Hence, let me ask the reader this: is the Aurora Borealis a nuclear or an electric phenomenon? It's not nuclear, is it? Isn't this just another indication of an electric Sun?

This falls naturally into parts of my research that go years back, when I have been talking about portals and their different functions. If particles can travel through these portals—in both directions—and perhaps may be able to come out intact on the other end, this opens up a lot of possibilities and opportunities.

III. Stars as Portals and Birth Centers of Soul Fire

If the Sun is electric, wouldn't that also explain how we can see UFOs flying in and out of the Sun? There are plenty of YouTube videos of this phenomenon. Scientists try to explain it away with one unbelievable hypothesis after another, but at the end of the day, they know that they have no clue what it is that they are seeing. Could these UFOs, perhaps, be either bleed-throughs of other-dimensional spacecraft—or perhaps, even other-dimensional life forms—adjusting to our 3-D wavelength? Why do all UFOs we are seeing have to be spaceships? Can we really tell the difference between advanced space vehicles and other-dimensional life forms with our limited perceptions? After all, we know next to nothing about how life forms look like in other dimensions.

Moreover, we learn from many metaphysicists and channeled material that the Sun is actually a portal but also our Oversoul. Therefore, let's take a look at both of these ideas.

Is it possible that our sun works as a “hub,” and other suns do the same thing? One of many people who think that this is the case is the “astrophysicist,” Nassim Hamein.<sup>131</sup> Some people (especially in the scientific community) have discarded him as a fraud because they can't find any university records showing his credentials. When I heard this, I smiled. In order to listen to someone's ideas, does that person need to have a university degree? Can't a person be an astrophysicist if he or she has studied the subject more or less on his or her own, instead of going through years of mainstream schooling? In some cases, too much education can be in the way of knowledge—there's a fine line between education and manipulation—and after all, they don't even teach the kids “critical thinking” in school anymore. However, to make them conform, they educate them until they almost drop, in order for them to become useful puppets in the societal structure. Personally, I would call that “indoctrination.” I'd much rather listen to someone with fresh ideas that fit into the puzzle that builds higher consciousness than to someone who can't think outside the scientific box because he or she has been so severely indoctrinated that what the person learned in school has become dogma and religion.

Going back to where we were—if the hub hypothesis is true, it would explain how many star beings travel between the stars—they follow the galactic, electric currents between the stars, and thus, they reach their destination. It would be the same principle as traveling through the newly discovered portals between the Earth and the Sun—we would know what the destination would be. For some star beings, couldn't it be that they ride on galactic currents, using some kind of star maps so that they know how to reach their destination, and then via “sun hubs” get there without any major mishaps? I am not even talking about beings traveling in spaceships, necessarily, but also those who nanotravel without vessels. Others, perhaps, don’t even need these portals to go from A to B—it is possible to just think yourself to where you want to go. The options seem to be many.

Another option is that these portals are normally not used for star travel at all—only to transport particles and electric pulses and information between two stars or between a planet and a star. In a sense, maybe the Sun is a hub, nonetheless, but in another way. There are those who say that without the Sirius star system, our Sun would be “dead” and no life would be possible on Earth or any place else in our solar system.<sup>132</sup> The hypothesis states that Sirius A (and perhaps Sirius B and C as well) transports a huge quantity of energy to the Sun, and lights it up by igniting it. Sirius, after all, is a much brighter and “warmer” star (in our 3-D reality), or it is simply just emitting much more energy than our Sun. Via portals, this energy is then transported to our Sun, making our Sun the “slave,” and Sirius the “master” in this capacity—similar to computers in a peer-to-peer network, where one computer is the master and another is the slave.

This hypothesis is quite interesting but at the same time concerning because if our sun is dependent upon Sirius for its warmth and emission of energy, doesn't this make the AIF more in charge of our potential development as a species? We know that Sirius has a big role in the ancient stories about the AIF, and some of these beings are from there. If they are as technologically advanced as we have reasons to believe, can they also control this electrical current going from Sirius to the Sun? Can they "turn the knob" up and down, in a manner of speaking, to either increase or decrease the energy, thus creating "cycles" in the development of mankind? It's a mind-boggling thought but quite plausible, taking into consideration that our own technology is on a Stone Age level.

On the greatdreams.com website, there is a reference to Sirius transmuting galactic karma onto Earth:

Thoth also tells us that the star Sirius holds the key for transmutation of galactic karma. In fact, one of its ancient names in Lemuria was Magha.<sup>133</sup>

If this is true, the AIF can control the "Law of Karma" here on Earth, but even if there may be some truth to the above reference, one would perhaps think that the Law of Karma we are subjected to here on our planet can be implemented much easier by just manipulating us. They could plant into our DNA, or our mass consciousness, that if we do something—good or bad—the effect comes back to us in a greater capacity than it was emitted. If people believe this—consciously or subconsciously—it will put the law into effect.

Consequently, if we consider what we have discussed in earlier papers, i.e. the "Hundredth Monkey Syndrome," which means that if a certain percentage of a population believes that something is true, the rest will adjust accordingly, the Law of Karma is put into effect here on Earth, following those same rules. It would also explain why it seems like the Global Elite—or at least the majority of them—can get away with all their crimes without getting karmic effect from them—they simply don't believe in the Law of Karma because they were the ones who "invented" it.

If stars are basically electric rather than nuclear, it also punches a big hole in the scientific balloon. The scientific community says that as nuclear objects, stars burn themselves out, and after x amount of years, they usually become novae or supernovae, after which they shrink into white dwarfs, from where they slowly, but surely, become colder, perhaps, ending their life cycles as black holes.

Electric stars don't burn out! They only have different colors and sizes because they transmit a different amount of electricity, and that's the bottom line. An orange giant star is not the effect of a supernova, but in fact, it may always have been an orange giant, just like our own sun is a yellow dwarf. Sometimes, I can imagine, if the hypothesis with the electric universe is correct, stars can change size and color if they are slaves to a "master star," and intelligent beings, in charge of the master star, change the amount of energy they are sending/transmitting to the slave star. Subsequently, they can also destroy stars at will by using, for them, basic nuclear technology. This happens on occasion in Cosmic Wars and is sometimes the reason for supernova explosions, and even if we haven't seen that happen in our solar system, it did happen to our own planet in a distant past, when it went under the name "Tiamat." During the Solar War, or The War of the Titans, which we will discuss in a later paper, the Olympians used superior weapons to split Tiamat into two pieces, where the larger piece became Earth and the smaller piece became the asteroid belt.

Then we mentioned the hypothesis that the Sun is the Oversoul of mankind as a soul group. Channeled entities, such as the Pleiadians, suggest that we say hello to the Sun when we see her first thing in the morning, and keep track of where the Sun is in the sky as the day progresses. The Pleiadians also say that the Sun knows who you are as an individual, although she doesn't "think" in the same way we do. It's all about creating a connection with the Sun, who can be considered an Oversoul for the human mass consciousness.<sup>134</sup> Still, if this is the case, and the Sun knows us, individual by individual, it must also mean that the individual can address her as his or her individual Oversoul, if he or she so wishes.

Let's expand on this a little bit more. If the Sun, amongst a lot of other things, is also a giant Oversoul, and we use the model we have been using in previous levels of learning, where the Oversoul splits up into many "smaller" souls in order to more efficiently explore cosmos, we can create a very similar model using the Sun as the Oversoul and you as an individual soul. We learn that Earth is an Experiment, and as such, it is unique. So, let's ponder that we, as souls, were born from the Sun as Fires/Avatars, free to do whatever we please — this solar system is our "domain." When the Orion Creator Goddesses, the Helpers of Mother Goddess, came here millions of years ago to start creating the Experiment, which the Pleiadians call "The Living Library," (which it is), some of the "Fires of the Sun" decided to participate in this 3-D Experiment and descended into the "physical realm." Some were in charge of the flora, others of the fauna, some became elementals, and others became Fires/souls of the

Shepherds, or the Guardians of the Living Library, whom I've been calling the Namlú'u species.

Then, when Lucifer and his rebels came and took over, they captured some of the Namlú'u spirits—those who never got a chance to escape—and also used the body type of this primordial humanoid and mixed it with other beings, such as human apes, in order to get efficient human workers for the mines. Then the story goes on from there...

IV. What Do Beings in Other Parts of the Electromagnetic Spectrum Look Like?

What I want to suggest, as an expansion of the above hypothesis, is that souls do not originate on a planet, and they don't need planets to evolve after they have been born from a star (thus, star beings). My research has showed me, and I have heard from certain star beings themselves, that just because they are not "physical" in our terms but travel freely between the dimensions across the electromagnetic spectrum, they see themselves as being just as physical as you and I are, with the exception that their physical bodies are not as dense as ours.

The Third Dimension, in which we humans live, is not some esoteric phenomenon in the Universe. Again, if we look at the electromagnetic spectrum (fig. 1) and think of it as a ruler, the small "inch" that is 3-D is a very small part of the EM spectrum. The problem, as we have addressed earlier, is that we are stuck in this small band, or wavelength. Other star beings are free to navigate to and through the Third Dimension without being stuck in it. I am repeating this because taking the recent information into perspective, the readers may get a clearer picture of how it works. Hence, if a group of star beings wished to descend to 3-D reality, they could, just as well as they can travel within other dimensions, and if they are Creator Goddesses, they can create 3-D life on a planet and live there if they so wish—or they can create their own life forms to inhabit this realm of reality. All this is very possible.

In reality, from what it seems, this is not the norm. Someone who creates a 3-D planetary world also becomes responsible for that creation, and not too many star beings seem to be willing to accept that responsibility because to them it's not tempting or, perhaps, challenging enough — there are so many other things they can do. On some occasions, accepting the responsibility for their creation fits within their plans, and then it's a different matter. If they temporarily want to create a planet and live on it, they can do so by just "thinking it" into existence, like Q did in Star Trek. Then, when they get tired of the "illusion," they just erase it with a thought and no responsibility attached!

Earth, however, with its Living Library, was a unique project (or Experiment), and a wonderful idea. When the Experiment was at its peak during the “Golden Age,” other star beings realized what the Orions had done, and many wanted to come visit and/or participate in the project<sup>135</sup>, but few could stay on Earth because there weren’t enough physical bodies to host the hovering souls from other star systems. I also believe that the Orions wanted this to be a unique Orion project, although other star races contributed with fauna and flora.<sup>136</sup>

Metaphysics is full of statements that the “human template” is the standard template for our galaxy, although some say that it’s a standard for this entire Universe. The question is, what exactly does this mean? Are we talking about 3-D only or throughout the whole electromagnetic spectrum? Some insist that it doesn’t matter in which dimension a star race is dwelling — they still use the human template, which consists of at least one head, two arms, two legs, and a torso. I would say that the statement is true when we are talking about 3-D beings, i.e. beings living in the physical and evolving on planets. These races are relatively few in comparison.<sup>137</sup> When we’re discussing beings throughout the spectrum, we should be able to find all kinds of entities having shapes and forms totally foreign to humans and not following the standards of the human template.

When we’re discussing what I call Sun Born or Star Born, it looks as if each star creates its own souls, and they become the mass consciousness of that particular star, which then will function as an Oversoul — so we have oversouls within oversouls. These souls, when they evolve, create (or agree to?) their own body type which is typical for that star system. Therefore, if we really look at this deep enough, we will see that the spiritual realm and the physical realm are one and the same! The being’s Avatar (light-body) creates the physical body, which the soul uses when nanotraveling through the dimensions. However, this body template, which they share with their fellow soul from their own mass consciousness, is in our terms “fluid,” and by changing the shape of the Avatar, from moving fires around, they can “shapeshift” into anything that particular soul can imagine.

<sup>137</sup> I don’t want the reader to believe that there are no populated planets, because there are. However, in comparison with how many planets there are out there, as a percentage, very few contain what we define as “life.” Most “advanced” beings live their existence elsewhere.

V. The KHAA “Universities”

These soul/body/mind complexes can then travel freely in time and space—well, almost freely. Just like humans on Earth, a little child does not have the experience, mind capacity, knowledge, and wisdom required to do things a grown-up can do. In addition, one grown-up may not be as experienced and knowledgeable as another—it differs from individual to individual. It doesn't only have to do with IQ, but also with what a person wishes to do with his or her life. One person may want to become highly educated because he or she wants to become a scientist—whereas, another person, who may actually have the capacity to become a scientist as well, prefers not to educate himself or herself because that individual wants to do something else with his or her life.

It's similar up in the Heavens, from what I have researched (as above, so below). Our own Earth is divided into countries, and each country has its own educational system and its own universities. Within these universities, you can learn different things—you choose a certain direction in your education, which you then can use in your professional life. Up in the Heavens, we have different stars and star constellations, owned and managed by different star races. One group of star races may also be in charge of many star systems and constellations, as we have seen in the previous paper, and then we usually say that this or that star race is in charge of its own “Empire” (such as the Orion Empire, etc.).

For star beings to get access to the Orion Empire, for example, they need to meet certain standards and have certain qualifications. It can be compared with that the United States has many universities, but to get into Yale or Harvard, to name two, you must first meet certain criteria. You can't be totally uneducated and be accepted at Harvard University—you must first be educated and prepared somewhere else.<sup>138</sup> Many of the star systems and constellations in the Universe work like this—if you want to get into Orion, you will find out what you need to do first, and then you can “knock on the gate” and see if you meet the right criteria. If you do, you can be a citizen of the Orion Empire, and perhaps, you want to learn how to become a Creator Goddess. If so, that's the path you can take, once you get in. Another star system, such as Alpha Centauri (as a random example), may teach you something else. Hence, it's not just beings on Earth who are learning things—all beings in the Universe evolve, and just like here, they evolve at a different speed. Just because most star beings have not been locked in like we humans have been, they are more “advanced” in some aspects, such as with technology. Scientists here on Earth call this phenomenon “Civilization Type 0-V,”<sup>139</sup> depending on how advanced they are. Although we could say that most civilizations in space are Civilizations II-IV, this scientific classification system has much to wish for—being a classification system measuring technological advancement only. It is not at all measuring the spiritual advancement of a star race.

<sup>138</sup> In reality, to be accepted into Harvard or Yale, you normally need to already be part of a Global Elite family, or to be so smart that the Global Elite include you in their future plans, but I mention these two universities because they are well-known.

It’s easy for us humans to feel intimidated by star races out there. They seem so powerful and all-knowing, while we, on the other hand, have no clue how to approach any of these beings—especially as they are inter- and multidimensional, and seem to have much more energy and magical powers than we do. Even if this, to some extent, is true, let us never underestimate our own powers. We are soul/body/mind complexes (SBMC) just like they are—we are just not as knowledgeable in certain terms yet. Still, we have the Fire of the Goddess, and she gave us other gifts as well, which we shall see in a later paper— things that other star beings lack, but wish they had. We have a wide range of emotions and can feel deep compassion and empathy for each other— something other star beings can’t feel to the same extent. It’s our blessing and our curse at the same time, because just like the Goddess, we potentially have the ability to feel similar to her. It was part of the Experiment and abilities unique for the soul group belonging to this particular sun.

Spiritually, we are also more evolved than most of the star races in our galaxy—something that may come as a shock to some. If they are so advanced out there, aren’t they more “spiritual” than we are? Unfortunately, technology and war is the path many star races have chosen. This doesn’t mean that all of them are hostile and would attack us if we went out there, although there are those who would if we are not aware of it and cannot shield ourselves. There are many friendly races in the KHAA who would meet us with open arms, but it doesn’t mean that they necessarily are advanced in what we call a “spiritual level,” although some are, of course. This is a clear advantage humanity has, so we have a lot to teach the star races, too, and they have a lot to teach us.

Many people have asked me about the DAL (also spelled DAAL) Universe<sup>140</sup>, and whether it has anything to do with the KHAA, and the answer is yes. I don’t want to use the term DAL because I believe it was used both by Billy Meier and his Pleiadians, A’shayana Deane and Alex Collier, and I don’t want to be associated with their research in this regard. It’s not because I try to minimize their research—I just want to show that I am not related to them, and my research is different. However, the term they use—DAL/DAAL—is their way to explain the 96% Universe or the KHAA/VOID.

When I started writing on Level I, my intention was to also go deeper into other star races, besides those who are connected with the so-called Anunnaki, because there has certainly been other species who have had influences on Earth's history. However, so far, the "Anunnaki story" has been complicated enough to unfold and has so far taken four levels of learning. I still have the intention to write about other races, but it will not be in this level.

In the next paper, we are beginning our story about Lucifer's Rebellion and its consequences on us humans and in many other parts of the Galaxy and even on galaxies beyond ours. It's an interesting story on many levels, and by telling it, I believe the reader will get a better and deeper picture of who these star beings are and why they act like they do.

It will also be easier to understand that there are two major mindsets here on Earth—that of the Global Elite and that of ordinary people. We will clearly see that those who run us—whether they are "humans" or extraterrestrials—think very differently than we do. We will also be able to understand why that is. How many of the "authorities" are actually "human" other than in body? This is a very important question we need to ask ourselves because within the answer to that question lies the road to our "salvation." The longer we ignore what we already "know" inside of us, the worse off mankind will become. On the flip side—the faster we start opening our heart chakra and our Third Eye, the better off we will be. If we choose the latter path, our recovery can be relatively fast.

PAPER #5: LUCIFER'S REBELLION

I. What Led to the First Great Cosmic War?

After the Peace Treaty between the Queen of the Stars and the King of Kings, Khan En.lil was seated on the throne beside his new consort. Although the Queen had the ultimate say in important matters, Khan En.lil was more than just "Second in Command." He ran the Orion Empire together with his consort and does so up to present day. Star beings apparently see Khan En.lil as a fair and just King—firm but with a good sense of justice, and therefore, he is respected by most—even his enemies. He is also a great warrior—something he brought with him from his own Empire—and Queen Nin made him "First in Command" of the Orion MIKH/MAKH troops. He became "Mikael First in Command,"—the entity we know here on Earth as "Archangel Michael." Mikael can also be spelled Mi.khaa.el, where "el" (like in Elohim) denotes "heavenly power," and "khaa" is of course the "KHAA." In Orion language, you can reverse some words—therefore, "Mi," in this case, could rightfully become "IM," which means, "by the side of the Mother." So, IM.KHAA.EL would then read something like, "of the Heavenly Power in the KHAA, by the side of the Mother."<sup>141</sup> This is also where "MIKH" in "MIKH-MAKH" warriors comes from. "MAKH" can be broken down into "MA" and "KH", where "MA" stands for "Mother" and "KH" is short for "KHAA"—"Mother KHAA." Thus, Khan En.lil became the First Commander of Queen Nin's personal star fleet.

The elder of the two sons of Queen Nin—En.ki—did not become known under this title until he claimed to be the "Lord of Earth" (which is exactly what the title means). Before then, he went under many names and titles, and one of them was Prince Lucifer. "Prince Lucifer", or just "Lucifer" are the titles I will use for Prince En.ki, until we get to the point in our story when he actually became En.ki, or "Lord En.ki."

Readers who know anything about Prince Lucifer—perhaps from the Urantia Book<sup>142</sup> or elsewhere—know that he was very proud and very brilliant. He was full of potential and had many good qualities, such as wisdom, sagacity, and efficiency<sup>143</sup>, but he was arrogant as well. He knew how brilliant he was, and he certainly let others know about it. He was a natural-born leader and looked forward to be announced as the heir of the Orion Empire, in case something would happen to his stepfather, Khan En.lil.

<sup>141</sup> This is my own translation from the little Orion language that I have learned, so I could be slightly off here. However, I think that in general, the translation is acceptable.

Queen Nin, to begin with, was very proud of Her firstborn son, and was eager to teach him everything She knew because after all, Prince Lucifer was supposed to inherit the throne from Khan En.lil one day. Even if the Khan would live for millions of years, and being the “crown prince” or Orion and “Mikael Second in Command” over the MIKH/MAKH army was not a bad thing either. The Heir of Orion could live a life of glamor if he wanted to, learn everything he needed, and become a brilliant Creator Goddess<sup>144</sup>. After all, he was being taught by the Goddess herself! The Queen’s hopes and wishes as his mother were always that Her sons and daughters would share compassion and empathy with other beings who needed assistance. In general, life in Orion is allegedly what we would call “laid back,” although after a while, each citizen figures out what he or she can do in order to work for the greater good of the community.

At first, Lucifer and his younger brother, Ninurta, went along quite well, and there was peace and harmony in the Orion Empire, and no one seriously objected to the laws and policies coming from Satania<sup>145</sup>, the Inner Sanction of the Orion Empire.

As Lucifer and Ninurta grew up, things changed, however. Prince Ninurta continued to be respectful of the Queen, his mother, and to his stepfather as well, and he was strict with applying and teaching the Ways of the Goddess (also called the Divine Feminine) to star races who were members of the Orion Empire. Lucifer, too, who was considered very wise and knowledgeable, liked to teach others what he knew, but contrary to his brother, he had a tendency to choose whom he wanted to educate. Only where he saw certain potential did he share his knowledge—the rest of the beings in the Empire he considered being too much “below” him and not worthy of his time. Lucifer later became disrespectful, and arrogant and started breaking the laws that had kept the Empire together for millions of years.

When Khan En.lil noticed what was happening, he consulted his consort and addressed his concern regarding letting Prince Lucifer inherit the Throne of

<sup>144</sup> Although Lucifer is a male, Orion males sometimes address themselves as females and can easily take on that role. To become a real Creator “God,” a being must first become a female. This is not true only in Orion but also is a natural process in the Multiverse. Hence, a real Creator is actually a “Creatrix” or a “Creator Goddess.”

<sup>145</sup> It is acceptable to call the Royal Inner Sanction of the Orion Empire, Satania—the same name that is mentioned in the Urantia Book.

Orion, also called the "AST" or sometimes, "AŠT/ASHT." Khan En.lil was afraid that if something would happen to him, in peace or in times of war, and Lucifer would take his place, he could become a liability to the Empire. Once inheriting the AST, it came with a lot of duties and responsibilities, and except in very urgent matters, he would have the right to make major decisions on behalf of the Empire.

The Queen sat quiet for a long time, and Her black, beautiful face expressed a lot of sadness as she stared out in space. After what appeared to be an eternity, She looked Her husband in the eyes and nodded, almost imperceptibly. "I have seen it, too," She said with a whisper. "My firstborn, in whom I have seen so much potential and whom I had such magnificent plans for, is showing no respect or interest in maintaining what we have built up with so much effort and compassion. He has become arrogant—almost aggressive—to those who are not of royal blood. He doesn't understand that everybody is equal in spirit. I need to talk to him."

She did talk with him. She gave him a lecture with much compassion and understanding, doing what She could to make Lucifer look at things from different angles, which included treating those who are not of his blood as equals.

If Lucifer took any of this to heart, he barely showed it. He didn't like to be lectured to or corrected, regardless of the manner in which it was done. His pride was such that he was his own counselor. After all, he was the Great Lucifer, son of the Divine Mother, and this apparently meant in his mind that he didn't even have to take advice from her or anybody else. The Queen acknowledged that it is acceptable to be one's own counselor, but beings, regardless where they come from, must be treated with respect. This, She said, is even more important when you are royal. As such, he needed to be a good example for others.

Lucifer was talked to many times and had many chances to correct himself, but he never did.

Eventually, the moment arrived when it was going to be officially announced who would be the heir of the AST. Such an announcement had never been done before because Khan En.lil was the first and only King of Orion since the beginning of the Empire, and Khan En.lil had shared the AST with the Queen. Therefore, it was a big event when the heirship was announced to the member stars of Orion. One may also assume that most beings would expect Lucifer to be announced as the heir because, after all, he was the eldest of the two brothers.<sup>146</sup>

Hence, the surprise must have been quite big when it was announced that Prince Ninurta was dubbed “Mikael, Second in Command of the MIKH/MAKH, and the heir of the AST.”

Whether Lucifer knew about this beforehand or not is unknown to me, but I know for a fact that the decision to let his younger brother take the throne from him made him completely furious. In great rage, he spoke his mind in front of his mother and father, and he said that because he was different from what they expected him to be, this was no reason to bypass him!

His parents told him that it was not because he was different but because he had showed so much disrespect for the laws and policies of Orion, and in spite of several conversations, neither had he shown remorse, nor any willingness to change his attitude. The result was that they had to put the Empire before the individual—a choice necessary to make—and his brother, Prince Ninurta, showed respect and understanding of why his parents had set up the vast Empire in this way. The result had been peace, in general (except for some rural conflicts, which could be considered normal in such a huge empire), and a population who lived in harmony and abundance. Why did anybody want to jeopardize that?

Lucifer showed no signs of understanding this reasoning and left Satania in a rage. His parents thought that he probably needed some time to think things over. They did not know about the plans that were slowly growing in Lucifer’s mind. He felt totally misunderstood and held back by his parents, and now he was punished for “being himself.” In no way was this acceptable to him.

Thus, the first serious thoughts of rebellion against his parents and brother were taking shape in Lucifer’s mind.

II. Preparing for Revenge

Instead of taking time off to think things over, and eventually come to his senses, Lucifer did quite the opposite. This was not the first conflict in Heaven—in a distant past, when the Universe was young, several wars were fought. No one, however, would ever imagine that Prince Lucifer would take to arms against his own Royal Family. Nevertheless, this was not the last time he would take his family by surprise, as we shall see as we proceed down the timelines.

<sup>146</sup> This doesn’t mean that Khan En.lil had plans to step down—this was merely a procedure the Royal Family decided to follow in order for the citizens of Orion to be aware of the heirship.

After withdrawing from Satania, Lucifer traveled to Arcturus, where many of Khan En.lil's old loyal soldiers were stationed. He knew how to be charming when necessary, and he knew how to be convincing when he needed to show that side of himself—something he needed a lot of for the Rebellion to be successful. He knew his parents well enough to understand when they were serious, and after the announcement that his brother, Prince Ninurta, had become the heir of the AST<sup>147</sup>, he knew with great certainty that they would not go back on their decision. He, Lucifer, the Bright Star of the Morning, had messed up!

The Prince of Orion was both furious and embarrassed. The throne was his birthright, as he saw it, mainly because he was the eldest, but also because his mother had spent all this time teaching him what She knew in order to prepare him for his bright future. He was still a prince, but he could never be anything more than that, and he would never be able to claim any throne anywhere in the Orion Empire—thus were the Orion laws.

Under these circumstances, Lucifer thought that he had nothing to lose. For him, it was all or nothing, and nothing was not an option. If he couldn't get the throne the legal way, he just had to take it by force and change the laws later.

<sup>147</sup> AST is an Orion term, and one of its meanings is "throne," but could also mean "star"—probably even "star constellation" (compare "asterism"). "The AST" would, therefore, correspond with the "Throne of Orion," which would, hypothetically, from what we've concluded, be located in the "Royal Star of Orion." At this point, I don't know which star this is, exactly, although I have my ideas. Maybe at a later time, when I am more convinced, I can reveal it.

Also, the infamous Luciferian "Ashtar Command" has taken its name from the AST/AŠT, mocking the Orion Empire.

Fig. 1. Lucifer recruiting his Angels in the Spica star system.

He had one big trump card that he was going to play immediately, before it was too late. Although the common citizens of the Orion Empire in general didn't exactly adore Lucifer because he was sitting on his high horse most of the time, he was deeply respected and loved by the so-called "DAKH Warriors," who were the soldiers that threatened Orion at the time just before the Peace Treaty, and they had once been Khan En.lil's army. Many of the DAKH Warriors from that time had now become the Queen's and the King's private Guardian forces, and they were very skilled and very loyal to the Orion Royalty. However, there were still officers in the DAKH who did not agree with their King of Kings, Khan En.lil, when he decided to join forces with the Orion Empire. They believed that their King was clever and strong enough, with the best army in Sector 9 of the Milky Way Galaxy, to take on Orion. However, since the King had even gone as far as to marry the Queen of Orion, they kept their contempt to themselves. Only when they were sure that the walls had no ears did they discuss the matter with each other, and perhaps, they were planning a revolution of their own, even if Lucifer wouldn't have come into the picture—we will probably never know.

Therefore, Lucifer was surprised how easy it was to convince the DAKH officers, stationed in Arcturus and in Spica, that something needed to be done with the current situation. The DAKH Warriors were missing something crucial, however, which was the reason they hadn't rebelled earlier—they needed a great strategist—a great leader—who could fulfill their plans. When they heard that Prince Lucifer had been refused the AST, they immediately called for a meeting and showed each other their contempt. Lucifer's embarrassment was good news for them because they might have their great strategist, trained by the Queen herself! Of course, Lucifer was an Aryan (from Orion), and normally this would have created a trust issue, but the DAKH officers believed that they could trust Lucifer because of his anger toward his own family, and if there was one Aryan they really liked, it was Lucifer.<sup>148</sup> They didn't mind seeing him as their Commander, and perhaps later, even as their King.

Encouraged by the response he received from some of the disloyal DAKH Warriors, Lucifer continued his silent recruitment and went into other star systems and asterisms to talk to their leaders. He told them a story that was only partially true and added to and subtracted from the real story, which made it sound as if the leaders he was talking to got some real inside information from the Prince, and from his twisted perspective, he gave them a version of the story that made it sound as if Lucifer had been very ill-treated, indeed. Many of these leaders, who perhaps should have known better, believed the charming and convincing prince. One of the asterisms where he got a lot of positive response was in Taurus, "the Bull," where the Pleiades are located. Taurus became one of his stronger allies. Lucifer did not manage to bring everybody to his side, so when I speak of asterisms, such as Taurus, I mean he got a good response there—although the majority most probably remained loyal to the Queen of the Stars. However, Lucifer was very careful about choosing whom he spoke with, and silence was sometimes not only a virtue but also a necessity for the Rebellion not to be turned down while in its cradle. Somehow, he managed to accomplish that, and rumors of his Rebellion never reached the AST until it was too late.

<sup>148</sup> In Level I and II, in particular, I stated that the AIF came from Sirius. Unfortunately, I didn't go back far enough in time or I would have discovered that they originated in Arcturus and the Constellation of Boötes, and some of them seem to have come from at least parts of Leo and from Spica as well. Canis Major and Minor and the star Sirius came into the picture at a later time, which we will bring up later in this paper.

While he was recruiting rebels, Lucifer managed to place spies within the Queen's Court as well. This wasn't as hard to do as it may seem and didn't necessarily have to do with a lack of security because Lucifer had recruited DAKH officers from Arcturus, Spica, and Virgo, and as members of the Orion Empire, they were free to travel anywhere they wanted to within the Empire. As DAKH officers, they also had access to the Royal Court. It happened regularly that officers from other asterisms came to the Court or were even summoned by the Queen. We can probably think of the Orion Court, in this case, as we do of Washington, DC, but without the corruption.

The rebellious Prince took his time and did the absolute best he could to prepare for the moment when it was time to strike. He realized that in order to be able to pull this off at all, the coup d'état had to happen from within, and it had to happen in high places for it to work. He knew that the best chances of success were if he could strike very quickly. That was the plan of Lucifer and his Bird Tribe.

It was as the "Bird Tribe," also called the "Neteru," that the rebels became known in Sector 9, and I will explain later in this paper why they were known under this name. Speaking of birds, one of the symbols of the Orion Empire is the Eagle, and later on, the rebels stole the symbol of the Eagle and used it as their own symbol. We can now see the Bald Eagle as a symbol for the United States of America—being Lord En.ki's sigil here on Earth. The American Indians, and many native tribes in other countries as well, dress themselves in feathers, which is an ancient worship of the Bird Tribe—the tribe of Lord En.ki. En.ki has dwelled in the Pleiades on and off over the eons, and that's where many Native Americans claim that they originate from. More about this soon.

III. There Was a War in Heaven

But this war in heaven was very terrible and very real. While displaying none of the barbarities so characteristic of physical warfare on the immature worlds, this conflict was far more deadly; material life is in jeopardy in material combat, but the war in heaven was fought in terms of life eternal.<sup>149</sup>

Cosmic Warfare is always fought in other dimensions, and these wars can be far more deadly than the wars we fight down on Earth. It is horrible enough when we see young soldiers being shot to pieces in another country—young men with dreams of a life with a family that is often waiting for them at home. The same thing applies to the Heavenly Wars but with one exception.

On Earth, we shoot our bodies to pieces, but the soul (the Fire and the Avatar) continues into an afterlife. In many of the Cosmic Wars, where the parties have advanced technology and the deadliest of weapons, the body the combatants are aiming at is not the physical 3-D body, which does not exist, but the Avatar itself! Their weapons can split the Avatar in pieces, so the Fire doesn't have anywhere to go—there is no light-body to cling to. The Fire/soul is, therefore, bound to float in space without direction as a victim to the galactic currents, which will take her wherever they “blow.” If not rescued and brought together, the Fire has no choice but to dissolve and become One with the Universe again—she loses her identity and merges with space and with “nothingness.” Even if such a seriously wounded soul is rescued by her own troops, it's a severe condition, and it takes time to create a new Avatar, and sometimes it may not even be possible. It's like when one of our soldiers dies on the operation table.

The Rebellion, which has been titled “The First War in Heaven<sup>150</sup>,” was devastating indeed. The Urantia Book speaks about it<sup>151</sup> and so does the Bible<sup>152</sup> as well as many other scriptures.

Lucifer's plans, however—or at least some of them—had leaked out before he struck, and Archangel Mikael Second in Command (Prince Ninurta) had been informed that his brother had plans to overthrow the Orion Court. He told his mother and his father, who took the news with a lot of sadness, but also with a realization that offering the heirship to the younger of the two brothers had been a very wise decision. Of course, regardless of who is trying to overthrow the sitting Court of Orion, he or she needs to be defeated and penalized. Therefore, Archangel Mikael First in Command and Second in Command gathered the MIKH/MAKH troops in silence and waited for Lucifer to attack, ready to strike back as soon as the rebel made any efforts.

Then the strike came. Lucifer's plan was brilliant, and he may have had more success had not some of his loyal officers realized that they had been mesmerized by this being and fallen into some kind of hypnotic trance. Some of them had been strong enough to break out of the mind control, and now they confronted the Crown Prince of Orion with the news. These brave beings risked their lives by telling about their own involvement in the coup plans, but they were pardoned because of their bravery and signed up to fight for the Courtship instead.

It says in the Urantia Book:

There were many noble and inspiring acts of devotion and loyalty which were performed by numerous personalities during the interim between the outbreak of hostilities and the arrival of the new system ruler and his staff. But the most thrilling of all these daring feats of devotion was the courageous conduct of Manotia, the second in command of the Satania headquarters' seraphim.<sup>153</sup>

Although the names of the characters here, as well as their titles, are those of the Urantia Book, they can be directly transformed into our own story. Although Prince Ninurta was not a seraphim, Manotia in the above quoted paragraph corresponds directly to Prince Ninurta, who showed his incorruptible devotion to his parents, the Court, and the survival of the Empire of Orion. He made a lot of courageous acts during the devastating war, and evidence of the ferocious battles could be witnessed in the Heavens as supernovae; areas of the Heavens suddenly being lit up, with planets destroyed and bounced out of orbit. Still, most devastating was the many brave soldiers who gave their eternal lives to the Empire—souls that will forever be remembered in Orion.

Fig. 2. War in Heaven. Prince Ninurta and his MIKH-MAKH fighting the rebels.

During the battles, Lucifer once again used his charm and his extraordinary ability to manipulate.

At the outbreak of rebellion on Jerusem the head of the seraphic hosts joined the Lucifer cause. This no doubt explains why such a large number of the fourth order, the system administrator seraphim, went astray. The seraphic leader was spiritually blinded by the brilliant personality of Lucifer; his charming ways fascinated the lower orders of celestial beings. They simply could not comprehend that it was possible for such a dazzling personality to go wrong.<sup>154</sup>

Many were those who temporarily, due to the turmoil of the war, got seduced by Lucifer and changed side, starting to fight for him instead of against him, thinking that this brilliant being couldn't be wrong. This made the war last longer than the Orion Court had anticipated, and unfortunately, it required more blood to be spilled. Although some of these traitors later regretted their acts of treason and asked for mercy, they were not pardoned by the Court. Too much damage had been done in their names.

Prince Ninurta said afterward:

"But my most exhilarating moment was the thrilling adventure connected with the Lucifer rebellion when, as second seraphic commander, I refused to participate in the projected insult to Michael; and the powerful rebels sought my destruction by means of the liaison forces they had arranged."<sup>155</sup>

Even he had been tested by Lucifer, who had tried to put his own brother under the trance of thinking ill thoughts about Mikael First in Command, i.e. Khan En.lil, but Prince Ninurta had had no problems seeing through his brother's manipulative intentions.

Fig. 3. The Fall of Lucifer

In the outbreak of the war, the arch rebels managed to take parts of Arcturus, Spica, and Leo as their stronghold, and although they eventually lost the war, these constellations are still mainly under the rebels' command. Aldebaran in Taurus was also conquered, and today is Lucifer's headquarters, according to some.

The casualties of Lucifer's Rebellion in Satania, Orion, is said to have been 681,227 soldiers, according to one source<sup>156</sup>. That's more than half a million beings, belonging to different star races on both sides of the war. Eventually, however, in the most ferocious battle, Prince Ninurta managed to throw Lucifer and his angels out of Orion, and the gates to the Inner Sanction of the KHAA were now closed for Lucifer and any of the Fallen Angels who escaped with him. According to the legend, Prince Ninurta, as Archangel Mikael, in his fight with Lucifer, struck the "Stone of Exile," the "Lapis Exilis<sup>157</sup>," which was Lucifer's "crown jewel," from his crown, whence it fell into the abyss.<sup>158</sup>

Fig. 5. Archangel Mikael.<sup>159</sup>

Why Aldebaran, some may ask? What made Aldebaran in the Pleiades so precious to Lucifer? The truth is that he choose that star as a retreat for a good reason. Aldebaran lies right between Aries and Orion, making a trail of stars. By taking Aldebaran as his stronghold, he created a “congestion” in this trail. From Orion, through Aldebaran in Taurus, and to Aries was a trail of stars that was under Prince Ninurta’s control, assigned to him by his parents. In order to create a disruption—a congestion—Prince Lucifer decided to take over Aldebaran as a last act of revenge in The First War in Heaven. By creating this blockage in the previously clean flow of energies between the suns, it was like switching off a hub in an electric current between two computer devices. There is no longer a free flow of energy. Also, being in charge of Aldebaran, and basically the rest of the Constellation of Taurus, Lucifer now had many star races who lived there under his command. What did he do with them? Would it be best to kill them or to recruit them? Should he, perhaps, use them as slaves that he could send elsewhere? Maybe even to Earth in the future? There were a lot of possibilities, and he considered them all.

---

Ever since Lucifer took ownership of Aldebaran, also known as Alpha Tauri, there has been another ongoing war with Orion with Aries on one side and Taurus the Bull on the other—a war that's still ongoing. As the Pleiadians, channeled by Barbara Marciniak said, and I paraphrase: "We have had our confrontations with Orion."<sup>160</sup>

With the arrival of Lanaforge the archrebels were dethroned and shorn of all governing powers, though they were permitted freely to go about Jerusem, the morontia spheres, and even to the individual inhabited worlds. They continued their deceptive and seductive efforts to confuse and mislead the minds of men and angels. But as concerned their work on the administrative mount of Jerusem, "their place was found no more."<sup>161</sup>

Although Lucifer was now gone, and the First War in Heaven was over, peace was still not established in the Heavens. Battles have been rarer since those days, but there is an ever ongoing battle between Lucifer and the Orion Empire. Some of our alternative historians and researchers see it as a Battle Between Two Brothers—En.ki and "En.lil" (Ninurta), but it's so much bigger than that. It's about who is going to have control over the Orion Empire—it's the story of jealousy and revenge. This battle was at one time brought down to us here on Earth, but that is something for later. Then we will learn what really happened here on our planet in prehistoric times and in the times that followed.

However, let's first consider the consequences from the Rebellion. Some of these consequences are directly related to what later happened here on Earth. Once again, as we shall see, the slogan, "as above, so below" is very appropriate.

IV. The Soul Prisoners of the Dark Star

The rebels who managed to escape after the war either went together with Lucifer or fled to the constellation of Draconis where they settled down in the Thuban system, built a stronghold, and became known as the Alpha Draconians.

However, not all of Lucifer's Fallen Angels escaped when Lucifer was cast out of Heaven—there were a lot of prisoners of war. Because this had been a civil war—the first of its kind—the Orion Court had to decide what to do with the rebels who had helped kill and torture so many Orion troops. Previously, the Empire had been faced with enemies from outside the realms of Orion, and laws were set to handle such situations, but a rebellion in the midst of their own Empire was something they had hardly conceived of. Who wanted to rebel against their own people—especially when they were treated very well by the Court of Satania? Naïve thinking, perhaps, but we must remember that this happened long ago, in our terms, and civil wars were unheard of in Orion.

The lot fell on Sirius C, the “Dark Star.”

Before we discuss what happened, let us understand the entire Sirius system. Most people who know some astronomy are aware that Sirius is at least a double-star system, with a big, white primary star of spectral class A—emitting much more energy than our own Sun. This primary star is called “Sirius A.” This star is orbited by a much smaller white dwarf star, which is called “Sirius B.”

Sirius A is mainly populated by Lucifer’s hybrids, who are the children of Lucifer and Isis (Isis being connected with Sirius), where the most prominent offspring from that connection is Marduk RA, who later on populated Alpha Draconis with his own people.

Sirius B, the small white dwarf star, is populated by the offspring of Marduk.

Sirius C is, in a manner, linked to Sirius A, as we shall see, via Lucifer’s Fallen Angels—his Neteru Bird Tribe (Neteru meaning “The Gods of the Black Lands<sup>162</sup>,” where Black Lands pertains to lands in the KHAA), who are the fallen aquatic Bird tribe who rebelled against Khan En.lil and Lady Ninhursag, the Queen of the Stars.

Sirius C is a Dark Star, which refers to “Dark Energy,” and is located in the KHAA. This is the star around which Khan En.lil and Queen Nin placed the prisoners of war who had been captured during the First Rebellion, and especially at the end of it, when they tried to flee but were surrounded and caught in their flight. The Bird Tribe was of the “Guardian Race,” which originated in Arcturus. Many of them had once been proud DAKH warriors but were now stripped of all their titles.

Sirius D is the last in line of the stars in the Sirius star system. This is a star never heard of in mainstream science, but we can prove that it’s there because we look at it almost every day—at least when the skies are clear. Sirius D is nothing else but our own Sun, which by some is said to belong to the Sirius star system. I mentioned this in passing earlier on, but now we’re going to take this hypothesis a little bit further.

I mentioned that our own Sun, which we sometimes call “Sol,” works like a hub in a “trail of stars” (where have we heard that before? Oh yes, when Lucifer settled in Aldebaran, he blocked the trail of stars, which was so important for the Orions). In the relationship between Sirius and Sol, Sirius A is the bright star that transmits an enormous amount of energy to Sol, which in turn sends that energy further to warm up the Inner Planets, i.e. Mercury, Venus, Earth, and Mars, respectively. The Outer Planets are warmed up as well to a certain degree but are not necessarily in dire need of sunlight. By using Sol as a hub, the AIF can also decide how much energy they want to run from Sirius A to Sol and from Sol to Earth. This determines ice ages and global warming, etc. By using the energy from the Sun, being transmitted from Sirius A, they have the power over life and death on our planet.

IV.I. The Nommo, the Aquatic Bird Tribe

Many people are connecting the aquatic race, the “Nommo,” with Sirius. I would say that this is correct. Nommo is just another name for the Neteru Bird tribe that rebelled against the Orion Empire, and most of them are now imprisoned around the Dark Star, Sirius C, together with other star races that rebelled. I am aware of that this may come as a shock to some people, who thought the Nommos are a friendly race—especially after have read Robert Temple’s, “The Sirius Mystery”<sup>163 164</sup>, where they are the Dogon race, which the Dogon tribe in Africa connected with Sirius B in the earlier parts of the 20th Century, although they allegedly had never heard of Sirius B from any source outside the tribe.<sup>165</sup> These Nommos allegedly came to the village of this African tribe, traveling in “sky ships.” I would say that there is definitely truth to this allegation, and Robert Temple makes a good case, for the most part. Although, none of this being Temple’s fault, the Dogon tribes got it slightly wrong, as the Nommos actually come from Sirius C, and not Sirius B. In fact, some of the Dogon tribe members seem to have understood that they came from a Dark Star, as showed in this reference:

...for some it is an invisible star that should rise to announce the sign...<sup>166</sup>

Although there is some controversy amongst scientists whether Sirius C exists or not, there is actual evidence that it does. Wikipedia states:

This alludes to reports that the Dogon knew of another star in the Sirius system, Emme Ya, or a star "larger than Sirius B but lighter and dim in magnitude." In 1995, gravitational studies indeed showed the possible presence of a brown dwarf star orbiting around Sirius (a Sirius-C) with a six-year orbital period. A more recent study using advanced infrared imaging concluded that the probability of the existence of a triple star system for Sirius is "now low" but could not be ruled out because the region within 5 AU of Sirius A had not been covered.<sup>167 168</sup>

So, in 1995, a possible presence of a third star in the Sirius system was indicated. Because some of the Dogon tribe had mentioned this, too, the importance of such a find was pointed out by Robert Temple.

If a Sirius-C is ever discovered and found to be a red dwarf, I will conclude that the Dogon information has been fully validated.<sup>169</sup>

The "Nommos" are also listed in Wikipedia, and the general description of this race is as follows:

The Nommo are ancestral spirits (sometimes referred to as deities) worshipped by the Dogon tribe of Mali. The word Nommos is derived from a Dogon word meaning "to make one drink." The Nommos are usually described as amphibious, hermaphroditic, fish-like creatures. Folk art depictions of the Nommos show creatures with humanoid upper torsos, legs/feet, and a fish-like lower torso and tail. The Nommos are also referred to as "Masters of the Water", "the Monitors", and "the Teachers". Nommo can be a proper name of an individual, or can refer to the group of spirits as a whole. For purposes of this article "Nommo" refers to a specific individual and "Nommos" is used to reference the group of beings.<sup>170</sup>

Therefore, there is certainly indications from different sources that the Nommos, i.e. the aquatic Neteru Bird tribe, is an amphibian species. If we take the above quote seriously, taking into consideration how the Nommos are depicted, can they also be a reference to the mermaids, whom sailors have claimed to have seen on their voyages across the seven seas?

In the hypothesis I am presenting here, many of the beings living in the Sirius system are Lucifer's offspring and so are the Pleiadians. Lucifer, when he went to the Pleiades, created a new hybrid race there, but later also brought some of the Sirian hybrids to the Pleiades. This must be the reason why Barbara Marciniak's Pleiadians recently said on a CD that they had worked together with En.ki in person, at least since the beginning of the nano-second. Then, in extension, Lucifer's parents are the "Aku," which are "The Ancient Ones"—the Guardian Race, the Bird tribe. However, the "Ancient Ones" are not the same Bird tribe as the ones that rebelled, and one of the symbols of the Ancient Ones, as mentioned earlier, is the Eagle.

Fig. 6. The Nommos, here visiting the Dogon tribe, presenting themselves as aquatic beings.

In Level II, I described the Ancient Ones as a Reptilian Race, black-skinned, and looking like something between a Reptilian and a humanoid. This was correct, but most of the races have evolved since the beginning of time in this Universe, and something we learned in school was that the birds come from the dinosaurs. I would say that this can be applied when we're talking about the Ancient Ones, as well. I am not saying that they look like eagles, but they are affiliated in some ways.

Fig 7 and 8. Two Nommo archetypes.

Why are the Nommos called aquatic? Aren't they a Bird tribe? In fact, they are both, and it's not as strange as it may sound. Aqua means "water," of course, but water in a cosmic sense can mean both sweet water, salt water, ocean, and "Cosmic Ocean," i.e. "space," or "void." As an allegory, we could say that they are aquatic because of the punishment they got (more about that in the next subsection), where they are floating around in space, but they are also aquatic in their "physical" outlook (see fig 7. and fig 8. These pictures may not give justice to how they actually look, but they will give the readers an idea of what I mean). There is hardly any doubt that both Lucifer and many of those who followed him were amphibian creatures, as presented on this excellent website: <http://www.crystalinks.com/amphibiousgods.html>.

IV.II. The Imprisonment of the Luciferian Rebels

Back in Orion, Queen Nin decided to use the Dark Star as a prison for the traitors. She talked to Her consort, Khan En.lil, and Her son, Prince Ninurta, and they all agreed that the crime the rebels had committed was High Treason. Queen Nin voted for a penalty, where criminals are stuck within an electronic prison—a "grid," or a "veil" of sorts, from which they cannot escape. In addition, they were "ripped off their Fire." From what I understand, this is an Orion term for depriving someone of his or her rights to ever become a Creator Goddess, but also for making the Avatar "useless," having as an effect that the being can't move around freely in space and time—the Avatar is somehow "locked," so the Fire can't navigate it. The Queen also decided that Khan En.lil and Her son, Prince Ninurta, should execute the verdict for the Nommos.

Most of the Nommos (and other beings that rebelled together with them) are still prisoners of war today, trapped in the electronic prison. Lucifer, however, has made several attempts to free his former legion, and thought of many brilliant ideas to do so. Many of the Nommos were extremely competent DAKH warriors and loyal officers in Lucifer's legion, and he missed their competence and their loyalty. He needed their intelligence, their strength, their ruthlessness, and their willingness to go as far as it was needed in order to "get the job done." This included genocide and destruction of entire star races. As we shall see, Lucifer actually managed to free a few of his men, and this is part of the reason why I am saying that the Nommos came from Sirius C to Earth, where they allegedly met with the Dogon tribe. However, there is more to the story — much more!

Before the Nommos, and the rest of the prisoners of war, were ripped off their Fire as a part of their verdict, they were forced to hard labor, which in this case was mining. Sirius is said to have many planets with short lifespans, which had to be mined. As we will see later, mining is a big part of business and trade in the Universe, and in this case, the mining that the prisoners had to do can be compared to when we do community service. Thus, it's easy to see where our own human habits and programs originate from.

In mythology, this "dungeon," where the "wicked" were placed, sounds similar to that of "Tartarus,"<sup>171</sup> which the Greeks placed in our own solar system. Tartarus was considered being a part of the "Underworld," located below Uranus, Gaia, and the Sea<sup>172</sup>. Pontus, who was Gaia's son — as usual, "born without coupling," as the Greek poet Hesiod said<sup>173</sup>—was partly in charge of Gaia's Tartarus, located under the ocean. As the readers may recall, any male birthed by an Orion female comes from an unfertilized egg.<sup>174</sup> Interestingly enough, Hesiod hints at this as well. The "Earthly Tartarus" was basically a prison in which the Olympians put the Titans, whom they had captured alive after the Titan War. Pontus sounds eerily similar to Prince Lucifer, Gaia's/the Goddess' son.

In the Sirius system, Tartarus can be translated to "The Hounds of Hell,"<sup>175</sup> and according to Robert Temple in his "The Sirius Mystery,"<sup>176</sup> the "Hounds of Hell" can also be seen as the term for the whole Sirius system. The dramatization of the "Sirius Incident" was later told in Norse mythology, where the Goddess

Hel, or Hela, was the “Goddess of Death,”<sup>177</sup> with her hounds guarding the domain. The “hounds” in this sense represent the dragon<sup>178</sup>, according to the myth, and the Great Dragon is the Mother Goddess Herself, the “Mother of Creation.” What it actually pertains to is the prison that was instigated by the Mother Goddess—the Dragon, who is watching over the electronic prison in the Sirius system.

Fig.9. The Goddess Hel with one of her hounds, all symbolically speaking.

It seems that when we compare the mythological Tartarus, where Lucifer placed the Titans, with the Sirius counterpart, he copied what the Orions had done to some of his own DAKH legion in the Sirian Dark Star when he imprisoned the Titans. If so, it would hardly be surprising because in his continuous search for revenge, he had always done his best to turn the Orion system around, in order to give his old family a “taste of their own medicine,” as it were.

Returning to the Sirian prisoners, how is it possible to release them if they are stuck inside an electronic fence or a grid? The only way would be to have them released in their spirit form and have them aim for us humans—they want our bodies, and Lucifer wants his legion for new assignments. Hence, we see a common agenda with a certain set outcome—they are coming for us!

V. The Sirian-Arcturian Alliance

Where does the Sirian wolfen-reptilian race we were discussing in Level II, which evolved in a similar frequency band as we humans, come into this picture? Well, they very much exist, and they did evolve, as described, on one of the planets in the Sirius system. They are very much part of this agenda.

From what we know now, if we exclude Sol, Sirius has three active stars (Sirius A, B, and C), and there has been a lot of commotion in this triple star system since the gods first visited it—similar to creating a lot of commotion here on Earth. When Lucifer and his DAKH warriors enter a solar system and find that there is an evolving race already living there—either in the star itself or on one of her planets, they apply the same old routines. They either start a war against them and destroy them utterly, or they create slaves and/or soldiers out of them through manipulation, which includes giving them a lot of technology, like they did here. On Earth, this started the “Industrial Revolution,” which led to our species coming out of the Dark Ages and beginning to evolve much faster.

The Wolfen-Reptilians, whom I from hereon will call the Nibiruans, did not have the same interference in their evolution as we did, except in their later stage. The planet they evolved on was quite a harsh environment, and after they went from androgyny to dual sexes, the males soon took over the show. They were the stronger ones and, therefore, became the hunters and the dominant sex. Their planet once orbited the Dark Star (Sirius C), which at that point was of a similar size, magnitude, and spectral class as Sirius A, i.e. a White Giant.

The first encounter the Nibiruans had with extraterrestrials was when the Arcturians led by the king we now know as Khan En.lil and his warrior race approached them. The Khan used the same manipulative technique as has been used here on Earth in order to get a foot in the door—he offered technology. The technology the Nibiruans were foremost interested in was of course weaponry—they, too, being a hunter and a warrior race. Moreover, the Arcturians offered them a ticket to travel to the stars! However, the Nibiruans were not star beings—they were planet-bound, so they couldn’t nanotravel unless they decided to give up their bodies, which they were not ready to do—they were not spiritual beings, so their bodies were precious to them. Their wolfen-reptilian form was beautiful in their eyes. What remained for them to do in order to be able to travel to other star systems was to transfer their Fire into a more robust body that could function in the harsh space conditions, so the Arcturians taught them how to create the Gray biomechanical body template. Once this was done, the soul transfer between the wolfen-reptilian body and the Gray body was completed with help from advanced technology, which sucked the soul out of the original body and attached it to the Gray equivalent. At the same time, the Nibiruans had learned to build spaceships that could travel through stargates, i.e. Einstein-Rosen bridges.

In exchange for being given all this technology, the Nibiruans signed a contract with the Arcturians—they became soldiers in the Arcturian army.

For thousands of years, the Arcturians and the Nibiruans rubbed shoulders, conquering space. Both being ferocious warrior races, they loved what they were doing and, therefore, went along fairly well.

One day they knocked on the door to the Orion Empire, and that was the first serious halt in their conquest!

The rest of the story was pretty much told in Level II. A war between the Sirian-Arcturian alliance and the Orions took place, which ended with the famous Peace Treaty, when Khan En.lil married the Orion Queen. The Sirian-Arcturian DAKH warriors became the special Guardians of the Queen and Satania, the Inner Sanctuary of the Orion Empire.

LPG-C, and others, such as Charles Hall, a retired employee at the Nellis Air force Base in Nevada, who had several encounters with an alien race called the “Tall Whites<sup>179</sup>,” say that the Tall Whites may have been the creators of the Nibiruans.<sup>180</sup> These Tall Whites were offered their own area in the Nevada desert, which they are still using as a base today in exchange for technology. This alien species claims to originate in the Arcturus star system.

I don't think they are the creators of the Wolfen-Reptilians but may very well be the descendants of Khan En.lil's Arcturians, originating from the rebel group of DAKH warriors who rebelled against the Khan and the Queen during Lucifer's Rebellion. They are now most possibly working for En.ki. and with the U.S. Government. I would also suggest that these white, luminous bodies are shapeshifted into this form, and what we see are their Avatars/light-bodies.

As we know, some DAKH warriors (the Arcturian ones in particular) were not happy with the Peace Treaty and thought that their King of Kings had been “selling out.” Therefore, they had no problems signing up with Lucifer, as discussed in the beginning of this paper. Many of these rebels are now stuck in the Dark Star prison, but a few who escaped, apparently, came to Earth eventually, creating one of their bases outside Nellis Air Force Base with the U.S. Government’s blessings. These beings have been seen together with U.S. military on the air force base and in Las Vegas, where late at night they go into the casinos and play—something they apparently love. According to Charles Hall, they are always surrounded by human bodyguards when they are in town, and they are mostly dressed like humans, but wearing hoods and sunglasses—even around the midnight hours. In this disguise, they are apparently looking very humanlike, but their bodyguards, although trying to be discreet, are embarrassingly obvious.

Fig. 10. A Tall White male with one of their children, whom they are very protective of. They are known to have killed humans, who were approaching their kids or trying to touch them, in an instance. They are described as quite luminous beings.

During Lucifer’s Rebellion, many battles were fought, as we know, and quite a few took place in Sirius. Dr. Bordon of the former LPG-C told me that at one time, Sirius C went nova, and Nibiru was catapulted out of orbit and into deep space and much later was sucked into our own solar system by Neptune’s gravity. Since then, he said, we have had Nibiru as part of our solar system, visiting us approximately every 3,600 years, as Sitchin suggests. This, I believe, is only partly true, and I'll explain why.

The following is what I believe happened. When battles between Lucifer and Orion were fought in Sirius, Sirius C was blown up by nuclear weapons, sitting in the crossfire between the two battling forces and became a nova and later a White Dwarf. Part of that White Dwarf exists in the KHAA and is, therefore, called the Dark Star. Nibiru was catapulted out in deep space, just like Dr. Bordon explained to me more than three years ago, with the Wolfen-Reptilians still on the planet. Many of them were saved by Lucifer—however, Lucifer managed to get them to flee underground before their atmosphere was destroyed. An artificial atmosphere underground was constructed.

Later on, while still traveling with great velocity through deep space, Nibiru was visited by Lucifer and his cohorts. He promised to save them and their planet if the Nibiruans started working for him. They didn't see any other choice. Without help, their species would eventually die in space when they were depleted of their artificial atmosphere.

Lucifer's scientists then started using gold in order to slowly be able to reestablish the original atmosphere, also drawing from the heat inside the planet, creating a sort of greenhouse effect, which eventually made the planet quite habitable, even without a sun.

Furthermore, with time, Lucifer and his team hollowed out Nibiru and created a spaceship out of the former planet. Since then, the Nibiruans have been able to travel through space at will, navigating the celestial body through space and time, again using Einstein-Rosen bridges to travel long distances. Nibiru has ever since been used so that the Wolfen-Reptilian race can visit Earth and our solar system when they have business this way.

Although they keep their own wolfen-reptilian body type while on Nibiru, they use the Gray biomechanical spacesuit whenever they leave their planet. Working close with Prince Ea, we often see them here on Earth, sometimes accompanied by a "human," which may not be a human but one of Ea's minions in a human body or a member of the AIF, shapeshifting into human form.

This, I believe, is a much more credible version of the Nibiru story, and it explains pretty well what we previously were uncertain about regarding this planet. Thus, I do not believe that it's on a 3,600-year orbit around the Sun, but instead can travel here whenever it's necessary, like any spaceship could.

VI. Who Was the Consort who Helped En.ki Create Homo Sapiens?

In Sitchin's work, but also in many other people's research, En.ki, the self-proclaimed Lord of Earth, created mankind together with another highly trained scientist and geneticist, Ninhursag, who was also En.ki's half-sister, and later became his consort.

However, in these papers, we have thoroughly proven that Ninhursag is just another title for Mother Goddess, and we know that En.ki did not work together with his mother to create mankind, nor was She his lover. That would be an absurd thought after all we know now. There is overwhelming evidence that Mother Goddess created womankind, but not mankind, and womankind was created long before mankind (Homo sapiens). There is no doubt that this is the case, and the evidence has been shown in many places throughout these levels of learning—from Level II and on. In fact, En.ki destroyed his mother's project, which involved the primordial androgynous womankind, the Namlú'u. So, why would Mother Goddess, under the title Ninhursag, want to create a watered-down version of Her own creation, together with Her rebellious son? That makes no sense, of course. With this in mind, we can also exclude that She was his lover.

However, it still definitely seems as if En.ki was creating mankind together with a female scientist, but who was she, and where did she come from?

In the mythological/historical records, the names Ninhursag and Isis/Ishtar/Inanna have been confused with each other—another intentional alteration of records from the En.ki/Marduk camp. Indeed, as we shall see, if we interchange the name Ninhursag with Isis, we get a much truer story. Isis was, as I hinted at already in Level I, in the paper, "Genesis, or the Genes of Isis?:" the female geneticist who helped En.ki create the watered-down version of us humans. Isis is also generally associated with Sirius.<sup>181</sup>

In a later paper, I will tell the whole, quite emotional story about Isis and what really happened to her. Many of us are familiar with the "Isis, Osiris, and Horus story," which some say is just an earlier version of the "Jesus story," but like with so much else we are discussing concerning ancient history, there is always more to these stories. In the Isis story that I'm going to tell in the later paper, we will again see how one deity has been confused with several different deities, when they are actually one and the same.

The result is (and the reason why I bring this up now) that this whole genetic experiment that has been credited to En.ki is, indeed, an Orion-Sirian conspiracy, and Homo sapiens do have both Orion and Sirian genes (along with DNA from other species as well).

I have been telling curious readers, who have been waiting for this level of learning to be released, that Level IV will bring the other three levels together. Indeed they will!

VII. The Ongoing Rebellion

The Universe we live in is huge, and we humans can only perceive approximately 4% of it, thinking that is a lot. Only in our own galaxy, there may be perhaps millions—perhaps billions—of star races and quite a few planetary based races, although that’s more uncommon. These papers will, directly and indirectly, be about Lucifer’s Rebellion, from beginning to the end, now told in more details as my research has progressed.

I just want to put all this in perspective. Because the Rebellion happened in Orion, which is the Goddess’ important domain, it has had a great impact on the rest of the galaxy, and in fact, many other parts of the Universe. Hence, I’ve found it crucial to tell this story with as many details as I can because these “Anunnaki” are the beings who are, and always have been, influencing us the most throughout history.

I see a lot of people trying to figure out who all the different star races and planetary races are, and they spend a lot of effort on it. What needs to be understood is that most of these different species we hear so much about here on Earth are part of the same plot—they are all the Anunnaki in the real sense of the term. It doesn’t matter if they come from Alpha Draconis, Sirius, Orion, Lyra, Zeta Reticuli, the Pleiades, Arcturus, Antares, or most other star systems I can think of from the top of my head—they are all part of the story I am presenting in my papers. None of the ones I mentioned above is separate in the sense that they are unrelated to Lucifer’s Rebellion, which is the reason for the Great Cosmic Wars. We need to understand this. Lucifer and his cohorts, who come from many different star systems, think they own this planet and have thought so ever since they sat their rebellious feet here. Some other star races, which have remained “neutral” in the wars, have also been here on Earth in the past and established some ancient civilizations, but they are rare. Normally, Lucifer doesn’t let anybody into this solar system who is not part of his team—not since he took over the stargate of Saturn and deemed control over our solar system, which we shall talk more about in the next paper. Recently, however, there have been holes in the Grid, and Lucifer’s stronghold has weakened in other places, too, which has led to other, from the AIF's point of view, unwelcomed visitors entering our star system against their will.

The part of the Universe where we live is of course very small, and it's located on the fringes of the Milky Way Galaxy. Our section of the Galaxy is often referred to as Sector 9, and the star beings people are discussing on the Internet and in books are all located in Sector 9, including those in the Constellation of Orion (which is a separate conception from that of the Orion Empire, which stretches out over several universes and includes star systems in many distant galaxies as well).

Someone suggested that we must consider the Galaxy as a whole and study the different civilizations that may dwell here, not only the AIF (Alien Invader Force). That sounds like a good idea, initially, but for the moment, I need to pass that bucket over to somebody else because for me it's secondary. First, we need to address the problems we have "at home" and find a so[u]lution for those, and then we can concentrate more firmly on races further out than Sector 9, if we so wish—civilizations totally unknown to us today. Keep in mind, however, that distance in space is not an obstacle when advanced beings can nanotravel. Hence, because a civilization may exist 80,000 light-years from here, it doesn't mean that it is not taking sides in Lucifer's Rebellion. There are very few advanced star races in our universe that are not familiar with his rebellion. We humans, on the other hand, have been isolated here, recycled back into a closed system over and over, so for us, making contact with beings 80,000 light-years away may seem pretty exciting and, perhaps, beneficial for our species in one way or another, but again, for me, it's not a big deal. All this will come in its natural sequence, as soon as we are free from manipulation and imprisonment. At that time, we are also free to explore the Universe and the Multiverse as we wish. However, before that is happening, I see no real gain in trying to find star races not included in the war—there is very little they can do for us (and we for them) until we have awakened to the fact that we are being manipulated and trapped, and most important of all—until we are willing to do something about it as a mass consciousness! Before then, the civilizations out there, which we have in mind when we're talking about huge galactic distances, would see no benefit in creating a relationship with a species who doesn't even know who they are, where they come from, and more importantly—don't even know they are in prison. It's like if you and I would spend our time trying to make business deals with inmates at Folsom Prison or San Quentin. At least, those inmates know that they are in prison.

Lucifer's Rebellion is ongoing, it's devastating, and it's far from over—it won't be over until Lucifer is caught and put to justice, together with all the star beings and star races who have sided with him. Not until then is the war really over. Even if we humans would free ourselves totally from the negative influences our connection with the Rebels have created, the war would not be over—it would only be another battle won—although, it's an important one. Not only for humans is it important but also for the rest of the Universe. It would free up a lot of stuck energy and create a huge relief amongst star beings and star races everywhere.

PAPER #6: THE SIRIAN WAR AND THE GOLDEN AGE

I. Archangel Mikael and the Sirian War

Lucifer had multiple problems. He was now directing a guerilla war in the Canis Major asterism, where the Sirius star system was located, in fruitless attempts to free his minions from the “abyss” around the Dark Star in the KHAA. Although he was thrown out of “Heaven,” he still had limited access to the KHAA. What he couldn’t access anymore was the higher dimensions, where Satania and the Orion Court were located—“the key to the Dragon’s Gate” was no longer in his possession, and he needed it back to be able to defeat his mother and his father. This, however, had to be a later problem—first he needed his Generals and Admirals back, who were now imprisoned beneath the Grid that was set up by Khan En.lil and Prince Ninurta.

For some time, Lucifer had studied another evolving race, living on a planet orbiting Sirius A. He knew since before that his mother had spent a lot of time in Sirius in the past, creating a few planet-bound species there—perhaps, so that they later on could meet each other and share cultural traits. This species was still purely androgynous, which suited Lucifer well—that was exactly what he was looking for. The Nibiruan had already made a pact with his stepfather, so it would be too dangerous to involve them in his plan—at least at this time.

Lucifer had his ways of manipulating beings, so this young race should be a piece of cake. They were not yet a conquering species, but were much into technology.

After the usual time to slowly introduce himself to a race which had never seen an “alien” before, he managed to gather the main City Councils all over this forest and mountain world into a Great Meeting where he and the team of DAKH, who followed Lucifer to the meeting, promised to come up with some great news for everybody on the planet.

Lucifer offered to help this species evolve much faster, so they eventually could be living a more harmonious, safer, and happier life. He also promised to give them technology in order to be able to do so. The only thing Lucifer and his men wanted in return was for this evolving race to help him free the Dark Star prisoners, who he said had been put there illegally by a vicious star race from far away. Moreover, he told them that this vicious race had now moved on to another galaxy and left Lucifer's friends captured around their neighbor star. There was no need to be afraid because it was highly unlikely that this vicious species would come back. This was a lie, but he figured that the end justified the means.

After some dispute, which took longer than one single meeting, the Queens decided to make this agreement with the odd beings from the skies. After all, their leader, calling himself the Morning Star, seemed very honest and friendly.

Lucifer smiled to himself. This had gone far beyond his anticipations, and soon enough, he was showing off his technology in order to impress the Queens. The Council was indeed pretty impressed and found most of what was shown to them very helpful—Lucifer was holding back, however, because he had no intention to give these beings any of his more advanced technology.

With his great knowledge in the sciences, Lucifer had also figured out how to genetically manipulate and alter an existing race with technology. Although his mother had taught him a lot about the sciences, she never taught him to engineer, alter, and manipulate a species with the help of technology. Lucifer is famous on Earth, to the level of glorification when it comes to being a genetic engineer. Little do we humans understand that being a genetic engineer is not a glorious thing—it's just an alteration of something that is sacred, such as seeding a star race and letting them evolve on their own merit. What then will become of them is entirely up to the evolving race—that's what a Free Will Universe is all about. The Mother Goddess wants diversion in the sense that she embraces differences. This is how she learns more about herself. However, she does not support a break in the Law of Free Will and Non-Interference.

Lucifer was well aware of this and the extra trouble he may be subjected to if he broke these laws, so he tried to proceed as "gently" as possible. The only break of the laws was to contact the race at all when it was not evolved enough to travel in space or to have a connection with star beings. Other than that, the Sirian Queens agreed to his suggestions, which were a manipulative way of bypassing some serious "paragraphs" in these Universal Laws. All and all, he wanted to take revenge and was going to do so by genetically manipulating this evolving race, but not without their consent, of course!

Using more of his smooth talk and hypnotic voice, he also managed to convince this Sirius A planet-bound race how important it is to have two genders. Projecting films and pictures on screens, he showed them what happens with a race of only females, versus a race with both females and males. Nowhere in his lectures did he mention that this was a part of the natural evolution of species, but instead, he taught them that their particular race had a mutated gene that stopped them from evolving in that direction. All they needed was a little help on the way. Nor did he tell them about his agenda, which was to create a strong, male warrior race for his army. Eventually, he managed to convince the Council.

When Lucifer had his agreement, he started his genetic engineering project, where he added his own genes and mixed them together with the native Sirian DNA. This was also the time when Lucifer teamed up with Isis, who is Ninurta's daughter and was born in the Sirius system when the Mother Goddess was seeding Sirius. We will be discussing Isis in more detail later. Hence, this species of hybrids, whom Lucifer and Isis created, are thus their offspring.

Creating two genders so that the species could reproduce sexually was a much faster process than to let them reproduce through parthenogenesis, and besides, Lucifer wanted males!

The Sirians showed to be a relatively easy species to genetically manipulate, and after a few generations of hybrids, Lucifer had a much more intelligent and obedient, race. Therefore, it didn't take long until Lucifer was ready to take on the task of releasing his minions at Sirius C.

As we know, a planetary race like the Sirians and Homo sapiens sapiens can't use their physical bodies to travel in space, but that was never Lucifer's intention, either. What he wanted was a race, evolved enough so that the females could use their Fire to break through the Grid and reach the trapped Bird Tribe on the other side. Once this was done, he would, unbeknownst to the Sirian females, let his minions possess the females who did the ritual. This way, he was hoping that he could actually free his lost legion. What would then happen to the souls who originally possessed the female Sirian bodies? A qualified presumption would be that the freed prisoners would kick them out. Another possible option would perhaps be to exchange the Sirian soul with that of the Nommo by using tractor and retractor beams. One way or the other, the original Sirian soul needed to be evacuated from her body. It was an evil plan, but also the only plan Lucifer saw could actually work.

Lucifer and groups of ignorant Sirian females in ritualistic manners, made initial attempts to "punch holes" in the Grid, but the energy "bounced off," like stones hitting a metallic shield. Lucifer became nervous because there was always a chance that his plan would be discovered, and he could be in trouble before he knew it. He knew pretty well that his former fellow Orions were not stupid—they would soon notice that someone was trying to break through the Grid.

When it didn't work, Lucifer stopped the experiments immediately, in order to play it safe. He realized that these females were not evolved enough to be able to do the job. He needed to work more on his genetic engineering.

In the meantime, the Orions did notice that something was going on with the Grid and that someone had been attempting to get in rather than to get out, and they understood that it was an attack. It was pretty obvious who was behind the attack, but they couldn't locate the source of it because the attacks had stopped.

Khan En.lil was notified.

The Queen was notified.

In the Orion Court, there was no doubt who was the brain behind the attack, but the question was, whom had they used in order to almost succeed getting through to the prisoners? To their knowledge, there were not that many females available to Lucifer for them to be able to accomplish what had been done. Also, there was no disloyal star race in the neighborhood that was evolved enough to help Lucifer.

Khan En.lil, Archangel Michael First in Command, decided to go and find out for himself. The prisoners needed to stay where they were at any cost. Under the circumstances, it would even be dangerous to move them. With some help from outside, they could quite easily escape. Hence, Khan En.lil, the King of Orion, gathered the loyal MIKH-MAKH warriors that were available to him at the moment, left the Angelic Dimensions, and headed for Sirius, only 8.7 light-years from Earth. Earth was where his stepson, Prince Ninurta, was positioned, and had been so for many millennia now, but the Prince was not going to get involved in the "Sirian problem," Khan En.lil decided. Prince Ninurta needed to be where he was for the moment. What Prince Ninurta was doing on Earth, we shall see later in this paper.

For Khan En.lil and his troops, the trip to Sirius did not take long. They arrived shortly after they had left Satania.

I.I. Confrontation!

On the Sirian planet, Lucifer and his DAKH were getting impatient. Lucifer could feel that something was going on—he felt the presence of the MIKH-MAKH troops in the Sirian star system. It wouldn't take long until he was busted, unless he did something quickly. However, an old saying goes, when something is done in desperation, it is usually not successful.

Lucifer gathered a big team of what he considered the most promising Sirian females he could find amongst this evolving race and prepared them to “strike” furiously and exactly at the same time. If the prisoners could be released in one hit, Lucifer would get his Elite Troops back, and his chances of revenge increased a thousandfold — at least, that’s what he estimated. Once they were released, he might be able to take on the Khan’s MIKH-MAKH legion.

Fig. 1. Khan En.lil’s space armada outside the Sirius A planet.

Khan En.lil’s troops found the Dark Star in the same manner as when he had once left it, after he and his son had set up the Grid. The small distortion that had been showing up in the electronic field after the attack had now settled, and everything seemed still and peaceful. The Khan told his troops to wait, however, because he was sure that there was going to be a new attack soon—he could sense it.

Sure enough—it didn’t take long before a new, increased attack hit the shield, but once again, the strong beams of energy bounced back. This time, however, the Khan and his legion could clearly see where the attack came from, and the Khan couldn’t believe it—the attack from hundreds of souls came from Sirius A! How was that possible? The only place it could have come from was the life bearing planet that orbited the star, containing an evolving race, which had not yet reached the point in their evolution when they even knew that things like this were possible!

The Orion legion left their position around Sirius C and hurried over to Sirius A to see what was going on. The armada he was in command of shielded themselves and parked close to the planet’s atmosphere where the evolving race was dwelling. Soon enough, Khan En.lil grasped what had happened, and his presumption about who was behind the attack was confirmed. His son, Prince Lucifer, had attempted to release his own imprisoned armada, but failed twice. Moreover, he had used Sirian females to do the job!

Lucifer knew that his father was parked outside the planet and waited for his next step. It was obvious that the Khan of Orion had figured everything out by now and was furious.

After a silence that seemed to last forever, Khan En.lil made his voice heard. He told his son to turn himself in, in order to be put to justice for breaking the Law of Interference. He also told the evolving race not to interfere with Lucifer's arrest.

The answer came fast. Lucifer and his DAKH warrior used their ground weapons and started shooting at Khan En.lil's ships. The Khan also noticed that for unknown reasons the Sirian race took Lucifer's side in the battle. In spite of the Khan's repeated commands, telling the Sirians that if they didn't stay out of it, they would be treated as enemies of the Orion Empire and be killed together with Lucifer's DAKH armada—they didn't heed the warning.

Khan En.lil quickly reviewed the situation. What apparently had happened was that Lucifer must have tinkered with this species' DNA, and during a long period, Lucifer had warned the Sirian population about the Orion Empire.

From the Sirians' point of view—as they could see for themselves—Lucifer was their friend, who had helped them evolve and who had also given them technology. Thanks to Lucifer and his team, the planet had been transformed for the better, where no one now had to suffer. Lucifer had taught them how to use the technology for their own benefit—they knew how to cure diseases—their lifespan had increased considerably, and he had taught them how to enjoy sex between two people. How could he be the bad guy? Khan En.lil and the Queen of Orion had imprisoned Lucifer's people unfairly because the throne of Orion was his, Lucifer's, and the Queen and the Khan were terrified that he would take the throne from them. Therefore, they had taken precautions and imprisoned Lucifer's people and robbed them of their homes. Eventually, they had become space nomads, but still travelled across the Universe to help races like themselves evolve. Now, the Orions were here again with the intention to kill Lucifer and his people once and for all, so were the Sirians ready to pay back some of what they had received over the millennia? This was, they considered, the least they could do!

Lucifer's manipulation worked like a clock. How could the Sirians say no? After all, they owed their whole existence to Lucifer—that's at least what they thought after listening to his slick tongue and pleasant voice. Up until this day, they have not woken up from that belief, as we will discover.

Lucifer still needed the Sirians, so he didn't want his father's armada to kill them off or to destroy the planet. Hence, the DAKH left the planet, and a furious battle took place in higher dimensions, just outside the atmosphere. The Sirians didn't know exactly what happened out there in space, other than their planet all of a sudden became subjected to devastating storms, tornadoes, earthquakes, and flooding. It was like the whole weather system had gone crazy, and many people died from drowning, while others became the victims of some of the other weather phenomena.

In another dimension, the confrontation between the DAKH and the MIKH-MAKH armadas was furious. Both sides had access to devastating weapons, and the battle, which lasted for a long time, extended out from the solar system and affected other star systems as well. Both sides asked for reinforcement, and the battle turned into a full-blown war, which is still not settled up to this day. In the terrible battles that followed, stars turned into supernovae and planets were destroyed and bounced out of orbit—something which apparently occasionally happens in these space wars.

Lucifer has always had many balls in the air at the same time, and he has been good at it. This is why he can be so confusing and convincing at the same time. Also, as a star being who lives more or less forever, he is able to think eons ahead. Hence, when the Sirian War broke out, he sent people to warn the Wolfen-Reptilians on Nibiru that things could get ugly, and they needed to flee underground as fast as they could! Otherwise, there was a big chance that they would be terminated in the war. The Nibiruans were not necessarily on Lucifer's side, although some of them were. They were split because some of them supported Lucifer's Rebellion, while others supported Khan En.lil. Lucifer, however, had plans to use the Nibiruans at a later stage, and that was the reason why he warned them. Little did they know that he would be their Nemesis, who separated their planet from their star, as we shall see.

The Nibiruans, who had received all the advanced technology from Lucifer and his cohorts, now put it into use in an attempt to save their own species, in case worst came to worst. They built enormous underground bases, which could house a large number of the population—at least for an extended period. In addition, they had a large amount of gold, which they could spread out in the atmosphere in order to shield the planet from radiation and to keep the temperature on the surface reasonable. One could say that the Nibiruans had prepared themselves as much as they could, and it turned out to be a good idea.

I.II. The Sirian Catastrophe

The Sirian A planet, under Lucifer's command, was once again in the line of fire, and the Sirians opened fire toward Khan En.lil's troops, unaware of that they were attacking their own Makers—the Orions. Further out in the Sirius system, the war was also raging between Lucifer and the Khan of Orion. In one of the battles, the fighting parties out in space came a little bit too close to Sirius C, and an extremely powerful subatomic weapon was fired right into Sirius C, which instantly turned nova! Nibiru bounced out of orbit and was violently catapulted out in space, away from its sun. The Nibiruans would never find out that the weapon, intentionally fired toward their sun, was fired by Lucifer!

Because the Nibiruans had been prepared, they managed to save approximately one-third of the population of approximately one billion people. The rest succumbed to the war and died on the surface from the cross fire of bombs or from when the planet was catapulted out of orbit.

For Lucifer, everything had, so far, gone according to plan, and now he hurried in order to aid the Wolfen-Reptilians, whose planet was flying through space at a high velocity. While he was catching the runaway planet, he smiled to himself because of an idea that he had. He knew that his mother's Orion names were "sacred" in the sense that she wanted to keep them exclusively within the Empire, and some of them should only be used within her Court. To her, it would be sacrilegious to use Orion terms as names and titles by, and for, her enemies. Thus, Lucifer decided to call the runaway planet with its eleven moons, Nibiru, after one of his mother's Motherships.<sup>182</sup> In fact, he was going to do just what his mother had done—he was going to use his own version of Nibiru as a hollowed out battleship!

Fig. 3. Nibiru, orbiting Sirius C before the catastrophe. Sirius C was then a red sun.

It was a perfect plan! With help from technology, which he'd gained from listening to his mother, he was capable of mining out the planet and extracting its gold. This gold he could use to mix into the atmosphere so that the legion he wanted to put on the ship could live on the surface of the planet, although it didn't have a sun when it travelled through deep space. In fact, he had mined out asteroids and smaller planets and used them as battleships for quite some time, just like Khan En.lil and the Sirians had done when they conquered space before they were confronted by the Queen of the Stars. Almost every solar system have asteroids floating around, and how would the star races know which asteroids were hollowed out and contained a legion and which were not? Thus, he could attack by surprise or spy on other star races—Lucifer knew he was brilliant! Because of these seemingly primitive hollowed-out spaceships, he had been able to take enemies by surprise more than once. At times, he used them in his guerilla war against Khan En.lil and the Queen as well. This technique is still used today in our own solar system. A lot of the asteroids we see in our telescopes are indeed hollowed-out by the AIF and used as spaceships and spying satellites—some of them are maneuvered remotely.

<sup>182</sup> "N" ("Nin") in Nibiru means "Heaven", just like An means Heaven. "B" in Sumerian and Orion languages is sometimes interchangeable with "V" and means something similar to "container" in English. "IRU" can have several meanings, but in this case probably "at the side of". So, the whole term Nibiru would mean something similar to "Container (ship) belonging to Heaven (Orion)".

Fig. 4. Canis Major, the asterism containing the Sirius triple star system.

When Nibiru was thrown out of orbit with the entire star race, it became a signal for armistice, and both Lucifer and Khan En.lil withdrew their troops for a while, although some of Orion's MIKH-MAKH troops were left on the fringe of the Sirius triple system as guardians, having orders to report back to the Court as soon as something out of the ordinary happened in the region.

Many of Lucifer's loyal star races from Canis Major were ordered by their High Commander to leave Sirius and make sure they could use Alpha Draconis as a stronghold, with the purpose to conquer the Galaxy from there. Lucifer's son, Marduk, was put in charge over that project. Yet another war broke out in the Thubanese (Alpha Draconian) star system, which was already populated by a fairly advanced race, which gave the DAKH some resistance. However, when the DAKH get furious, they are not to play with, and they started using their most devastating weapons toward the Thubanese and raped and tortured when they got the chance. It didn't take long until Thuban's original population had to resign. They became slaves, and joined Marduk's troops under Lucifer's banner. Thuban was a very strategic stronghold for Lucifer because there he could attack both Arcturus and asterisms close by, thus, slowly but surely closing in on Orion. Thuban has ever since been Marduk's stronghold, and in order to create strong soldiers out of the Thubanese, he raped their women and created his own hybrid race, which since then has been his own army.

Fig 5. Draco, in relation to Vega, Big Dipper, and the North Star—Polaris. However, 3000BC, in Sumerian times, Thuban (alpha Draconis) was the North Star.<sup>183</sup>

Now, let us return to Nibiru. In Level II, "Genesis Paper #3 of August 12, 2012; Revised, December 13, 2012: Mechanics Around Entrapments of Souls in Third Dimension," Section 4<sup>184</sup>, I wrote a hypothesis about how Nibiru could fit into the research I have done on what I then called the "Sirian Alliance," and this can be considered the expanded version of that hypothesis. Lucifer boarded the runaway planet with some of his troops and made sure that they had food and equipment enough to live a long time in deep space. After all, the situation that the Sirians were subjected to isn't that uncommon in the Universe—there are lots of “drifting” planets that don’t have a sun to warm them up.<sup>185</sup> Some of these planets do have life, while others don’t. Others are used as hollowed-out craft for Lucifer’s DAKH warriors.

Fig. 1. A “drifting planet,” without a sun to warm it up. Even NASA has admitted that such planets are probably commonplace out in the cosmos. Can some of these planets be life bearing?

Lucifer left a crew on Nibiru and taught the surviving population how to be excellent deep-space survivors and how to use stargates and Einstein-Rosen bridges— thus, using the KHAA in order to move faster from one point to another. They also became excellent miners, as their planet contained a significant amount of gold that they could extract to save their atmosphere. Lucifer also taught the most intelligent beings on the planet how to eat from the Tree of Life to prolong their lifespan, just like the gods did. Then they were taught how to become even better warriors. Lucifer had plans to use them in the future.

Before he left Nibiru drifting a couple of light-years away from Sirius, he used technology to adjust its orbit just a degree or less, so that it would be sucked into another solar system by the gravitation from its giant planets on the fringe of the solar system, which was located about 8.7 light-years from Sirius. The plan was that Nibiru then would be sling-shot out from this other solar system and back to Sirius again. This would also give Lucifer some time to incorporate Nibiru more carefully into his plans. Basically, Lucifer wanted to use Nibiru as one of his mightiest battleships, and eventually, it would take Nibiru out of orbit and be able to navigate it as he pleased, without being dependent on natural space gravity.

<sup>185</sup> Our own scientists have found a few of these drifting planets already. Here is CNN on October 13, 2013: http://www.cnn.com/2013/10/10/tech/space-new-planet/index.html?iid=article\_sidebar.

This solar system, toward which Lucifer steered Nibiru, was of course Sol, our own solar system!

II. The Matriarchs and the Golden Age

Let us now go back a few billion years<sup>186 187</sup> from when the Sirian Wars were instigated, and return to Sol and our own blue, beautiful planet, orbiting its yellow ball of “fire” in the sky.

At that time, Titans lived in the asterism of Lyra. The solar system in Lyra where they dwelled was Vega, Alpha Lyrae—the brightest star in the Lyran asterism and the fifth brightest star in our night sky.<sup>188</sup> Vega, just like Sirius A, is a white star of spectral class A05, at a distance of approximately 25 light-years from Earth.<sup>189</sup>

The Titans of Vega were also called the “Vulcans,” and they were a peaceful race of giant hominids, being very close to Mother Goddess. Just like Mother Goddess’ blood once ran pure and clear inside us humans, Her blood also ran pure and clear through the veins of the Vulcans—and it still does.

I described the Vulcans already in Level I as looking quite similar to the Vulcans in Star Trek. Gene Roddenberry, when he created the science fiction series, had first been present during channeling the Council of Nine, from where he got most of his ideas. This is also something we discussed in detail in Level III. Not only did Roddenberry use the Vulcans as a prototype for his own ETs, but he also used their real name. Dr. Spock is probably the Vulcan that first comes to mind when we speak about this race. However, the main difference between Roddenberry’s Vulcans and the real ones from Vega is that the real ones were all androgynous and considered females. Just like humans, the Vulcans’ skin colors varied from very pale to very dark, with most shades in between. The pointed ears of our mythological creatures such as elves and gnomes probably stem from the Vulcans too. The Vulcans had the Fire of the Goddess.

In ancient Roman mythology, the Vulcan is appropriately the “god of fire” in mythology, symbolizing the volcano fire.<sup>190</sup> Interestingly enough, the Vulcan belongs to the most ancient stage of the Roman religion.<sup>191</sup>

The origin of the word is debated because it is ancient, and its etymology is not really known. However, many believe that it stems from the Latin word fulgur, which means “lightning” and, in turn, is related to “flames.”<sup>192</sup> This is particularly mind opening because lightning and Fire are highly involved in the Creation Process and used by Creator Goddesses when they seed a planet. The Vulcans were indeed Creator Goddesses, as we will see.

Moreover, we learn from etymologist Gérard Capdeville:

The Minoan god's identity would be that of a young deity, master of fire and companion of the Great Goddess.<sup>193</sup>

Now we are getting closer and closer to the truth because the Vulcans were the "Helpers" of the Great Goddess in creating the Living Library on Earth. The problem is, however, that here on Earth, Vulcan was considered as one deity, when in fact, they were many deities who descended here on Earth to assist the Goddess. Also, in the mythology that has survived in mainstream, Vulcan, as described here on Earth, is a male deity, which is incorrect because of the manipulation of records in Babylonian times to fit in with the sitting regime. Vulcan has, apparently because of this, been listed as a male Olympian god.<sup>194</sup>

Another interesting association to the Vulcans as Helpers of the Goddess comes from an entry at the "Secrets of the Grimoires" website, which is a Yahoo Group. Although such a group can hardly be considered "academic," from this independent writer, it proves my point—someone else seems to have fully recognized what I have realized, which is that Khan En.lil (here called "Supa-Enlil) is distinguishable from (Prince) En.lil. From comparing the array of sources I have used in Level IV, we can also see the importance in that the following writer also connects Khan En.lil with Arcturus, just as I do:

What I find intriguing about this is that we have two tools, the wagon and the plough, directly associated with Supa-Enlil, and these were both things made by ancient smiths, which is a direct association with Tubal Cain(as Val-Cain or Vulcan) that goes further back than any of our usual Greek/Roman mythological material does. Plus it makes me think that Arcturus as a talismanic (it is amongst the Behinian stars as described in Agrippa and the Liber Hermetis) star can do a lot more than take away fevers and reduce/stop the flow of blood.<sup>195</sup>

An interesting point - throughout the history of Babylonian star-maps, the circumpolar stars were considered as representing gods of the highest rank. Arcturus was called "Supa-Enlil who determines the destinies of the lands." His wife, Ninlil ruled the celestial wagon (Ursa Major), and they are associated with the yokes that bind heaven to earth. He was principally associated with farmers and farming - Aratron is the Olympic spirit of Saturn, who was originally the god of agriculture, etc. Enlil was the overall ruler of the gods, a king, and Saturn was identified as the King Star in their mythic astrology.<sup>196</sup>

“Supa-Enlil” referred to here can be no one less than Khan En.lil himself, if we read it in context, and Vulcan (or the Vulcans) being the creators (the smiths) or the Arcturian “wagon” or “plough,” which would be a much later association to the Vulcan than when they helped seed the Living Library billions of years ago. Khan En.lil (Supa-Enlil) is here also said to be the one who “determines the destinies of the lands,” which he did (and still does) via the “Tablets of Destinies.” In a later paper, we are going to discuss these tablets a lot more.

Now, we have looked as far back as we can in the human records (at least the ones which are available) to find out who the Vulcans were, so let us go much further back to see what the ancient Orion language may teach us (the Sumerian/Akkadian languages are to some degree based on the Orion language, by the way). If we use the star Vega and remove the “V” (V and B are interchangeable, which we’ve discussed in previous levels of learning, but they are also sometimes silent), we have “EGA,” or “EGA-EGA/EGE-EGE/IGIGI,” which with time has become the term “IGIGI,” mentioned in both Sitchin’s work and others (in order to give more strength to a word, it is sometimes doubled/repeated—thus “EGA-EGA” above). In Sitchin’s translations, IGIGI meant “Watchers,” and were those of the “Anunnaki” who “stayed behind,” up in orbit around the Earth, on the so-called “space platform.” That, according to my research and sources, is not correct. The two co-conspirators, Ea and Marduk, definitely did their very best to wipe out all the overwhelming evidence of the previous Matriarchal Golden Age, which the two put an end to. They wanted the subsequent generations to think that Lucifer and Marduk had always been God, and there was no other Gods before them. Between each other, they played the “One and Only God” in such a confusing manner that it’s sometimes hard to tell them apart.

To have the reader get my point regarding who the Vulcans were, let’s look at the term “Vulcan” and break it down. Vulcan is a combination of two words, “vul” and “khan.” “Vul” stands for “vulva,” which denotes female, of course, and “khan” denotes male. Hence, Vulcan means “female khan” (female “king”), plain and simple. The word “vulva” (female outside genitals) goes back, as far as it can be traced, to the Sanskrit word “ulva (womb).”<sup>197</sup> However, the origin of the word is much older than that, but the definition of the word has stayed fairly intact over the eons.

So, the Vulcans were female Helpers of the Goddess herself and Creator Goddesses in their own right, also known under the name Igigi (singular and plural being the same). They were identified with Fire and could, therefore, be said to be people of warmth, or Ladies of Fire. They were the very earliest female shamans, also referred to as being of dragon blood, which is the blood of the Goddess. This is something we humans possess as well, but after having been genetically tampered with, our blood has been diluted in the process. Thus, it requires a lot more from us to become shamans than it did for the Vulcans, who were pure in blood, spirit, and Fire. Those who are said to have dragon breath are breathing warmth, while those who don't have it are cold-blooded and could, therefore, be said to be reptilian in nature—the reptiles being a cold-blooded species.

There was a male counterpart to the Vulcans as well, and they were the "Khans." They, too, descended to Earth at the same time as Mother Goddess did, and at that time, our planet vibrated on a slightly different frequency than it does now, which allowed larger beings to operate on the planet. This is why, in legend, we hear that there were giants walking on the Earth in the past.

The Vulcans and the Khans were, of course, the Titans that we hear so much about in Greek mythology. In Level II, I went into details about the Titans, the Olympians, and the Titanomachy—the "War of the Titans." Therefore, I am not going to repeat myself very much in this level, other than necessary to bring forth a new, expanded story of what happened in this remote past.

The short version is that the Goddess seeded the Earth about 4.5 billion years ago, according to today's science (although I am quite certain that the Earth is much older than that), and let everything take its time to develop according to the plan. At that time, the Goddess had plans to create the Living Library—a place in the Universe where star beings and others could share their knowledge and wisdom and exchange information with each other in a peaceful manner. Her plans were, as we now are aware of, much grander than that, but this is how it started. She created a Paradise on the fringes of the Galaxy.

Billions of years later, she came back with the Vulcans—her Ladies of Fire from the Vega star system. Together, they created the magic that we still can see around us today. The fauna and the flora has changed since then, and the Library has been watered-down since the Patriarchs came, but our planet is still a diamond amongst planets in the Universe.

In addition, the Goddess created the primordial human, the Namlú'u. They were tall, androgynous, and very friendly—they were also Giants in their own right. They were the main reason for the Goddess's Experiment, and she gave them the Fire and the blood of the Mother—they were totally her creation.

They were of as pure Orion blood as a celestial being could be, and she gave them freedom to explore and do whatever they wanted to do, without interference—no strings attached—no karma to be part of their evolution. There would be no death—this species was immortal, unless it was killed or tortured to death. Their souls were born from the Sun—Sol—which at that time got its energy from a “trail of stars,” including Arcturus, Alpha Taurus, and Saiph in Orion. This made their soul and their bodies, in one, totally Divine—they were representatives of the Divine Feminine on Earth. In their majestic manner, they became the Shepherds of the Living Library—the Guardians of that which was Sacred. No one could get the Advanced Information from the Living Library without going through them first.<sup>198</sup>

Siaph (k Orionis) is a much overlooked star but is the “sword” in Orion’s Belt—thus, being the original star in the “trail of stars,” which were communicating with each other at that time, until Lucifer, by hijacking Sirius and other stars in the trail, stopped the flow of energy. Since then, our Sun has not taken its energy from Orion anymore, but from Sirius.

Finally, the Goddess was accompanied by the Khans, the male Titans, to bring an even wider perspective to her Experiment. Her plan had always been to bring her firstborn son, Lucifer, with her to Earth and give this Paradise to him to master and nurture, but things took another direction. Lucifer did not become whom the Goddess had hoped for, and because of how things turned out, she had to exclude him from the Experiment. Thus, she left the Earth in the hands of the Titans for some time.

As time went by, her younger son, Prince Ninurta, had indeed started showing the traits that the Goddess had hoped that Lucifer would have developed.

II.I. The Prince of Ar-i-Du

Everything Prince Ninurta knew, he had learned from his mother and his stepfather. He had been taught to be a warrior, and he had been taught everything about the mechanics of life and how to become a Creator God par excellence. He even knew how to create a soul directly from the Universe itself. Thus, he knew how to create life and life forms.

<sup>198</sup> Not until much later, Lucifer created the blockage in the “Trail of Stars” and redirected the energy which was flowing through our sun. Instead of letting the energy originate from Mintaka in Orion’s Belt, it has since then originated from Sirius.

As he grew up and had begun to start using the knowledge that had been given to him, he always showed his parents what he had learned and how he used this wisdom. His parents were very pleased because Prince Ninurta was a fast learner, just like his elder brother, but Prince Ninurta used his knowledge the way it was intended. He even exceeded his parents' expectations.

Thus, Prince Ninurta's parents were very pleased with their youngest son, who had also shown extraordinary skills and bravery in battle. He also understood the "Cycle of Creation and Destruction," the meaning of the Universe, and the reason for The Law of Free Will and that of Non-Interference. He became their real pride, and they wanted to reward him for the skills he had gained.

Mother Goddess looked at her son and smiled. She told him that she wanted to give him a solar system that was very special to her—indeed, one of her most precious projects. This solar system, called Sol, or Ar-i-du, was located in the outskirts of the Galaxy—far away from the Womb of the Mother, which is the Galactic Center. "This doesn't mean," said the Goddess, "that it is worth less, or is less me—quite the contrary." In Ar-i-du, she had invested a great part of herself. All this she wanted to give to her son so that he could create by using his own mind. She felt that he was really an extended part of herself, and she trusted him dearly.

"But remember," said the Goddess, "that there are those who don't want my Experiment in this solar system to succeed, so all your military skills, as well as your creator skills, will come in very handy. You will also be my 'Protector Son,' in charge of a smaller legion of MIKH-MAKH warriors, who will be the 'Security Guards,' to do their best to protect what is 'Sacred Ground.' "

Prince Ninurta felt very humble and grateful over the offer, and he bowed before his mother, and he bowed before his father, who had whole-heartedly supported the Goddess in her decision. Then he looked into his mother's eyes. In them he saw the Divine depth of the KHAA and swirling swastikas, which represented galaxies and the birth center of stars. Then the Goddess's dress was lit up by the stars of the Universe, and everything disappeared in front and around Ninurta—all that was left was the Infinite VOID, which was the Goddess in her Ultimate Beingness.

This was not the first time that the prince had experienced this, and certainly not the last, but these moments were the most precious and intimate moments anyone could have with the Goddess, and it reinforced the very tight connection between the two.

Prince Ninurta felt a little weary to take on this huge project and asked for help—at least to begin with. Both the Goddess and Khan En.lil agreed to assist him in the beginning, so Prince Ninurta travelled to this new solar system with a legion of MIKH-MAKH warriors and a team of Vulcans and Khans. In addition, his mother would always be close in spirit because already a long time ago she had manifested in spirit form inside the beautiful Living Library—the planet which would be the center of the Experiment. Thus, Mother Gaia became the name of the third planet from the Sun. Prince Ninurta, the Vulcans, and the Khans—the Titans—started creating together, which resulted in great beauty. They put their hearts and souls into it, and the planet became the Living Gaia, also known as Tiamat—a name directly associated with the Goddess.

As a stronghold in the solar system, Prince Ninurta chose Saturn with its rings. The major stargate into the solar system, in conjunction with the Sun itself, was located at its north pole and needed to be guarded. Hence, Prince Ninurta put a small part of his MIKH-MAKH legion on Saturn, and a “Council of Nine” of wise teachers (Vulcans) were seated in the rings of Saturn, working across the dimensions. This council had many functions, such as communicating directly with Orion, and decided who would be allowed to enter the solar system, and who would not be allowed. Saturn became a very important outpost for Ninurta and his team. Up until today, Saturn is playing a major role in present events, but for totally different reasons than back in the days of Ninurta. This will all unfold as we move on through the papers.

II.II. When the Lion Slept with the Lamb

Prince Ninurta is known as the “Lord of the Mountains,” and that is for good reasons. After the Goddess had left and manifested a part of herself as Gaia, Ninurta created a Mountain Paradise on Gaia, which was in honor of his mother. He called this Paradise Ninhursag, which means “Lady of the Sacred Mountain.”<sup>199</sup> Then, the Goddess became known as the “Mountain Goddess.”<sup>200</sup> This event is well documented in our mythology:

Nin-hursag means "lady of the sacred mountain" (from Sumerian NIN "lady" and 𒌆𒀭𒂗𒂊𒂗𒂊 "sacred mountain, foothill"[dubious – discuss]). She had many names including Ninmah ("Great Queen"); Nintu ("Lady of Birth"); Mamma or Mami (mother); Aruruprobably connected with Homeric arura (arable land, land generally). Belet-Ili (lady of the gods, Akkadian)[.]

According to legend her name was changed from Ninmah to Ninhursag by her son Ninurta in order to commemorate his creation of the mountains.<sup>201</sup>

Therefore, from his Mountain Paradise, Prince Ninurta created a close relationship with the Namlú'u and the Living Library. This period is known in history as the "Golden Age,"<sup>202</sup> when "the lion slept with the lamb,"<sup>203</sup> and no one needed to kill in order to feed their bodies.<sup>204</sup> The frequency of the planet was such that Tiamat's inhabitants could get their energy directly from the sunlight, and nothing else, except water, was necessary in order to keep the celestial bodies alive. There was no starvation, and just like Ninurta was used to from the Orion Empire, no one had to go without. There was an abundance of everything that was necessary for everybody to feel joyful, playful, and filled with love and compassion for self and for one another. This is the first and only "Paradise on Earth" or "Golden Age" that has happened on our planet since the beginning of time.

The Paradise of Gaia did not only include a small mountain area but also spread out all over the planet. Life was simple, but not too simple—there were challenges too, which must be to make things interesting, but wars were unheard of by the Namlú'u, who had only known peace since their souls were created. Just like the Vulcans and the Khans, who were both present on the planet, together with their Commander, Prince Ninurta, the Namlú'u were the Children of the Mother Goddess.

Civilizations were created during this time, although they were not the same as we know them today—there were no big cities—no cars were driving down endless highways, and no futuristic spaceships were flying around in the sky. However, once our archeologists start looking under the icecaps of Antarctica and start looking at what is beneath the sand of the Gobi Desert, to name two places, they will be utterly surprised because in these areas, great civilizations once prospered<sup>205</sup> and didn't disappear until the Olympians came. Some of these archeological remnants are from the Namlú'u era, but there were also other beings who created civilizations in these areas, as mentioned earlier.

Although the Namlú'u became the Shepherds and the Guardians, they were not genetically engineered and placed in position, from one day to another, to become just that—they evolved naturally and were still in a stage of evolution when the Patriarchs came and changed things. The genetic tinkering that was later applied on this species was the work of Lucifer, who was using technology in order to rapidly get what he wanted. Hence, what we so often in exopolitics call “genetic engineering” has nothing to do with seeding planets with life and letting them evolve naturally. Genetic engineering is used by beings who want to create slaves, while natural evolution is how it is meant to be done, and that’s the way Creator Goddesses are taught by the Goddess. Life must start from the beginning and evolve at its own pace, and in its own, sometimes unpredictable, directions. Everything else is done by imposters and cosmic vampires.

Some say that there had to be an end to the Golden Age because beings need more challenges. When things get too comfortable, people get bored. I do not agree with that theory. If people get bored because there is no war, no violence, and no evil to fight against, it only means that these people have been severely manipulated and don’t know what to do without these disturbing ingredients in their lives. These are people who have forgotten how to create something out of nothing. These are beings who need outside stimuli to have a life. No, creation comes from inside of each being. Do we want to create misery and evil, or do we want to create a Paradise on Earth, or do we simply want to sit down and wait for others to create whatever comes to their minds, whether it’s “good” or “evil,” and just go along with it? Isn’t that the mentality of a victim?

It didn’t have to be an end to the Golden Age—it could potentially have continued up to this very day, or the Experiment could have been over. If so, it would have turned into something else. There is no end to what creative beings can do. The art of creation flows in both directions: creation is art and art is creation. The Namlú’u, the Vulcans, and the Khans, under the Command of Prince Ninurta, could do it. So can we, if we have the right mentality and don’t let others create our lives.

A misconception I have noticed with the Living Library is that the beauty of it is that it is self-sustained because of sex—without sex, no Living Library, as the Pleiadians say.<sup>206</sup> It’s sex that keeps it going—from the bottom to the top, so to speak. Yes, that’s how it looks like in today’s library, which has been altered by Lucifer and his Olympians. Before they came and started manipulating an already self-propelling Experiment, there was no polarity—man/woman, male/female. The Library still worked on sex and was self-propelled, but no partners were needed in order to keep the Library running. The Igigi from Vega were androgynous, which differs from being parthenogenetic. There are lizards who are parthenogenetic<sup>207</sup>, and there are parthenogenetic insects and plant life as well. They are able to give life from unfertilized eggs—i.e. the offspring has no father. Androgyny is a little different, as androgyny refers to the combination of masculine and feminine characteristics<sup>208</sup>. Androgyny was a trait in the primordial human. The Namlú'u could impregnate themselves, and the offspring also became androgynous.

This doesn't mean there wasn't love involved in the Golden Age. Love, as we know it, is very different from the higher concept of love that was so natural then. Love worked across the board, and no one was excluded. We humans, in our limited bodies, can't perceive this higher perception of love, which is much more satisfying than what we feel toward each other today. We didn't need a partner in order to satisfy our need for love—it wasn't even a "need." It was so natural to life itself that no one even thought that there may be an option that this kind of love wouldn't exist.

II.III. Misdirected Sexual Energy

The original plan with the Living Library worked beautifully—and perhaps best of all—there was no jealousy! No one stole another one's wife or husband to have sex with him or her, and there was no competition.

Not until the Olympians came and started mixing things up in the Library did we eventually get polarization, such as man and woman having sex with each other. Mother Goddess, Prince Ninurta, and their helpers were here to create Divine Females, Ladies of Fire. They created womankind here on Earth, while En.ki and his Olympians created mankind, which is a totally new species, also significantly degraded from womankind. It's like womankind had a full circuit of running energy going through their bodies, running through their DNA, while the Olympians took a "clipper" and cut off all the circuits they thought we didn't need, and we were supposed to become slaves.

Just to give everybody hope—quite recently, there was a TV documentary I watched on YouTube about the sleeping pill Ambien and brain damage. There were people who had laid in a coma for years without much hope for recovery. For some reason, a relative of this person decided to give the injured young person an Ambien. An hour later, the person woke up from his coma and started talking. He also said that he could hear everything people had said around him over the years in his state of being "brain dead." However, he could now talk like a normal person, and everybody was extremely happy. Four hours later, however, he slowly fell back into coma. They then repeated what seemed to be the successful action: they gave him another pill, and he woke up again.

A doctor became very interested in this case, and although he didn't believe, at first, that it was the Ambien that did it, he quickly changed his mind. He tried the same treatment on a former "advertisement communicator," which is a person who talks in an ad in a very positive, fast, and upbeat voice, with the purpose to make people buy the product. He had had a stroke and could only mumble with his tongue hanging out of his mouth. One hour after taken Ambien, he was back at the microphone and talked like he did in his heydays!<sup>209</sup>

Fig. 3. Ambien

What was going on here? First of all, there is hardly a doctor who thinks that if a neuropathway in the brain is damaged due to an accident or a stroke, it can be recovered—if the brain is dead, it's dead. However, Ambien showed on X-rays and by using cameras on the brain that when you take Ambien, the damaged neuropathways connect again and start working as new! So, the solution, instead of having a lot of people in comas, they could give them Ambien.

<sup>210</sup> <http://www.theblaze.com/stories/2011/12/02/could-ambien-sleep-drug-help-awaken-those-with-brain-damage/>

Now, it's not that simple because no pharmaceutical company would sell the pill for that reason without extended research at the best universities. That would allegedly cost billions of dollars, and if they eventually approve the pill to be sold for this new reason, the price would be sky-high because the Big Pharma has to pay back the researchers and the universities. There is a lot of legroom here for them to "make up" costs, but this is one of the ways they make money. In the meantime, thousands of people die because they are not allowed to use Ambien to stay alive and functioning. Four Ambien a day, said the doctors who promote this cure, is usually what a patient needs to keep him or her next to normal, and sometimes even totally normal.

So, what does this mean? First of all, it means that everything we have learned about the brain and brain damage is wrong, and we have to start over. There are no "dead neuropathways" — this idea doesn't exist in reality. The brain can be cured, regardless of the seriousness of the injury! Second, if we apply this to dormant DNA, we can do the same thing, but without pills! By educating ourselves (like we do now), meditate, and connect with nature and with the Heavens above us, we can reactivate the dormant DNA, just like brain tissue and neuropathways can reconnect. I just wanted to give you a real-life story about these things being possible, and reactivation of dormant DNA is happening now, every second of the day, and it is happening in you and me, although we are not always aware of it!

Now, we go back to discussing sex. There is nothing wrong with having sex with partners—the intimacy, the sharing of our deepest emotions, and having orgasms together—that can be extremely pleasurable and bonding, if the partner is right. However, this planet is the only planet where sex is experienced like this. If the readers want to dedicate this "invention" to somebody, it would be Lord En.ki, and if I stop the discussion here, many people would probably feel grateful to him. Nevertheless, Lord En.ki didn't do anything for the purpose of our pleasure, unless he could get something big out of it himself, and we have talked about that earlier. While the female, in particular, has a strong orgasm, she connects with the Inner Sanctions of the KHAA—she is actually becoming a part of the Goddess herself—the Goddess that she basically is. This would be a beautiful thing, unless these emotions are hijacked in the ether by the AIF and used by them to store for later usage, such as invading the Orion Court with feminine Fire.

This doesn't happen with parthenogenesis or androgyny. Unfortunately, that's where we stand. It would be ridiculous for me to say that from now on people shouldn't have orgasms—that's not what I mean. I only state the fact what can happen, but I have also presented a solution for it. Before you have sex, you decide where you want to steer your energy—you make a clear and strong decision, intend it to happen, and allow no interference. This will protect you. You can also let this energy go to your partner, back to yourself, or to both—it's your choice, and it's a good idea to keep it that way.

It's important to understand why things are like they are or we give all our energy to those who want to harm us and our ancestors. That would be like genocide along the lines of time!

I say this also because there are those who claim that En.ki and Ninhursag (Mother Goddess) created the Living Library together, and without En.ki, we wouldn't have sexuality the way we have it now. This is extremely misleading, as most readers probably understand by now. En.ki and Queen Nin had nothing to do with each other when it came to creating the Library, and sexuality the way En.ki did it would have worked in a perfect Universe, but not when there is already an agenda behind it. So, ladies (and men as well) know about this and set goals for your intimate time with your partner, or if you're by yourself, direct your sexual energy toward where you want it to go. It's very powerful, you know, and you can create great, beautiful, and wonderful things if you're using it correctly.

Deep inside us all are Ladies of Fire and Men of Fire. It so happens that the female energy is closer to the Goddess energy, and therefore, Her Fire burns higher and more "furiously" than that of a man. It's because of the combination between soul/avatar/mind/physical body—a female body has another anatomy than a male body, obviously, but it's more than that. Any man knows that the female energy is much different from that of a man—that's why we are drawn to it. Females feel a similar thing with men, but I say similar because it is not exactly the same. The woman often looks for other attributes in a man than a man does in a woman. He looks for her Fire, which is warm, loving, safe, and infinite. However, it can also be ferocious if stimulated incorrectly, and females can be far more dangerous warriors than men are. Many men know this, consciously or unconsciously.

Of course, don't feel bad if you're a male. You have been female many times before, and you most certainly will be again in the future (if you choose to stay on Earth), but you definitely have experienced both sides. I am just trying to slowly, but surely, get the readers used to how incredibly important our bodies are in the process of becoming free beings. The bodies are our most important assets in the Experiment of the Goddess. They are able to do things no other bodies in the Universe are able to do. So do your absolute best to keep your body in shape, regardless if you're young or old—no exaggerations are needed, however! All that's needed is to have a strong and balanced body, where the energy is flowing freely through the chakras, and stuck energy gets dealt with. Eat only food that's growing naturally, and no GMO! In other word, do what you can to either grow it yourself, or buy locally from your farmer or at the Farmer's Market. Exercise your body, but also here, no exaggeration is needed. Take a brisk walk for 30 minutes or more, with or without a dog—or swim or do some exercise that you feel you can tolerate and that has some kind of pleasure attached to it (or you'll probably give up after a while).

If you do this, you will get a slender body that is strong and energetic. That's what you want. When you get it, you will soon notice that all the effort you put into it was worthwhile. Your psychic abilities will be greater, and your evolution will take off and go much faster.

The next paper will be about how the Golden Age ended, more about the Sirian War and the invasion of Ar-i-du, taken to another level.

PAPER #7: THE SOLAR WAR

I. The End of the Golden Age

In Level II, we talked about the Titanomachy—the War of the Titans—and how the Olympians—the younger gods—won the war through much destruction.

When we humans fight our wars here on Earth, we may bomb cities and destroy them in order to show our overwhelming power to the enemy, but the gods not only destroyed cities—they also blew up planets or bounced them out of orbit. Our planet, whether we want to call it Earth, Gaia, Terra, or whatnot, is no exception. Once upon a time, our planet was orbiting the Sun in a much wider orbit, and both the planet and its inhabitants were larger in stature due to its higher electromagnetic frequency. This was more than 500,000 years ago, and our planet was then populated by a lot of distinct flora and fauna, which are now extinct. An androgynous humanoid race, the Namlú'u, were here as well, being the shepherds of the wildlife on the planet. Mother Goddess's "Administrators," the Vulcans (also called the IGIGI), were here as well, together with their male counterparts, the Khans. They made up what in our mythology are called the Titans.<sup>212</sup>

The period when the Titans, under the supervision of Prince Ninurta, were stationed on the planet, was the real Golden Age, and everybody lived in peace, just as described in the previous paper. Mankind—whom I prefer to call "womankind" because Namlú'u were androgynous with a feminine essence—they were free to wander around and live the lives they loved the best. They lived close to nature and were able to communicate with it—not only with the animals but also with the trees, the flowers, the insects, the stones and rocks, and the ether. They were Beings of Fire in its deepest meaning, and they could nanotravel and communicate over long distances without even leaving their bodies. It was as if a part of Orion was brought down to this planet in the outskirts of the Galaxy. The Namlú'u were true masters of the elements, and they are our forefathers (or "foremothers," rather). I would probably be correct if I said that they were not only living close to nature—they were of nature.

<sup>212</sup> I have another hypothesis regarding the "Old Terra" as well. What if Old Terra never changed position and was located where Earth is located today—or at least close to it. When the War was in its most intense period, a chunk of Old Terra was hit by cosmic technological weapons and blew to pieces. This debris then flew off outward in the solar system, and got caught in an orbit around our Sun in a position between Mars and Jupiter, where this debris is still floating around. So, instead of Old Terra being shot out in space, inward toward the Sun, landing between Mars and Venus, it didn't move that much at all, and has "always" been stationed where it is now. This hypothesis, which I find plausible, still needs some work and research, but I present it here as an alternative.

As we've discussed earlier, this solar system was guarded by MIKH-MAKH warriors from the Orion Empire, but everything was laid-back, and no one expected any attack from anybody—most star races loved the idea of a Living Library, even if there were some jealousy and nagging about it in the beginning. Some hinted, "Why did the humans get the Fire of the Goddess and the sacred bodies that they have that make them able to nanotravel directly from a third-dimensional location, and not us? Why can they go back to Orion with "no strings attached" while we have to work so hard for it?" Thoughts such as this were exchanged on occasion, but the Queen and the King of Orion didn't take it too personally. They had expected some protest, but they knew that the beings who protested would never do anything violent toward this new Namlú'u species. Besides, if the Experiment were positive, it could also be beneficial for other star races. The Queen of the Stars was planning to set the Experiment as a norm for this universe, if the Experiment succeeded!

When Ar-i-du, our solar system, eventually got attacked, it was not so much because of jealousy over the Namlú'u's privileges—it was more about revenge in general—a revenge that was directed toward Prince Ninurta, who had bypassed his brother, Prince Lucifer, as the heir of Orion. BUT, it was also directed toward Mother Goddess, in her incarnation as Tiamat, and later as Mother Gaia.

As a rebel, Prince Lucifer had to be very careful and inventive in order to pull things off. He had to use most of his brilliant thinking and his best advisors to obtain what he ultimately wanted, and in the beginning, he did it one step at the time. He started one project (often a war) in one section of Sector 9, and while that was raging, he hit somewhere else—unexpectedly. Now, he wanted Ar-i-du! His mother had manifested herself and become a "Living Planet"—a "Living Library"—while her most-beloved son walked on her surface, creating and making sure everything went by the plan. The entire solar system was given to Prince Ninurta as a gift, and he felt the responsibility to play out the Experiment as it was intended—perhaps—with his own slant to it.

Lucifer and his Fallen Angels used many different ways to travel in space. Lucifer could have chosen just to nanotravel, and that had both its pros and cons.

In reality, he often nanotraveled from one place to another, but not all his minions were star beings—therefore, he sometimes used stargates to travel from A to B. The ace up his sleeve was the hollowed-out crafts, created out of asteroids and planetoids. The idea to hollow them out, like so much else, was stolen from Orion technology and expanded upon. Lucifer will never admit that he “stole it” because, after all, he was from Orion, and as a scientist, he knew their technologies, and he just used what he had learned. If it were considered “negative usage,” so be it. Lucifer never thought he was negative—he only wanted back what he considered being his, by legal rights. Now, however, when he’d been thrown out, the heirship, in Lucifer’s mind, had been stolen from him, and he intended to invade and take over the Orion Empire now!—now being as soon as possible.

Fig. 1. The Kuiper belt, located outside the orbit of Neptune.

For a long time, the Prince of Darkness, who once had been the Prince of Light, parked his armada of hollowed-out asteroids in the Kuiper belt<sup>213</sup>, which is a large asteroid belt, located just outside Neptune, starting at approximately 30 Astronomical Units (AU) from the Sun and reaching as far out as 50 AU beyond any known planet in the solar system—1 AU being the distance between the Sun and the Earth<sup>214</sup>. Because of its huge number of asteroids, the Kuiper belt was the perfect place to park and hide a massive armada and shield it so that it wouldn't be detected by MIKH-MAKH warriors on duty.

When the time was right and the MIKH-MAKHs had their guard down, the Lucifer armada went into attack mode. They started from outside of the solar system and worked themselves inward in order to conquer and claim Ar-i-du, planet by planet, until they reached Tiamat, which was their primary goal. Lucifer wanted what his brother had and he didn't—the ownership of the Living Library.

Pluto, which is no longer considered a planet, was an easy target, and barely being watched by Ninurta's legion. Lucifer parked himself on the small planetoid and claimed its moons, which were considered more important than the planetoid itself because they could be used as bases and “watch stations” — not to mention that they could be hollowed out and mined.

Pluto is being equated with Hades, the god of the Underworld, and later on it became the name for the “Underworld” itself.

Pluto (Greek: Πλούτων, Ploutōn) was the ruler of the underworld in classical mythology. The earlier name for the god was Hades, which became more common as the name of the underworld as a place.<sup>215</sup>

Another god, who was known as being the god of the Underworld, where he ruled together with Ereshkigal, was Nergal (see Paper 2), which is one of Lord En.ki's true alter egos. Thus, Pluto being Lucifer's/En.ki's domain, makes sense. We need to remember that the planets in our solar system were not named randomly—the planets are connected with certain deities, even though ownership of the same planets may have changed over the eons. Nevertheless, by looking at their names, we can see who is related to which one.

Once Lucifer had taken over Pluto—even though he was doing it silently and carefully—he was detected, and Prince Ninurta, at that time stationed on Tiamat, was notified. He immediately gathered his legion and made them ready for war. Ninurta had no doubt who was intruding on his domains, and he was determined to chase his rebellious brother out of Ar-i-du once and for all.

A great space battle took place just outside Neptune. Archangel Mikael, Second in Command, confronted Prince Lucifer for the second time—the first time he had managed to throw his brother out of the Orion Empire, and since then has been highly regarded as a brave and very skilled warrior. Once more, he showed his brilliant skills on the battlefield and his superior abilities to strategically place his troops in areas that would potentially take the enemy by surprise.

In the beginning, the war went just fine, and the MIKH-MAKH did a great job—especially in direct confrontation when they were being far superior to the DAKH—Lucifer’s troops. Pretty soon, however, Prince Ninurta discovered that the armada Lucifer had brought from the Pleiades, Draco, and possibly Sirius, Spica, and elsewhere, was huge. An armada that filled the space suddenly departed itself from the stationary asteroids in the Kuiper belt and showed not to be asteroids at all, but a fantastic number of hollowed-out spacecraft!

Ninurta was a highly trained warrior, knowing what to do under such circumstance, and he had no trouble admitting that he was in need of assistance. Hence, he contacted his father, Khan En.lil, and asked him for help. Unfortunately, his father was caught up in a huge battle in Sirius at that moment. He said he could assist, but it would take a while before his troops would arrive. Ninurta understood that Khan En.lil had his hands full, so he didn’t count on any help from there before it was too late. He simply had to do the best he could to defeat his brother anyway, perhaps by using a superior strategy.

Prince Ninurta was losing ground, however—especially when Lucifer’s armada started using highly technological weapons that killed mercilessly and split the Avatars of the enemy into pieces. This took the battle to a whole new level, and Prince Ninurta lost many good warriors as a consequence.

Lucifer managed to conquer Neptune and its moons as well, and Neptune has since then been his primary stronghold. Neptune is still related to En.ki/Ea up to this day. Interesting to note as well is that Neptune’s moon, Triton, and Saturn’s moon, Phoebe, are believed to have originated in the Kuiper belt<sup>216</sup>, from where this invasion started. We may want to keep in mind that these two moons, mentioned above, may be hollowed out by the AIF—hence, they are not natural satellites of Neptune and Saturn, respectively.

Lucifer’s attack was, indeed, merciless, and Ninurta understood that the chances to win this battle were very slim, but he still did his best and succeeded to make the enemy retreat on a few occasions. However, they always came back stronger. Lucifer had planned this for a long time, understanding that if he wanted to take over Ar-i-du and defeat the mighty MIKH-MAKH warriors, he could only do so by outnumbering them and hide in hollowed-out asteroids.

Soon, Lucifer had taken over Uranus as well, which was Khan En.lil's stronghold in Ar-i-du. He also strategically put a few hollowed-out craft in position around the planet where they are stationed even today.<sup>217</sup> The Uranus conquest was an important one for Lucifer because now he could take on the role as Khan En.lil, the Ruler of the Orion Empire.

However, perhaps, the greatest victory of them all, for the purpose of maintaining control over the solar system, was when Lucifer took over Saturn, also known as "Father Time," or the "Time Keeper."<sup>218</sup> This was the planet of Cronus, the Titan, which in some regard has been associated with Prince Ninurta himself (also see Level III regarding Ninurta). Whoever wants to be in control of our solar system can do it from this planet. Here, as well as in the Sun, is where the exact dimension or frequency can be set for the solar system, determining its progress, evolution, and awareness level. In the rings of Saturn, the Council of Nine had been located since the time when Queen Nin created Ar-i-du, deciding who can enter and who cannot, depending on their energy level and their intentions. The Council of Nine also took advice from higher councils, such as the Council of 24, which was a council sitting in the Court of Orion.

Now, however, the Council of Nine was defeated in its own higher dimension by Lucifer himself and his greatest warriors. I don't know if the sitting council was able to flee, if they were imprisoned by Lucifer, or if they were killed. I haven't seen any good reference regarding what happened to them, but they were, of course, displaced, and a new Council of Nine was later set up, consisting of Lucifer's people.

Saturn is also very important for another reason. Scientists have just recently discovered some abnormality at the planet's north pole, as casually discussed in a previous paper. There is something looking like a huge hurricane, with the size of two Earths. NASA explains:

"Cassini has been in orbit around Saturn for 9 years and we've been following this hexagon which surrounds the north pole. It's bigger than 2 Earths, and it's a wandering jet stream. But it's been winter in the north. So we have not been able to see what's at the center of the hexagon. But now it's spring. And what we've found at the center of the hexagon is a Saturn hurricane.

<sup>217</sup> Many moons that are orbiting the planets in our solar system are hollowed-out spaceships on watch, ready to be used with short notice. Some of these crafts have other functions than being battleships.

<sup>218</sup> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Saturn\_\(mythology\)#Festival.27s\_time#Festival.27s_time) and http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Father\_Time

This is a view from directly over the north pole, which is made possible by the orbit of the spacecraft which is now taking us over the pole. The winds are flowing at 300 miles an hour, which is 4 times hurricane force. The fluffy white clouds in the center are about the size of Texas.

We can use special filters to measure the heights of the clouds. The red are low clouds and the green are high clouds.

We call it a Saturn hurricane because it has the eye, it has the high winds, but it's different from an Earth hurricane because it's locked to the north pole. And unlike a terrestrial hurricane there's no ocean underneath. And that's one of the puzzles we're trying to figure out."<sup>219</sup>

It is interesting that there is an "eye" in the middle as well—something all hurricanes have—but there is no water underneath, so where does this "eye" lead to? Is it perhaps the same kind of "eye" as in the missing capstone of the Pyramid on the back of the One Dollar Bill? Could this eye indeed be the All-seeing Eye of Mother Goddess and her son, Prince Ninurta (as the supervisor of Ar-i-du), and then taken over by Lucifer, so that it now is known as the Eye of Lucifer? This is perhaps something to ponder.

BUT, it's getting weirder. Not only do we have an abnormal consistent hurricane blowing at the north pole of Saturn, but this hurricane is in the shape of a hexagon. This mystery was revealed by NASA, but probably was known to the public because of the article at NaturalNews.com, where a moving picture clearly shows the shape of a hexagon.<sup>220</sup>

From what we know thus far, do we have any indicators of what this hexagon might be? We know that there is a stargate on Saturn, which not only leads in and out of this solar system, but also connects our Ar-i-du with Pesh-Meten, the commercial galactic highway, which follows the spirals of the galaxy. Pesh-Meten is starting at the Galactic center and is moving outward, following the Orion Arm, passing our solar system, and continuing out of the Milky Way toward the Andromeda Galaxy, approximately 2.2 million light-years away. Saturn's stargate was once known as "Ninurta's Gate," and was highly protected. Still, with an armada such as Lucifer's, Queen Nin's MIKH-MAKH warriors lost that stronghold too, and Lucifer is now in charge of the stargate, deciding who is allowed to enter and who is allowed to leave the solar system. This stargate has been protected for eons, and after the Deluge, it was permanently closed. Lately, however, it seems as if it's been opened again, for reasons unknown to me, and discarnate souls can potentially leave the solar system through that stargate. Such souls, who have seen through the manipulation and refuse to play along, will no longer be held prisoners for a few reasons. One reason is because it breaks the Law of Free Will to stop them, but these souls can also become a liability for the AIF if they are forced to reincarnate again because the AIF would have to put more efforts into these souls in later incarnations. Otherwise, they will sooner or later interfere with the AIF's dark plans. Also, Lucifer and his minions let them go, using them as a "pay off," as discussed in Level II. Each soul group is supposed to be able to evolve, and by letting some evolved souls leave the solar system, the AIF believe that they have proof that they let souls evolve and "move on."

In the ancient past, however, it was very bad news that Lucifer took over Saturn, which was Ninurta's best stronghold in the Ar-i-du system. This was the moment when Ninurta believed that the battle was lost. Still, he stayed, trying to save what could be saved. He needed to safeguard the Living Library, which consisted not only of Tiamat, but also of Mars, which was a sister planet to Tiamat at one point and a beautiful planet on its own merit. A lot a beautiful creations had arisen on these two worlds, and Ninurta wanted to save them at almost any cost. He also knew that his mother's Fire was burning in the center of both Gaia and Mars. Venus, as well, was at that time inhabited, but from what I can tell, not by humans. The planet was still under Ninurta's control and could have been an outpost in another dimension. Some say, however, that a species developed on that planet, but left at one point in time. This story is told, among other places, in the RA Material.<sup>221</sup>

Because we discussed it in details in Level II, I am not going to go into the details of the Titan War in this paper, but the result is that Tiamat, the old Living Library, was heavily bombarded at the end of the war, and a chunk of the planet broke off and was catapulted out in space, where it blew into pieces. This part of Tiamat became the asteroid belt. Tiamat, as a planet, survived, and the battle between Marduk and Tiamat (both as a planet and as Mother Goddess) is told in great detail in Enûma Eliš. Of course, Marduk and his father were very eager to tell this story because it told the story about their success. The Babylonian Creation Story says that Marduk slaughtered Tiamat, which symbolizes how the planet was split in two pieces. The surviving piece of Tiamat became Earth, or Gaia.<sup>222</sup>

Ninurta withdrew what was left of his troops to Mars and Tiamat, where the last resistance was going to be held. His armada surrounded both planets in order to protect them, and the most advanced weapons were used toward the DAKH.

Because of this necessary strategic move by the Original Planners, taking over Jupiter was a piece of cake for Lucifer, and as we know, Jupiter is now the planet of Zeus, which is an alias for both Lucifer/En.ki and his son, Marduk. Both Lucifer and Marduk, as the reader has seen, participated in the invasion of Ar-i-du.

The last battle was the most intense one in the Solar War. Prince Ninurta saw his brother's armada come closer and closer, and discouraged, he also realized how much bigger Lucifer's armada was. This was going to be a tough fight.

Weaponry that we are not even able to perceive in our wildest imagination was used in this battle, and Ninurta managed to reduce Lucifer's hollowed out spacecraft army considerably just by his pure intention to save his last outposts!<sup>223</sup> This was the Solar War or the War of the Titans, when the Titans, who held the position on Tiamat, were taken over by the “younger gods” — the Olympians—led by Poseidon, which is another name for En.ki/Lucifer.

There is no doubt that the explosion of Tiamat happened in the far past—there is overwhelming evidence of that. There are catastrophe researchers, such as Dr. Immanuel Velikovsky, Tom van Flandern, Paul LaViolette, Stephen Quayle, and Lt. Col. Thomas Bearden, who very precisely lay out how the event happened (some of them, such as Velikovsky, refer to two events). For those who are interested, I recommend any of these researchers’ work.

Paul LaViolette, a known researcher into the subject of exploding planets, has the following to say:

The technology required (for interstellar communication) is the same as that used in particle accelerators employed by high-energy physicists for carrying out particle collision experiments. It is also the same technology used in particle beam weapons systems such as those developed in the Pentagon’s Star Wars program. Except in this case the technology would be employed for peaceful purposes.<sup>224</sup>

And to expand it further:

...which promises to vastly extend the present state of the art. This id called beat-wave plasma accelerator is able to generate 10,000 to 10 million times stronger than those used in the Stanford accelerator. Two powerful laser beams of slightly differing frequencies are projected into a gas plasma tube to produce a “beat frequency wave” that moves through the plasma at tremendous speed.

Electrons “surfing” on this wave are then accelerated as the wave travels down the tube. A 10 meter long accelerator of this sort is theoretically capable of accelerating electrons to 100 billion electron volt energies.<sup>225</sup>

Then he concludes by elaborating on a question:

<sup>223</sup> This battle and the weaponry that was possibly used is profoundly described in Dr. Joseph P. Farrell’s book, “The Cosmic War—Interplanetary Warfare, Modern Physics and Ancient Texts.” It can be ordered at amazon.com, <http://www.amazon.com/The-Cosmic-War-Interplanetary-Warfare/dp/1931882754> . It is in many ways an excellent book, although he sometimes gets the characters wrong, like most other scholars. In his case, I’m quite sure it’s unintentional.

Could a civilization possessing advanced field projection technologies perhaps even engineer an entire supernova explosion? By establishing a field bridge between the two poles of a star and inducing a resonant electrodynamic oscillation between these two linked regions, the star might be induced to explode. Clearly, a civilization must reach a high degree of maturity if it is so [sic] wield such a technology. While it could be very beneficial if put to the proper use, it could also be used as a weapon of mass destruction if it fell into the wrong hands.<sup>226</sup>

LaViolette could be right on target. Of course, these star beings know exactly how to manipulate a star, and they certainly can make it explode if they wish to.

This gives us at least an idea of advanced weapons being involved in destroying a planet. LaViolette continues to go into details about this and discusses “phase conjugation,” which refers to a “mirror” that can retrace the path in the phase conjugating mirror. This makes the photons travel backward in time. It has to do with the angle in which you fire the weapon. In the end, you get a weapon that, when set to a target, can’t miss, even if it’s remotely fired from let’s say another solar system, thousands of light-years away.

This kind of weapon can be conceived of already today, which Paul LaViolette proves, so, even if he is on the right track, the “real deal” is probably something much more advanced. In any case, what LaViolette is talking about is bad enough—it means that it will be very hard to defend ourselves and our solar system against a weapon like that, regardless of which tactics we use—especially so, if the weapon is targeted and fired without the knowledge of the target place. This shouldn’t shock anybody because we know that the AIF is in possession of very advanced weaponry, but it’s still a chilling thought, and it puts things in perspective. Then, naturally, the opposite side, which would be the followers of the Matriarch, has at least the same capabilities themselves.

As I said, Enûma Eliš, Tablet 4, tells the story about Lucifer/En.ki and Tiamat, although the name “Marduk” is constantly used. I don’t know for sure if he was the one who split Tiamat in two, but it is irrelevant because both Marduk and his father were in on it. Also, there is no doubt that the AIF’s mission, led by Lucifer, was as follows:

<sup>226</sup> Ibid., p. 127, op. cit. Farrell, p. 124, op cit.

13. O Marduk, thou art our avenger!
14. We give thee sovereignty over the whole world.
15. Sit thou down in might, be exalted in thy command.<sup>227</sup>

Here Lucifer's minions are saluting him for taking on this task, and they want him, Lucifer, to be the King of the World, and they will be loyal to the cause under his sovereign command.

If someone thinks that Tiamat, in this case, is only a person, the tablet quickly removes that assumption and clearly shows that we are also dealing with a planet as a celestial body. Read carefully—especially Line 90:

87. Then Tiamat heard these words,
88. She was like one possessed, she lost her reason.
89. Tiamat uttered wild piercing cries,
90. She trembled and shook to her very foundations...<sup>228</sup>

The word “foundations” tells us that Marduk is not fighting a human but a whole planet, presumably, with people and other life forms on it. It also shows that our mythology is disclosing a lot about our past—a past which scientists have no interest in exploring. As long as this is the case, people will never learn—not until they are willing to look into our myths are we going to be able to know our past. Even though our history has been tampered with, it's still more correct than the official story that we learn in school.

The damage that was done seems like a lot when we look at the asteroid belt, but although there is a huge quantity of asteroids floating around, it was only a small piece of Tiamat that was torn off, and the rest of the planet was fairly intact, from what I have concluded. In Level II, I understood that half of the planet was destroyed and the other half lost its atmosphere and became barren, except for some life that survived under the surface. This, I have learned, was most probably not the case. Tiamat's atmosphere<sup>229</sup> was not severely damaged, and the life on the planet survived to a large degree, although some of it was heavily flooded. Earthquakes, hurricanes, and volcano eruptions, of course, occurred, killing many living creatures, including some of the Namlú'u. The planet was in need of restoration afterward, but the damage was, as mentioned earlier, fairly minor.

Let us go back again and finish up what happened when Tiamat was hit. The Titans, under Prince Ninurta's command, were giants—beings of very large stature, as were the Namlú'u at that point, although they decreased in height with time on the smaller Gaia—the planet that survived. When the planet decreased in size, so did the life forms on the planet—in general. On a smaller planet, smaller creatures normally have a better chance to survive in the dense environment than larger beings do. Therefore, almost everything decreased in height after a while, even if it took generations until it happened on a grander scale. The dinosaurs, for example, developed on the larger Tiamat, which orbited the Sun from a slightly farther distance from the Sun than the Earth does today. It was because of Tiamat's larger size that the vessels/bodies that the Titans inhabited were naturally much larger in stature than today's human. The Pleiadians say that some of the giants in ancient times could reach a height of three hundred feet, which is approximately one hundred meters (Steven Quale's research seems to verify this, as well)!

When Tiamat exploded, it created some devastating effects on the rest of the solar system. Planets were slightly thrown out of orbit, and Mars was hit by the debris, and as a consequence, its atmosphere was sucked out in space, and all life on the surface died, almost in an instant. Mars became the Red Planet—a desert world. Even today, we can see the scar on Mars' surface, where it was hit by the debris from Tiamat.

This major event stopped the war for a while. Despite the fewer number of soldiers in his army, Prince Ninurta had fought well, and Lucifer's armada was severely reduced, and for a while, Lucifer had to retreat farther back in the solar system.

This gave Ninurta some time and space to return to the wounded Tiamat to see how badly she was hurt. He found that although catastrophes had happened on the surface and land and water in some regions had changed location, many beings, and much of the Living Library in general, had survived. This was a big relief, and he and his Helpers (the Vulcans) quickly restored and repaired what was needed in order to save the planet on a long-term basis. Tiamat was gone, but Gaia had survived, and so had Ninurta's Mountain Paradise.

The armistice didn't last very long, however. Suddenly, Lucifer's armada had stationed itself around Gaia, ready to take over. The skies were filled with fire, and deadly weaponry was used. Ninurta knew that this was the end, and it was time to leave—he no longer had a choice. He hurried up to warn the rest of the surviving Vulcans, and some managed to flee with him, while some of them stayed on Gaia, unwilling to leave. They wanted to remain with the Namlú'u and the Living Library even if they would be killed.

Prince Ninurta, followed by a crew of Vulcans and MIKH-MAKH warriors, fled through the stargate of Saturn and returned to Orion in the last moment before Lucifer took possession of the gate. The War of the Titans was over, and it had been devastating. Lucifer, however, was in a wonderful mood because he was now in charge of his mother's, father's, and brother's Living Library, and he had also managed to insult his mother by defeating her as Tiamat, the Living Planet.

Some of the Vulcans who stayed behind were killed and slaughtered, while others were imprisoned in Tartarus, the Underground prison, which the Olympian gods created for the Titans.<sup>230</sup>

When Lucifer took over, it means that he took over everything. Once he had taken charge of the planets of Ar-i-du, together with their moons, he also took over the "personae" of the Gods whom he had defeated. By taking over Uranus, he could take on the persona of "Anu," also known as Khan En.lil, Abzu, Anshar, etc., which I showed in Paper 2.

The following excerpt from Enûma Eliš is very telling and proves my story in just a few lines. We can see here that En.ki and his son, Marduk, were fighting against their own mother, the Goddess, just like I've said for such a long time now:

39. He set the lightning in front of him,
40. With burning flame he filled his body,
41. He made a net to enclose the inward parts of Tiamat,
42. The four winds he stationed so that nothing of her might escape;...
43. The South wind and the North wind and the East wind and the West wind
44. He brought near to the net, the gift of his father Anu,<sup>231</sup>

The above excerpt is, obviously, from "Marduk's" fight with Tiamat. The emphasis on Line 44 is mine. If we look at this excerpt, it describes the battle in which Tiamat, the Goddess, was defeated. But take a deeper look—what is it telling us? It's telling us that Marduk, in Line 44, brought near to the net, the gift of his father, Anu. This can be interpreted in two ways, but both ways are showing En.ki's direct involvement in defeating his own mother. It proves that En.ki and

---

<sup>230</sup> Tartarus (or Tartaros) is used as a dungeon of torment and suffering for the wicked, and as a prison for the Titans. This was the place, according to Plato, where souls were judged after death and where the wicked received punishment (an equivalent to Hell, I would presume). <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tartarus> his son are impostors, beyond any reasonable doubt. Let us look at the two ways in which we can interpret this text, as I see it:

1. The gift came from Marduk's father, Anu, it says. If so, "Marduk" presented in these lines is not En.ki's son, but En.ki himself, who brought the gift from his father, whom we know is Anu/Khan En.lil.
2. Anu in this case is not Khan En.lil, but En.ki, portraying himself as "Anu," which means he is giving the net to his son, Marduk, in order for Marduk to slay Tiamat, his grandmother—En.ki's mother.

As the readers can see, it doesn't matter if we interpret the text as in number 1, or number 2—we still get a similar story, which means that both En.ki and his son, Marduk, were directly involved in "slaying" Mother Goddess. The first line also talks about "lightning," which is typical for Zeus, who is connected with lightning and thunder. Zeus, in general, is Lucifer, aka En.ki, but on occasion, Marduk took on that name as well.

Fig. 3. "Prince Ninurta, followed by a crew of Vulcans and MIKH-MAKH warriors, fled through the stargate of Saturn and returned to Orion in the last moment, before Lucifer took possession of the gate (note the symbol of the vagina in the middle of the fire inside the stargate)."

I would still say that number 2 is the more correct interpretation of the two because why would Anu/Khan En.lil give the net to Marduk so he can slay his consort, Queen Nin? Hence, En.ki is here portraying himself to the scribe as Anu, giving the net to his son, in order to make the process short when slaying Mother Goddess. We are going to see a lot of how Lucifer/En.ki, after he took over Ar-i-du, is showing himself off as one of the older Gods, such as father Khan En.lil and mother Queen Nin (also known as Lady Nin).

Although the forgeries are quite cleverly done, the truth becomes very obvious once we examine the records that we have at our convenience. Perhaps Sitchin thought he would get away with it because there was no Internet when he wrote the major parts of his “Earth Chronicles,” and maybe he counted on that no one would care to check his work because they could not read the Sumerian language. Other impostors, such as Barbara Marciniak’s “Pleiadians,” who are self-proclaimed “Enkiites,”<sup>232</sup> promote both Sitchin and Michael Tellinger (“Slave Species of the Gods”) in their recent lectures. It becomes easier and easier to see who is friend and who is foe.

I will show much more in these papers how records have been rewritten and distorted, but I also want to show the reader the real history of mankind, backed up by relevant sources, so that the reader can see—beyond reasonable doubt—who is our friend and who is our enemy.

II. In the Aftermath of the Solar War

There are very few records available of Planet Gaia’s very early years. Our planet is much, much older than scientists claim (which is 4.5-5 million years old), and many early civilizations were present on Earth before my own story begins.<sup>233</sup> We are talking about the Titan War and events that happened what we think is a long ago, when in fact, if we consider Tiamat’s/Gaia’s age, are very recent. A half of a million years is nothing compared with the planet’s real age.

The takeover of the solar system by Lucifer after his Fall from Heaven is written about in many esoteric writings, my own papers aside, and Manly P. Hall, the world-famous researcher on Freemasonic history and teachings, mentions Lucifer and his Fall from Heaven in his research. Dr. Joseph P. Farrell, who has been writing extensively about the “Anunnaki” and the Exploding Planet, says the following about Manly P. Hall’s exposure on this subject in footnote #30 of his book, “Cosmic War,” Chapter 9:

<sup>232</sup> In a lecture from the beginning of 2013, the Pleiadians say that they have worked together with En.ki since the beginning of the nanosecond, 1987. The Pleiadians are embracing the Sitchin version of our history, although they admit to that he made a few errors.

...it is worth noting that [Manly P.] Hall records that in some versions of the esoteric tradition, the solar system itself becomes “Lucifer’s realm” following his fall and exile from heaven (Hall, op. cit., p. 473)<sup>234</sup>

Who the star races were that built those civilizations, we don’t know at this time. Right now, for the purpose of this story, it’s probably not extremely important, but depending on how these very early events turned out, it may have some unknown effects for us on today’s events. If so, I’m sure that the history of these very ancient civilizations will be revealed someday.

What we know is that long before Lucifer landed on Tiamat, it was inhabited by Titans of impressive stature, and they were here on behalf of the Goddess. In charge of Terra was Prince Ninurta, who created the first Golden Age, which lasted for a very long time.

We can now, with all the overwhelming evidence out there, comfortably state that there was a planet in our solar system, which exploded. Although scholars are divided regarding details about this planet, I am saying, with quite some certainty, that it was a predecessor of our own planet Earth.

Scholars, such as LaViolette and Velikovsky, say that planets just don’t explode by themselves, unless someone makes them explode, and they both spent a lot of time to scientifically explain why this is the case. Of course, then the question arises, who had such technology that they could make a planet explode? Certainly not mankind. It becomes obvious that the exploding planet must have been destroyed with extremely advanced weaponry of such a kind that we humans up until this day can’t comprehend its power.

Zechariah Sitchin, the Pleiadians, and a few other sources indicate that the “Anunnaki” landed on Tiamat around 500,000 years ago<sup>235</sup>, so this is the time span I’ve been working with as well throughout all the levels of learning. The explosion of the planet is also, by most scholars, said to have happened around that time.

Lucifer’s punishment for rebelling against his parents was expulsion from the Court of Orion, the so-called Satania—the inner sanctions of the Orion Empire and the KHAA—but that doesn’t mean he couldn’t move around freely in other parts of the Universe. Tiamat was Prince Ninurta’s designated domain—his own Garden of Edin (in fact, the first Garden of Eden)—but his brother had defeated him in a devastating war, and Tiamat, now being called Gaia, or Earth, was now his domain—or rather, that’s what he wanted to believe. Orion laws are not very different from ours when it comes to theft. If you take something that does not belong to you, without permission, you’re a thief. If you take over a planet, or a solar system, that doesn’t belong to you, you’re a thief and an impostor. This means, that just like in our society, you get penalized for having committed these crimes—once you’re caught.

<sup>235</sup> Scholars are using different names for this planet, such as Maldek, Marduk, Terra, and Earth.

The reader may wonder where the word “Edin” or “Eden” stems from. We know that Ninurta is from Orion, so we can presume that Edin is an Orion word. I have also suggested earlier that the Sumerian language is based on the Orion language and is, therefore, broken down similarly. Thus, we can with fairly good accuracy break down the word “EDIN.” One word for “mother” is AYA, from what I’ve learned, and it is very plausible, in this case, that the first letter “E” stands for “AYA,” if we compare with other Orion/Sumerian words. The letter “D” in Sumerian and Orion languages is interchangeable with “T”, which denotes “feminine”. Thus, we have AYA.D.AN, or AYA.DAN, where “AN” means “Heaven, the Orion Empire,” as we discussed in Level II. The Garden of AYA.DAN, “The [Divine] Feminine Mother of Heaven, the Orion Empire,” then with time became “ED.IN,” “Edin,” or “Eden.”

We are talking a lot about planets as “real estate,” and I spent a lot of space to explain this in Level I. Planets, and even more so, star systems are taken over quite often by conquering races, and according to the Pleiadians, conquest is a part of the development in more advanced civilizations.<sup>236</sup> I also explained that if a conquering race takes over a star system, they consider themselves being the new “owners.” This needs some further clarification.

Theft is theft, no matter how we look at it, and if a planetary race is evolving, it is considered a high crime to interfere with that species’ evolution, so in that sense, conquering races are out on very thin ice. A conquering race who takes over such a planet will later have a very hard time getting into the “universities” and get access to the upper levels of the electromagnetic spectrum. Before they can get in, they have to make a lot of amends. Interestingly enough, Barbara Marciniak’s Pleiadians say in their book, “Bringers of the Dawn,” that they have contacted us humans for two major reasons:

3. They want us to evolve naturally rather than through technology because they found out that it was at this time (from their future perspective)—in the nanosecond—that we humans branched off into different timelines, and the timeline that ended up where they now exist, created a tyranny, which they now are trying to eliminate by helping us evolve. If they succeed, their own timeline will be changed accordingly.

4. They are making amends to the Goddess for coming to Earth in the ancient past and mating with humans—something that is considered a universal crime.

The Pleiadians are, therefore, a typical example of how an intruding race, sooner or later, has to make amends for having committed crimes such as these. Then, in the Pleiadians' case, it's up for debate whether they are honest in what they're saying or not. Are they trying to make amends? They are working with En.ki—so they say—and this means that if they are trying to make amends, so is En.ki, or En.ki is tricking them. So far, I haven't seen any evidence, whatsoever, that En.ki is making amends—quite the contrary.

At any rate, if a conquering race takes over a planet that is abandoned or barren, it's okay for them to claim it as theirs, if they first ask for permission from any star race that may live in the sun of that solar system. If no such star race exists, it's my understanding that an outside species may claim a certain planet in that particular solar system as their own.

Fig. 4. The rings of Saturn

My case in point is that Lucifer had no rights to Ar-i-du whatsoever because it was undergoing evolution, and a very sensitive experiment was in progress. In addition, he used overwhelming military power in order to take over what had never been his. In fact, since the day Khan En.lil and Queen Nin decided that Prince Ninurta would become the heir of Orion, Prince Lucifer had no claim to anything—he was “just” a prince. He could have been assigned certain areas by his parents if he had played his cards better.

I understand if many readers are wondering why the Orion Empire have let Lucifer rule Earth for so many millennia without coming down to put him to justice. The answer is quite simple but mainly overlooked. If the Empire would come back with a large enough armada, Lucifer wouldn't stand a chance in a confrontation, but on the other hand, Lucifer has an important ace up his sleeve—he's got an evolving race under his control. If Orion would attack, he would definitely use humankind as his shield, and the Empire would have to kill this race and probably everything else on this planet as well because weapons of mass destruction would inevitably be used. However, there have been a few times in history when the Gods have considered coming back anyway, but changed their minds—they do not want mankind terminated. Still, it's by grace we are still breathing air here on Earth. We could have been eliminated more than once! In addition, if Lucifer would be backed into a corner, he wouldn't hesitate to destroy our planet and terminate what he considers his own creation—us!

Despite the ace up his sleeve, Lucifer is still afraid of Orion and has always been. He does not want to interfere too much with Free Will because if he does, he is pushing it. Instead, he has used what he is absolutely best at—manipulation and seduction. Lucifer learned all he knows from his mother, and as with any knowledge, it can be used to enhance life for oneself and others or for oneself at the expense of others. There is no doubt which route Lucifer took.

As soon as Lucifer had taken control of the Stargate of Saturn, he administered a new Council of Nine, made sure that the most strategic moons of the big gas planets were mined and hollowed out, and put DAKH warriors and scientists on the rest of the satellites. Military people were put to mine and drill on asteroids—both in the Kuiper belt and in the new asteroid belt between the destroyed Mars and Jupiter—in order to create more spaceships for the DAKH space army.

The Stargate of Saturn was very well guarded—Lucifer didn't want any unwanted surprises. According to many channeled sources, the Council of Nine still has a higher council they are reporting to, and I can only assume that the Higher Council of 24 is sitting in Spica, Arcturus, or Alpha Draconis, but I have no definite information on that.

The next step was to take care of business down on Gaia herself. Lucifer was very proud about what he'd achieved, and taking over Ar-i-du was a very important part of his Bigger Plan, which I am soon going to reveal to the reader.

Lucifer found Gaia being mostly intact—his brother had done a good job restoring the planet after the war. He didn't like this half-naked androgynous people running around on the planet, however, but for the moment, he let them be. He had plans for them later.

III. The Mining Operations, and Lucifer Becomes “En.ki”

The next thing Lucifer did was to chase down the Vulcans who were still left here on Earth, and when he found and captured them, most of them were brutally murdered. A small faction of these “Ladies of Fire” were imprisoned underground and were later used as slave labor together with the first human hybrids.

When that was taken care of, Lucifer took his best scientists and brightest administrators and went on a “sightseeing” tour around Gaia to get an idea of what kind of planet his mother and his brother had created. He was quite impressed by the Living Library and all the beauty they had created, but personally he thought it was a waste of time. He couldn't see any signs that the planet had been mined, which puzzled him. This was good, however, because he needed gold and precious stones, which he found Gaia having an abundance of. For now, he definitely needed the gold for life extension and to shield the drifting planet, which was soon going to come in from the Sirius system, from radiation. Nibiru wasn't too far away from Ar-i-du, and it needed more gold—therefore, it was essential that he started a mining project soon.

In the northeast, in what today is the southern part of Siberia in Russia, Lucifer's team found a closed mountain area, which was protected by some strong magic, and none on his team could figure out how it worked. This made Lucifer furious because he knew that something valuable was hidden in there—something that his mother and his brother were hiding from him. He might not have been able to break into that mountain area when he first tried, but he swore that in due time, he was going to find out how to do it!

It was in South Africa, however, that he found the real gold mine—literally and figuratively. This planet seemed to have everything in abundance, but here was one of the most lucrative gold veins on the planet—a “gold aorta” was probably a better term. This was where he was going to start his major digging. He also found some good places in South America, which he wanted to exploit.

Fig. 5. "The remnants of these ancient gold mines are still evident...as gigantic holes in the ground."

Lucifer returned to his home, located in the area where the Tigris and Euphrates rivers ran in Mesopotamian times. This is where he had his palace, which in Akkadian days became known as E-Abzu, after Abzu, which was his father, whom he considered he had defeated in the Titan War. Abzu was one of the personae Lucifer took over. From E-Abzu he also took his name Ea, which was one of the names he was known under during the Akkadian times. However, because he foremost thought of himself as the self-proclaimed Lord of the Earth (Lucifer doesn't call Earth Gaia—he calls it "Ki"), he was known as En.ki in the early days, before the Akkadian/Babylonian Empire arose ("En" meaning "Lord," and "Ki" meaning "earth"—therefore, "Lord Earth"). Because Lucifer is an impostor and not the Lord, or King, of the Earth, the title En.ki is highly inappropriate, as is Ea, because he stole his father's domain and has no right to claim the name and title, Abzu. I will still call him by these names, for historical reasons only—these are the main names or titles Lucifer was known by in the old stone tablets, clay tablets, and scrolls. However (and this is very important to understand), as we saw in Paper 2, En.ki used an array of names and titles, which has made it extremely hard for scholars to get the story correct. I am sure there were those who were on the right track, but they were heavily suppressed and intimidated by the establishment and never got their work published. Those who did get their work published were those who were willing to follow the directions from the establishment and their superiors.

By now, we all know the main story of what happened here on Earth when En.ki started mining in South Africa. In the beginning, he was using his own people, who were working day and night to mine gold and precious stones. The remnants of these ancient gold mines are still evident in South Africa today, as gigantic holes in the ground. The mining procedures are told in details in Zecharia Sitchin's books, and he got at least the major part of that story correct from what I can see in my own research.

Records indicate that the miners here on Earth started complaining very loudly after a while and felt that they were treated like slaves. Some of them started screaming for "En.lil," wording that they would rather have him back than being under the command of En.ki. This is where many people have gone wrong—including myself in the past. The truth is that neither Khan En.lil nor Prince En.lil (Ninurta) were present on Gaia after the Titan War. Sitchin was the one, I believe, who told the story of the two brothers working together here on Earth, and that is not correct. Why would Khan En.lil or Prince Ninurta be here, working together with En.ki, when they were archenemies? It didn't happen. This doesn't mean that Ninurta and Khan En.lil were not in contact with En.ki—they were—but rarely in a 3-D physical form. When they were meeting in the physical, it was always outside Ar-i-du. They did, however, communicate in different ways with En.ki and his team, as we shall see, without being physically present. The problem often lies in misinterpretations of records, falsified records, and En.ki and his cohorts taking on the personae of the Gods and the Goddess, when none of them were here. Of course, many of the conflicts and internal battles that went on between the gods did happen, despite the fact that "En.lil" and his side of the Royal bloodline were absent from Earth. The thing that is missing, however, is that many of the conflicts described in Sitchin's work, and others, did not happen here on Earth, but in other places in the cosmos. This is an entirely new concept for most people, but we will, of course, discuss much more of this as we go along.

At first, En.ki didn't listen to the moaning and groaning from his "workers" (I would call them slaves) because they produced a lot of gold and precious stones—therefore, Lucifer gave them his deaf ear. Then, when Nibiru arrived in the solar system, En.ki was ready to help them with their radiation problem. The gold that had previously been spread in Nibiru's atmosphere was almost gone, but now En.ki had gold in abundance and could create a good protective shields around the planet. Thus, the inhabitants could come up to the surface after having spent most of their time underground.

Normally, we hear the term šar (pronounced, "shar") when people are talking about Nibiru, where a šar equals one Nibiru year, which is about 3,600 Gaia years. For simplicity, we are going to use the same term here, although it was only at first that Nibiru was orbiting Sirius and Ar-i-du, respectively, on a somewhat regular time period. Later on, En.ki made Nibiru into a giant warship, and from thereon, the planet could be maneuvered like any vessel in space.<sup>237</sup>

Eventually, the miners started rebelling against En.ki, and he had increasingly difficult time keeping them in check. This also corresponds with the time when he decided to go up north again and figure out what was hidden behind the mountains that were protected by energies stronger and stranger than any spellbound energies that En.ki had created or encountered before. So, once again he gathered his best people and went on another expedition to the mountains, which protected what today is Lake Baikal in Siberia.

What happened once Lord En.ki had managed to sneak into what is considered the Garden of Edin (or Eden) in the Bible is also told in the old Sumerian records as the "Orion and the Artemis Story". In the next paper, I want to tell the original story and add my own comments to it because it is very revealing and teaches us a slightly different version of what happened when "Satan" manipulated "Eve" to eat from the Tree of Knowledge.

<sup>237</sup> In a very recent Pleiadian lecture, they are telling us for the first time that the "Anunnaki" are travelling in hollowed-out crafts. I found that interesting because I have certainly not gotten the information about hollowed-out craft from the Pleiadians nor from Robert Morning Sky's "Terra Papers" either, although he goes into detail about that in there as well. My information regarding this subject comes from an "anonymous source", who we could say is "not from here." In that sense, the Pleiadian "revelation" about the Anunnaki's hollowed-out craft is a confirmation, at least, of my own research and of the very different sources that I'm using.

PAPER #8: “THE ORION AND ARTEMIS MYTH,” “THE REAL STORY OF ISIS,” AND GENETIC MANIPULATION

I. Introduction to The Orion and Artemis Myth

Fig. 1. Artemis, with bow and arrow.

The Orion and Artemis Story is these days related to Greek and Roman mythology, but the story itself is much more ancient. I am telling this story to the readers because it's highly relevant to Gaia's history, and what really happened here on Earth after Prince Ninurta and most of his team managed to escape from the trap, which Lucifer tried to close after the Titan War. As usual, much of the evidence lies in our old mythology, which is nothing more and nothing less than allegories of what truly happened. The scribes—especially those who were real historians and wanted to preserve the history for coming generations—found themselves living under a regime of a controlling “god” force, which wouldn’t allow them to tell the true story. Hence, the truth had to be hidden in allegories, metaphors, and sometimes in pure fairytales. Still, it was written in such a way that those who wanted to know would find the truth in these “mythological” stories.

Artemis was, in Greek mythology, the most widely venerated of the Ancient Deities, and her Roman counterpart is Diana.<sup>238</sup> Some scholars believe that Artemis is another name for Mother Goddess herself, an idea that was actually pre-Greek.<sup>239</sup> We can see Artemis and Diana both being equated to the Goddess in many references throughout time, and if we read the story and interpret it, we can quite clearly see that this must be the case.

In mythology, Artemis and Orion were hunting partners, and they were good friends—some say that they even loved each other.<sup>240</sup> Both Artemis and Orion are often depicted with arrow and bow, as a symbol for being “hunters.” The myth says regarding Artemis: “Her symbols included the golden bow and arrow, the hunting dog, the stag, and the moon.”<sup>241</sup> Then, if we research Orion, we find that he is a great hunter as well, and he is often seen carrying a sword or a bow and arrow, being a archer (see fig. 2 below).

So, it is becoming obvious that the bow and arrow are associated with the Constellation of Orion, hence, the Orion Empire. Also, I showed in Paper 2 that Prince En.lil and Prince Ninurta are one and the same. So, lo and behold, what do we often see Ninurta carrying? Exactly! The arrow and bow! (See fig. 3 below).

Fig. 3. Ninurta, also with an arrow and a bow.

This proves that “En.lil,” as we know him from Sitchin, and most other sources, did not come from Sirius but from the Orion Empire. This is a schoolbook example of how important it is to look into mythology to understand our history, and in this case, to understand where the different gods originate from.

I would like to start by telling “The Orion and Artemis Story” from a mythological standpoint, so that afterward I can show the reader who is who in this story, and who does what to whom, and why. I will refer to references that the original story teller wanted you to see, but perhaps not those who were, and still are, in charge of this planet. This is why it can be of importance sometimes that the researchers are not “scholars,” or have a PhD in any of the subjects that may relate to ancient mythology or alternative history, etc. because as such, there is a great chance that they may already have been led to think in certain terms, which have been set by the Establishment as the norm. Usually, it's better to start without any indoctrination and look with a totally open mind. How otherwise would we be able to find our way out of the maze of information out there—information that also was manipulated by the very same Men of Power who history is supposed to reveal?

The original, ethical scribes, however, obviously took this into consideration, and perhaps—but I don't know—they counted on “ordinary people” to find the way.

i.i. The Mythological Version of the Story

Orion was Artemis's hunting champion, and they became the best of friends. Still, they never copulated—hence, they had no offspring.<sup>242</sup> Apollo noticed the close friendship between Orion and Artemis, and instantly became jealous. Therefore, he created a scorpion in order to kill Orion.<sup>243</sup>

Orion jumped into the water and tried to swim away from the scorpion, which was very determined to sting Orion. While this was ongoing, Apollo hurried over to Artemis and told her that there was a man who had raped one of her priestesses. Artemis got furious and asked Apollo who this criminal man was, and Apollo pointed at Orion, who was swimming in the water. Artemis had no idea that Orion was actually swimming for his life from the poisonous scorpion, which Apollo set after him—instead, she thought he tried to escape his fate after having been exposed for his crime.

Artemis, in her fury and sadness over how her best of friends could commit this horrible crime to one of her own priestesses, grabbed her bow, set an arrow to its string, aimed, and shot it at the swimming Orion, who was fatally wounded and died (here it is uncertain whether he actually died from both Artemis's arrow and the sting from the scorpion or solely from the arrow).

<sup>242</sup> This is important to point out, because some of the gods and goddesses (but far from all of them) were highly “incestual” and certainly polygamists. Some slept around like their lives depended on it, had sex with their own children, and even grandchildren and great grandchildren. As we will see, however, these traits were almost exclusively connected to the Luciferian bloodline—at least in ancient days. In more modern times, the hybrids (us) more often than not take on the traits of the beings who control us, so therefore we see the above undesirable traits also in some humans.

<sup>243</sup> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Orion\_\(mythology\)#Other\_sources#Other_sources). Original source is Hyginus, Ast. 2.34, quoting Istrus. Robert Graves divides The Greek Myths into his own retelling of the myths and his explanations—in retelling Hyginus, Graves adds that Apollo challenged Artemis to hit “that rascal Candaon”—this is for narrative smoothness. It is not in his source.

Afterward, when Artemis confronted the priestess, who was pointed out by Apollo to be the one who was raped by Orion, she found out that it was all a lie, and Orion had never raped her.

Artemis became inconsolable and ran out in the water, trying to revive her old friend and hunting partner, to no avail. Orion was dead!

In her grief, Artemis then flung his body into the sky, and he became the Constellation of Orion. Then she flung the scorpion, Apollo's murderous creation, into the sky as well, landing at Orion's heel and thus became the Constellation of Scorpio.

i.ii. Interpretation of the Story

On the surface, this is a story of jealousy, but the real meaning goes deeper than that. This is carefully revealing the characters of certain gods, and it's more about betrayal, manipulation, and power.

This story is told in a few different versions, depending on which scholar you are asking, but when push comes to shove, it seems like most of them agree with the story I relayed here. I agree with these scholars as well because it fits right into the story I have been trying to tell in four different series of papers.

Artemis, as we already have discussed, is the Goddess herself, but who then is Orion? Well, first, the story is very careful to point out that the Goddess and Orion did not have a sexual relationship. So, could Orion perhaps be Khan En.lil? Hypothetically, he could. In fact, although the Khan and the Queen are considered "married" from a human perspective, they do not have sex like we do. The Queen, indeed, does not even need a partner in that respect because if she wants to give birth to a son, she keeps her egg unfertilized, but if she wants a daughter, she fertilizes the egg herself, from being androgynous in nature. Although Khan En.lil could be Orion, I am confident he isn't. What we need to do is to look, not only at the mythos again, but also at other sources because Orion's origins has been quite well covered up.

A source that is perhaps not used as often as it should are the ancient tarot cards, which also relate to different gods, asterisms, and very ancient stories. In this one, Orion is correctly equated to Ninurta, Prince En.lil:

The first image is detail of Ninurta/Orion standing next to a Lion [sacred animal of Innana and symbol of Sirius], 2nd image the complete picture from the ancient Sumerian Seal of Adda. 3rd is of Ninurta enthroned with image of double headed eagle, 4th Orion and Canis Major detail from cylinder seal. Further details at end.<sup>244</sup>

Unfortunately, this website does not present the images that are referred to, but we can still point out a few quite interesting correlations between Ninurta and Orion. In the first image, Ninurta/Orion is related to Sirius via the Lion. Although the Lion is not necessarily connected to Sirius, but more so to Orion, the reference to Inanna and Sirius is correct—here showing Ninurta’s connection to Inanna more than to Sirius itself. Inanna, however, does have Sirian connections, which we will discuss later. The reference in “Image 3” to a double headed eagle, on the other hand, is a direct reference to Orion, and consequently, so is “Image 4.”

As a side note, while we’re still on the Tarot website, it also gives a relatively correct reference to the vastness of the Orion Empire:

Orion is one of the oldest known constellations. The bands of Orion refer to the three apparently equally spaced stars that form the belt of Orion, an easily identifiable locational aid, followed North they lead the eye to Aldebaran, South to Sirius, two bright stars of calendrical and navigational importance as directional and seasonal markers. Above to the right is the constellation of Taurus, to the left, Gemini.

The constellation was thought of as a cosmic giant[.]

This is quite interesting because as we can see, there were many ways by which the ancients hid the truth in plain sight “for those who have eyes to see, and ears to hear”, as the saying goes. Here it is done through the tarot cards.

However, in the end, the mythos tells it all. If we research Ninurta, we will find that he is the “God of the Hunt,”<sup>246,247</sup> and Artemis is the “Goddess of the Hunt.”<sup>248</sup> They were not lovers—in fact, they were mother and son—whose relationship is becoming distorted by a third party, Apollo.

Because this story has different versions, where in one of them, Apollo is being the liar and traitor, I chose him only to show the readers that he goes under many epithets. Another being with even more epithets, as it seems, is Zeus. Apollo's and Zeus' relation to each other is a curious and interesting one, indeed.

Most records indicate that Apollo is the son of Zeus—thus far, most scholars agree. However, that seems to be where the agreement ends. The question is, who is Zeus? Well, I showed clearly in Paper 2 that one of Lord En.ki's aliases is Zeus, and I believe that is proven beyond a reasonable doubt. So, if Apollo is the son of Zeus, who then is Apollo? The reader may have figured that out now. Yes, Apollo is an alias for Lord Marduk!

I know there are researchers who embrace Apollo as the “good guy,” so before anyone begins to associate too much with such research, it's best to think twice about who such a researcher is promoting and start looking for motives that may be counter survival to mankind. I don't mean to say that everybody who promotes Apollo as being the “good guy” is intentionally spreading disinformation, but it's disinformation, nonetheless.

In the above version of the Artemis story, the traitor and the liar is no one other than Lord Marduk. BUT, I also said that there are other versions of the story as well, and in some of them, it wasn't Apollo, but Zeus, who sent the scorpion on Orion. Either way, father and son may both be guilty of that crime. If En.ki was involved, which I see as a very high possibility, he lied to, and betrayed, both this mother (Artemis) and his brother (Ninurta).

Mind you that many of these mythos are either analogies or metaphors. Prince Ninurta was, of course, never killed—he is still alive today, as are En.ki and Marduk, but the story is telling us about the general characters of the beings involved and that some are willing to go as far as murdering their own family in order to gain power—power that they don't have, except when they steal it from others.

II. Ladies of Fire

The above interesting mythological story brings us directly to the biblical Garden of Edin and what actually happened there. We have another quite illuminating myth, showing us precisely what happened in Edin. But first, let us see how En.ki managed to break into Prince Ninurta's abandoned Mountain Paradise—the real Garden of Edin here on Earth.

En.ki was frustrated because he couldn't break the spell and the magic which stopped any intruder from entering Edin from the outside. Regardless of how much he tried, it was beyond his ability. Here was something that his mother apparently hadn't taught him, and that made him even more frustrated.

There was only one thing to do. He sat guards around the places where four rivers wriggled their way in between the high mountain sides. These rivers seemed to be the only entrances to whatever was beyond these inaccessible mountains. He put some of his most trustworthy military men to guard what looked like four entrances, and these guards had orders to contact him immediately if something out of the ordinary occurred.

Fig. 4. The magic entrance to Ninurta's Mountain Paradise—the Garden of Edin.

When something eventually did occur, En.ki just happened to be close by and hurried over as quickly as he could. It was dusk and hard to see, but one of the guards pointed him in the right direction. No one knew how it happened or where they came from, but perhaps five-hundred yards away, about a dozen female beings had suddenly become visible by the riverbed, outside the mountains. En.ki could hear them laugh, and it seemed like they were gathering something from the ground in baskets that they were carrying—it was hard to see.

En.ki grabbed a pair of binoculars with night vision to get a better view. What he saw were twelve tall and beautiful females with long, red hair. None of them were wearing any clothes, and En.ki was absolutely stunned by their beauty. He couldn't take his eyes away from them and immediately felt the urge to mate with them. He was wondering how many more of these females were on the other side of the mountains and whether there were any males there. He highly doubted that there were any males because he recognized androgyny when he saw it. Still, that wouldn't have to stop him from having sex with them. Without scaring them away, he needed to determine either how to approach them or follow them back the same way they came. Something told him, however, that if he did the latter, he would not be allowed to enter—the females would disappear, and he would lose his opportunity.

The women suddenly stopped and looked up at the moon. They pointed at it and said something which En.ki couldn't hear. He, too, looked, noticing it was a full moon. In fact, it looked much bigger back in these days because it was closer to the Earth. This allowed beings, animals, and plants to be larger in size, and taller than they are today. Not until after the Flood, 11,500 BC, did En.ki move the moon away so that it became more distant. The moon has a lot to do with locking us into this particular frequency band in which the AIF can control us.

En.ki recognized the pattern of these women—they were shamans! They had the power to put up the veil around their domains because of their shamanic abilities, he thought. They were Women of Fire!

En.ki suddenly got even more excited, but this time it was not only sexual—he could really use these women!

A few minutes later, the females were gone, as if they were disappearing in thin air, but En.ki let them go without interfering. Now he knew, and he had plans. He told his men that they didn't need to be on watch anymore, and he'll take over from there.

III. The Story of Isis

Before we continue with what En.ki did next and the exposure of his grand plan, we need to go back in time—before Marduk was even born. Because it's common knowledge that at least Marduk was involved in manipulating records (and I would add En.ki, as well), we can expect that much of the distortion is related to these two beings. This is certainly the case.

Most records say that Marduk was the son of En.ki/Ea and Damkina.<sup>249</sup> Then, if we start researching Damkina, it won't take long until we find out that she represents Mother Goddess herself in most of the texts.<sup>250</sup> Already there, we have a serious contradiction because we know from other, much more coherent research, that En.ki was never married to his mother, the Goddess. Hence, we have reasons to believe that either Damkina was not the Mother Goddess, or En.ki was never married to Damkina.

There are no convincing records saying that Damkina is not another name for the Goddess, so I believe I can say with some confidence that she actually is the Goddess. If this being the case, then with whom was En.ki married?

Of course, we also know that En.ki was very promiscuous, so the question can in itself be quite irrelevant—En.ki has children “everywhere.” However, what we are interested in right now is to establish who the mother of Marduk is. There is hardly any doubt that En.ki is his father.

This is where things become complicated, but to begin, I am going to show to the readers that Inanna, Ishtar, and Isis are all one and the same deity! Hang in there because this will turn out to be very important. Moreover, I want to hypothesize that Horus, whom according to the myth is the son of Osiris and Isis, is no one other than Marduk himself!

Many readers have probably seen the connection over time between Isis and Horus; Ishtar who nurses the god Tammuz<sup>251</sup> and Mary and Jesus, to name a few (there are more). Those who want to prove that Jesus never existed, use this as an example—they show that history in fact repeats itself and that the “Jesus myth” is nothing but the Isis/Horus and the Ishtar/Tammuz stories all over again. In fact, similar stories are used to manipulate and confuse and control people in the name of religion and cults. By telling a comparable story over time, people get hooked on different belief systems. Usually, there is one basic story that has truth to it, but the rest are just manipulated versions of the first one.

My case in point here is that just like the scholar of comparative mythology, Joseph Campbell<sup>252</sup>, I find the Isis/Horus and Ishtar/Tammuz stories identical enough to consider them being one and the same.<sup>253</sup> This means that Isis and Ishtar in that case would be the same deity.

Moreover, Ishtar and Inanna are already proven, by scholars, to be one and the same—Ishtar is her name in Babylon, and Inanna is her counterpart in Mesopotamia/Sumer.<sup>254</sup>

Then, if the above is true, the fact is that Isis, being the mother of “Horus,” is also the mother of Marduk because Horus and Marduk are one and the same. Some scholars have already made the connection that all these female deities—Inanna, Ishtar, Lilith, and Isis are identical.<sup>255</sup> En.ki in this regard is then, of course, Osiris.

There is a reason why I am revealing that En.ki and Isis are Marduk’s parents—I want to make this entire family connection known because it has a great impact upon the rest of the story.

However, there is more, as we writers usually say. Another interesting side note that gets revealed via the above hypothesis is that Isis is also Prince Ninurta’s daughter. This becomes obvious because according to the most general ancient records, Ishtar is the daughter of Ninurta,<sup>256</sup> and we just discussed that Ishtar, Inanna, and Isis are all one and the same.

I hope I haven’t lost the reader now with all these different names for the same deities. Not every star being has multiple names, but in this case, a few of them do, such as En.ki and his trolls who have taken on the names of other deities and changed names and events around as it pleases them in order to keep the control system going. Also, as noted earlier, a deity almost always had different names in different locations—depending on which time period we’re talking about.

However, to make things a little less confusing—this is the result of what we have discussed thus far:

1. En.ki’s consort is said to be Damkina, who is actually the Goddess herself, according to most records. Instead, at one point, Isis/Ishtar/Inanna became En.ki’s consort.
2. From the relationship between En.ki/Osiris and Inanna/Ishtar/Isis, Marduk, aka Horus, was born. According to many ancient records, Isis gave birth to Horus, but as we have noticed, many stories correlate, and instead I suggest that Horus and Marduk are one and the same. Their stories may differ in some regard, but they are still close enough, and the Isis/Marduk connection opens up new doors that were closed before, as the reader is about to find out.
3. Isis, according to the research I’m providing here, is also Ninurta’s (Prince En.lil’s) daughter.

This is actually all there is to it so far, but these three points are going to become very significant.

Hence, what took some explanation to reveal is showing to be quite simple when we summarize it. The big, happy family is therefore, En.ki, Isis, and Marduk. Then, from earlier discussions (see Paper 2), I have proven beyond doubts that Ninhursag and Mother Goddess are also one and the same, which means that Ninhursag was never helping En.ki engineer mankind and had nothing to do with his genetic experiments. In reality, she was strongly against them and considered what En.ki did to be a serious crime, and the destruction of her own Living Library that she and her son, Prince Ninurta, had created to near perfection was not something she looked lightly upon.

However, if we exchange Ninhursag with Isis, we are getting much closer to the truth— thus, we get the expression, “Genesis, or the ‘Genes of Isis’,” which, if I recall correctly, was coined by Michael Tsarion (researcher) but was also used by me as a title of one of my Level I papers. In other words, I am suggesting that Isis was En.ki’s female partner and master geneticist, and Isis was thus contributing her DNA to the human body, as did En.ki. Isis also has connections to the Sirius star system.<sup>257</sup>

Isis is often seen wearing a throne on her head, which indicates her royal connection to Sirius. Unbeknownst to many, however, she is also representing Ursa Major and Ursa Minor, the Greater and the Lesser Bear, through her father, Prince Ninurta, and her grandparents, the Queen of Orion and Khan En.lil. Allegedly, it was after her encounters with En.ki that she was “rewarded” the Throne of Sirius, as he himself had claimed that domain after some “agreements” with the locals. However, Isis’ bloodline is still that of Orion, through her father, Ninurta. It is still true that we humans have Sirian blood running in our veins, but that is even truer when it comes to the Global Elite bloodlines—something I will talk more about later.

iii.i. A Backdoor into the KHAA?

Lord En.ki’s plan was simple but, in his own eyes, ingenious. He knew that he would never inherit the Throne of Orion, regardless of what he was trying to do in order to win the Queen’s sympathies—therefore, he had to try any other measures he could think of.

His new plan was that if he managed to get Isis as his bride, he would have another foot into the Inner Sanctuaries of the Orion Empire on her merit, and best of all—she was his brother’s daughter! He knew that Ninurta would hate to see him married to her daughter, so that became part of his revenge. He wanted to make sure that everybody knew not to mess with Prince Lucifer!

Proud of himself and his brilliant ego, he left for Ursa Minor, where Isis was dwelling at the moment. He found her and spoke with her with his seducing and most charming voice, which he’d been so famous for while he was still Prince Lucifer. The first step of his plan was to manipulate her to come with him to Gaia. He said that he wanted to put things in perspective and explain to her why he thought he’d been treated so badly by the Orion Court. He also wanted to show Isis who she really was. His plan worked, and they both went back to Earth.

As soon as En.ki had the chance, he took Isis aside and brutally raped her. According to Isis herself, at a later account, there was nothing she could do to stop him at that moment—there was no one else around, and she had no crystal or other communication device which she could use to quickly ask for help. She realized that she had been too gullible, but the fact remained—before she knew it, the rape was complete.

This rape produced a son, who was later going to become very famous (or infamous, rather). The son’s name was Marduk.

At first, Isis was crushed and didn't know what to do, but En.ki consoled her and continued to manipulate her with his soothing voice. He even wrote a poem to her, although the poem was more about En.ki's own magnificence. I am not sure how she took that, but ultimately, En.ki manipulate her to be what he wanted her to be. This is from Enûma Eliš:

*My father, ruler above and below,

*My great brother, ruler of all the lands, gathered all the me together,
placed the me in my hands.
From the Ekur, house of Enlil,
I passed on the arts and crafts to my Abzu, Eridu.*

*I am the true offspring, sprung from the wild ox.
I am a leading son of An.
I am the great storm the breaks over the 'Great Below':
I am the great lord over the land.*

*I am the first among the rulers.
I am the father of all the lands.
I am the big brother of the gods,
the hegal is perfected in me.*

*I am the seal-keeper above and below.
I am cunning and wise in the lands.
I am the one who directs justice alongside An, the king, on the dais of An.*

I am the one who having gazed upon the Kur, decrees the fates alongside Enlil:

he has placed in my hands the decreeing of fates at the place where the sun rises.

*I am the one Nintu really cares for:
I am the one Ninhursag gave a good name.*

*I am the leader of the Anunna-gods.
I am the one born a leading son of An.<sup>258</sup>*

After seducing and hypnotizing Isis and feeding her with more “what’s in it for you and what’s in it for me?” he threw out the punch line. “Beautiful Lady of the Lesser Heavens! Neither you, nor I, can ever be the ruler of Orion on his or her own, and I think you are born a Queen—but not over simple domains such as Sirius, Ursa Major, or Ursa Minor. You deserve the title, “Queen of Orion,” and I deserve to be King, and you know it! I’m the firstborn, so why did they choose my brother before me? Do you think that’s right? Come and marry me, and we will make a strong bloodline. Together we can bypass your father and become the true heirs of Orion. What do you think?”

Isis looked at En.ki and saw his power—or at least the power he seductively emitted toward her—and then looked at her little son, lying in the cradle, and thought that she wanted the best for her son. Hence, she nodded and said yes to En.ki’s proposal. En.ki smiled inside—his plan had been magnificent, indeed!

En.ki, Isis, and Marduk, thus born here on Earth, now became a family, and En.ki had people create a wedding for the two—a wedding, which had to be the most magnificent one in the history of Sector 9, said En.ki. Thereafter, the two became one.

Later, when Marduk grew up to become a man and a trained DAKH warrior, he was given Alpha Draconis (Thuban) as his domain, as well as Ursa Minor. These were both strategic star systems, and En.ki told his son to conquer and expand their domains from there, in the direction toward Orion.

Both Alpha Draconis and Ursa Minor were already occupied by star races, but Marduk had a huge amount of well-trained DAKH troops backing him up, and both star systems were taken by surprise and were relatively easily conquered. Ursa Minor and Draco were both Orion domains before Marduk conquered them and made the inhabitants into slaves and DAKH soldiers, with the purpose to expand his armada. Those who refused to follow Marduk were brutally killed and stripped of their Avatars, meaning that their souls were doomed. Still, many died a heroic death—a death that was definite—rather than to join the traitor in his army against their own Queen and King. Most, however, were too frightened to say no to Marduk.<sup>259</sup>

<sup>258</sup> Poem by En.ki to Inanna/Ishtar/Isis, probably spoken after she had been promised the title as “Queen of Earth,” and a future Queen of Orion. However, she later got cold feet, as we shall see. This poem was pasted from <http://www.gatewaystobabylon.com/myths/texts/enki/enkiworld.htm>.

Thus, we have what many call the Dracos, the Dragons of Alpha Draconis, and fiery dragons they are—former members of the Orion Empire and in blood tightly connected to the Dragon Queen herself—the Queen of the Stars.

(Note: There is another hypothesis that Isis was actually one of the Ladies of Fire in the Garden of Edin—still being Ninurta’s daughter, however. En.ki knew who she was as soon as he saw her, and raped her right there, and the son she bore from that rape was still Marduk.

The two versions have the same outcome, and the only difference is when and where the rape had taken place. For the sake of our continuing story, it doesn’t matter which version we subscribe to—the important thing is the rape, which will have, as we will see, some serious consequences. Also, the rape makes Marduk a bastard son.

IV. The Miners’ Rebellion

After the marriage, there was a long period of peace on Gaia, and Lord En.ki expanded his domains to Africa, North America, South America, and Europe. However, before the Deluge, his Palace stood in Eridu, in ancient Mesopotamia.

It should be mentioned here because of its significance that although En.ki was in charge of the Stargate of Saturn, it didn’t mean that other beings couldn’t enter Ar-i-du, our solar system, if they wanted to take the chance. En.ki’s DAKH warriors were famous for their brutality, and everybody in this part of the Universe knew who Lucifer was, and they knew about his brutal rebellion. Hence, very few star beings came past this way.

Unfortunately for galactic business, Gaia sat like a plug in the middle of Pesh-Meten, the Intergalactic Highway, which many beings from everywhere in the Universe who had business in the Milky Way Galaxy chose in order to enter and exit the Galaxy. This was of course bad business, both for Orion and for other smaller empires in our galaxy. However, all the star races had strict orders from Queen Nin not to interfere with what was happening on Gaia. There were many star species who objected to this—they wanted Lucifer gone from Ar-i-du once and for all—but if someone tried to create a war with Prince Lucifer, it was also seen as a war declaration against Orion, which no one wanted.

<sup>259</sup> Was it a break of the Law of Free Will what Marduk did here? It can definitely be debated, but apparently, the star races who lived in these star systems were considered advanced enough to be able to defend themselves—therefore, Marduk may have gotten away with it. Otherwise, I have a hard time believing that he would have done it in this manner, when already being on Orion’s bad side.

The reason for the Orion Queen to act like this was that she knew her son, and he had often showed the same pattern. If someone threatened him, and he saw that he was outnumbered, he would use the existing humans on Gaia as a shield and threaten to kill them if someone attacked. This was also the main reason why the Orion Empire, which otherwise could defeat En.ki quite easily, didn't interfere. If they did, it would be the end of the Mother Goddess's Experiment. At that time—before the Flood—she was still thinking about other ways to get Lucifer out of there.

On Gaia, the miners—especially in Africa and in South America—started complaining about long work hours and how badly they were treated. After all, they were En.ki's people. Why did he treat them so cruelly? They hardly ever saw the light of day, and long hours in the mines wore them down. After a long time of accepting their situation, one day they rebelled. En.ki didn't see it coming and was not really prepared, so the rebellion took a while to get under control, and many of the AIF workers died in the process. The mining crew was now quite reduced, and En.ki needed more workers (Sitchin and others claim that it was "En.lil" who was the tyrant who treated the miners badly, but this is not true—En.lil was not even on Earth at that time. Both Khan En.lil and Prince En.lil had business elsewhere).

As we know, En.ki had now determined who were dwelling on the other side of the Mountains in the East. Hence, his next step was to find out how many Ladies of Fire were hiding in that domain. He already had a plan how to get in there without using force. How En.ki did it is also written into our own mythology, so I am going to tell the story based both on mythology and then from a more direct viewpoint, which explains exactly what happened.

V. Rape and Manipulation in the Garden of Edin

As we know from before, the AIF, and almost all other beings, are interdimensional and know how to shapeshift. How this is done has been described in many of my previous papers. Shapeshifting was also what Lord En.ki was going to use in order to get into what once was Prince Ninurta's Paradise on Earth—his Garden of Edin.

Greek mythology tells the Artemis Story in quite some detail, so we are going to borrow from there to show what En.ki did in the Garden of Edin. He patiently waited until a few Ladies of Fire showed up by the riverbed and quickly cloaked himself as Artemis, the Mother Goddess.<sup>260</sup> In Greek mythology, the being who cloaked himself was Zeus, who we have proven in Paper 2, and elsewhere, to be Lord En.ki.

Prince Ninurta was the one who had been given the responsibility for the Living Library and the Namlú'u, the androgynous human race, which the Goddess was very proud of. Also, as the Artemis Story tells us, "Artemis was very protective of the chastity of her nymphs and was angered when they didn't keep their purity."<sup>261</sup> In other words, the Lús (short for Namlú'u) were like the jewel in her crown.

Prince Lucifer, as En.ki, cloaked as Artemis, now used all of his actor skills and smooth talking to convince the nymphs that he was the Goddess herself, who had returned to help her creation in this hopeless situation. He looked at them and found them enormously fair with their black skin, long red hair, glowing like fire, and their slender, perfect bodies. He couldn't help but admire this beautiful creation.

Being bluffed by this false Artemis, the nymphs showed him the way into Edin. They removed the spell (En.ki was making sure he understood how it was done) and let him into the most beautiful Paradise that had ever been created. Even En.ki was stunned when he saw the pure beauty in there. Clear, blue rivers were running through what seemed to be an endless landscape of forests, mountains, waterfalls, and wonderfully created gardens, with birds and animals in abundance. None of them bothered the other — there were no predators and there was no prey. All living things could still obtain their life energy from the sunlight.

However, most beautiful of all were the nymphs — the primordial Lús. En.ki looked around and saw that there were no males here — these Ladies of Fire were truly androgynous. However, this didn't mean they couldn't have sex with a male, and this is what the true Artemis meant when she said that she wanted them to keep their purity.

In the mythology, there was one of the nymphs whose name was Callisto<sup>262</sup>, and in En.ki's eyes, she was the most attractive and adorable of all the nymphs he encountered in the Garden of Edin. So, as he'd done so often before, En.ki used what he had between his legs — his serpent — and raped Callisto!<sup>263</sup>

Fig. 6. "Artemis became furious and appeared in the shape of a bear, blaming the rape on Callisto, and wanted to kill her."

Thus, he had created the most horrible sin—he had raped one of the Goddess' most precious nymphs! Not only that—his rape impregnated Callisto, and she bore him a child—the first child in the Garden of Edin that was born by male impregnation.

The myth says further that the real Artemis became furious and appeared in the shape of a bear (bear being a symbol for Orion), blamed the rape on Callisto, and wanted to kill her—apparently thinking that Callisto had intentionally decided to lose her "purity." However, Zeus/En.ki interfered at the last moment, throwing Callisto up in the stars, where she got her own constellation—Ursa Major, The Greater Bear.<sup>264</sup>

This is another interesting distortion of original records because, first, Ursa Major already belonged to the Orion Empire at that time, as we have seen when we had discussed the Galactic Wars, and En.ki would never be able to confront the Goddess and come out as the winner. Also, from having done my homework on the Mother Goddess and her basic character, she would never blame Callisto for being raped. However, as we shall see, this is a typical En.ki trait. More than once has he protected rapists against their victims—something we will see in later papers, as well. Therefore, from doing my research, I find it much more evident that this part was inserted later by En.ki himself. I am not stating this because I want to defend one being against another, but because I have learned what the characteristics of these beings are.

By raping Callisto, he had now polluted this pure Goddess bloodline with his semen, and he now knew his way into Edin—the magic and the spells that were used to protect Ninurta’s Paradise had now been decoded by En.ki, and he understood the magic that was being used. Thus, he had a free passageway into the Garden. Of course, the Artemis story is also a variety of the story about Adam and Eve, where Eve (Callisto) was seduced by Satan in the Garden of Edin, where Satan showed up as a snake (or should we say, with his “snake?”) and seduced (read raped) Eve. There was no Adam at that time.

The rest of the story is partly told in Genesis in the Bible, with the horrendous crime excluded. En.ki, the Serpent, or “Satan” in the Bible, in disguise of YHWH/Jehovah/Artemis, killed one of the nymphs, and stole a rib from her body, where after he snuck out of the Garden. The rib, of course, contained the DNA of the Lady of Fire, and he and his consort, Isis, who was a highly trained scientist on her own merit, trained by her father, Ninurta, planned to use their own DNA to create more workers, although En.ki also had a much more hideous plan, which will be obvious in time.

En.ki was very careful so that the homicide in the Garden would not be revealed to anybody, except for Isis. He hold her that he wanted to create a hybrid race of workers, by crossing Namlú’u genes with those of existing apes, who had evolved on their own here on Gaia. Then they had to dumb them down by leaving most of their DNA dormant, so the workers would only be intelligent enough to understand orders, but not intelligent enough to comprehend who they were, and where they came from.

VI. Genetic Manipulation, the Mars Laboratories, and Khan En.lil’s Protest

Lord En.ki could not forget the attractive nymphs in the Garden, and every so often he sneaked in there when he “wanted to play.” The nymphs of course knew who he was by now, but they were peaceful beings, and although they were the first shamans on Gaia, they didn’t know how to protect themselves from En.ki’s manipulative ways and the manner in which he managed to get what he wanted. Edin, which had had its own, separate frequency level, isolated from the rest of the world since the AIF came, now found its frequency level decreasing, and it became harder and harder to maintain the magic of the Mountain Paradise which Ninurta had created. The last resort of what once was a planetary Golden Age was about to be utterly destroyed.

I can't help but drawing parallels to J.R.R. Tolkien's Lord of the Rings, when the Elves left Lothlórien and Middle Earth.<sup>265</sup> The once so magical forests and rivers declined and merged with the New Age of human rulership. The leaves fell from the trees, rivers dried out, and visitors to the once so mighty Elf Kingdom now found themselves walking in an abandoned forest with very few remnants of the glory that once was.

By interfering with the development of the Namlú'u and Ninurta's Edin, a deep sadness fell over Mother Gaia, and from thereon, the world would never be the same.

In the Heavens, rumors came to Khan En.lil and Queen Nin of what was happening on Gaia. There was really no way for En.ki to hide what he was doing because Mother Earth, who is a manifestation of the Goddess, knows what is happening on her own planet, and En.ki should have known better. Deep inside, perhaps, he didn't care if they knew or not—he may have felt safe as long as he had the nymphs he could use as shields, if necessary.

Khan En.lil got furious when he heard about what En.ki had done, and here Zecharia Sitchin describes well what happened next.

Enlil objected to Enki's plan. "Don't create a Nibiran/Apeman slave class here on Earth," Enlil reminded Enki, "On our planet [Nibiru], slavery has long ago been abolished, tools are slaves, not other beings." [Sitchin, ibid.] Ninurta added that to get gold better, Enki should make machines, not slaves. Enki replied, "Earthlings we'll create will be 'helpers,' not slaves."

Enlil still protested: hybrid cloning was forbidden in the Rules Of Planet To Planet Journeying. Enki's response 'the team won't create a new species; Erectus is our the genetic ancestor. He evolves into us -- Homo Sapiens, Sapiens -- the humans of Nibiru; we'll just speed him along a few million years.'<sup>266</sup>

This is a quite revealing part of Sitchin's interpretations, and it deserves a few comments. The readers, who have read Sitchin, or my First Level of Learning, know about Sitchin's version of what Nibiru was and his interpretation that all the "Anunnaki" beings came from this one planet. Doing a little deeper research, we discover that this is a misleading presentation of what really happened. It becomes obvious when studying the mythology that is available to us, and I have also had the privilege to communicate with star beings who at times have helped me by pointing out the more likely path.

Nevertheless, if we look at the above quote, we clearly see that En.lil (Khan), who has been accused of being the driving force behind creating a human slave race, in fact, verbally objected to En.ki's plans, and in reality, he was very upset. In Sitchin's version, En.ki replies that "earthlings" (a very diminishing and intimidating term for humanity) will be "helpers," not "slaves." Right there, it clearly shows En.ki's deceptive manners. History has showed us that he indeed created slaves and not helpers because humans were manipulated into doing the AIF's hard work without getting any comparable rewards for it—in fact, these "helpers" had to work day and night in Lord En.ki's service. Channeled entities, such as the Pleiadians, pretend to go along with defending human rights on this subject but always add that it's a "co-creation," and that it was a choice. Not listening to anybody but just by observing, does it look like we had a choice in the matter? Not to me, anyway. A co-creation? Why would human souls agree to becoming slaves? Who wants to be a slave? As the readers can see, it doesn't make much sense, does it? Is it a co-creation if one part of the creative forces is manipulated into doing something? Not in my book.

When En.lil still protests, En.ki continues using his manipulative manners. To be able to really understand this text, we need to exchange Nibiru with Orion under some circumstances, such as when it comes to slavery. Slavery, says En.lil, has been forbidden in Orion for a long time—something En.ki is well aware of. Although he believes he has a privilege by using the Ladies of Fire as shields, he still has some kind of respect left for his parents because he believes he'd rather have them on his side in this matter than to just go ahead, not caring about their opinions. Thus, he continues, saying that he will not really create a new race—he will just speed up the evolution of Homo Erectus with a few million years! This, of course, as we know, was not what he really planned, and it was not at all what he actually did. The easiest way to spot a deceiver is to see if he or she walks the talk, or not. En.ki certainly did not.

Bringing up Nibiru and its need for gold to save its atmosphere couldn't be less of En.lil's concern. Nibiru was thrown out of orbit during the Sirian Wars, and the inhabitants chose to side with the rebels. I seriously doubt that En.ki even brought up Nibiru when communicating with the Orion Council—it is more likely something that Sitchin put there to fit into his story.

The communication back and forth between En.ki and the Orion Council, here led by Khan En.lil, ends with the Council voting for En.ki's plan. This is all according to Sitchin, of course. Therefore, let's think that over for a minute. Why would the Council of Orion vote for En.ki's plan to create a human hybrid, whether it's from the DNA of the Namlú'u, or any other beings, when cloning and hybridization is strictly forbidden in Orion? Is it because Nibiru's atmosphere needs gold? Of course not—this is just a cover story.

In reality, there is no way that Khan En.lil, Queen Nin, or anybody else on the Council would agree to genetically engineer a new species to become slave workers – this goes against all morals and ethics of the Empire. This is also true for a few other reasons. First, this is a Living Library, and it is supposed to evolve into something great all by itself—without interference from outside. This has been stated over and over, not only by me, but by many others who have done their homework. Hence, there is no chance that En.ki got approval to mess with the Living Library. Second, “genetic engineering” and “genetic manipulation” have nothing to do with creation at all. Yes, it is possible to use nano-technology and subquantum physics in order to engineer, or manipulate, a species—it is done all the time here on Earth by humans when we breed different animal species with each other in a way that goes against nature. It is also done on humans in secret underground laboratories, in places such as Area 51 and Dulce. When a planet is seeded, it's done without technology, with the assistance of electricity—such as lightning, and bacteria and viruses, brought to the planet by colliding meteorites etc. Technology has very little to do with it. Later in the planet's development, if the Creator Goddesses want to enhance intelligence, or other traits, into one of the species on the planet, they do so by inserting themselves into those particular beings and “engineer” them from the inside. No laboratories are needed.

Therefore, a much more likely hypothesis is that Khan En.lil and the Council of Orion discovered at least some parts of En.ki's plans and loudly protested against them. En.ki, however, after having tried to manipulate them without success, went on without their consent, using his consort, Isis, as his co-scientist. Isis, after agreeing to En.ki's idea to create a slave race without the consent of the Orion Empire was, of course, no longer on good terms with Orion, and had, in their eyes, really showed her real nature. She continued working with En.ki.

The reason, as I see it, why En.ki has left the above communication in the records is because he wanted future humans to believe that he had Orion's consent to create Homo sapiens sapiens (us), and he did us a favor by speeding up our evolution by millions of years. Nowhere does he mention that there was already an evolved humanoid species on Earth, which he, En.ki, utterly destroyed and killed off in the process.

As soon as they realized who the wolf in sheep's clothing was, the Namlú'u tried to flee. They were not safe in the sanctuary anymore. They were cloaking themselves, but were detected. Therefore, they tried to escape by literally going underground, and some of them succeeded in disappearing from Gaia's surface, and many of them haven't been seen since then. However, the majority of them were captured and put into slave labor deep down in the mines. This was a huge mistake for many reasons—they were Ladies of Fire, and their bodies were not built for such hard work. Many of them died down there in the mines, while they were whipped and tortured for not working fast enough. Although it must have happened on occasion, there were so-called "En.ki's loyal supervisors" who made sure that the slave drivers were not raping the nymphs—En.ki did not want the pure Goddess bloodline of the Ladies of Fire mixed with his original workers.

Now, when En.ki, as Artemis, had stolen the rib from one of the nymphs, he and his consort could start working. However, they were not alone. En.ki had a whole team of scientists brought with him to Gaia, so he set up laboratories both on Gaia and in the underground caverns of Mars. Mars had something which could almost be compared with industrial underground cities, with air trains driving around long distances between different departments that were spread out across these cities. There were not only the underground laboratories—when people lived down there, they had their needs for stores and conveniences, so things were built around that, as well. Nevertheless, everything circled around the genetic laboratories.

Other than this, we know the stories of what happened next because I have told them in previous papers. In summary, En.ki and Isis experimented a lot before they found a worker that fit their purposes, and while they were at it, they also created hybrids that could work as maids for the gods and as farmers, builders, and much more. Prince Ninurta, who had nurtured the original Living Library for many eons, must have been both devastated and furious when he found out that his own genes, via his daughter, Isis, were used to create mankind. This must have been the ultimate insult to him. Not because he had ill feelings toward mankind, but because the manipulators were using his genes to create something that was both illegal and less evolved than what he had helped create in the past.

In their attempt to create robust workers, En.ki and Isis tried everything from centaurs, minotaurs, to giants, who could lift enormous rocks and stones, but they were not very pleased with their result. Some of these creatures and monsters couldn't sustain themselves in the third-dimensional frequency band, so they suddenly just failed to thrive and died, while others went insane, attached their supervisors and other workers, and had to be killed on the spot. These races were soon terminated, and new ones were tried in their place. Others didn't fit as mine workers but could be used as giant packing animals, and AIF managers could be seen riding on centaurs around the gigantic mines for some time.

Eventually, En.ki and Isis decided on humanoids after all. They realized that the humanoid life template was the most reliable and started developing that instead.

Eventually, after many discarded prototypes, En.ki had a worker ready, which was asexual and could not reproduce. This meant that new workers had to be cloned, and they all looked the same. The AIF workers, however, were released from their duties and were happy not having to go down into the mines again.

Here I need to fill in that mining operations are not at all unusual in the Universe. Almost every star in the Universe has planets around them, and these planets are all unique, with their own minerals and precious stones in a huge mix. Star races often claim planets with a lot of interesting and attractive resources for themselves and make them their real estate. Then they start mining them and emptying them of resources, which they then sell on the galactic and intergalactic market. Planets with moons also often have these moons mined. However, moons are not as common as people may think—most of them are artificial in one way or another. They are often satellites brought in from elsewhere in order to stabilize the planet and to keep the planet on a certain orbit around its sun.

The AIF did a lot of mining all over our own solar system—particularly on the moons that surround the bigger gas giants. Although most of the mines are abandoned now, there is still some mining going on out there.

Whether the AIF used any of the gold to enhance Nibiru's atmosphere or not, I am not sure. If they did, it was just a small amount that went there. What the AIF saw was that Gaia, literally, was an incredible goldmine and had an abundance of other minerals, precious stones, and other useful resources that could be traded on the universal market. Gold in itself, as I've mentioned elsewhere, was used almost like cocaine by the gods. Inhaled correctly, and contrary to cocaine, it increased their lifespan tremendously. It was not only the gold that made them live much longer, however—it was a mix of things, but gold had a lot to do with it.

After some time, using the new hybrids in the mining business and elsewhere, it became hard to keep up with creating clones. Slaves sometimes died like flies down in the mines, and the mining managers complained that they couldn't get enough workers.

That's when En.ki and Isis created ADAPA—the hybrid that could reproduce. They were the first male/female human race on Earth. Thus, it can be stated that the Goddess created womankind, and En.ki and Isis created mankind.

The first ADAPA had black skin, and the reason for this was twofold. The engineers had used genes from Homo Erectus, who were not necessarily black, but the Namlú'u were. So, by using the DNA of the Ladies of Fire and Homo Erectus and mix from some other star beings, as the legend states, the result became the first human species that could reproduce, and that race was black. Therefore, contrary to what has been said earlier, the "black race" was here before En.ki arrived on Gaia, in the form of the Namlú'u.

Many of us have probably often thought about all these different races of humans here on Earth—some are black, others are white, red, yellow, brown, or any shade in between. Where do they all come from? In fact, we know that En.ki and his AIF have been in charge here for the last half a million years, and during that period, in general, only star races who have had En.ki's consent have been allowed to visit Gaia. Therefore, the hypothesis many have that all these races were created because a multitude of beings were here and copulated with mankind, falls on its own merit. Instead, En.ki and Isis created variations of the black ADAPA as they went along, and they were used for different purposes. The black race was used for mining—in Africa and South America in particular—and then "abandoned." A new race—let's say the white race—was created with slightly different DNA mixture and was used for other types of labor. Many America Indian tribes (the "red" people) claim that their ancestors come from the Pleiades, while the Dogon tribe in Africa say they had Sirian visitors in the past.<sup>267</sup> Some have suggested that the Asian people have DNA of the "Grays" in them because of the shape of their eyes and the fact that many of them are shorter than, let's say, the white man, but if that is true or not, I don't know because most of the Grays are not even biological entities.

This time, it worked much better. The ADAPA was allowed to reproduce (under supervision), but just as with the first hybrids, they had their DNA deactivated to a large degree, and just like us, they used less than 5% of their brains on average. The gods did not want them to be like them—they didn't want them to start longing for "eternal" life and thirst for knowledge. They were slaves, period. They were smart enough to take orders, and execute them, but stupid enough not to ask intelligent questions.

The majority of these experiments took place on Mars, and the workers were then transported from our sister planet down to Gaia. People have wondered why they bothered with that when they could do it all down here on our planet, and the answer is not clear. However, if I may make a qualified guess, it would be that they did not want Mother Gaia to know what they were doing with her nymphs until they were all ready for the mines, and then it was too late.

From the ADAPA, the AIF scientists did refinements and readjustments to their experiment<sup>268</sup> as they went along, until they had the “perfect worker,” and the experiments stopped for a while. When the mining industry worked as it should, however, and more mines had been opened around the world, the next part of En.ki’s plan was executed, and that was to create soldiers—foot soldiers.

Then, the whole genetic manipulation industry was taken to a new level. En.ki wanted to create strong and enduring soldiers who were loyal to their Masters and had the bravery of the DAKH warriors but were stronger and larger in size.

Measurements were made in the atmosphere and in the electromagnetic field to determine how tall and how heavy these soldiers could be—if possible, he wanted to make them even stronger than the giants that he had created for the mining project that, unfortunately, had failed. However, if he moved the moon a little bit closer to Earth again, the planet could eventually be able to host some larger beings.

That was done, and now En.ki had an additional idea. By the time he fled from Orion—after he had been cast out of Heaven—he created some giant hybrids in the Pleiades. These Pleiadian beings lived on larger planets than that of Gaia, and many of them were of impressive stature.

En.ki sent a message to them and invited some of them to come to Gaia, which they did. Just like the rest of the AIF, they were interdimensional beings and were able to nanotravel. However, according to the Pleiadians themselves (channeled by Barbara Marciniak), they also brought gigantic spaceships with them, which they parked in orbit around Earth.<sup>269</sup>

When the Pleiadians saw the women of Earth, the first thing they thought of was how beautiful they were. Many thought that the Earth women were the most beautiful women in their known Universe and found them irresistible.

In Level II, I told the Pleiadians own story from their lectures of how they started “mating” with the human women, and I suggested that these giant beings, although they could use their Avatars to mate with our women, that was most likely not how it was done. A better hypothesis is that they took on human male bodies—either as babies (a human lifetime was nothing for them), or they became so-called “walk-ins,” where they took over a male body from an already occupied body, and either threw out the original soul essence or made him dormant, while taking over the control of the body. However they did it, the Earth women apparently found the male intruders attractive as well, and in their ignorance, they didn’t mind copulating with them. If this is true, or only a made-up myth from the Pleiadians themselves in ancient times to justify their crime is difficult to say, but we also know that it was always considered an “honor” for a woman to sleep with one of the gods, which of course is mind control and pure manipulation.

There is a known fact by now, however, that at least some of the Pleiadians had the giant gene, and that gene was used in the genetic laboratories in order to create giants. Although the giant skulls and skeletons that have been found over the decades and the centuries all over the world are constantly being “debunked” by certain “authorities,” the fact remains that such remnants have been found. The museum outside Lima, Peru, carries typical examples of giant, elongated skulls that have been found, mostly in the Lima region.<sup>270</sup> Complete giant graves have been found as well. Some of them have been raided over the years, but there are a few that are at least partly intact. Steven Quayle, who has spent much of his life researching giants, has many interesting things to show on his website.<sup>271</sup> Although some of the pictures he is showing are questionable, in my opinion, many of them are evidently authentic. Another excellent researcher on giant skulls, and giants in general, is Brien Foerster. Google him, and you will find some amazing videos. I have referred to him before.

By mixing genes from the already existing ADAPA and the Pleiadians, the Giants of Genesis 6 in the Bible were created. Apparently, En.ki and his team had a lot of “fun” with this because giants in all different sizes were suddenly walking the Earth. Some of them became fearsome and furious warriors—others became some of the first Kings to rule for the AIF in different parts of the world, while others became strong and excellent builders.

In these days, Gaia was a strange planet to visit because there were a myriad of different experiments walking around on the planet at the same time, and many of these species did not get along very well with each other. Therefore, there were many wars between gods, men, and monsters.

VII. The ADAMA—Enki’s Own Bloodline

Sometime around this period, Lord En.ki put an old plan into reality. He wanted to create a certain bloodline, which carried his genuine genes—minions that he could truly call his, and be able to claim.

This is not a new revelation—the same thing has been suggested by other researchers as well, told in different ways. The main reason for En.ki to execute this idea, according to most truthseekers, is that he wanted a pure bloodline of higher intelligence, to whom he could reveal some of the secrets about who they were, where they came from, and what their mission is. However, En.ki never had the intention to tell the whole truth to his minions—he wanted it to be on a need-to-know-basis. Thus, En.ki started the first known secret society in Gaia’s history, The Brotherhood of the Snake, or The Brotherhood of the Serpent, which it has also been called. The titles clearly indicate that these societies were male dominated. As we know, En.ki was the one who started the Patriarchal Regime here on our planet, in order to put himself as the King of Earth and the God of the Universe.

This new bloodline became known as the ADAMA, and once again, the first hybrids of this bloodline were black because En.ki himself had black skin.<sup>272</sup>

Just like the ADAPA before them, the ADAMA were hybrids. They were a mix of the DNA from the apes here on Earth, the Dragons/Reptilians from Alpha Draconis, and En.ki himself. He used reptilian DNA in the ADAPA as well, but less so than he did in the ADAMA. Some (but far from all) Reptilians are cold-blooded and ruthless warrior beings, although the Reptilian genes also include some basic instincts, such as “fight or flight,” meaning they can also be cowards in some regard. In any case, En.ki wanted a species that could rule over the masses on Earth. He wanted them to do so on a daily basis, but also when he was absent from the planet, minding his business elsewhere. The Earth was starting to get quite populated (some would say overpopulated) with beings who were hard to control, so he wanted a ruthless species to rule in his name (although his name should never be mentioned).

The Brotherhood of the Snake, just like most secret societies of today, was set up with “levels (or grades) of initiation.” In other words, you had to earn your wisdom. The adepts started at the bottom, and in the beginning, En.ki taught them. Once they had completed one level of knowledge, they moved on to the next and so on. However, En.ki studied them closely to make sure they kept themselves loyal to their Grandmaster (En.ki), or they would not be allowed to move up to the next level (the rules are the same today). So, the society became an Elite Organization, where the members were delegated different tasks. Some became High Priests, others became Kings, or dictators—leaders of certain regions (which we call countries today). If they reached up high enough within the Brotherhood, they became more knowledgeable and moved to more important positions. Now, many thousand years later, it is still the same—the kings, rulers, dictators, leaders, priests, politicians (many of them), bankers, religious leaders, and so on, belong to one or more of the secret societies that are available for the Bloodline of En.ki.

People of the ADAPA bloodlines (which originate in Queen Nin’s and Prince Ninurta’s androgynous people, i.e. the general population) can also join <sup>272</sup> I urge the readers not to take this as racism because that’s the last thing I want. Personally, I’m probably the least racist person you would ever know—I think everybody is totally equal, regardless of their skin color. Racism is very low on the awareness scale and is based on fear of the unknown, as well as it is indoctrination and manipulation from the Global Elite, who want us to be separated from each other, rather than united. If we became united, we would be a real threat to them. Racism is one of many ways to keep us separated and in war with each other. I am mentioning the skin color here for educational purposes only. I refuse to give into the fear that surrounds this subject, and I am going to tell it as it is, regardless whether some people spread around that I’m a racist, which is as far from the truth as anything can be.

these societies, but only those of En.ki's blood (also called the "Nephilim bloodline"<sup>273</sup>) can reach the top levels. Needless to say, not even those people know who the ultimate Grandmaster of the secret society is—it has remained a secret until just recently. However, many won't believe it, anyway.

I also want to emphasize that any and all secret societies of significance have the same Grandmaster at the top—Prince Lucifer himself! Some may object and tell you that a certain prominent secret society was created by this or that person, and this may be true, but it's always based on Lucifer's magic, and once it reaches a certain state of knowledge and power (if it does), it's taken over by the same force—the Luciferian force. At the lower levels, the same organizations may dedicate themselves to charity, and the members may be encouraged to do good things for people and society in general. Philanthropy is very common in these societies and among high level member in particular. This, of course, is just the front, so the general population, hopefully, will not start researching the organization or the high initiate. "Everybody knows" that Freemasonry is a charity organization—this is what we are told, and this is what is "evident" by taking a quick look at it. Still, when we dig deeper, we find some very dark stuff in there.<sup>274</sup> If scrutinized, Freemasonry wants to be able to tell people to look at all the good work they are doing for their fellow man, so how can they be anything else but benevolent? People, upon investigation, will see that this is true, but only because the darker stuff at the top levels is hidden—the general population doesn't have access to it. What is ingenious with this setup is that the top levels don't even have to say a word—the lower level members, who have no idea of what is going on at the top, dedicating their lives to do good things, will defend Freemasonry, or whatever other secret society they belong to, until their last breath.

Ever since ancient times, Lucifer's bloodline has ruled this world. Today, we have different countries that fight each other in wars that seem to have started for a number of different reasons, but whatever explanation the media may be giving us is false—the real reason for any war is occult (hidden). Sometimes, leaders are sacrificed in the process (such as Saddam Hussein, a 33° Freemason—a perfect example). The reason why the U.S. invaded Iraq had, of course, nothing to do with weapons of mass destruction. In addition, executing Saddam had nothing to do with him being a threat to the United States, nor was

<sup>273</sup> Michael Lee Hill, the abductee whom I have been writing about in a few papers, claims to be of the Nephilim bloodline. If this is correct, he has much more of En.ki's blood running through his veins than you and I have (taking into consideration that the reader is a "normal" human).

<sup>274</sup> See my website, Illuminati News (<http://illuminati-news.com>) for a lot more information on this subject.

it a punishment for crimes against humanity. It was because Saddam, the Freemason, had inner knowledge that Iraq was once called Mesopotamia, or Sumer, and he knew that he was sitting on the Land of the Gods. He knew that there were secrets buried under the ground of the very country he was ruling, and sure enough, he had dug up many artifacts, which he apparently kept for himself, but some were also put on display in museums in Bagdad. Saddam was very interested in these things. Curiously enough (and the mainstream news showed this), one of the first things the U.S. did, once they'd invaded Iraq, was to raid the museums and steal and bring "home" old Sumerian artifacts and, perhaps, certain "devices" that Saddam's archeologists had found on Mesopotamian ground. The reader must realize that the wars and unrest in the Middle East have nothing to do with who should be assigned which country/region. This is the territory of the gods, and some say that there is an AIF base underground somewhere in the Middle East—more likely, there are more than one. What we see in the Middle East is the fight over "god territory" and what is underground, more than anything else. The rest is disinformation given to the masses, so the Global Elite can justify a war. If young men and women, who sign up for the military in order to fight for their country, only knew that it's a big lie. They are fighting and dying, so the Global Elite and the gods can re-establish their New Kingdom on Earth! Look how they are treating the veterans who have sacrificed their health and their lives to protect the rest of us—or so they think. It's a disgrace! Would the reader agree with me about the importance of us all to wake up? So much pain and suffering could be avoided.

Fig. 8. A Mayan pyramid. Much blood from sacrificed virgins, children, adults, and animals ran down such stone formations in the ancient past.

When the Pleiadians, in their lectures, are asked whether they are the direct descendants of the “Anunnaki” (AIF), they hesitate but admit that there is a connection. They don’t directly admit that they are En.ki’s hybrids, although they are hinting at it at times. Most of the audience is probably not picking up on this because they don’t know enough. As mentioned earlier, the Pleiadians have stated that they are the “Fallen Angels” in the Bible, who came down to Earth and mated with human females, and a race of Giants was created as a result of their visit. Then, they are fast to add that they also were great teachers, although we know what happened to the Mayan and Aztec civilizations. Maya is one of the stars in the Pleiadian “Seven Sisters” star cluster, so there is a direct link between the star Maya (Maïa) and the Mayan civilization. The Pleiadians say that they don’t endorse what those South American cultures did in the form of sacrifices and other cruel rituals, but these ideas must have started as consequences of their “teachings.”<sup>275</sup> Why did these tribes start worshipping their teachers, and why did they start sacrificing animals and people in order to please the gods? If the gods were as enlightened and benevolent as they said they were, wouldn’t part of their teaching also include teaching the tribes not to worship them or makes sacrifices in their “honor?” After all, they knew that such things had happened before, or did the “teachers” actually want the tribes to worship them and make sacrifices?

In Level III, I exposed channeling for what it mostly is, but I said that if there is any channeled material at all that is genuinely for humanity’s best interests, it would possibly be the Pleiadians, although I also said that I had some reservations, and I could be wrong. Now, the Pleiadians show their real face, admitting that they are working with Lucifer.

The strength of the Pleiadian material is their conviction that by telling the truth (under most circumstances), they can win many people over and eventually trick us. How would they trick us? Well, they want us to evolve—therefore, they can afford to tell us the truth. The reason they want us to evolve is because when our DNA is once again being activated (much of that happened during the nanosecond), they consider us “ripe,” and can use us for purposes that I will go into details about a little later.

Lord En.ki deactivated almost all of our DNA (the so-called “junk DNA,” which of course is not junk), but he knew that at one point, a part of humanity would evolve, and some of the deactivated DNA would once again activate. This was most probably intentionally done—he wanted us to evolve at some point (which is now). We are evolving from Homo sapiens sapiens (the Wise Human) to a totally new species. Every species has its due date when it “expires,” and Homo sapiens sapiens is expiring now. En.ki wanted this to happen because at this point he can use us for a very special purpose, which he can’t use the rest of humanity for—the great masses, those watching TV and playing video games instead of educating themselves, are not evolved enough to be useful in this respect. Instead, they will be used for another, equally sinister purpose—something we have discussed earlier. En.ki wants the majority of the population to devolve into the Machine Kingdom and eventually take on the fight against the Orion Empire.

<sup>275</sup> The Incan civilization is also En.ki’s tribe—he was the one who taught them. Inca and En.ki—that’s how they play with words.

The general population, which originates from Queen Nin and her son, Prince Ninurta, is here on Earth often referred to as the ADAPA but was never called the ADAPA by the Queen and the Prince themselves—nor amongst any others of Orion’s Inner Circle. To them, we are the HEN (males) and the HEN-T (females). When humanity is being referred to by these two Orion terms, it always means Queen Nin’s and Ninurta’s population, which consists of people such as you and me.

Therefore, it’s time to, step by step, reveal what it is En.ki, and apparently also the Pleiadians and others, have in mind for those who are evolving. I feel very fortunate to have gained this knowledge, so I can relay it to the readers. With the following understanding, we can evolve on our own and stay away from those who want to use our increased consciousness for their own sinister purposes.

VIII. The Fake Primordial Dragon—the want-to-be Emperor of the Universe

Lucifer, although he had lost the access to the upper dimensions of the KHAA, knew that the Ladies of Fire did have that access as their birthright, and through shamanism, they could get into the Inner Sanctuaries of Orion. With time, the original, more powerful shamanism was forgotten, and when the Lú bloodline got watered down, it became increasingly difficult for these females to get into these Realms.

Nevertheless, as the genetic experiments went on, Lord En.ki noticed that there was a backdoor entrance into the KHAA through the human females, now that they no longer were androgynous, and that was through their orgasms. Men have orgasms, too, but theirs is not as “powerful” as those that occur in a female body. Throughout time, the AIF have either caught the energy from the orgasms in the ether and absorbed this energy, or they have sometimes been spiritually present in bedrooms and other places where humans have had sex. Whenever the female has an orgasm, the AIF can suck in this powerful energy and “store” it or “build it up” inside their whole beingness. They hope that by doing so, they will have an easier time one day when the Final War is raging and the AIF is breaking down the Gates to Orion.

This is not new to the readers, however—I brought this up already in Level II, but there is more to it.

En.ki felt proud of what he had accomplished, thus far, when it came to Earth (he prefers to call it Earth, or Ki—EArth also being a reference to Ea, which will lead us to the next topic). In the poem earlier in this paper, En.ki referred to Abzu, Eridu. Many say that Ea, which became En.ki’s name during the Akkadian Empire, means something similar to “House of water,” but Ea is really referring to E-Abzu, which is another name for the Temple in En.ki’s city, Eridu.<sup>276</sup> It is also a reference to the cosmic water, which is a metaphor for the KHAA. Also, the legend indicates that the rivers obtained their water from the Underworld, or underground,<sup>277</sup> where En.ki, as Nergal, came to reign together with Ereškigal, the “Queen” of the Underworld—more about that later.

The reason Abzu is equivalent to “cosmic water”, or the KHAA, is because Abzu is another name for Khan En.lil. When Marduk and En.ki conquered Tiamat, which we discussed earlier, they also slayed Abzu and “dwelled in his dead carcass,” which means he took over Abzu’s role as the Ruler of the Heavens—or at least, that’s how En.ki looked at it.<sup>278</sup> Abzu, in both the Sumerian and Babylonian texts, is equivalent to a “primordial dragon,” and the primordial dragons, in Orion terms, are the Mother Goddess and Khan En.lil. In the following text, it tells us how Abzu was slain by Ea<sup>279</sup> and how he set up his home in Abzu’s carcass, which was the Temple of Eridu.

Apsu (Akkadian/Babylonian)The later, Babylonian version of the Sumerian Abzu. According to the Babylonians, Apsu, a primordial dragon, was slain by Ea, who subsequently set up His home within Apsu's carcass.<sup>280</sup>

This proves that Abzu (Khan En.lil) and Tiamat, Mother Goddess (which we proved earlier), were here, and/or in possession of Tiamat before En.ki came, and he and his son were the ones who invaded our planet and “slayed” (chased

<sup>279</sup> Using the name Ea in this context proves that these records were edited in Babylon because it was during the Babylonian/Akkadian Empire that he and Marduk manipulated older scriptures. The original texts probably said Enki.

away) the primordial dragons, who were the original creators of the Living Library. Therefore, regardless of what Enkiites and those who believe that En.ki is the “good guy,” say, it’s evident that he was the one who invaded Earth and set up the Patriarchal Regime, not “En.lil.”

The name Ea, therefore, originates from the word E-Abzu and refers to En.ki taking on the role of Khan En.lil (as well as the Goddess) and changed his name to Ea, short for “E-Abzu.” This is part of the reason why the ancient records can be so confusing and mixed up—En.ki and Marduk took on the role and cloaked themselves as the very beings they had driven away by force. Hence, it also looks like all these beings were here at the same time—after Lucifer invaded Ar-i-du—whether they were En.lil, Nin.lil, or Ninurta...you name them. If we read Sitchin’s books, such as “The War of Gods and Men,” it described the internal wars between the gods and how they used humans to fight them. Sitchin thus makes the claim that the gods I mentioned above were all here, which is not true. That, too, is evident, as we mentioned earlier. En.ki and his rebels defeated Khan En.lil, Queen Nin, Ninurta, the Titans, and the Vulcans, in a catastrophic cosmic war, so why would those who were defeated stay on Earth together with En.ki and play along with him in what often appears like childish, ridiculous feuds? That, of course, doesn’t make any sense. However, En.ki wanted, at one point, to make it look as if they were all here before he decided that he is the One and Only God—thereafter, he and Marduk did their best to destroy, or alter, the older records.<sup>281</sup>

Thus, here we have the King “wannabe,” who sits on his throne, having no real power except that which he stole from the previous owners. He then mind-controls many different kinds of species here on Earth—species which he has created through his bizarre experiments—and then he creates a hybrid race, becoming his close minions, who carefully follow his instructions. This has been the reality that Lord En.ki, “King of Earth,” aka Prince Lucifer, has created for himself. Knowing En.ki, he was, of course, never satisfied. He had a plan, and it involved his minions and the Ladies of Fire—the human females!

<sup>281</sup> This reminds me of the old Roman Emperors, such as the obviously insane Caligula, who at one time decided that he was Jupiter, and therefore, the One and Only God. He made extraordinary efforts to erase any reference to other gods being powerful and Almighty. It’s like he was dramatizing what En.ki and Marduk did in old Babylon. Perhaps this was the real reason why Caligula was murdered at a very young age and not only the fact that he was insane because of generational inbreeding.

PAPER #9: AN INTRODUCTION TO THE UNDERWORLD

I. What is the Underworld?

When we hear of the Underworld, and if we have any clue what it is, we are probably thinking about Greek mythology and where the souls go after the physical body dies. These days, some believe that we go upward, leaving our dead body beneath us. Then, perhaps, one or a few spirit guides come and show us the way toward the light and the tunnel—the spirit guides can be dead relatives, ancestors, or good friends in the earthly existence. The common theme is that they all seem to lead the discarnate spirit toward the tunnel and the light. We've been discussing this to some extent in all levels of learning, I believe, and also in my e-book, "Beyond 2012—A Handbook for the New Era<sup>282</sup>." This belief system is based on testimonies from dead people, who have either channeled through a medium, or it has been revealed in regression therapy, where most people, put in reverie, tell almost identical things of what happens after we die.

However, what did the old Greeks believe—and those before them or those living simultaneously with them but in different locations?

They believed that instead of going upward towards some mysterious light, the dead spirit traveled downward, into the Underworld and the afterlife. The Underworld, or Hades, was a dark place, invisible for the living, located beneath the depths or "the ends of the world<sup>283</sup>."

Once a person was dead, the spirit took on the form of the person she had been while alive on the surface and was transported to the entrance of Hades. There were seven rivers leading down to the Underworld, where the River Styx is probably the most well-known. Usually, there was a ferryman, Charon, who transported the dead over the dark river for the continuous journey further down into the Underworld. The river Phlegethon was the river of fire, and according to Plato, this was the river which led to Tartarus, where the Titans were supposed to have been thrown down after the Titan War. Apparently,

Tartarus is not directly a part of Hades but is located as far beneath Hades as the sky is to the Earth.

BUT, what was the Underworld, and was it real? Interestingly, on a recent Pleiadian lecture at the beginning of 2013, they described how their “vehicle” — their medium — had been extremely sick at the end of 2012 with gastrointestinal issues that almost killed her. The Pleiadians explained that Barbara Marciniak had been visiting the Underworld and returned, and they were quite serious about its validity. In the end, Marciniak pledged to the Pleiadians, saying that if they didn’t help her now in her painful misery, they wouldn’t have a vehicle to transmit their messages through because she believed she was dying. Supposedly, the Pleiadians helped by releasing her from the Underworld. That shouldn’t be too difficult for them because one of their mentors, Lord En.ki, resides down there and is the King of the Underworld, under the name of Nergal. Although En.ki may take care of his cohorts when needed (as in Marciniak’s case), they didn’t do so when it came to Dr. A.R. Bordon, who died the most painful cancer death a person can experience, and he received no assistance from En.ki.

Fig. 1. Thoth, depicted as an ibis bird. Again, here we have the Bird Tribe.

According to ancient Egyptian tablets, Thoth is the deity who is leading the dead down through the layers of the Underworld—all this is also acting as an inspiration to Dante's Inferno<sup>284</sup>, with its seven layers of Hell.

Allegedly, there are seven layers or “Gates,” until a person has reached all the way down to where Queen Ereškigal’s throne is. In many myths, it is the well-known AIF member, Thoth who puts judgment on the soul and decides her destiny.

The Greek and Egyptian explanation to what happens in the afterlife is that we are going on a journey through the astral dimensions of the Underworld, located under the Earth’s surface. This is also the reason why Pharaohs often were put in their sarcophaguses together with their most beloved belongings—sometimes also with their pets, such as cats and dogs (which are very psychic animals, by the way, and worked as psychic influences in the Royal Courts)—they wanted all this to be brought with them to the Underworld. They even took their faithful servants with them to the afterlife—people who had worshipped them (more human sacrifice). All this was considered assisting the Pharaoh in his afterlife, in which he expected to become like the gods: granted eternal life.

In some stories, there are seven gates to the Underworld, while in others, there are twelve. Typically, in the Egyptian religion, the number is twelve gates, while the Sumerian stories talk of seven gates. The twelve gates represented the twelve hours of the night. When the Pharaoh had passed all the twelve gates, it was dawn.<sup>285</sup>

As soon as the Pharaoh had been mummified and his coffin closed, his journey through the Underworld began. Each gate had its own purpose and tests that the Pharaoh had to accomplish in order to get to the next gate.<sup>286</sup> Eventually, when he had successfully passed the twelfth gate, he ascended as Ra, the Sun God. He became the Sun.<sup>287</sup> It was very important that the Pharaoh was able to complete the tasks in the Underworld because if he failed, the Sun would no longer appear in the sky of the living, and life would cease on Earth. Therefore, if the Sun still arose in the sky the day after the night when the Pharaoh began his journey, the Egyptians knew that the Pharaoh had succeeded—in other words, more fear-based religion.<sup>288</sup>

Did the Pharaohs ever become the Sun? Of course not. Like so much else, it’s all deception, but the Egyptians believed in it—religiously.

In reality, the Underworld is just another metaphor for the entrapment of souls in the afterlife and the cycles of reincarnation. So, are the astral planes actually located under the surface of the Earth? We need to keep in mind that many of these stories stem from a time before the Flood, and it was not until after the Deluge that Marduk and En.ki set up today's entrapment system, including the Grid—something we will talk about more later. However, I have no problem believing that once upon a time, souls got reprogrammed for another life somewhere beneath our feet but in another dimension.

II. The Underworld and the Afterlife

I have written on the subject of the afterlife and the AIF entrapment of souls before—starting with manipulation of deceptive spirit guides—sometimes in the form of deceived relatives and friends, who are guiding the discarnate soul through the tunnel and further into the realm of entrapment.

I think that here it is important to make a statement that our spirit guides, who often are beings who genuinely care about us (but can also be our own Oversoul) are serious in their attempts to assist us—both in life and in the afterlife. You can call for them while still in incarnation here on Gaia if you need help or advice, and if you specifically ask them to help you, they will. Although, you may think that when you die the next time, you will know more than the spirit guides did when they were amongst the living, so why would you ask them? Well, once you leave the Earth plane and get used to being “dead,” you see things from a totally different perspective. You can see what is going on down here—all at once—from a bird's eye perspective, but you will also become more psychic. Therefore, it is appropriate to ask the guides for help because they can see things that you can't, from your limited view. Even when the relatives guide you into the Tunnel of Light, they do so with your best interest in mind because that is all they know. There is still a lot of deception on the “other side,” just like it is here.

In the Between Life Area (the BLA), there are many beings working. The ones in charge are either members of the AIF or discarnate humans, who the AIF have trained to do the job for them. However, there are certain entities—we all know who they are by now—who are “in charge” of the BLA. The Queen of Entrapment is Queen Ereškigal, and Lucifer, aka En.ki, aka Nergal, aka Ea is the male in charge. Other beings are also known to be working in liaison with them. These beings are En.ki's son, Marduk, Utu Šamaš, and Hermes-Thoth of Rigel. However, keep these names in mind because we are eventually going to look into whom these beings really are.

I find it very interesting when I research that the Pantheon, the Sumerian, Akkadian, Egyptian, Greek, and Roman records, and all the ancient scriptures of all their different kinds seem to describe so many different beings. It is very confusing at first, and it's hard to break it all down into some kind of consistency. Nevertheless, I notice, to my great surprise, that it's the same handful of ET individuals who are changing names, titles, positions, and whereabouts over and over. Therefore, in reality, we are dealing with only a very few beings, pretending to be many. This is part of the deception. They want us to believe that they are populating the Earth in quantities, when in fact, they are not. This will become more obvious as we go along.

If we again go back to look at the Underworld where Queen Ereškigal was the primordial ruler, she was personally trapping souls there and was not allowing them to leave. This is told over and over again in our mythology. Once the BLA became more "sophisticated," if this is the right word to use, things changed, but souls are still being trapped in the afterlife and sent back to Earth to serve the gods in one way or another.

An additional hypothesis is that the BLA and the Underworld are both existing today, in unison. The Pleiadians, when they were discussing Barbara Marciniak's journey through the Underworld, it could have been a metaphor, but I got the impression that it was not—Marciniak was actually there, and when she is discussing her illness with her closest friends, she is stating the same thing—that the Underworld actually exists.

If it still exists, what purpose does it fill? Perhaps, its purpose is as a judgment place for some souls before they enter the BLA—I am still not sure. After all, judgment was what it was all about in the ancient days, when Hermes-Thoth supposedly led the recent dead downward and judged his or her soul.

Now let us look a little deeper at those deities who have put themselves in charge of humanity and the entrapment system, and let's start with En.ki, Marduk, and Utu and look at how names and titles have been changed, but once exposed, they reveal something astonishing behind the façade.

If we look up the god Sin in Wikipedia, we find the following highlights.

Sin...was the god of the moon in the Mesopotamian mythology of Akkad, Assyria and Babylonia<sup>289</sup>...He is commonly designated as En-zu, which means "lord of wisdom"<sup>290</sup>...Sin was naturally regarded as the head of the pantheon. It is to this period that we must trace such designations of Sin as "father of the gods", "chief of the gods", "creator of all things", and the like.<sup>291</sup>

Now, let's look up En.ki.

[En.ki was] Considered the master shaper of the world, god of wisdom and of all magic.<sup>292</sup>

If we compare notes, here is one important detail to be aware of. In the first quote, it says that Sin is commonly designated as "En-zu," "lord of wisdom." Which god is really designated the title, "lord of wisdom?" As we can see, it's En.ki. Likewise, En.ki is known as the head of the pantheon, an attribute here designated to Sin. Moreover, he is the "father of the gods" and the "creator of all things," two more things that are normally related to En.ki. So, here we see how one god is taking the cloak of another.

Now, let's go back to Sin again to bring this story further.

His [Sin's] wife was Ningal ("Great Lady"), who bore him Utu/Shamash ("Sun")...The tendency to centralize the powers of the universe leads to the establishment of the doctrine of a triad consisting of Sin/Nanna and his children.<sup>293</sup>

So, interestingly enough, "Sin," or should we say En.ki, had a son, Utu/Shamash, the "Sun god." First of all, this shows that Utu is not connected to the House of En.lil, but to the House of En.ki. More importantly, however—Utu is looked at as the Sun god. Wasn't there another son of En.ki's who actually was known as the Sun god? That's right—Marduk! Could it really be that Utu Shamash and Marduk are one and the same? Well, before we look into that some more, note also that Sin and Nanna (Nannar) are also one and the same, according to the old records (see quote above). The readers who have a very good memory may recall that Dr. A.R. Bordon and his LPG-C team were in contact with the "Nibiruans," and according to Dr. Bordon in his essay, "The LINK,"<sup>294</sup> there was a change in command amongst the Nibiruan gods sometime in the 1400s. "Anu" (Khan En.lil) stepped down, and Nannar took his place, according to this source.

Can the reader see what's going on here? Anu is Khan En.lil — this we have learned — therefore, the AIF wants to make it official, in present time, that Khan En.lil is no longer in charge of anything, and Nannar is taking over — officially! Now, who is Nannar? He is Sin, who goes back to En.ki. What Dr. Bordon is saying, in other words — in his usual cryptic way — is that En.ki is now officially the head of the “Anunnaki.” However, the “King of Nibiru” will not present himself as En.ki but as his alias, Nannar. Bordon mentions in “The LINK” that En.ki or Marduk were not appropriate for the lofty position to become the King of Nibiru because they had “screwed up” too much here on Earth (Bordon's own words). So, that takes the official En.ki out of the picture, but he still claims the position via the name of King Nannar. We also see whom Dr. Bordon was working with before he died. Interesting, also, is that Dr. Bordon, just like Sitchin, claims that Nannar is the grandson of En.lil. Metaphorically (and these things are very important for these people), “Nannar” rules via the House of En.lil while he covertly is En.ki himself. Doesn't that cover it all? En.ki claims rulership both over the House of En.lil and the House of En.ki!

Of course, the whole “Nibiru issue” is a farce. Nibiru is a battleship and not the home planet of the “Anunnaki.”

Now back to the Utu issue. We have Sin/En.ki, whose son, according to the old records, is Utu Šamaš, the Sun god. BUT, then we asked ourselves, isn't Marduk the Sun god? Are they one and the same?

If we look up Utu in Wikipedia, we find this quite interesting information.

Marduk is spelled AMAR.UTU in Sumerian, literally, "the calf of Utu" or "the young bull of the Sun."<sup>295</sup>

So, Marduk is spelled AMAR.UTU in Sumerian. Don't we have too many coincidences here? So, what I am hinting at is that Utu Šamaš and Lord Marduk are one and the same. This also means that the extraterrestrial being I was contacted by in 2011, who presented himself as Utu Šamaš, was most likely no one less than Lord Marduk himself!<sup>296</sup>

There is more, however, showing that Sin is the son of Khan En.lil and Queen Nin, which is further evidence that he is En.ki's counterpart. I also find it interesting that Sin has a beard made of lapis lazuli, which is Lucifer's stone, also used by his son, Marduk.

Sin had a beard made of lapis lazuli and rode on a winged bull. The bull was one of his symbols, through his father, Enlil, "Bull of Heaven", along with the crescent and the tripod (which may be a lamp-stand)... An important Sumerian text ("Enlil and Ninlil") tells of the descent of Enlil and Ninlil, pregnant with Nanna/Sin, into the underworld.<sup>297</sup>

Now the readers start to understand what I mean when I say that we can narrow down the players in this cosmic drama to just a few renown beings. Of course, these beings have armies behind them, where the soldiers are never named, but the beings we read about in the ancient texts can be narrowed down this way. Important also is that the AIF, creating the Patriarchal Regime, had to "get rid of" the original Gods and Goddess, and the best way to do it was to replace them with themselves! This way, they didn't have to completely erase the memories of the old Golden Age and the time before that, when Mother Goddess was here—all they needed to do was to take their place. So, when appropriate, they changed gender of the original Gods and Goddesses and made the feminine deities into males and stole titles and names and used them for themselves.

To complete my statement about LPG-C and its cooperation with En.ki, we can now see that it is most probably working with Marduk—him being the same person as Utu Šamaš.

Conclusions: The main characters in charge of the AIF on Earth today are, thus far, narrowed down to four: Lord En.ki, Lord Marduk, Hermes-Thoth (aka Ningishzidda and Quetzalcoatl), and Queen Ereškigal. Then we have Isis/Inanna/Lilith/Ishtar, but she was not "in charge." These entities then have had the tendency, throughout time, to multiply themselves in the mind of mankind, as each one of them took on the role of many deities.

One of the most famous ancient stories about the Underworld is that of Inanna's Descent to the Underworld. Inanna, we have learned from previous papers, is one and the same as Ishtar, Lilith, and Isis, to name a few—just different aspects of the same goddess.

Thus far, we have established that the Underworld, more or less, seems to be ruled by four different deities—En.ki as Nergal, Ereškigal, Marduk/Utu, and Hermes-Thoth<sup>298</sup>. Where, then, does Inanna fit into the picture? Did she actually descend to the Underworld and stay there as a fifth deity, or is this a cover-up as well in order to confuse? Inanna's relation to Ereškigal is many faceted, and depending on which story we subscribe to, if any, we learn different things.

<sup>298</sup> We are going to look at Thoth more extensively in another paper.

Some say that Ereškigal was Inanna's elder sister,<sup>299</sup> while others say that Inanna and Ereškigal are one and the same,<sup>300</sup> where Inanna represents the lighter side of the goddess and Ereškigal the darker. Essentially, it seems as if the Queen of the Underworld took on the persona of Inanna to create a bigger playground for herself.

III. The Queen of the Underworld

In a Sumerian epic called The Legend of Nergal and Ereškigal, found in Tell el-Amarna in Egypt, dating all the way back to the fifteenth or fourteen centuries B.C.<sup>301</sup>, a very interesting story is told.

This story, however, is much older than that and goes back to a time, probably a hundred thousand years ago, or more. As we know, at one time Lucifer proclaimed himself En.ki, which means "Lord of Earth." This story, however, tells us exactly how and why he gave himself this title and also reveals to us even more that Nergal and En.ki are the same being.

The story tells us how Lucifer, here in the name of Nergal, is storming the Seven Gates of the Underworld in order to get to the self-proclaimed Queen of the Underworld, Ereškigal. Once he manages to break down the Seven Gates and gets to the Queen, he engages himself in a six-day long lovemaking session with the goddess<sup>302</sup> (which sounds like rape to me, because he took the Underworld by force).

According to this Egyptian version, there is a reason why Nergal/Lucifer is storming the Underworld, which is that Ereškigal apparently is in possession of something very powerful that Nergal wants. According to the text, Ereškigal says after the six-day long lovemaking session:

You can be my husband, and I can be your wife.
I will let you seize Kingship over the wide Earth! I will put the Tablet
Of Wisdom in your hand! You can be a master,
I can be mistress.<sup>303</sup>

---

<sup>299</sup> <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ereshkigal>

So, it sounds like Queen Ereškigal, defeated, makes Nergal an offer. She is in possession of these desirable “Tablets of Wisdom,” and probably only she knows where they are, which perhaps saves her life. In exchange for the Tablets, not only is she allowed to live, but she will also still remain the Queen of the Underworld. All she needs to do is to offer Nergal Kingship over the whole Earth, including the Underworld, where they can rule together.

Fig. 2. Throne of Nergal and Ereškigal.

In some versions of this story, Nergal and Ereškigal get married, but this old, Egyptian version makes more sense because En.ki/Nergal was already married to Isis. Instead, Ereškigal becomes his mistress. Due to the story, Nergal agrees and not only becomes the King of the Underworld, but claims the whole planet as his and starts calling himself Lord En.ki, “King of Earth”. Supposedly, by possessing these Tablets, he finally believes he’s in charge of Planet Earth for real. Apparently, also included with these Tablets were some “magic stones,” which we will discuss more in due time.

Interesting also is that the story of one of these stones, “an exceptionally clear quartz crystal,” is told in Chinese and Japanese traditions. This stone is now located in the Moscow Museum. The stone is called the Chintamani Stone, and according to the mythos, this stone is known as the “Jewel-That-Grants-All-Desires.” It is believed that it was once in possession of the Makara, a dragon- or dolphin-god, living in a palace at the bottom of the sea! Who, then is a dragon/dolphin god, living at the bottom of the sea? The readers know the answer—his name is En.ki!

If this stone, sitting in the Moscow Museum, is actually one of En.ki's stones, is disputable, but the story around it is quite fascinating because the powers of the stone are very similar to those of the Tablets of Destinies and the stones that are associated with them.

How Ereškigal possessed the powerful Tablets of Destinies is a mystery, however. These Tablets were not hers to begin with and passed ownership many times during the history of Earth. In reality, the Tablets are extremely old, perhaps almost as old as the Universe itself and include the memories thereof.

Fig. 3. Ereškigal in the Underworld

I have known for some time that the Tablets of Destinies have had a somewhat leading role in the War of the Gods, and whoever has possession of them has the potential to obtain the most power. Nevertheless, as with any stone or device, what kind of powers it has depends on who is programming it.

The author, who has put the pieces together in the most coherent and intelligent way of all researchers I've come in contact with (and I'm talking about both the Tablets of Destiny and ancient history) is Dr. Joseph P. Farrell.<sup>304</sup> He is an American theologian, a scholar on the East-West Schism, and the author of several book in history, alternative history, and science, to name a few. He is also Adjunct Professor of Patristic Theology and Apologetics at California Graduate School of Theology, and he's an organist, plays the harpsichord, and is a composer of classical music.<sup>305</sup> Wikipedia states the following about Dr. Farrell:

A student of Timothy Ware, Farrell became a professor of Patristics at Saint Tikhon's Orthodox Theological Seminary.[citation needed] He also holds an M.A. from Oral Roberts University, a B.A. from John Brown University and is a doctoral graduate (D.Phil.) of Pembroke College, Oxford University with specialty in Patristics awarded in 1987.<sup>306</sup>

Therefore, he started out as a theologian and a historian, one may presume, and learned the traditional way, studying under Timothy Ware, one of the best-known contemporary Eastern Orthodox theologians in the world.<sup>307</sup> From there, he must have thought that what he had learned was not always correct, so he began to research alternative theology and history instead, and he did so with honor, I must say. The book, which corresponds the most to this level of learning, is his "The Cosmic War – Interplanetary Warfare, Modern Physics, and Ancient Texts."

Dr. Farrell has taken what must have been a considerable amount of time researching the Tablets of Destiny, and a good part of his book is spent on these Tablets. Before I ran into his work, I had become quite discouraged because there didn't seem to be much relevant information on this material on the Internet, nor in books. However, Farrell has found a few sources that he is using in his work, who are indeed quite helpful.

I read Farrell's book and was quite impressed. Therefore, I'm going to use Dr. Farrell and a few other relevant sources when I present the story of the Tablets of Destiny for the readers in the next paper. It's quite an amazing story.

In the beginning of this section, I told the readers how Nergal/En.ki stormed the Underworld and possessed these mystical stones. In order to save her life, Queen Ereškigal gave Lord En.ki the Tablets of Destiny, which she had hoarded in her Underworld Palace. However, Queen Ereškigal was not the first person who was in possession of the Tablets of Destiny — she was only one in a line of beings.

When we begin discussing the Tablets, we're going to see what they really are and where they are located now.

Paper 10 will obviously be about the Tablets of Destiny, but a lot more will also be said about Nergal, Ereškigal, and the Underworld in future papers.

PAPER #10: THE TABLETS OF DESTINIES

I. The Prisoners of the Abyss Revisited

On the E-Abzu throne he sat, sometimes with his son Marduk by his side, scheming and pondering. Lord En.ki was quite sure it would work—it didn't conflict with any sciences, and he should know, being a highly trained scientist. Thus, it should be possible.

Almost nine light-years away from Ar-i-du, his best generals, and a lot of his most courageous warriors, were still stuck in the Abyss of the Dark Star, Sirius C. They, the so-called “Nommos,” had been put there by Khan En.lil and his son, Prince Ninurta, after the initial Cosmic War had ended—the war that is also called “Lucifer’s Rebellion.” Their Avatars had been made useless, so their Fires were unable to navigate them. In addition, they were sentenced to never be able to become Creator Goddesses. As long as they were imprisoned, their Fires had no power to create in any meaningful capacity. They were now what we humans would call real “non-physical beings,” stuck in the darkness of the deepest Abyss of the KHAA, inside an electronic veil, or grid, which made it impossible for them to escape—at least without help from outside. Even if such help would be possible, the Nommos were still without power to move around on their own because their Avatars were “locked.” The Orions had really done what they could to make sure that these prisoners would never again travel around in the Universe—not until they were released by the Orion Court—if that would ever happen.

Lord En.ki had a lot of attention on his old soldiers. It was not that he felt emotionally attached to them or that he “missed them” on any emotional level—he needed them, period! Generals, like those that he had during the Rebellion, were a dime on a dozen, and moreover, there were a lot of soldiers imprisoned in the Dark Star, and he needed good troops. A few scientists, as well, had shared the Nommos’s fate.

Not until he had noticed the capacities of the Ladies of Fire (the human females) and learned how they could access the Inner Sanctuaries of the KHAA during their orgasms, had a plan to release the Dark Star prisoners caught his attention. These extraordinary Ladies of Fire could be the solution!

En.ki and his firstborn son thought that they had an ingenious plan, indeed, and this is how they plotted it:

Here on Earth, En.ki had his Minions<sup>308</sup>—the so-called ADAMA—being of his own “magnificent” blood. Their bodies had been powerfully programmed with his own DNA in combination with Gaia Apes and the Dragons/Reptilians from Alpha Draconis. The memories of everything En.ki had taught them in the ancient past was stored in their DNA and could be accessed. Usually, it was the same souls incarnating over and over, mostly throughout the same family lines. Although these beings were affected by amnesia that regular humans had to experience to its fullest, they still had an easier time to access their past life memories than regular humans did. This was before the Deluge, under the Atlantean Era, which we talked about in Level II, when En.ki ruled as Poseidon and Neptune. He had not yet set up the Grid around the planet, and there was no organized “Between Lives Area,” although the souls were programmed to reincarnate. However, in these days, there were souls who escaped and never reincarnated on Earth again. It was not until the Grid was set up in conjunction with the Between Lives Area that escaping became almost non-existent.

The plan was to “pierce” the electronic veil, which was set up around the Dark Star, and to get the Nommos’s souls out of there. However, it wouldn’t be enough only to pierce the veil—even if that would work and the prisoners could escape, they would be useless in their present condition—they needed new Avatars, so how could that be done?

After had prepared for it, the solution was fairly simple! En.ki already had the vessels that the Nommos could use, and those vessels (or bodies) were those of his Minions! All En.ki needed to do was

1. Pierce a hole in the veil.
2. Get the prisoners out.
3. Embody them, using his Minions—the loyal ADAMA of his own pure bloodline.

So far so good, but there was an important piece that was missing in the equation. His Minions were, because of their bloodline, adequate shamans, and through rituals, they should be able to contact their brothers in the Abyss by nanotraveling while at the same time being in their bodies.<sup>309</sup> The purpose would be for the imprisoned spirits in Sirius to possess the bodies of the Minions here on Earth and escape from the prison. The prisoners, who were more powerful—or let's say "experienced"—spirits than En.ki's present Minions, would have special human hybrid bodies waiting for them in suspense, and as soon as the Nommo spirits inhabited them, they would come to life with help from technology. From where En.ki took the Avatars, which the Nommos would need, is anyone's guess, but as the saying goes, "some things are better kept in the dark."

---

<sup>308</sup> When we are discussing them in the time period before the Flood, I will from here on call En.ki’s ruling Elite bloodline his Minions, with a capital “M.” When discussing them after the Flood, I will call them the Global Elite.

<sup>309</sup> Today’s Global Elite are also shamans, although their abilities have declined. However, they can still, by using Tantric sex and other rituals, do quite powerful things.

However, there was one problem. Even if the Minions, by using shamanism, could pierce the veil (something Khan En.lil had strictly forbidden them to even try), and merge with the hybrid bodies, they wouldn't be able to get the spirit out of the prison. Something more powerful was needed—something that Lord En.ki actually possessed!

He needed Ladies of Fire!

However, to be successful, these Ladies of Fire had to be gung-ho on the project, thinking it was for their own good and in humanity's best interest. Therefore, En.ki spent a lot of time with the most powerful of the human females, was kind and loving to them, using his infamous charm, manipulating voice, and thoughts, to win their hearts and souls. The Ladies of Fire, already being aware of En.ki's deceptive nature, needed to be worked on more extensively than that, but En.ki was both a master hypnotist and an expert on mind control. As a genetic engineer, he knew how the mind works—to the Ladies of Fire, this was something unknown.

Many times, he succeeded, but far from all the time. He used a made up story as a baseline for his hypnotic technique, telling the Namlú'u that Gaia was about to be invaded, and if they could only free Lord En.ki's best soldiers, who were prisoners of war in a horrible place in another star system, the invaders wouldn't stand a chance—in fact, Lord En.ki wouldn't even let them enter the solar system. It was of course not true, but En.ki justified it by explaining that there was always a chance that the Orions would invade, so what he was telling the Lús had truth in it, he figured. He also flattered the females and told them that they had powers no one else had—it was just dormant. However, he, En.ki the Great Shaman, could teach them how to get their power out, and it had to do with rituals—especially a shamanic sex ritual, which today is called Tantric sex.

Fig. 1. En.ki preparing shamanic ritual.

After En.ki had managed to “recruit” what he considered enough females, the practice began. En.ki taught the Ladies of Fire how to start using their Fire again and how to become shamans. En.ki had no clue how to be a true shaman. As I stated in the beginning of Level II, the males eventually took over female shamanism, thinking they could do it better. They couldn’t, but up to this day, many male shamans think they can. Because of the male interference with some very sacred rituals, true shamanism, which originated in the stars, was lost on Earth. Nevertheless, these women whom En.ki taught, were talented, indeed, and En.ki was pleased—especially because he could participate in the female sex acts with some of the most beautiful females in the Universe.

One day, En.ki gathered the fairly big group of specially trained females and a large group of Minions in a remote and quiet area where they were not likely to be interrupted by anybody. Robust DAKH warriors, invisible to the females and the Minions, were guarding the area. No one from outside was allowed in.

The Minions created a big circle, where pentagrams and other magical symbols were created on the ground. It was totally dark outside, except for a huge bonfire burning in the middle of the circle. Everybody was quiet—the only sound was the spark from the fire.

Fig. 2. Ladies of Fire building a circle.

Suddenly, the female lead shaman entered the circle, naked and with her body painted. On her head was a bandana filled with feathers, symbolizing the aquatic Bird Tribe they are working on saving. She started dancing, and other females started pounding on drums. The shaman danced faster and faster, and other shamans entered the circle, also naked with feathery head dresses. As the beat of the drums stayed on a steady, fast, and complicated rhythm, the shamans danced themselves into a trance, shapeshifting into different entities, such as bears, birds, and fishlike beings, and then back to human form again.

The dance went on for hours, and became more and more sexual in nature. While the drums were still playing, males and females found each other, and started having prolonged sex, lasting all the way until dawn. The male's main task was to bring the females to sustained orgasms, so that they, during their moments of ecstasy, could leave their bodies and pierce holes in the veil around the Sirian Dark Star.

One by one, during their orgasms, these female shamans managed to contact the prisoners of the Abyss. Many of the females, however, became so disturbed by the whole scenario, and mostly from the energy of the beings who were trapped there, that they stopped in the middle and redirected their energy. En.ki, who was supervising the whole ritual, only participating on occasion, was concerned about the women's reactions, and soon he noticed that the ritual didn't work. It needed more preparation. The Ladies of Fires were way too "sensitive" and couldn't handle the brutal warrior energies of the Nommos.

Not until a few weeks later, after using some more of his demonic techniques on the females, En.ki felt confident that the shamanic Ladies of Fire were ready to meet what was on the other side of the veil, and impatiently, he sat down to watch the ritual.

This time it went much better, and the Ladies of Fire managed to connect one on one with the imprisoned Nommo warriors. When the female orgasms were subsiding and the energies began to retract again toward their bodies, they brought Nommo souls with them, riding on the energy. In the circle, out in the desert where the Minions bodies were waiting in suspense, the Nommo spirits started using their own energy to possess the bodies.

By repeating this ritual, night after night, more and more Nommos were released from the Dark Star, until almost all of them were released (some of them were so bad off that they couldn't be saved, and are probably still floating around in the Sirian prison.

Lord En.ki was very pleased, and he told these new souls, in their sturdy, hybrid bodies, that they were never to have children with lulus<sup>310</sup>. If they did, they could never acknowledge them as their own. En.ki wanted a very pure bloodline to serve him. Inbreeding was the solution for them to remain in power. Up until this day, the Global Elite are inbreeding, and it's even coming out in the mainstream media now how people in power, who seem totally unrelated in genetic terms, have common ancestors. We can also clearly see this pattern amongst the Royal Families of the world—they never let their children marry somebody who is not of the bloodline.

<sup>310</sup> This is En.ki's and the AIF's degrading name of humanity in general. They look at Ninurta's and the Queen Nin's original bloodline, from which En.ki created his first successful hybrid race, as lulus, which could be translated similar to "ape people" –stupid and ignorant. In other words, that's how they look at you and me. When I communicated with Utu Shamash, he kept calling me a lulu.

Fig. 3. The current Swedish Royal family. Queen Silvia and King Carl XVI Gustav are portrayed in the middle, and Crown Princess Victoria is to the left. Princess Magdalene and Prince Carl Philip are standing to the right.

A relatively recent example of this is the Swedish Monarchy. King Carl XVI Gustav's eldest daughter, Crown Princess Victoria, fell in love with a young man and wanted to marry him. Her father, the King, went to the U.S. to meet with a Council. We were told (again in the mainstream media) that they had tested this young man's genes, and he wasn't "pure" enough, so the King told her daughter to stop dating him. Victoria was devastated but couldn't do anything about it (interestingly enough, Victoria has showed signs of being bipolar and having eating disorders, something that has also been addressed in the media. These conditions always come from severe trauma—usually in the childhood, and were in her case not related to her refused love—her conditions were there long before that. Very often, these traumas have sexual abuse as a base. There is nothing glamorous with being one of the Power Elite).

How did this Swedish love story end, then? Well, a much "better" match was found for Victoria—a young man who had a much purer bloodline. The two are now married. These people don't marry for love, but for the sake of bloodlines. The parents want their children to marry someone who is as pure as possible because it helps the family to gain more power—both in the hierarchal structure and to gain more psychic powers. Eventually, when the parents die, they normally wait until there is a grandchild or a great grandchild about to be born. When this is about to happen, the older member of the family decides to die and immediately afterward takes the body of their own grandchild or great grandchild, whatever is the case.

Preferably, royal families can marry into other royal families of other countries and get a stronghold there, hopefully, creating an alliance between the countries—it happens every so often. If the couple happens to be in love—good for them, but if they're not, they'd better marry anyway and have offspring. Crown Princess Victoria is one day going to become the Queen of Sweden as a successor of King Carl XVI Gustav, who is of French aristocracy originally.

To return to our original story, Lord En.ki was very pleased—his plan had worked! Now, many of his Minions were possessed by Nommo spirits, who, by entering the Minion bodies, could possess new Avatars. They were free from the prison, in which they had been captured for a very long time.

En.ki knew what he was doing. The Nommos, who once again could breathe the air of freedom, would now feel they were in debt to their master, who for them would always be Prince Lucifer—these were the only terms in which they thought of him. However, they never used Lucifer's name when talking about him openly. Under such circumstances, he was just the Grandmaster, the Shining One, or the Overlord.

The Ladies of Fire, who had been trained and participated in the release of the prisoners, got their "reward" immediately: They had their memories totally wiped out, and none of them had any idea of what they had done.

Thus was the mindset of Prince Lucifer, the Brilliant One, the Shining One, the Master of Illumination, the Great Dragon of Old, the Great Serpent (all of these titles were self-proclaimed, of course). He thought, how could his parents and his "dear" brother underestimate him so? Couldn't they see that he was the most Brilliant and Radiant One who has ever existed—in this Universe and beyond? They banished him from Orion's highest dimensions. What fools! Still, this was only the beginning, he thought. They just wait and see! Before he, the Great Lucifer, is finished, the Orion Empire is going to shake and tumble in its very foundations, and there is nothing anybody can do about it. Now En.ki laughed aloud for a long time—it was as if he couldn't stop.

II. Pure Blood and Sex Worship

The sacred matrimony between man and woman is something that has been established here on Earth, emphasized as a virtue that should be upheld. Of course, not all cultures on this planet uphold this idea—there are those who have harems, and some cultures embrace polygamy—but in the western world at least, monogamy is the most common lasting relationship between a man and a woman. At best, such a marriage is supposed to last for a lifetime.

This is not something we humans came up with—it was the gods who taught us this. They stressed that we should mate with one partner only and stick with him/her. There is of a reason for this—the AIF wants to be able to keep track of all the bloodlines and know who is whom. Otherwise, they don't care because they are hardly monogamists themselves.

Monogamy is a generalization—it's always wrong to say that everybody is in a certain way—we are all individuals, and so are the gods (aside from those who are cloned). Still, there were those who married their daughters and sons, had sex with them at a young age, and produced an offspring. Grandfathers had sex with granddaughters as well—the list goes on.

To their defense (if I may call it that), many of these beings are next to immortal and have more offspring than we can count. To demand that they can't have sex with their own children somewhere along the line would probably be to stretch it. Many times, I'm sure, they are not even aware of the connection, and even when they are, I don't think there is an emotional problem for a 300,000 year old woman to have sex with a 900,000 year old male, if the reader gets the drift. It's not like when a 14 year-old girl has sex with a 60 year-old man here on Earth.

Sodomy and perverted sex has never been the practice of the highest of the Gods and Goddesses, but very much so amongst the younger generation of gods, such as En.ki and his cohorts, i.e. the Olympians. Although we were taught by the gods not to do it (at least not to begin with), sometimes we saw the gods doing it, and as children often do, we imitated our "parents."

Monogamy, however, is not a rule "set in stone" by any higher God, or Goddess, in the Universe. People are allowed to experiment, but monogamy in the western cultures is so deeply imprinted that it's hard to break out of it. Even if both partners in a relationship are open for experiments with others "on the side," or if they invite a third person—or perhaps another couple, and it goes quite well at first, it almost always ends with jealousy. At least one of the partners feels neglected and less loved when that person sees the other, whom he or she loves, being with another woman or man more passionately than with the original partner. Such relationships usually don't last long.

Most people are so insecure within themselves that they look for others to love them—whereas, they must learn to love themselves first. Once people have learned how to truly love themselves as a composite (mind/spirit/body), they will notice that giving love to those around them (and that which is around them) is what is important—not necessarily to receive it from others. Of course, it's a very nice feeling when somebody else loves you, but it's when it becomes a necessity for a person's existence to be loved by others that it's destructive.

Nevertheless, we're all on different levels of learning, so what is the answer to marriage? I would say, follow your own ethics and moral codes. Don't care about what "society" wants you to do—instead, do what you want to do, so long as you don't hurt yourself and others. No one has the right to tell you what you should do, and if it feels wrong, be strong enough not to do it! Being in a monogamous relationship is probably "playing it safe," and if the married couple really loves each other throughout the entire lifetime, this is a wonderful thing! However, if they are together only because they are "supposed to" or because of their own insecurity only, it holds both partners back. Therefore, there is no good answer whether marriage is a good thing or not—it depends on the individuals. Unfortunately, many people who start waking up and, perhaps, don't want to get married, feel like there is something wrong with them because society is almost forcing them to find a life partner. Sometimes it takes a while to break out of the "hive mentality" we've, in many cases, been living under.

By getting married, you take an oath that you should be with your partner until death separates you. That's a heavy oath to take, and breaking it is connected with a lot of guilt for many people. In the future, marriage will be something of the past. It can be romantic and a fantastic experience to go through a wedding, but to take that oath is not in the best interest of the people involved because we don't own each other. Marriage, the way it's presented in the West, has little to do with pure love and sharing life together, even if it seems that way at first. It has, however, everything to do with ownership. Most people don't think about that, and I'm sure many people don't like what I've just said. That's fine—it's just something to ponder. On the other hand, marriage can also be what we make out of it—we can choose to skip all the nonsense about ownership and everything else that has been tied to it and simply call it a romantic decision—it's up to us. However, in order to be able to do that, the couple has to be strong enough not to be affected by the negative aspects that have been attached to it. Some think they are that strong, but when it comes down to it, they fail—not because they are not strong enough, perhaps, but because they fall back into old patterns.

The Four Levels of Learning, which I have written thus far, are concentrated on certain beings, who are more or less our neighbors out there in the Universe. I have mentioned very little about star beings who are not particularly connected with the agenda that has to do with us humans. Hence, I can only speak for those beings with whom we've by now become familiar—and even so, I only know and understand these beings superficially. Underneath lies a web of complexity that I am not able to comprehend as a human being.

One thing with being human is that it's perfectly okay to experiment with things (and I am not only talking about sex), as long as we don't hurt ourselves or others. This is what's important to think about. Then, the next question would be, how do we know when we hurt ourselves or others? It's not always obvious. The answer is that it comes with higher consciousness and awareness. We become more psychic and can feel and sense the need of others, just as well as we can feel and sense when they are uncomfortable and/or hurt, physically or mentally. When this happens, it's, of course, time to rethink what we're doing.

Tantric sex<sup>311</sup> is an ancient practice (obviously so, if you read about the above rituals, which include a version of tantric sex), but it has had a revival within the New Age movement. This is not a coincidence. Here is a practice that is not obviously destructive to the persons involved, but higher awareness and consciousness is what will help us see through an agenda to reintroduce this practice in society.

By prolonging the sexual act and eventually getting a stronger orgasm is in itself not a bad thing—quite the opposite. In this practice, the male becomes something like a Man of Fire as well as the female becomes a Lady of Fire—both using their Fire extensively during the act. In a better world, this would be a very rewarding sexual practice. However, with the practitioners being clueless and mostly totally ignorant, their orgasmic energies are being sucked up by interdimensional beings. Not only that—if the practitioners don't ground and protect themselves during the act, they can easily be possessed by beings who want to participate in the sexual act and gain from the energies that are produced.

Tantric sex (or tantra as it is also called) is one of the more powerful sexual interactions between individuals, and that's why it's reintroduced now in these times. A growing part of humanity is getting “riper” by the day, with increased awareness, consciousness, and psychic abilities. We are almost ready to be “harvested.”<sup>312</sup>

In general, most people who have sex don't set goals for the intimacy. I don't want to sound like an arousal killer here, but I do need to emphasize that it's important to decide beforehand what the goal for having sex at a certain moment is. I brought this up already in Level I, but some things need to be reemphasized. Example of goals for your orgasm and where to target the energy involved, could be to enhance your own psychic power or that of the partner. It could also be to connect with the highest dimensions of the KHAA, where the Queen and King of Orion have their Court. As another example, it could be to heal yourself or others. These are just coming from the top of my head—anything is possible. However, it's important to add that no one else, whom you have not included in the goal, is allowed to use any of the energy. That way, the orgasm will not drain you, and the energy goes where it is supposed to go.

The AIF wants to keep you ignorant about this so that it can use the energy to get into the sections of the KHAA, which otherwise are inaccessible for them. To put it bluntly—our future depends on how we use our sexual energy! If we allow the AIF to use it, it will be so much easier for them in the near future to shatter the Gates of Orion and break in. If this happens, humans will be used as shields and foot soldiers, and they will be the first to die. When I say “die,” I'm not only talking about physical death—I'm talking about having the Avatar shot into pieces, so the soul becomes a helpless “drifter,” without any interdimensional vessel with which it can move around.

I wish I had a magic wand with which I could wake up everybody on this planet. If I did have one, I wouldn't need to write one single word more...

Also, now while we're talking about the New Age and even the spiritual movement of increased awareness and consciousness, we all know the word enlightenment. We use it all the time to indicate that we are making progress—we say that we are becoming more enlightened. According to some of the records, it was En.ki, as Satan or Lucifer, who “enlightened” the people, beginning in the Garden of Edin. Those who have read my material, however, know that all En.ki did was to educate his own hybrid bloodline.

Now, if we look at the word “enlightenment,” what does it actually indicate? It is very close to *Enlil*enlightenment, isn't it? All we need to do is to add another letter: l. If we look at the real ancient history, who was it that “enli(l)ighted” the primordial humans, the Namlú'u, who were the humans, intended to evolve on this planet? It was Khan En.lil and Prince En.lil (Ninurta), together with Queen Nin. It may seem like a play with words, but words are powerful and often have meanings that are not obvious when we first look at them. They can also mean something different for an aware person versus for someone who is still asleep. Words and languages are very multidimensional. This is another idea to ponder.

In summary, when En.ki's troops are released from the Dark Star, he will have minions he can count on who will do their job with intelligence enough to possibly get it right. The Nommos are also less prone to breed outside the bloodlines and will keep the hybrid bodies “cleaner” (I will sometimes call En.ki's Minions the Nommos, regardless of the fact that far from all of them have Nommo souls. Still, it's the Nommos who are in charge of the Global Elite here on Earth).

The long-term plans that En.ki and the Nommos have are sinister, which involves us humans to a very large degree. The only way they can accomplish those plans, however, is through manipulation, and thus far, they have succeeded beyond their own expectations.

III. The Fine Line Between Evolving Naturally and Evolving into Future Slavery

In Level III, I revealed a lot about the channeled entities and their agenda. Those who have been into channeling or read or listened to a lot of different channeled material know that the term The Harvest comes up every so often amongst many different channeled sources. There are many New Agers who follow these sources and their channeled messages to the letter. Many of these entities promise that if we evolve enough and dedicate more than 51% of our time to Service to Others, we will graduate, either to the Fourth or the Fifth Density, where everything will be less dense and everybody will be happier and more compassionate and live by the principal of unconditional love. However, if you dedicate less than 51% of your time to serve others rather than yourself, you won't graduate—instead, you be moved to another planet in the Milky Way Galaxy where time will start all over again, and you will have to deal with the Nommos one more time in another time cycle, which may last anything from 13,000 to 75,000 years. Those who graduate, however, will stay here on Earth, which will ascend together with the evolved people to the Fourth or Fifth Density.

Some channeled sources say that you will evolve automatically, all by yourself and your own doing, while perhaps the majority claim that the ascending ones will be picked up in spaceships and spend some time in an intermediary station, while the people who are not evolving will be moved to the other planet, which has been prepared for them somewhere else in the Galaxy.

If we think about it, doesn't the word "harvest" have a creepy feeling to it? Harvest has to do with becoming ripe enough to be picked, doesn't it? The reason people stay with these channeling groups is because the entities have a warm and fuzzy feeling about them—people claim they have extraordinary "good energies," and when they read their messages—or preferably hear them in live sessions—they feel very good. Hence, there can't, in the minds of the believers, be anything negative about them.

What these people don't understand is that it's a piece of cake for the sources to transmit whatever energies they want without feeling anything near to what they transmit. However, not even when you point this out will the followers see that this may be the case. I think the reason for this is that they want it to be true so much that they don't want to rethink under any circumstance. It's nothing different from someone who is stuck in a religion.

Moreover, the followers then point out that the entities who are channeled can heal sick people or people with obvious physical ailments and add this to their argument for the benevolence of the entities—entities who are also sometimes able to predict the future to some degree. None of this is strange—of course, these beings have technologies far more advanced than ours—technologies which can also work on proximity.

Some other arguments that the followers of these channeled entities have are that the entities evidently are helping us evolve, and those who don't believe in what these entities say about the Harvest are those who really are deceived and are the ones who have to suffer while the followers of the channeled entities are being harvested. The followers also argue that the information they are given can be proven to be true and useful.

I would argue with that and say that the more deceptive the channeled source is, the more it wants to be as truthful as possible! This may sound like a contradiction, but it's not. The only way the entities will get a lot of followers is if they are truthful. In fact, they can be as truthful as they possibly can, as long as they are able to twist a small part of the information in the direction that they want the followers to go. Most channeled entities want us to evolve because they want us ripe enough to be able to harvest us.

Being harvested doesn't take you to a higher density or dimension—that's not the real purpose for the Harvest. Although we are said to be living in the Third Dimension, in reality, we move through dimensions all the time when we're thinking and when we're dreaming. The Third Dimension, however, is the "main" dimension where our attention returns and where we are manipulated to be stuck. Then, when we evolve, it means that our thoughts are constantly moving up into higher bands of the electromagnetic spectrum, and we become more fluid, and we can eventually move freely between the higher dimensions (nanotravel). It happens gradually, and it's not as if one day we wake up and find ourselves in a totally new environment—in a new dimension. If you read this, you are already operating in higher dimensions than you did let's say 5-10 years ago, although it's happened so gradually that you may not have noticed. However, all you need to do is to think back a certain number of years, and you will definitely notice the difference. In fact, you live on a slightly different “version” of Earth than you did at that time—one that fits your new, higher vibrations better.

As we have discussed at an earlier time, the AIF wants to harvest those who evolve so they can use their energies for food and create a future army that is able to penetrate the Gates of Orion—Orion being the original “Edin.” They may very well pick people up in spaceships, or they may not, but either way, the outcome will be the same. They may even create something similar to the Fourth and Fifth Dimensions they are so eagerly promoting, but it will remain a prison. It will work as a “container” for those who are later to be used by the AIF—against these people’s knowledge. Will they be further mind controlled? Most probably.

Some might say that they would rather move up a notch to a “Fourth Dimension” than to stay here, even if it’s a prison, but remember that we are not intending to stay here in the trap—our intention is to break free. However, in order to do that, it requires some work. We won’t be “beamed up” to a higher dimension—we need to create the reality we want, and we do that by “thinking” ourselves to the desired reality, and we do it by breaking the spell that the AIF has put on us, as we’ve discussed many times before—there is no other way to do it. We need to claim our sovereignty and let no one else decide what and whom we are and what we are going to evolve into.

As the readers can see, it’s a fine line between evolving the natural way and evolving to suit the AIF agenda. The only reason why the Nommos leave us alone to evolve is that they count on that most of those who are evolving will still be at their service in the future. They are aware that they may lose some on the way, but that’s acceptable to them. They don’t want souls who they can’t control, anyway, and most important—they also see it as a payment toward the “debt.” By letting a few escape, they think that they have met the obligation to let people evolve on their own, if they wish to. They want to show that they are not forcing anybody to do anything, and that whatever we do, we do it out of free will. In their mind, no one forced us to believe what the AIF has been saying or doing—it’s all by choice. I doubt that they will get away with that forever.

IV. Programmed Crystals and the “Tablets of Destinies”

As the astute readers may have noticed, I spend less time in this level of learning on presenting a timeline and more on adding information to a timeline I have already presented in Levels I and II.

The information in this level is more multidimensional and fluid, showing that the order of things is not that important and certainly not as important as just presenting the information and letting the timeline work itself out for the readers. Or, even better—the timeline can be totally disregarded, and the information automatically becomes entirely multidimensional, as in dream state.

The Tablets of Destinies, or the Mes, or MEs (the singular is Me [ME], pronounced “May,” like the month of May), play a crucial role in the Wars of the Gods. I have mentioned them occasionally in the other levels, but now we will study them a little deeper. First, however, we need to grasp the concept that En.ki is the King of the Underworld, and that it’s a part of being the Lord of Earth—it’s all self-proclaimed, as usual.

In the previous paper, I mentioned that there was the self-proclaimed Goddess, or Queen, living in the Underworld. To understand how En.ki became the King of the Underworld, using a different title than “Lord,” we need to start by looking a little bit more into this particular deity, who had already claimed the title as Queen of the Underworld—Ereškigal.

iv.i. The Tablets of Destinies—Ownership in Descending Order and the Battles Around Them

The MEs (Tablets of Destinies) are extremely old and must have been created at the beginning of the Universe—possibly by the Goddess herself in her manifestation as the Queen of the Stars. The legend states that the MEs hold the memories of the entire Universe, from beginning to end, and that they contain the information needed to create biological life forms in the Universe, which the Goddess is the Creatrix of.

Hence, it’s only natural that the Queen of the Stars was the original owner of these MEs, and according to the Enûma Eliš, she is known as Tiamat.

Again, we have to deal with the rewritten history in favor of the Patriarchs, but it’s getting easier and easier to see through these distortions. In Enûma Eliš (the Babylonian Creation Story), we read that Tiamat is a chaos monster, a primordial goddess of the ocean, mating with Abzû (the god of freshwater)<sup>313</sup>. If we disregard the term “chaos monster,” which is a term set by the Patriarchal Regime, we start getting on the right track already. Later in the same article, Wikipedia acknowledges Tiamat as the Creatrix of the Universe<sup>314</sup> and the sacred marriage between Abzu/Khan En.lil and Queen Nin in the ancient Peace Agreement.<sup>315</sup> As stated in Level II and onward, the story of the Universe is told in the ancient scriptures—it's just a matter of finding it. Dr. Farrell, who did some more in-depth research on Tiamat, equates her with the ruler and, perhaps, the Creatrix of the Milky Way Galaxy.<sup>316</sup>

iv.ii. Tiamat Loses Possession of the Tablets of Destinies to Marduk

Thus, Tiamat was the first deity in possession of the Tablets, which she gave to Kingú<sup>317</sup> (sometimes spelled Quingu—another name for Prince Ninurta, and sometimes Archangel Mikael as Khan En.lil), whom she and Khan En.lil had chosen as the Khan's successor to the Throne of Orion. Prince Ninurta supposedly fastened the Tablets to his breast,<sup>318</sup> which makes me think of a device of the size, or smaller than that of a cell phone, but still more powerful than any devices we know of.

As we saw in a previous paper, Marduk and Lucifer may have worked together to destroy their grandmother and mother, respectively, by defeating her in a horrific battle, which bounced planets out of orbit and destroyed parts of the planet Tiamat, also called Maldek and Old Terra.

Tiamat, the planet, was then thrown out of orbit and became Earth/Gaia, as we also have discussed earlier. Tiamat, the Queen and spirit, who was the counterpart to the Queen of the Stars, stayed as the spirit, inhabiting the remainder of the planet, which now, by Mother Goddess followers, is called Gaia. Prince Ninurta, many Vulcans, and surviving Titans fled the solar system and returned to Orion and Vega. The solar system, Ar-i-du, was now under Lucifer's regime.

Furthermore, the legend says that Prince Ninurta, who still possessed the Tablets of Destiny, had to hand them over to Marduk because he was the winner of the battle, and he and his father were the new rulers of the solar system, although it can be wildly disputed because the solar system was taken over by force. There was no written agreement, and there will never be. According to the mythos, it was the Elder Deities who approved of giving the Tablets to Marduk—henceforth, he became the head of the Babylonian Pantheon.<sup>319 320</sup> We can, of course, question whom these “Elder Deities” really were and whom they were working for. It makes it sound as if they were Khan En.lil and, perhaps, Tiamat herself being defeated and stripped off all her powers. This doesn't sound plausible, unless there is some Universal Law that says that it has to be done this way. Another option is that the records are written in such a way that Marduk and En.ki wanted the Earth population to think that they were given the Power of the Universe by the defeated Gods. If the latter is true, the Tablets were possibly stolen from Ninurta before he fled from the solar system 500,000 years ago. The records say that Ninurta was later captured and slain, and his blood was used to create the hybrids—humankind. This may very well be true, if we consider the 3-D body that he possessed while being on Earth as the one in question. If so, we have his blood in our veins—although diluted. Even if the blood is coming from his third-dimensional physical body, it still contains a soul aspect of the immortal person, as discussed elsewhere. Therefore, this hypothesis might be plausible.

Fig 4. Some say that the three discs hanging around Marduk's neck are the Tablets of Destinies, and they are also depicted on his hat. But were they really discs, or were they stones, rather? Or were they maybe both?

As a side note, also keep in mind that there are at least two sides of gods fighting each other—they are the Enkiites and the Enlilites, as I discussed at length in Level I. Very rarely did an Enkiite side with an Enlilite, or vice versa — not after Lucifer's Rebellion. They usually stayed within one of the two family branches and were quite loyal to the people of the side they had chosen. Therefore, when we hear that someone who is of En.ki's family kills or hurts someone from his own family, it's probably disinformation or should, at least, be researched in more depth before it's used as evidence.

In any case, the Tablets of Destinies changed ownership from Tiamat to Ninurta and then to Marduk, who became the Chief god of Babylon because of the possession.

Here, we pause. What I wrote in the last paragraph is something I have a hard time digesting. Most texts tell us that Marduk became the Chief god of Babylon because he stole the tablets from Ninurta. This doesn't make sense because Babylon was not built until much, much later. Hence, it makes much more sense that it was Lucifer who stole the tablets from Ninurta, and at a later point, he gave them to Marduk, who then became the Chief god of Babylon. When we look at this in context, it seems as if Lucifer wanted to give Marduk credit for slaying Tiamat so that Marduk had something to brag about when he became the head deity of Babylon. In ancient times, stories such as these created respect in a certain person, and Marduk, who didn't have much to fall back on, needed a big story to command respect — it has always been important for the AIF to push the fear button. Consequently, I support the hypothesis that Marduk was born on Earth, i.e. he was not even born when the slaying of Tiamat occurred.

iv.iii. The Tablets go from Marduk to Khan En.lil

Then, we have a typical example of what I was explaining above regarding the "House of En.lil" and the "House of En.ki" (the Enkiites and the Enlilites). Most records state that after a while, when Marduk had become the Ruler of Babylon, he handed the Tablets to "En.lil," which in this case would be Khan En.lil, and not Prince En.lil (Ninurta). So, let us ask ourselves, why would Marduk, who is of the House of En.ki, hand the Tablets over to En.lil, who is the Chief God of the House of En.lil? That doesn't make any sense unless there is information missing (which always is an issue) or records have been rewritten. However, there is another possibility.

One of the problems with interpreting the ancient texts is that the scholar or interpreter takes for granted that everything therein happened on Earth. Nothing can be further from the truth. Some of the stories (or parts of stories) didn't even happen in our solar system. We discussed earlier that as soon as Marduk had grown up to become a DAKH warrior, his father, Prince Lucifer, gave him his own domains, which were Alpha Draconis (Thuban) and Ursa Minor.

Khan En.lil did not travel to Earth in person after Lucifer took over the solar system—nevertheless, Marduk handed the Tablets to En.lil. How could that happen? It happened because Marduk was probably not on Earth at that point, but either in Thuban (Alpha Draconis) or one of the stars in Ursa Minor. Both these star systems were at war with Khan En.lil and his MIKH-MAKH warriors from the Orion Empire. I would suggest that in one of the battles, Khan En.lil or one of his generals confronted Marduk and, perhaps, imprisoned him until he voluntarily handed over the Tablets to Khan En.lil. After that, Marduk may have fled back to Gaia. This is a hypothesis that I can't back up, but it's the most plausible one, as I see it, and much more likely than Marduk, being in possession of the MEs and having gained power from them, suddenly handed them over to his archenemy and grandfather, Khan. En.lil.

iv.iv. Khan En.lil's Tablets Stolen by Zu

The next incident in which the Tablets of Destinies changes possession was when Khan En.lil supposedly was taking a bath, and his servant, Zu (or Anzu, or Apsu—all spellings exist), stole them.

I have a few problems with this part as well. First, would Khan En.lil really be so careless that he put the Tablets somewhere so they could be easily stolen? If they really were stolen by his servant, the only option I can think of would be if Zu had watched the Khan put them away and supposedly locked them in somewhere. If there was some sort of combination or code involved to get to the records (I would presume there must have been more than one code in order to keep thieves away), Zu must have seen how his employer did it.

This is not impossible, of course, but is it likely? If these Tablets are as important as they seem to be (more about this soon), it appears that there is no way that the being possessing them would be sloppy with them.

Second, who is Zu? In the old myth, Zu is depicted as a giant bird being<sup>321</sup>, who can breathe both fire and water, which I find interesting—we talked earlier about the Bird Tribe, and how Lucifer's people are mainly associated with birds and water (aquatic beings). Zu is also sometimes seen as a lion-headed eagle (a "griffin").<sup>322</sup> We can see this depicted in an old artifact. In fig. 5 below, we can see Ninurta fighting and defeating Zu, the lion-headed eagle, i.e. the griffin.

Fig. 5. "Ninurta fighting and defeating Zu, the lion-headed eagle, i.e. the griffin."

Some legends say that Zu was Khan En.lil's servant, who somehow stole the Tablets. Whether this is true, or not, isn't crucial to the story, so it is still okay if we agree with the records.

According to the story, Zu stole the records and fled up to a mountain and hid there, trying to create a stronghold. With the records in his possession, he thought he could defeat any enemy who would come and try to bring the records back to the Khan.

Khan En.lil got furious when he became aware of the betrayal, and he called upon his favorite son, Prince Ninurta, and asked him to go and bring the records back and put Zu on trial—or kill him.

Ninurta armed himself and went after Zu. When Zu saw Ninurta coming, he used the Tablets against the Prince, in order to kill him. Ninurta, who had the records in his possession earlier, knew what they were capable of, but he also knew that in order to use them accordingly, the owner had to be knowledgeable enough to program them and use them as a weapon.

This is an example of the power of the Tablets of Destinies:

(Anzu) was holding the gods' Tablets of Destinies in his hand.
And they influenced (?) the string of the bow; the arrows did not come near his body. Deadly silence came over the battle, and the conflict ceased. Weapons stopped and did not capture Anzu amid the mountains.<sup>323</sup>

Supposedly, Zu also managed to create bad weather, fogs, and storms in his attempts to stop Ninurta. Khan En.lil had at this time probably stationed himself in the Sirius system because of a great war that was raging there against the guerilla warfare the Sirian enemy used, as discussed earlier. So we can assume that this all happened on a planet around Sirius A or Sirius B.

A new, terrible battle started between Ninurta and Zu, where Ninurta probably had troops at his convenience to surround Zu. Although Zu was alone, barricading himself on (or inside?) the mountain, he was the one in possession of the MEs, and therefore, he had the advantage.

The war at the mountain was not just a battle with guns and laser weapons—the weapons used had apparently the same kind of destructive abilities as those used when Tiamat was defeated, and our own Earth was split in two parts. We will go into more about what kind of weapons the gods used (and probably still use) a little later on. They have powers that we humans have a very hard time even dreaming of. Some of the weapons used between Zu and Ninurta are said to have been weather weapons.<sup>324</sup>

After a lot of killing and destruction, Ninurta managed to defeat Zu and bring him back alive together with the Tablets. Zu was found guilty of theft and was executed by Ninurta's own hand. According to Zecharia Sitchin, Ninurta slayed him by cutting his throat with a knife.<sup>325</sup>

iv.v. Ninurta's "Inventory of the Stones"

The Enûma Eliš tell us that when Ninurta had possession of the Tablets after he had defeated Zu, he did not give them back to Khan En.lil as expected, but kept them for himself. Some scholars have interpreted this as if he didn't want his father to have them and stole them from him, but in fact, he did an inventory of the "Tablets," which now are referred to as "stones" in the text;<sup>326</sup> something which seems much more accurate. Perhaps there are tablets as well that include text, but the most powerful part of the Tablets of Destiny are the "Stones of Destiny;" stones that are most probably different kinds of crystals.

The Exploits of Ninurta<sup>327</sup> discusses Ninurta's inventory at length and is very helpful when it comes to learning the names of the Stones and what he did with them. One of these Stones was the U stone. The text states that Ninurta took it in his hand and spoke to it in anger, cursing the stone.<sup>328</sup> The U Stone is one of the Power Stones that the Prince seized from Zu and discharged whatever programming could have been put into that stone.

Ninurta then deprogrammed a series of stones and "fixed the destinies" of them all. Below is the entire, lengthy inventory of all the Stones – what their names and destinies were. Just as Dr. Farrell did in his book, I have decided to quote this passage of the ancient text at length so that the readers can enjoy and learn from it:

"U stone (emery), since you rose against me in the Mountains, since you barred the way (2 mss. have instead: seized me) so as to detain me, since you swore to put me to death, since you frightened me, Lord Ninurta, on my great throne; you are powerful, a youth of outstanding strength: may your size be diminished. A mighty lion, confident in its strength, will tear you into pieces, the strong man will fling you in his hand in combat (1 ms. has instead: for strength). Young u stone, your brothers will heap you up like flour. You will lift your hand against your offspring, sink your teeth into their corpses. You, young man, though you may cry out, will end as ..... Like a great wild bull killed by many people, be divided into portions. U stone, you will be hounded from the battlefield with clubs, like a dog chased by shepherd boys. Because I am the Lord: since cornelian is polished by you, you shall be called by its name. And now, according to the destiny fixed by Ninurta, henceforth when u stone touches it, there will be pierced cornelian. Let it be so."

The Hero addressed the cu and gasura stones. The Lord enumerated their characteristics. Ninurta son of Enlil fixed their destiny:

"Cu stones, since you attacked against my weapons; gasura stones, since you stood fiercely against me like bulls, since you tossed (?) your horns in the dust at me like wild bulls, you shall be ..... like butterflies. My terrifying splendour will cover you. Since you cannot escape from my (1 ms. has instead: his) great strength, the goldsmith shall puff and blow on you with his breath. You shall be shaped by him to form a matrix for his creations. People shall place the first fruits of the gods on you at the time of the new moon."

My King stood before the sajkal stone, he addressed the gulgul and sajjar stones. Ninurta son of Enlil fixed their destiny:

"Sajkal stone, since you flew up against me .....; gulgul stone, since you sparked lightning against me .....; sajjar stone, since you shook your head at me, since you ground your teeth at me, the Lord! The sajkal stone will smash you, sajjar stone, young brave, and the gulgul stone will destroy (gul) you. You will be discarded as contemptible and valueless (saj nukala). Be a prey to the famine (cagjar) of the Land; you shall be fed by the charity of your city. You shall be accounted a common person, a warrior among slave-girls. They shall say to you "Be off with you, hurry!", it shall be your name. And now, by the destiny fixed by Ninurta, henceforth you shall be called a bad lot in the Land. So be it."

My King stood before the esi stone. .... he spoke in hymnic language. Ninurta son of Enlil fixed its destiny:

"Esi (diorite), your army in battle changed sides separately (?). You spread before me like thick smoke. You did not raise your hand. You did not attack me. Since you said, "It is false. The Lord is alone the Hero. Who can vie with Ninurta, son of Enlil?" -- they shall extract you from the highland countries. They shall bring (?) you from the land of Magan. You shall shape (?) Strong Copper like leather and then you shall be perfectly adapted for my heroic arm, for me, the Lord. When a king who is establishing his renown for perpetuity has had its statues sculpted for all time, you shall be placed in the place of libations -- and it shall suit you well -- in my temple E-ninnu, the house full of grace."

My King turned to the na stone. He ..... the body from the na stone. Ninurta son of Enlil cursed it: "Stone, since you said, "If only it had been me"; na stones, since you bewitched my powers -- lie down there, you, to be worked on like a pig. Be discarded, be used for nothing, end up by being reduced to tiny fragments. He who knows you shall reduce you to liquid."

My King turned to the elel stone. Ninurta son of Enlil fixed its destiny: "Elel, intelligently you caused terror of me to descend on the Mountains where discord had broken out. In the rebel lands you proclaimed my name among my people who had banded together. Nothing of your wholeness shall be diminished (?). It shall be difficult to reduce your mass to small pieces. My divine ordinances shall be set out in straight lines on your body. You shall be greatly suited to the clash of weapons, when I have heroes to slay. You shall be set up on a pedestal in my great courtyard. The Land shall praise you in wonder, the foreign lands shall speak your praises (2 mss. have instead: elevate you)."

The Hero turned to the kagina (haematite) stone, he addressed it for its hardness. Ninurta son of Enlil fixed its destiny: "Young man worthy of respect, whose surface reflects the light, kagina, when the demands of the rebel lands reached you, I did not conquer you ..... I did not notice you among the hostile ones. I shall make room for you in the Land. The divine rites of Utu shall become your powers. Be constituted as a judge in the foreign lands. The craftsman, expert in everything, shall value you as if gold. Young man of whom I have taken possession, because of you I shall not sleep until you come to life. And now, according to the destiny fixed by Ninurta, henceforth kagina shall live! So shall it be."

The Hero stood before the jicnugal (alabaster) stone. Ninurta son of Enlil fixed its destiny: "icnu, whose body shines like the daylight! Purified silver, youth destined for the palace, since you alone held out your hands to me, and you prostrated yourself before me in your Mountains, I did not smite you with the club, and I did not turn my strength against you. Hero, you stood firm by me when I yelled out. Your name shall be called benevolence. The treasury of the Land shall be subject to your hand, you shall be its seal-keeper. (1 ms. adds the line: The Anuna .....)"

My King turned to the algamec stone and frowned. The Lord spoke to it angrily in the Land. Ninurta son of Enlil cursed it: "What provision did you make to assist my progress? Be the first to go into my forge. Algamec, you shall be the regular sacrifice offered daily by the smiths."

My King turned to the ducia stone. He addressed the nir, the gug (cornelian) and the zagin (lapis lazuli); the amac-pa-ed, the caba, the hurizum, the gug-gazi and the marhali; the egi-zaga, the girin-hiliba, the anzugulme and the nir-mucjir stones (1 ms.: the ..... and the gazi-musud stones). The Lord Ninurta, son of Enlil, fixed their destinies for ..... the waterskin: "How you came to my side, male and female in form, and in your own way! You committed no fault, and you supported me with strength. You exalted me in public. Now in my deliberation, I shall exalt you. Since you made yourself general of the assembly, you, nir, shall be chosen for syrup and for wine. You shall all be decorated with precious metal. The principal among the gods shall cause the foreign lands to prostrate themselves before you, putting their noses to the ground."

My King turned to the jir-zu-jal (flint), and frowned. The Lord spoke to it angrily in the Land. Ninurta son of Enlil cursed it: "Ah, duplicitous jir-zu-jal, what then? They shall split your horns, wild bull, in your Mountains. Lie down before the ..... You were not equal to me who supported you. I shall rip you like a sack, and people will smash you into tiny pieces. The metalworker shall deal with you, he shall use his chisel on you. Young man, massive, bearer of hatred: the carpenter, saying "I wish to buy it for my work", shall wet you with water ..... and shall crush you like malt."

My King turned to the iman stones, he addressed the alliga stones. Ninurta son of Enlil fixed their destiny: "Iman stones, in the Mountains you cried out against me. You fiercely uttered battle-yells. I shall enflame you like fire. Like a storm I shall overturn you. I shall strip you like rushes. I shall rip you up like weeds. Who will assist you then? Iman stone: your cries shall not be valued, no attention shall be paid to them. Iman stone, alliga stone: your path shall not lead to the palace."

My King turned to the macda stone. He addressed the dubban and urutum stones. Ninurta son of Enlil defined (?) their characteristic behaviour: "Macda stone, dubban stone, blazing fires; urutum stone, which nothing resists; when the gasura stone ..... and you were set ablaze, you burnt against me in the rebel lands like a brazier. Since you all stood against me in the land of Saba: macda stone, they shall slaughter you like a sheep. Dubban stone, they shall crunch you for pulverising. Urutum stone, they shall sharpen you for the battle-mace; with bronze, the arrowheads of the gods, they shall smash you with the axe, stinging with fierce swords."

My King turned to the cagara stone. Ninurta son of Enlil fixed its destiny: "Cagara stone, who smash (?) your head against anyone travelling alone in the desert, in the Mountains when my arms were occupied you tried to trample on me. Since you gluttoned yourself in the battle, the reed-worker shall make the reeds jump with you. You shall be thrown onto your couch; the appearance (?) of your mother and father who bore you shall be forgotten (?). No one shall say to you, "Get up", no one shall have the feeling that he misses you, the people shall not complain about your loss. In praise of the eternally-created powers in Ninhursaja's resting place, you shall be discarded on the dais there. They shall feed you on malt, as they do for sheep; you shall content yourself with a portion of scattered flour. This shall be the explanation for you."

My King turned to the marhuca stone, Ninurta the son of Enlil pronounced its destiny. "Marhuca, ..... the string in my place, ..... you were taken, since you did not participate in the crimes of your city, .....; you shall be the bowl under the filter-jug, the water shall filter into you. Marhusa, you shall be used for inlay-work, ..... You shall be the perfect ornament for sacred brooches. Marhuca, you shall be duly praised in the temples of the gods."

The Hero turned to the hactum stone and frowned. In the Land the Lord addressed it angrily; Ninurta the son of Enlil pronounced its destiny: "Hactum stone, you cried out against me in the Mountains. You yelled fiercely with wild battle-yells. With your yelling, you fixed a lila demon in the Mountains. Young man, because of your digging, Ditch (hactum) shall be your name. And now, according to the destiny of Ninurta, henceforth they shall say hactum. So be it."

My King turned to the durul stone. Ninurta son of Enlil fixed its destiny: "Durul stone, holy garment of mourning, blinded youth whom people carve, in the Mountains you prostrated yourself before me. Since you said to me, "If only it had been me who broke the bars of the gates, if only I had stood before him, before my King, Lord Ninurta", your name shall be magnified of its own accord wherever it is mentioned. As the connoisseur says of precious metal, "I will buy it", so the foreign nations, like musicians playing the reed-pipe, shall pursue you."

My King turned to the cigcig stone, he addressed the engen and ezinum stones. For the ug-gun, the hem, the madanum, the sajgirmud, the ..... and the mursuh stones, Ninurta son of Enlil fixed their destiny:

As the readers can see, much of the above programming is “mythological” in nature, and it makes it hard to make any logical sense of it, but there are other passages which are more right to the point. I will let the readers find those and interpret them because this ancient text may have passages that are quite self-explanatory to some people, while other passages are more logical to others. I don’t want to get in the way here, but I will make a few comments.

As Dr. Farrell points out in his book, The Cosmic War, there seems to be at least two obvious purposes with Ninurta’s inventory. First, those Stones that were programmed to hurt him in any way or even kill him or in any other way could be of grave personal danger to his own life or power or to the power of the gods, whom he represented, were destroyed, and second, the stones that weren’t of any danger were put aside and apparently used “elsewhere.”

There were basically forty-one stones that were preserved and used somewhere else. These were the Cu, Gasura, Esi, Kagina, Jicnugal, Ducia, Nin, Gug, Zagin, Amal-Pa-Ed, Laba, Jurizum, Gug-gazi, Marhali, Egi-saga, Girin-Hihiilba, Anzugulme, Nir-muckir, Gazi-musud, Marhuca, Hactum, Durul, Cigcig, Engen, Ezinum, Ug-gun, Hem, Madanum, Sajgirmud, Mursum, Kurgaranum, Bac, and Cimbi stones.<sup>330</sup> As Farrell points out, there are a few breaks in the text, which could mean that there were other stones mentioned, which now are lost to history.

Many of the above stones were apparently going to be used for “decorative” purposes and as ornaments and ceremonial purposes,<sup>331</sup> if this is the correct interpretation (which I personally doubt), while in the case of the “Kagina Stone” (see the above list), it was decreed an odd destiny. It is said that its “surface reflects the light,” and it should be used “as a judge in foreign lands,” and that because of this, it should “live.”<sup>332</sup> The “Jicnugal Stone” was apparently awaiting a similar fate. This one should be a “seal-keeper” of “the treasury of the land.” So, as we can see, the owner of the stones could program them as he or she wished, and the stones abided by the energies and intentions that were put into them. It seems similar to programming software for computers so that certain tasks can be accomplished. However, when it comes to programming the MEs, it doesn’t say whether there is any technology involved or whether the owner simply puts his or her energy into them. After all, some of these Stones are capable of carrying the memories of the entire Universe, if the mythology is telling us the truth.<sup>333</sup> For those who remember Level I and the subquantum physics of Life Physics Group California (LPG-C), they taught us that there are seven Superdomains in the Multiverse, and these Superdomains are formed from within the “T-Boundary” (Thought Boundary), which is the term for thought implication “on top,” moving downward through the “Levels of Manifestations” (LOM), which can be equated to the seven Superdomains. So, the “Unum” (LPG-C’s term for the Multiverse) is surrounded by a “Thought Boundary,” which is the summary of all past, present, and future thoughts, which then spread through the “lower” Levels of Manifestation, and can be picked up by beings anywhere within the seven Superdomains.<sup>334335</sup> Dr. Ervin Laszlo, in his book, “Science and the Akashic Field,” says something quite similar: “...all information that constitutes the universe is stored on its periphery, which is a two-dimensional surface.”<sup>336</sup>

Some of the Stones Ninurta was using in his inventory, such as the “Cu Stone,” the “Gasura Stone,” and the “Hactum Stone,” had clearly been used as weapons, and Ninurta continued to use them for the same purpose.

Other Stones that had been used against Ninurta in the war with Zu were being destroyed. Such Stones were the “Sajkal Stone,” which had “flown up” against Ninurta, and the “Sajjar Stone,” which “shook its head” and “ground its teeth” against him. Another Stone to be destroyed was the “Gulgul Stone,” which interestingly enough had “sparked lightning” against Ninurta, and was capable of producing enormous electrostatic displays, and thus could be used as a weapon, amongst other things. The Sajjar Stone was pulverized by the Sajkal Stone, so the Stones were sometimes apparently used to destroy each other when the owner so desired. However, it is indicated that the three stones above were particularly difficult to destroy, but it was done.

<sup>333</sup> Anton Parks, in his “Chronicles of the Girkù” also talks about stones that carry memories of the entire Universe, and that of certain individuals. These stones were the central part in Parks’ story.

<sup>335</sup> Many songwriters and authors (me included) can testify that some of what we are creating comes from the “ether” —it’s like it’s all “out there” already, and it’s just a matter of being sensitive enough to pick it up. The first time I heard it being explained this way by a songwriter was in an interview from the 1980s with “The Rolling Stones,” where Keith Richards gave this statement. He said that the songs are all “in the air” already —it’s just a matter of picking them up. I immediately agreed with him because that’s exactly how I felt (and still feel) as well. I also used to be a songwriter, so I know what he was talking about.

The rest of the Stones that were destroyed in similar and slightly different ways were the “U Stone,” the “Na Stone,” the “Algame Stone,” the “Jir-Zu-Jal Stone,” the “Iman Stone,” and the “Alliga Stone.”

The “Cagara Stone,” which also had been used against Ninurta in the war, was preserved but hidden. Dr. Farrell suggests that this stone was very difficult (maybe impossible) to destroy and was, therefore, hidden in the mountains where it could do no harm. However, it was not hidden in any mountain but was discarded “on the dais” of Ninhursag’s “resting place.”<sup>337</sup> Perhaps the readers remember that when Prince Ninurta created his Garden of Edin in the Golden Age, he named the mountain after his mother, the Goddess herself, and called it Ninhursag. This is clear evidence that this Stone possibly still exists here on Earth. Why is this significant? It is significant because it gives us a clue when the war between Ninurta and Zu took place. We know that Lucifer and his Fallen Angels descended on Earth about 500,000 years ago, and shortly thereafter, the “Solar War” happened, when Ninurta was defeated by Lucifer’s army. We now also know because Ninurta “buried” the Cagara Stone in a mountain that surrounded the Garden of Edin that this happened before Ninurta was exiled from Earth, i.e. about half a million years ago. Therefore, it’s fair to assume that Zu was a member of the Invader Force and not En.lil’s “servant.”

Another case where the Stone had been used against Ninurta was that of the “Elel Stone,” which the Prince kept anyway, despite the harm it had tried to do to him. Ninurta says in the epic, The Exploits of Ninurta, the following about this Stone: “Nothing of your wholeness shall be diminished. It shall be difficult to reduce your mass to small pieces... You shall be greatly suited to the clash of weapons, when I have heroes to slay. You shall be set up on a pedestal in my great courtyard.”<sup>338</sup> Ninurta’s sanctuary had always been the mountains, and the “courtyard” was therefore most probably a mountain, or rather the Mountain of Choice, where he took retreat, but also built his “fortress.” Remember that Prince Ninurta’s original Garden of Edin on Tiamat was a “Mountain Paradise.”

When the Inventory was finished, Ninurta obviously had access to all the Stones he needed, which were connected to the MEs of Destinies. Apparently, these stones had tremendous powers—not only as weapons, but could be programmed in whatever fashion the owner wanted. Ninurta, however, is known in ancient text as a “Warrior God,” being in charge of the Goddess’s defense forces, so it makes sense that he programmed quite a few Stones into becoming some kind of weapons.

iv.vi. Lapis Exili—the “Stone of Exile” in Lucifer’s Crown Revisited

Now we come to something really interesting. There are still those who claim that Lucifer is not En.ki, but “En.lil.” There is much evidence, which I have showed that clearly indicates that En.ki is the real Lucifer, and here is another very clear connection.

The readers may or may not recall, but in “Paper #5: Lucifer’s Rebellion,” I mentioned that when Lucifer fell from Heaven, Archangel Mikael (Prince Ninurta) struck the Stone of Exile, Lucifer’s crown jewel, from his crown, and the stone, made of sapphire, fell into the Abyss and was lost. This story was told by the famous researcher on Freemasonic history, Manly. P. Hall, as an important detail in Freemasonic teachings<sup>339</sup> (Hall himself, contrary to what many researchers claim, was not a Freemason, but a researcher into Freemasonry. Many say that he was the greatest researcher into this organization that has ever lived. Although he lived a long life, there are speculations that he indeed was murdered, and looking into the circumstances around his death, it looks as if it’s more than a conspiracy theory).

At the moment, it’s important to keep in mind that Lucifer’s crown jewel was made of sapphire. The Egyptologist, Sir E.A. Wallis Budge, wrote a book with the long title, “Amulets and Superstitions: The Original Texts with Translations and Description of a Long Series of Egyptian, Sumerian, Assyrian, Hebrew, Gnostic and Muslim Amulets and Talismans and Magical Figures, with Chapters on the Evil Eye, The Origin of the Amulet, The Pentagon, the Swastika, the Cross (Pagan and Christian), the Properties of Stone, Rings, Divination, Numbers, the Kabbalah, Ancient Astrology, etc.” (Oxford University Press, 1930) where he, amongst all these other things, goes into astrology. Many people still think that astrology is just something fun that you read in the newspaper, or it has to do with the subtle influences of the stars and planets on our daily lives. However, there is, as Budge noticed, much more to the ancient view on this subject, and it all connects to Lucifer, as we shall see. Budge says:

The old astrologers believed that precious and semi-precious stones were bearers of the influences of the Seven Astrological Stars or Planets. Thus they associated with the-

SUN, yellowish or gold-coloured stones, e.g. amber, hyacinth, topaz, chrysolite.

With the MOON, whitish stones, e.g. the diamond, crystal, opal, beryl, mother-of-pearl.

With MARS, red stones, e.g. ruby, haematite, jasper, blood-stone.

With MERCURY, stones of neutral tints, e.g. agate, carnelian, chalcedony,

---

sardonyx.

With JUPITER, blue stones, e.g. amethyst, turquoise, sapphire, jasper, blue diamond.

With VENUS, green stones, e.g. the emerald and some kinds of sapphires.

With SATURN, black stones, e.g. jet, onyx, obsidian, diamond, and black coral.<sup>340</sup>

Isn't it interesting, then, that both Jupiter and Venus are associated with sapphire, according to this list by Budge? These two planets are both also associated with Lucifer! Venus is the bright "Morning Star," and the Bible connects Lucifer to the "Morning Star," which most biblical researchers associate with Venus. Jupiter is associated with Zeus, whom we have showed corresponds to Lord En.ki (and sometimes Marduk). So, here we have the clear association between the sapphire in Lucifer's crown jewel, Jupiter, being associated with En.ki and sapphire, and Venus being associated with Lucifer and sapphire. These are hardly coincidences!

While we are referring to Budge, let us also look at something else he says that has to do with astrology. He states that the Babylonian zodiac in use throughout Babylon was "set up by Marduk" after his conquest of Tiamat, and that its signs "were different from the old ones, which he had disbanded!"<sup>341</sup> However, that's not all. Budge also produces the previous zodiac in use by Tiamat, Kingú (Ninurta), and their associates prior to the war that destroyed her!

This is very interesting information and shows that the war that ended the Golden Age of Tiamat was relatively mainstream information in the 1930s. It also shows that Marduk created his own zodiac based on his agenda, which included domination and manipulation of intelligent life on Earth, in conjunction with his father, who was Lucifer himself. Last, it also shows that the Tablets of Destinies, which Marduk stole from Tiamat (the Orion Queen), included astrological information that was written and transcribed on tablets (or/and in stones). We now also get a deeper insight in what the Pleiadians mean when they say that "information is stored in stones and bones."<sup>342</sup> Again, we may argue whether it was actually Marduk or Lucifer who slayed Tiamat. Marduk could have been the one who changed the zodiac, depending on when it was done—immediately after Tiamat was defeated or in Babylonian time—the latter rather seems to be the case:

Babylonian astrology was the first organized system of astrology, arising in the second millennium B.C.[1] There is speculation that astrology of some form appeared in the Sumerian period in the 3rd millennium BC, but the isolated references to ancient celestial omens dated to this period are not considered sufficient evidence to demonstrate an integrated theory of astrology.[2] The history of scholarly celestial divination is therefore generally reported to begin with late Old Babylonian texts (c. 1800 B.C.), continuing through the Middle Babylonian and Middle Assyrian periods (c. 1200 B.C.).[3]<sup>343</sup>

iv.vii. What Were the MEs of Destinies?

As I mentioned earlier, Prince Ninurta didn't give the stones/tablets back to Khan En.lil. Dr Farrell is asking the question if Khan En.lil wouldn't be angry? Another betrayal? Here is, unfortunately, where Dr. Farrell, who otherwise is doing excellent connections, go for the more accepted version of alternative history—he thinks Ninurta is not as close to the Khan as he is. Ninurta is Khan En.lil's chosen one, and the Khan trusts his son implicitly. If Ninurta kept the MEs, we can rest assured that this was what the Khan wanted. I am sure Ninurta had been assigned the mission to reprogram the stones.

However, let us stop here for a moment to see what the Tablets really were from what we have gathered thus far.

- Under some instances, the Tablets (or rather the Stones) could be used as communication devices over long distance.
- They were actually “physical” objects, whether they were physical in a higher dimension or if they were also physical in our dimension. The Tablets seemed to have written instruction on them, which makes them sound like fairly large objects, which I don't think they were. I believe these devices were fairly small—probably the size of a smart phone or less.
- At least some of them were light-emitting crystals and could hold memories from the person who owned them, or had owned them earlier, and held the memories of the Universe itself. There was a strong connection between the Tablets/Stones and the electromagnetic field.
- They were objects of technology.

- The MEs were, perhaps, primarily weapons . They had enormous capacities as such, which we will cover in a moment.
- It seemed as if the MEs were “addictive” just like gold could be addictive to the gods. The MEs changed the owner, often for the worse, although this seemed to happen mostly when they came into the wrong hands. There was peace and a Golden Age here on Earth when Tiamat was in possession of them. Not until Marduk or Lucifer stole them did evil come into the picture. However, was it the MEs that changed the person, or was it the person who changed the MEs?
- These powerful Stones and Tablets could influence astrology and astronomy. As we know, Marduk changed the entire Zodiac after the Solar War, and he did it with some help from these Mes because, as Dr. Farrell says: “The movements of the stars and planets, after all, were the movements of the ‘gods’ themselves, decreeing the fates or ‘destinies’ of things on earth below.”<sup>344</sup> The reader may remember from earlier in this paper how I wrote about Sir Budge, who said that Marduk set up the new Babylonian zodiac after the War of the Titans (The Solar War), where he destroyed the Queen’s planet and defeated the Goddess herself, and the star signs were different before then — of course, they were different because the Earth was thrown out of orbit and put in a new position between Mars and Venus during the war. Budge even has a star map from before the war<sup>345</sup> — a star map that must be more than 500,000 years old! You should still be able to order this book. Dr. Farrell also agrees that the information about the original star map must go back that far in time.
- Interestingly enough, Farrell, in an earlier book, connects the Tablets of Destinies with Thoth/Hermes, who was titled the “Egyptian Wisdom God.”<sup>346</sup> This is interesting because we are going to tell the truth about Thoth also in a while. Don’t be disappointed if things are not as we thought they were.
- MEs can be (and actually are) used in “channeling,” where the vessel holds a precious stone in her hand, allegedly to stay “grounded.” Sometimes the vessel picks the stone, but who programs it? Chilling questions.
- Last, but not least — a quite disturbing matter is that it seems as if these MEs of Destinies can be used, and have been used, to manipulate the

local space and time: the “destinies” of objects themselves—including humanity! They can certainly also be used to create and cure disease, often on a large scale (think the Black Death and the Plague, but there is of course more. How about AIDS?)

We know that we have been manipulated over the millennia, and we know how difficult it is to break free from this. However, let’s say that a stone (or stones) are programmed to transmit a certain frequency on which subliminal messages are transmitted to the human brain in order for us to commit. If they don’t want robots, they can let us move between certain frequencies, but always in a “safe” fashion, so we don’t actually challenge the gods and their Minions.

Despite this impressive list, I am absolutely confident that we have only touched the surface of what these MEs can do. If they contain the memories of the entire Universe (if this is true), then by definition, they can be used to do anything—only the owner who programs them is the limit. These MEs know neither good nor evil—only what is programmed into them. In addition, they are only faithful to their owners because the owners have programmed them to be that way.

Nevertheless, before we go on and discuss a little bit about the MEs as communication devices and weapons that can destroy solar systems in a moment, let’s just follow the trail of the Tablets of Destinies to what seems to be the final destination. The question is, who is in possession of them now?

iv.viii. The Tablets’ Journey into the Underworld

We know that Ninurta did the Inventory of the Stones of Destinies and discarded and reprogrammed most of them, but does the story end there? Is Ninurta still in possession of the Stones and Tablets?

The answer is no. From Ninurta they went to Ereškigal, the dubious Queen of the Underworld. Some records will have it that Nergal and Ninurta are one and the same person, but that is not correct. Although they have a few general similarities, the differences far outnumber the similarities. We already made it clear in Paper 2 and 3, but let’s get into a few more details here, which strengthen the evidence.

The problem is that the historians can’t have it both ways. Nergal, supposedly, married the Queen of the Underworld, Ereškigal, after raping her for six days. This is quite a hideous act, regardless of how we look at it, and a total disrespect for the female. If Nergal equates to Ninurta, he would be the enemy of En.ki, who evidently overthrew him, as he was in charge of the Olympians. Then, why would Nergal, as Ninurta, reveal his intentions to Marduk, as Stephanie Dalley says in her Mesopotamian research? In addition, what were Ninurta's intentions and plans? Those are as follows:

“...I shall make Anu and Ellil lie down like bulls, to right and left of your gate.”
 Prince Marduk listened to him,
 And the speech that Erra (Nergal) made was pleasing to him.<sup>347</sup>

Who in this whole ancient history of the gods spun webs of deceit against his mother and father? Was it Ninurta, or was it Lucifer/En.ki? This question is easy to answer. Wouldn't it then fit right into the puzzle if Nergal was the same person as En.ki? Suddenly, everything falls into place, doesn't it? Ellil in this text is, of course, “Enlil,” who is Prince En.lil, Lucifer's brother. “Anu,” in this context, is, of course, Khan En.lil. Ninurta, as we have seen, was the son who embraced the Matriarchal Religion of the Mother Goddess, while En.ki embraced the Patriarchal Religion of a male God and so did his son, Marduk. Therefore, why would Ninurta commit such terrible acts toward his parents, who had always treated him good, and he them? In addition, why would he speak of himself in third person? Was he going to commit suicide? If we exchange Nergal for En.ki, we get the right picture and can move on—exchange him for Ninurta, and nothing makes sense.

For some readers, another name may pop up in their heads when we're talking about the King, or Lord, of the Underworld—especially those readers who may be somewhat familiar with the Sumerian mythology. Which male deity, besides Nergal, was said to be the Lord or King of the Underworld? That's right—Osiris was! In addition, who is Osiris affiliated with on many accounts? En.ki! Consequently, again we have Nergal/En.ki/Osiris. There is more to this “Underworld Story,” which I will reveal in a future paper, and that information will certainly be set in stones—much more trustworthy stones than some of the “manipulated stones” from Babylonian times.

The question is, however, how the Tablets of Destinies traveled from Ninurta to Ereškigal. I know there are missing pages in the text, and some of these missing pages could very well be the sequence telling us how the Tablets changed hands again. I haven't found any trustworthy information how this happened—other than it did happen. However we look at it, Prince Ninurta lost the Tablets again, and they came into Queen Ereškigal's possession.

En.ki, who received the message from somebody that the Tablets could be found in the Underworld, stormed the Seven Gates of the Underworld/Hell and raped the Queen. She saved her life by agreeing to a treaty with him. She married him and gave him the Tablets. Nergal/En.ki also became the King of the Underworld—a title he has maintained until this very day.

iv.ix. The Tablets Changing Owners Again, and Isis Getting Second Thoughts

Pleased with himself because he now owned these powerful MEs, En.ki once again ascended up to the surface of Gaia and went to his palace in Eridu, where his other wife, Isis/Inanna/Ishtar was waiting. Rumors had, of course, come to her before En.ki arrived, and she knew more or less what her husband had been up to. She wasn't too happy.

En.ki, on the other hand, couldn't be in a better mood. He asked her why she wasn't happy? After all, he now was in possession of the most powerful MEs in the Universe, and he now had the Power he had wanted since before his Rebellion. He had no second thoughts about raping Ereškigal and marrying her, although he was already married with Isis, who some sources indicate was Ninurta's daughter through the Goddess Bau.

Isis decided to take revenge (most records call her Inanna, but I am convinced that they are one and the same)<sup>348</sup>, so she smiled at her husband, stroke his hair, and said that this had to be celebrated. En.ki flew up and said it was a great idea! He invited family and friends to a big party, and everybody got drunk and had a wonderful time. Isis, on the other hand, stayed sober but made sure she acted as if she were the cup-bearer for her husband and constantly refilled his glass with liquor<sup>349</sup>. In all his drunkenness, En.ki fell for Isis' charm and gave her hundreds of Tablets of Destinies.<sup>350</sup> Soon enough, En.ki got so drunk that he fell asleep in his chair.

Isis made sure that En.ki was still snoring, and then she ran northward with the Tablets, toward her own city, Uruk.

When En.ki woke up the next day with a horrible hangover and noticed that "his" Tablets were gone, he became furious. What had he done? Why had he given them away to Isis??? How was that possible, and why had she accepted them? He, who always had been so good to her (ever since the day he first raped her). Although En.ki did all he could to stop her, the power now transferred northward from Eridu to Uruk.

The continuing story is telling us about how Isis' gardener, named Shukaletuda, is raping her while she is resting under a tree in Uruk. She wakes up and realizes what happened. The rapist is long gone, but Isis is not giving up that easily. She lets a plague spread over the world in order to get him, according to the myth (was she using the Tablets of Destinies to produce this terrible disease?), and Shukaletuda went to En.ki for advice, believing En.ki is his father, which he very well could have been. "In classic Enkian fashion, the father advises Shukaletuda to hide in the city where Inanna will not be able to find him."<sup>351</sup> This is not the only time En.ki is hiding rapists away from their victims—En.ki being a notorious rapist himself. The story ends with, however, Isis/Inanna manages to threaten En.ki to help her find the rapist, and En.ki tells her where he's hidden the rapist. Shukaletuda is killed by Isis' own hand.

I am always very amazed to find out how self-serving many of these gods were (and are). It's always, "what is in it for me?" or "Service-to-Self" (STS) as we used to call it in earlier levels of learning. Murder and rape is nothing for these gods if they can gain something from it. Sometimes, the only gain is just pure joy and pleasure. We see very little (if any) spiritual advancement in these beings, compared with many humans at this point in time. They may be more intelligent in certain terms and have more knowledge and experience, but it does not, in my opinion, make up for their lack of spiritual awareness. Of course, they know that they are spirits, but they do not seem to know the word "compassion."

Inanna/Isis was of the House of En.lil, while Marduk was of the House of En.ki, which made their interests clash. Isis was still married to En.ki, despite their fights, and they stayed together until after the Deluge, 13,000 years ago. Isis, as Inanna, was often, however, in a rebellious state against the Patriarchal gods, which was the cause of many wars and devastating battles throughout history.

It seems, however, as if Isis had access to the Tablets of Destinies for millennia, but despite wars and battles between "Gods and Men," as Sitchin called it, Isis used the MEs less destructively than many of her predecessors had done. It was not until after the Deluge, at around 2250 BC, when the Babylonian Empire was supposedly founded<sup>352</sup> and Marduk became the ruler that the Tablets changed owners again. It seems as if that was the time when Marduk got his hands on them and crowned himself, not only the King of Babylon, but the King of Earth. Eventually, the Tablets were handed over to Marduk's father, En.ki, who most possibly is still in possession of them. As such, today, En.ki and his son consider themselves the Rulers of Gaia.

iv.x. Where are the Stones today?

As previously stated, the Tablets/Stones are most certainly still here on Earth today, or at least somewhere in the solar system. We know that at least two of them were hidden by Marduk before Anzu stole them from Khan En.lil. Marduk admitted to this in the "Erra/Nergal and Ishum" text, where he confessed that he "changed the location of the mesu-tree (and of) the elmesu-stone and did not reveal it to anyone."<sup>353</sup> However, at a later point, he seems to have revealed the secret location to Nergal, his father.

Dr. Farrell, in "The Cosmic War," connects some dots which will tie the stones to a few possible locations, which are "far beneath the sands and rock of the deserts of Mesopotamia and Egypt: Giza, Babylon and Nimrud or Nippur — site of Ninurta's temple — in Iraq<sup>354</sup>, and possibly Baalbek in Lebanon..."<sup>355</sup>

Dr. Farrell suggests that texts and legends associated with the MEs, from Thoth's Emerald Tablets to Ninurta's missing stones of power, all indicate that something of the original Tablets of Destinies survived. I would agree, except that I think most of them did — only the ones that were destroyed intentionally when they were changing hands are "missing." I would say that enough of the MEs are existing even today, and the owner is able to wield tremendous powers through them. By the way, the Americans, in particular, are very dominant in the Middle East at this time and have been for a while. Certain channeled sources, such as the Pleiadians, have indicated that they are not really fighting for real estate purposes, oil wells, democracy, or any other reasons that have been used in the media, but to find what is underground! They have only mentioned "Anunnaki" bases in this regard, but maybe they have gotten some hints where the two "Marduk stones" are hidden?

iv.xi. The Tablets of Destinies as Weapons of Mass Destruction and More...

For some years now, I have suggested that the stars are not only suns that are warming up a solar system—they can also be communication devices. Moreover, they are connected and are sending information between each other.

Although one gets the impression that stars, just like asterisms and galaxies, etc., are grouped together in smaller units, it also makes sense that these groups can communicate with other groups of stars outside their own “family” in an endless network that becomes galactic, intergalactic, and in the expansion of things—universal. As I suggested earlier, our Sun may be getting a lot of information from Sirius, although much of that may be artificial and manipulated with technology.

While we’re at the subject of technology, the Tablets of Destinies seem to fit right into that category. In fact, if we are to believe Dr. Joseph P. Farrell’s research and ideas, which he shares with many other prominent researchers, such as Paul LaViolette, Lt. Col. Tom Bearden, and Ervin Laszlo, the Tablets could be used as weapons of mass destruction of a kind that is hard for us humans to comprehend. Indeed, they have also been used as such, here in our own solar system! After reading Farrell’s research and those of his colleges on this subject matter, it’s difficult not to give credit to what they have found out.

Fig. 6. Interdimensional weapon of mass destruction

Trying to describe this to the readers, I would like to start by citing Paul LaViolette, from his book, The Talk of the Galaxy.

Optical phase conjugation is most commonly known for its use in military laser weapons systems for destroying enemy missiles. In this application, a laser beam is directed at a distant moving missile target and light rays scattered back from the target are allowed to enter the phase conjugator, a chamber containing a medium having nonlinear optical properties. In this nonlinear medium, the scattered rays interact with two opposed laser beams of similar wavelength to form a hologram-like electrostatic light refracting pattern called a “grating”. Once this grating pattern is formed, the system has essentially locked onto its target. A powerful laser weapon is then discharged into this holographic grating pattern, whereupon the coherent laser light reflects (from the grating) in such a way as to produce an intense outgoing laser beam that retraces the paths that had been followed by the incoming rays that had originally been scattered from the missile. Consequently, the outgoing laser pulse converges precisely back onto its missile target.<sup>356</sup>

Forgive me if I am getting a little technical here, but once I come to the point, it will be easier to understand what I’m getting at.

Phase conjugation, as mention by LaViolette in the above quote, is best understood by breaking the components down as Dr. Farrell is doing:

1. A coherent beam of electromagnetic energy is aimed at a target, and the beam is reflected back to the transmitter.
2. The returning beam is then split in a non-linear medium and interfered in it, which creates the “granting”, or, as Lt. Col Tom Bearden would put it, a “template” for action. The reason that an interference pattern is created is that the atmosphere distorted the returning or reflected beam, thus making it of slightly different frequency from the outgoing wave.<sup>357</sup>

I am not going into the more exact technical details, which are all outlined in Dr. Farrell’s book, but the Tablets of Destinies were a catalogue of a grating or interference patterns of various celestial bodies for a phase conjugate mirror of great sophistication.<sup>358</sup>

In other words, these weapons could be used for the purpose of mass destruction, spanning over multiple dimensions! The gods could “fire off” the weapon from one dimension, or frequency, in which they were either “hiding” or had positioned themselves at the moment of firing, targeting a faraway star, if they wished, “sucking up” a certain quantity of energy from that star, making it act like a “mirror,” and thus letting the beam bounce back, returning to its firing point in a slightly different angle, i.e. dimension, and hit the target full blast, but leave the shooter unharmed!

This, Farrell suggests, was exactly what happened when Tiamat was destroyed! Marduk fired off his weapon from let’s say a Fifth Dimension, and the beam came back, hitting Tiamat in the Third Dimension, splitting the planet in two pieces—one big piece (which became Earth/Gaia), and a lot of smaller pieces, which became the asteroid belt!

In Level II, I suggested there were more, just as disturbing weapons, if not worse, which are not necessarily due to the direct use of the Tablets of Destinies, but almost certainly from the use of MEs! I was mentioning weapons that could destroy the Avatar of an enemy, which would make the Fires of the soul float around in the Universe like fish that have had their fins cut off—they don’t get anywhere and are victims of the cosmic currents that will take them anywhere. Eventually, the Fires dissolve and become One with the Universe. The personality that once was, is now gone.

There are of course other uses for ET weapons that we don’t know of and wouldn’t understand even if we did know about them. However, what we do know, or have an inkling of, is bad enough in my opinion. The Law of Free Will has its advantages, but also its clear downsides—it creates “good” and “evil,” and somewhere on the way, it creates duality in order to have someone to learn from, someone to try to match and exceed, and someone to fight.

There are also strong indications that someone in possession of the Tablets and Stones of Destinies can tune into the Universal Energy Field in its entirety. Exactly what does this mean? If a being has less than the best of intentions, the readers may want to ponder over what kind of power such a being would have...

PAPER #11: THE RIGEL WAR AND THOTH-THE-RIGELIAN

I. An Introduction: Rigel, the Brightest Star in the Orion Asterism

Rigel, also known as Beta Orionis, is actually a triple star system, consisting of Rigel A, which is a blue-white super giant, approximately 130,000 times as bright as our own Sun. Rigel B is a double system, consisting of two blue-white stars of the Main Sequence, both with the spectrum class B8-B9<sup>359</sup> (on the borderline of being white stars of A-type)<sup>360</sup>, about 900 light-years from our solar system. This triple system is the brightest star system in the Constellation of Orion. Although Rigel has the “Bayer designation” Beta, it’s almost always brighter in the sky than Alpha Orionis, which is Betelgeuse. Rigel is the first bright star visible in the night sky when Orion rises in the southern hemisphere in the summer and is also visible in the northern hemisphere in the winter.<sup>361</sup>

I am not totally sure about the history of the Rigel system, other than it has planets, like most star systems, and some of them are inhabited, or were, at least, in the fairly recent past. I know I mentioned earlier that it’s generally quite unusual that life evolves on planets, but it’s more common in certain areas of the Universe than in others, depending on the intentions and the needs of the Creator Goddesses, and the overall politics in the sector of a certain galaxy. What is much more certain, however, is that there is life on or in the stars in the Universe.

People who have studied mainstream astronomy and astrophysics would argue with me and say that 1) the Rigel stars are too hot to have inhabited planets, and 2) the age of the star (approximately 80 million years) is speaking against any intelligent life in that star system. Of course, as I’ve stated earlier, both these arguments fall short in the light of the New Era astronomy, astrophysics, and metaphysics. Life often develops and evolves on, and in, the

<sup>359</sup> There was [however] long-running controversy in late 19th and early 20th centuries over the possible visible binarity of Rigel B. A number of experienced observers claimed to see it as a double, while others were unable to confirm it—indeed, the proponents themselves were sometimes unable to duplicate their results. Observations since have ruled out the likelihood of a visible companion to Rigel B. (Source: <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Rigel#System>).

stars themselves, and although I disagree that life can't evolve in 80 million years, we are here talking about life in other dimensions than that of 3-D. If beings migrate from the star to one of the planets in their particular solar system, they can do so instantly, starting intelligent life in other dimensions immediately, if they so wish.

Fig. 1. The star Rigel, compared in size with our own Sun.

In a very recent Pleiadian lecture, a long-term listener was asking what the Pleiadians had to say about Orion. The Pleiadians didn't say much, knowing that they need to hold their tongues on that subject because they are opposed to Orion in general. They said that the Orions had a military structure built up around their culture, and there is a huge stargate in the lower part of Orion's Belt. That's not too educative, but of course, the reason why there is a military structure built around the Empire is to protect the Queen and the Empire. Any military structure is unfortunate, but I am sure they are glad that they built one—what would have happened if they wouldn't have had a strong military order to defend themselves? There wouldn't be an Orion Empire, and the Queen would have been overthrown a long time ago. The saying, "it's the nature of the Beast," doesn't only apply on Earth, as it appears. However, the Pleiadians mentioned something else, which was that it is one thing to watch an impressive military structure, and another to sit down with a being from Orion at the dinner table. We have strong military structures in many countries on Earth as well, but the citizens are often quite likable. Much more on the Pleiadian Agenda later, however, and what it is that they really want from us.

II. The Rigel War—How Another Civil War was Manipulated into Being in Orion

In cosmic terms, the Rigel War was very recent. It was raging and seems to have started during the time when Lord En.ki was here on Gaia creating the human slave race for the gods—and from all I know, it's still going on up in the Heavens. Lucifer's DAKH warriors are very well trained in guerilla warfare, and En.ki himself is an expert in control and deceit and has trained many of his Minions in mind control and the "Art of Manipulation." They know how to conquer weaker star races and win their loyalty by using these two techniques in conjunction with advanced technology. By "weaker star races," I am not talking about the original Orion race but races undergoing evolution from being young members of the Orion Empire. If En.ki is also in charge of the Tablets of Destinies (or parts of them), he has that advantage as well. All this put together is the reason why the Rebellion has been going on for so many eons, and there is seemingly no end in sight. However, I know that the Orions are working hard to end it, as we speak—which is good news—but we better be prepared by educating ourselves, or we may be up for a shock one day soon.

Rigel is another of those strategic star system in Orion, which the Queen and the Khan don't want to lose. However, a rebellion arose there as well, of course, instigated by Lucifer, who needs any strategic outposts he can get. As in Arcturus and other Orion star systems, the rebellion started from within and migrated out. When the time was right and the rebels had sufficient numbers, the rebels attacked, and the war was a fact. Prince Ninurta, again as Archangel Mikhael (also spelled Mikael, or Michael), Second in Command, came to assist with an armada of MIKH-MAKH warriors from Orion's Belt, while Khan En.lil, Archangel Mikhael, First in Command, was busy fighting the uproar in Sirius.

As usual, when battles of this magnitude are raging in our sector of the Galaxy, weapons of mass destruction are inevitably used. Prince Ninurta knew, of course, that the people of Rigel were Orion citizens, and this made him very reluctant to attack. Unfortunately, one of Ninurta's sisters had been kidnapped and was held as hostage by the rebels, who were very hostile toward the Orion Commander. In the meantime, on one of the planets, civilians were killed when they refused to follow instructions from the rebels.

For weeks, the MIKH-MAKH armada was surrounding the Rigelian planet without taking action, ordering the rebels to give up. Eventually, there seemed to be only one thing to do. Commander Ninurta sent down troops to the planet on a rescue mission. He wanted to release his sister, get as many innocent inhabitants out of there as possible, and have them transported elsewhere in order to save their lives. He also wanted to make it easier to get to the rebels without having to kill the citizens, if there was a chance.

The mission succeeded, and they managed to get a large number of the population out of there, although it was impossible to rescue everybody. When the mission was completed, Ninurta was relatively pleased with the result. He knew that innocent people would die—it was inevitable—but at least it could be restricted to a minimum thanks to his loyal and well-trained soldiers.

There was one big, black cloud on Ninurta's heaven, however. He didn't manage to rescue his Princess Sister. In the last minute, the rebels apparently managed to hide her, and they transported her off planet to a hiding place in another star system. This was extremely unfortunate because Ninurta knew that the rebels could use his sister against him and threaten to kill her at any time.

Still, Archangel Mikhael was a warrior, and in charge of the famous MIKH.-MAKH army, so he couldn't let this be an obstacle and a weakness, regardless how much it hurt inside. As a Commander at war, he had to act!

The MIKH.-MAKH spaceship armada hit the Rigel solar system with full force, and planets again bounced out of orbit, and some exploded in the process. Fortunately, most of them were uninhabited, but not all of them. Some planets became wastelands, while others became barely inhabitable after the strikes.

In the meantime, the Queen and Khan En.lil were fighting in Sirius and managed to make good progress there, although they didn't manage to end the war at that time. When Lucifer heard about the losses in Sirius, he dumped his Sirian hybrids in Alpha Draconis and let Marduk take command of them. The original inhabitants of Thuban took Marduk's side in the war, after they had been forced to by Marduk and his legions to do so.

With a relatively large army, Marduk, who was instructed by his father to expand their "Empire" and conquer new star systems, decided to attack Vega of all places, and the Vulcans suffered enormous losses. The Vulcan race is peaceful, and they are not trained warriors—hence, they didn't stand a chance against the Alpha Draconians. Those who weren't killed managed to flee to Orion, where they were kept under the Queen's protection. To viciously attack a species that does not have any warrior instincts is seen as a very cowardly act and is not forgiven by the Orion Queen. A similar thing happened on Earth/Tiamat when Lucifer (and Marduk—supposedly) attacked the Titan inhabitants, who lived there peacefully with both Vegans and the peaceful Namlú'u—killing and molesting where they could. In some aspects, the Vegan conquest was even worse because on Earth there were at least some troops stationed, while there were no military at all in the Vegan system.

Perhaps Prince Ninurta had hoped for a fast strike, and then it would be over, but this was not what actually happened. The rebels were well prepared and knew what to do, and experience had taught Lucifer how to fight back. However, to Ninurta's surprise, his brother was not anywhere to be seen, although it was obvious that he was the one behind the Rigel Rebellion. His "fingerprints" were all over the place.

Although Ninurta knew he couldn't kill his brother, he would love to meet him on the battlefield, and at least "tickle his nerves" a little bit. There was no way to terminate Lucifer's Avatar at this time because if that was done, the Minions back on Earth were programmed to torture and kill off the human population. This was the only reason why Archangel Mikhael held back his "sword." However, Prince Lucifer was not even there!

Ninurta gathered his Generals in the conference room onboard his own starship that was orbiting Rigel's fourth planet, a giant gas planet, which looked dark green from the panorama window in the conference room. He looked at the Generals, one by one, with admiration and comfort. He knew he could trust each and every one of them—they would die for him, the Queen, and the Empire without hesitation—and with death, it could mean annihilation (destruction of the Avatar). His Generals were indeed fearless, and they were Ladies of Fire—tall and beautiful "Amazon Warriors;" most of them trained in Bellatrix (gamma Orionis)—the name which means "female warrior."<sup>362</sup>

After a moment of silence, Ninurta ordered his Generals to strike again.

III. Introducing Another Well Known Figure on the Stage

In the history of Gaia, he was known under many different names as he travelled around the planet. In Mesoamerica, he was known as Quetzalcoatl, the "Feathered One," or the "Feathered Reptilian." In Mesopotamia, he went under the name Ningišzidda. In Greece, he was Hermes, Tehuti, or Chiquitet in Atlantis,<sup>363</sup> Viracocha in the Inca culture,<sup>364</sup> Mercury in Rome, Merlin amongst the Celts, and Zoroaster in Persia. However, these names are just a few of all the names he was known as. In this paper, I will call him by his, perhaps, most famous name in the esoteric world. The name is Thoth, and that's his Egyptian identity.

One of the big learning lessons in the Fourth Level of Learning is that the gods of the ancient world went by many names, and En.ki and Marduk took over the personae of many deities that had very little to do with them. Moreover, old records were altered and distorted to fit the agenda of the Alien Invader Force. As we have progressed, I have shown many references and sources, which prove that all the above was the case. Here is more of the same.

Thoth's reputation on Earth is twofold. Some say he came as a great teacher, while others say that he seems to have started out that way but turned his teachings into disinformation as he went along or used his information to trap rather than to free.

Who else is known as a "great teacher," a god of Wisdom coming to Earth to teach humankind different things? The same thing is said about En.ki, as we showed in a previous paper. Thoth, just like En.ki, had a tendency to favor Elitism. Although, in both cases, some esoteric material was released to the common man—it was never understood because the real teaching took place between "locked doors," where only the initiates were invited.

In the paper, "Introduction to the Underworld," I also clearly showed that both En.ki and Thoth have solid connections with the Underworld.

There are records here on Earth today, saying that Thoth descended on our planet from the "blue star," which is another name for Rigel in Orion. In esoteric circles, this is how he is presented. Researcher Dan Winter, whom I otherwise don't have much in common with, is, however, correct to some degree concerning Thoth.

On the website, greatdreams.com, Thoth is one of the main characters discussed. Although most of it is channeled material (St. Germain, and supposedly "Thoth" himself), which always should be investigated with a fine toothcomb, they have Thoth's esoteric origins correct.<sup>365</sup> Another thing I agree with Dan Winter about is when he's discussing the Feminine Fire—he is one of the few researchers on this planet who have found out about that.

Winter says about Thoth's origins, allegedly told to him by the "Master" himself:

Atlantis. Thoth came to Earth from the Blue Star Rigel in Orion with an energetic patterning called the Enochian Table, which is mathematically encoded into the plan of the Great Pyramid as blueprint to the Enochian Table. However the name

Thoth became associated also with Hermes, the Greek God of Mercury (spiritualized mind), and Trismegistus (meaning thrice great).<sup>366</sup>

The reference to the Great Pyramid of Giza is not coming from Dan Winter and his research alone—it is commonly known in many esoteric writings. Winter also mentions that Thoth and Imhotep, the “Great Architect” of the Pyramids (according to Egyptian history), are one and the same. This is something the respected author and researcher Joseph P. Farrell brings up as well in his book, “The Cosmic War...,” where he spends a long section talking about Thoth in relation to war and manipulation of mankind.<sup>367</sup>

After a correct introduction by this being, who calls himself Thoth, the deception starts (and I bring this up, because I believe that many people think that Thoth is a representative for the “good” forces):

Orion is divided into three zones. The upper zone is ruled by the star Betelguese. Here are the Councils of Light. The lower zone is controlled by the Rigel and is the home of the Lords. In the central portion of Orion is a Zone of Overlap. This area could be referred to as the Great Light for it represents the sacred, alchemical union of dark and light into One. Betelguese is on their right path (male polarity). Rigel is of the left path (feminine polarity). As stars of the Living Lights (Angelic Domion). Beteluguese [sic] contains the raw energy, somewhat like a divine battery, while Rigel transforms that energy into the sublime substance of Divine Reason.<sup>368</sup>

This is the exact reason why some beings—whether they are who they say they are or not—are channeling through mediums. They want to twist information to form a bigger picture—an “overlap” to the real one—which then will work as the new reality with which these beings can play in order to prepare us for a new control system, which is, as we know, in the making. Some call it the New World Order, or the One World Order. Although, in the background, this is already accomplished, they just need to make it “in the open” and prepare people to accept it. Orion is not separated in the fashion that this entity apparently told the medium, but most important of all—Thoth has nothing to do with “feminine polarity,” as we shall see, but certainly the left path when it comes to magic. However, I’m sure, for future conveniences, he likes to present as being connected with the Divine Feminine in general.

The following quote from the website, Spiritweb.us, mentions a few things of interest. Again, in this channeled material, Thoth is revealing what he wants us to believe is his Rigelian origin and other things of interest (the italic emphases are mine):

'Thoth', 'Toth', Tat-tet and 'Tehuti' are all forms of the same root, which are titles meaning, 'one who gives breath to', or the 'Grand Communicator'. Toth-Mus-Zurud was known in Atlantis as the 'Sword of Orion'. His origin is Ultra-Terrestrial, from the 'Eighth Sphere of Heaven.' He tells me that this denotes the dimension of his realm, which is the eighth. In that dimension he contains the genetics of the Light Races of Orion with the sun of his creation being Rigel. As he communes with me in this time-space, Thoth or 'Tehuti' is both Toth-Mus-Zurud and Thoth, Raismes of Aphra (translated as 'mouth of sun of the altar place'). When he ascended at the end of his 'Raismes' life experience, he did not at that time take his physical body with him, but instead left it in a state of suspended animation. He later returned to re-claim this form, merging it with his higher Light Body as Toth-Mus-Zurud. In this way, he descended through the nine layers of the Earth into the interior world or inner cavity of the planet, wherein he now dwells with the Central Earth Tribes.

In the Age when Toth-Mus-Zurud descended into to this world, he dwelt primarily in Atlantis, with periods of time spent among the Tribes of the Central Earth. Thoth's entire 'mission' was threefold. One was to bring to Earth the 'Enochian Table,' which was knowledge of sacred geometry for specific Earth structures to be built upon this sphere to aid us in our return to the Attasic Universe. Originally, those whom Thoth calls the 'Master Builders of the Sun Bow,' set up patterns and grids upon and within the planet, from which sacred temples arose. But as the etheric veil of the Earth deteriorated, greater consciousness patterns were needed to be nested within the Gaia-form of this world. His second planetary objective was to supervise these constructions, so that they would be accomplished according to the Greater Plan. Thirdly, he was to bring to this realm a great deal of knowledge that had been lost from the hearts and minds of the Earthborn. This he gave us in such works as the 'Emerald Tablets,' and many other books on such subjects as sacred geometry, alchemy, healing sciences, and the true Genesis of our universe. All of his 'writings' as 'The Thoth' were not done pen in hand, but as direct transmissions into the akashic records. Many channel-scribes through the ages have tapped into the Akashic Repository of Thoth, and written from his Record.<sup>369</sup>

Apparently Thoth, as it seems, has been channeling through quite a few mediums over the millennia, and he has been quite consistent in referring to his

Orion/Rigelian origins. Here he also tells us about nanotravel, and his three main purposes with coming to Earth. In fact, I'd like to make some comments on the emphasized parts because they are quite important.

If the reader still can recall, in Level III, I was discussing the Alpha Draconian influences on mankind, data-streamed by a lady who calls herself Abraxas. She was talking about the Eight Dimensions, where many beings dwell. Up to that dimension, souls can usually travel quite freely, but to penetrate the Ninth Dimension, the soul will need permission—the Ninth through the Twelfth Dimensions being the upper echelons of the Sanctuary of the Orion Empire. In the above quote, Thoth claims to be dwelling in the Eighth Dimension, which means he doesn't have access to the additional four dimensions. This is the same restrictions Lucifer and his Fallen Angels got when they were cast out of Heaven. Furthermore, Thoth mentions his physical body being in suspense—something I've been talking about throughout all the Levels of Learning. Then, just like En.ki, he descended to the Underworld, where he now is dwelling.

In the second paragraph, Thoth mentions something quite interesting. He claims that one reason for coming here was to give us the ability to return to the "Attasic Universe," which is nothing else but the Inner Sanctuaries of the Orion Empire (Satania). The following definition gives hint of what the Attasic Universe is, but is mainly explaining matter and anti-matter, which is the Material Universe versus the Spirit Universe. It is true what it says in the sense that you can't enter the Spirit Universe in a material body and vice versa.

akashic definition for: Attasic Universe

A neutral universal field that holds the balance between the universe and anti-universe preventing these two potentials from coming into direct contact with each other, which would result in the destruction of both. It is the unified field of all consciousness where there is no separation. All time fields and universal strata striking a harmonic in the center of the soul's Atoma or 'inner heart sun', which is the composite of all seven chakras. The Attasic Universe is the charge of release from time / space / matter divisions.

The entrance point for the souls of earth and their universal realm into the Attasic Universe is the "Golden Star of Mazuriel." The "touch point" in this universe for Mazuriel is the "Lion's Gate" of the Constellation of Leo.<sup>370</sup>

In the previous quote by Thoth, it's also of interest that he admits to that the Grid is about to come down, which is also something I have stated since Level II.

The last thing he talks about is his Emerald Tablets of Thoth, which were given freely to mankind in order to educate us—or so he says. In fact, the material this Thoth character was giving us is a mix of both useful and twisted information in typical En.ki manner. The true information—as much as he wanted to give us—was instead discussed within the old Mystery Schools. What I am getting at here is that Thoth, just like En.ki, put himself on the pedestal, both showing themselves off as wisdom teachers, when the information—the part that was true—originates from the Queen of the Stars.

Another source telling us about Thoth's supposed Rigelian connections is from an article called "The Gate of the Sun, the Solar Logos & the Lion" in "Temple Doors Issue 4—1997 (TD-9704),"<sup>371</sup> which basically is about Thoth's relation to the Sphinx, but this is what it says about Thoth in relation to the star Rigel:

The Lion of Leo represents the passage between the lesser Solar Logos - the astronomy of our physical sun, and the greater Solar Logos. Thoth has told us in the past that Leo was the constellation of access to the Golden Star of Mazuriel, which is the highest 'threshold level' Solar Logos for all worlds of this universal system. Ultimately, the Golden Star of Mazuriel represents the full Christic consciousness, and thus represents the future consciousness of this and many other worlds. The Solar Logos of Earth's true planetary design in the ultimate configuration involving our physical sun, Rigel and Mazuriel, is the Blue Star Rigel in Orion. With the Golden Star of Mazuriel in the picture, the Solar Logos associated with the Blue Star Rigel becomes an intermediary logos, or bridge between the consciousness of our current physical sun, and that of the Golden Star of Mazuriel. Thus the Solar Logos of the Blue Star Rigel will generally be referred to as the greater Solar Logos for the Earth herein, and for all intents and current purposes it is. However, in the next level of cosmology beyond that logos, the Solar logos of the Golden Star of Mazuriel would truly be the greater Solar logos for all worlds in this universal system. The Blue Star Rigel is the greater Solar logos only for the Earth and Venus to our knowledge at this time, but it is the stepping stone to the Solar logos of the Golden Star of Mazuriel. Keep in mind that when we are speaking of Rigel being a stepping stone to the consciousness of Mazuriel, the stellar representative of the Christ, we are looking at some very long cycles in terms of linear Earth reality, literally many thousands of years. But in the higher dimensional realities where time is not so large a part of the reality, it is but one revolution on the spiral of the cosmic clock.

This entire cosmology involving more than one Solar Logos (as well as the lion / Lion symbology) is also seen in the Sphinx's history according to Thoth. In the original rendering of the Sphinx, Thoth tells us that it was a female human body with a Lion's head, then later it was changed to the body of a Lion with a human head: female at first, then later it was changed to be a male head.

The Sphinx, despite its current appearance (as opposed to the original version Thoth revealed to us), still contains much of the original Light which it was imbued with, and can currently be used to access the vibratory frequencies of that original consciousness, if one but understands how to move through the more recent 'maze' of vibrations that overlay the original energy that was programmed in stone.

This is actually nowhere near as difficult as it is to access those same consciousness codes through most of the other remaining 'ancient' temple structures in Egypt, as most of those were not even built during the 'Time of the Light', but much later upon certain sacred centers of the Earth. At those temples it is necessary to access the sacred energy emanating from the Earth itself, more so than the temple.<sup>372</sup>

Interesting is the reference to the Sphinx originally being a female lion, but of course, in due time, with the Luciferian Patriarchs loose on the planet, the head was changed to that of a male, and the Sphinx became masculine. Its counterpart is the now famous "head on Mars," which both Richard Hoagland and Joseph Farrell in their very convincing research say is a Sphinx as well, but with the head of Marduk!<sup>373</sup>

Not only in the channeled material, but in the work that has been preserved as well, Thoth is stressing that he came here to educate humanity. However, when we read the advanced science and everything else he brought down here, it is easy to see that it was not the masses he wanted to educate, but the High Priests and those initiated in the Mystery Schools, i.e. En.ki's Minions. Although much of his material became available to the public, we can imagine that it was poorly understood by the uneducated masses. This is not so strange, because the information was not meant for them! Also, in the usual manner, Lucifer's angels never revealed anything really "secret" to the masses — the real important and interesting material was meant for a few selectees. The most well-known work of Thoth amongst the general public is probably “The Emerald Tablets of Thoth,” which can be found online.<sup>374</sup>

Also, Thoth’s teaching in quantum physics laid a base for the LPG-C (Life Physics Group California) 3% rule, on which they borrowed the principle that if 3% of humanity can agree on a certain principle or idea, the rest of humanity will follow. I believe there is something to this idea, just as I suggested in Level I, but we also know that the AIF wants us to evolve, so accomplishing the 3% rule will also be in their interest as well as in ours. The scientists of LPG-C are quite strictly following Sitchin’s research, which is also backed up by the “Nibiruans” that LPG-C scientists are in contact with (they assumingly still are, even after their chief scientist, Dr. A.R. Bordon’s recent demise). After progressing with my own research and studying the LPG-C ideas some more, I wouldn’t sign on the line and commit myself to follow their ideas of human “ascension,” however. Anyway, Thoth as a channeled source says in a Q&A session:

[Questioner]: What is the ‘Dynamic of Existence, the Metatronic Fulcrum’?

Thoth: “FULCRUM” is the vibrational / symbolic / code name given to a projection through time on the planet Earth that was begun by the ENNEAD. FULCRUM is brought through a ray of Seraphimic projection or being - a Seraphim Archangel... FULCRUM then, is the complete function and purpose of this projection, and Merkrael is the entity consciousness assigned to carry out this function by the ENNEAD. Merkrael is not Michael. However, the former must precede the latter in works. Just as Michael must open up through activity, the passage for the New Man.

“The purpose of FULCRUM is: To create quantum leaps of accelerated knowledge within humanity, working in coordination with the natural 100th Monkey law of connectiveness, i.e.: understanding quantum leaps through humanity once a certain number of Earth souls relates to that understanding and physically applies it in some way. FULCRUM carries this further in bringing specific situations forward to allow for a more ordered revelation and use of this quantum power.”<sup>375</sup>

Here we can see where LPG-C got some of its ideas. It had a lot of affinity for Ningišzidda, who it said was a great teacher. It claimed that it was in contact with him until he “died” here on Earth a few years ago, according to what Dr.

Bordon told me (meaning that Ningišzidda simply “jumped bodies”). Ningišzidda and Thoth are one and the same.<sup>376</sup>

Although we still can find some of Thoth’s extensive work today, much of it has supposedly been lost—some of it burned up when the Library of Alexandria was put on fire. However, some of it was rescued and preserved by the High Priests and kept within the Mystery Schools and secret societies. According to Dr. Farrell, “in some versions, forty-two volumes of his [Thoth’s] works were removed from the Library of Alexandria prior to its burning, and secreted with ‘initiates’ who buried them in the desert for safekeeping.”<sup>377</sup> If this is true (this information originally comes from Sitchin’s “The Wars of Gods and Men,” and that’s what Farrell partially means with “in some versions”), there is an enormous amount of information that is hidden from the public. It doesn’t take a genius to understand that the volumes that were buried in the desert soon were dug up again and became highly protected. It also makes you wonder if the “public versions” were, perhaps, intentionally burned on the order of En.ki so that he once again could keep humanity in the dark. Things change, and so do plans and targets within a greater agenda. Therefore, what once was revealed will suddenly fit the agenda better if it again is hidden.

Manly P. Hall, the famous researcher into the history of Freemasonry and who we have mentioned earlier, is showing in his book, The Secret Teachings of All Ages, that Thoth was the originator of many Mystery Schools. Sitchin also correctly states that Hermes-Thoth is of first importance to Freemasonic scholars because he was said to be the author of the Masonic initiatory rituals, which were borrowed from the Mysteries established by Thoth.<sup>378</sup> He was one of the foremost when it comes to the founding of Esotericism. He is also known as bringing down hieroglyphic writing<sup>379</sup> from the stars. This information alone has too many correlations with En.ki to be just coincidental.

Who was it that started the secret societies—The Brotherhood of the Snake or The Brotherhood of the Serpent being the first of them—and created an elite here on Earth to have people who could help him control the masses? Prince Lucifer, aka Lord En.ki, did!

Quetzalcoatl was known amongst the Mayans as the “Feathered serpent,” and who is it that is connected with the bird/aquatic race, and who is known as the “Serpent of Wisdom,” or the “Wise serpent” in the Garden of Edin? Quetzalcoatl, amongst the Aztecs, was also related to Venus<sup>380</sup>, the “Morning star,” which in turn is related to Lucifer. Thus, we are coming full circle.

One book that according to Manly P. Hall was lost to the masses is the Book of Thoth. He claims that the book is still in existence, though, and “continues to lead the disciples of this age into the presence of the Immortals.”<sup>381</sup> Furthermore, Hall said that “its faithful initiates carried it sealed in a sacred casket into another land.”<sup>382</sup> Where have we heard something similar to that before? Wasn’t that how the Ark of the Covenant was transported in Genesis in the Bible, carefully led and monitored by the biblical imposter, Yahweh, who stole the name and authority from the Mother Goddess herself and changed genders into a masculine God? I’m sure “someone” was overlooking the transportation of the “Book of Thoth” as well, to make sure it remained in “the right hands.”

Could it be that this was the book, which told the true secrets of the Universe—a piece of work that “God” was willing to kill for if a commoner got hold of it?

Last, Hall rubs in how Elitism was the name of the game when it comes to Thoth’s material:

...the apostolic succession from the first hierophant initiated by Hermes himself remains unbroken to this day, and those who are peculiarly fitted to serve the Immortals may discover this priceless document if the will search sincerely and tirelessly for it.<sup>383</sup>

I assume that this is similar to the Holy Grail in the King Arthur Saga, an endless search for something so secret that it had to be carried around in a casket under strict security. Only the “best of the best” (whatever that means) is entitled to learn about this document. The “Immortals,” of course, refers to the gods themselves—the Fallen Angels.

It is quite obvious when I look at Thoth’s mission here on Earth that one of his main tasks was to teach humans how to read and write (he was the one who did that, according to some mythology) so the AIF could have human scribes, writing down on stone and in cuneiform what the gods dictated to them. Because we humans have a tendency to think in pictures, using hieroglyphs was apparently the way to do it. Thoth was also the originator of science, magic, and alchemy on this planet<sup>384</sup>—again according to our mythology—but then we may ask ourselves, what science and what magic? This was already known to the ancient shamans and the whole Namlú'u race, for that matter, but the knowledge was of course “forgotten” after the Fallen Angels came and took over.

The confusion over who is whom in the pantheon is showing again in the case of Hermes-Thoth. Some say he was the son of En.ki and Marduk's brother,<sup>385</sup> while others suggest that Thoth and Ninurta are the same being.<sup>386</sup> Others claim that Marduk and Thoth were archenemies<sup>387</sup>, when in fact Marduk in this case is confused with Ninurta, who indeed was an enemy of Thoth. As we can see, the confusion knows no limits. Only in light of painting the bigger picture can we clearly see where many people go wrong on this subject.

Fig. 2. Thoth with is Ibis head.

Thoth was often depicted in a male, human body with the head of an ibis—a large bird still dwelling by the Nile river. This associates him with the Bird Tribe we were discussing earlier—the star race being part of Lucifer's Rebellion, and some of them later being put in jail in the Dark Star. In Atlantis, he was known as Chiquitet or Tehuti and was often shown carrying the staff with the double helix, which is Lucifer's/En.ki's symbol (fig. 3)—another piece of evidence that Thoth is En.ki's counterpart.

Horns in any shape and form symbolize the male aspect—the Patriarchal Regime.

Quetzalcoatl, known as Thoth's counterpart, we have learned, was known as the "Feathered serpent" and as the "Shining One." The Shining Ones appear in multiple cultures, myths, and legends around the world and were named that because of their "ethereal" appearance—i.e. they appeared in their light-bodies/Avatars—something a number of researchers call shapeshifting. As I mentioned earlier in this paper, this was often how Thoth appeared. The result is that the Shining Ones always looked different than the people of the culture in which they appeared. They were the ones who many call the "Anunnaki," but I call the AIF.

As for being connected with the Underworld, En.ki took on a certain personae, and Nergal is one—something I showed in a previous paper. Thoth, as another of En.ki's aliases, is also connected with the "resurrection of souls."<sup>388</sup> This is fascinating because what exactly does "resurrection of souls" mean in this context? We know that when the human souls leave their body at body death, they go through the "tunnel" toward the "bright, white light" (unless they decide not to) and get recycled back to Earth again. This process is strictly directed and monitored by the AIF, so with this in mind, I ask the question again: "what does 'resurrection of souls' mean in this context?" If Thoth is En.ki, which the records indicate, it means, as I've said repeatedly, that En.ki is in charge of the resurrection/recycling process—there is hardly any doubt about it. However, there is more! The mythology also tells us that Thoth is judging the dead!<sup>389</sup> Isn't that supposed to be done by someone who is in possession of the Tablets of

Destinies?<sup>390</sup> In other words, it's easy to see that three beings—Lord En.ki/Thoth/Nergal, Queen Ereškigal, and Marduk (more about him in conjunction with the Underworld in a later paper)—are the ones responsible for the recycling of souls. I am also quite sure that etheric soul fragments of all the three of them sit in the chairs of the Council of Elders,<sup>391</sup> before whom each soul allegedly has to stand, so that the goal for the next lifetime can be decided. The mythology clearly says that Thoth is judging souls in person (see endnote #30). Keep in mind that these beings are interdimensional, and can bi-locate (i.e. they can be in more than one place in space/time or time/space simultaneously).

Fig. 4. Quetzalcoatl as depicted in the Codex Borbonicus, which is an “Aztec codex written by Aztec priests shortly before or after the Spanish conquest of Mexico.”<sup>392</sup>

In addition, En.ki is said to “return” as a Savior of mankind in today’s New Age beliefs in the form of “Space Jesus,” Maitreya, Ashtar, and as En.ki himself. Quetzalcoatl also made a promise to one day return to Mesoamerica. This was so strongly embedded into the beliefs of the Aztecs that they made no resistance when Hernandez Cortez and his bloodthirsty murderers came down on them. The Aztecs thought it was their “Serpent God” returning. Ironically,

En.ki is not “returning;” he is already here, and has been here for a very long time.

Moreover, the Aztecs presented their Quetzalcoatl as no less than the “creator of mankind!”

He was a creator deity having contributed essentially to the creation of Mankind.<sup>393</sup>

Who do we know is the “creator of Mankind?” Is it a being called “Thoth”, or is it En.ki?

Also, the astute reader may remember that I showed evidence of that Sin (Nannar) is another of En.ki’s aliases. Sin is also being related to the Moon, as a Moon god. Just as a reminder, let’s take a look at this again (my emphasis is in italics):

Sin /'si:n/ (Akkadian: Su'en, Sîn) or Nanna (Sumerian: DŠEŠ.KI, DNANNA) was the god of the moon in the Mesopotamian mythology of Akkad, Assyria and Babylonia.<sup>394</sup>

Then, let’s take a look at Thoth:

Thoth was originally a moon god.<sup>395</sup>

In art, Thoth was usually depicted with the head of an ibis, possibly because the Egyptians saw curve of the ibis’ beak as a symbol of the crescent moon. Sometimes, he was depicted as a baboon holding up a crescent moon, as the baboon was seen as a nocturnal and intelligent creature.<sup>396</sup>

Now that I’ve presented Hermes-Thoth as En.ki to the readers, what part did he really have in the Rigelian uprising? Obviously, “Thoth” wants to give the impression that he was born in Rigel, perhaps for two main reasons. One, he wanted to separate himself out from En.ki, and two, if En.ki is accepted by mankind as the “good guy,” the attack on the Rigel system would seem like a malevolent one, although it was En.ki, in his role as Thoth, who started the Rigel Rebellion.

En.ki is a very clever being, who can manipulate an untrained mind in a second, and by creating a character such as Thoth, he strengthened his stranglehold on us humans.

The AIF knows that our species has an “expiration date;” not only because they did things to make sure that we have one, but also because it is built into the DNA of any physical being, animal, and plant. It is also built, on a larger scale, into the mass consciousness of a species, whether the AIF likes it or not.

- The Moon is set up in order to keep planet Gaia locked within a certain frequency.
- The Grid keeps the species mass-controlled because it is built with energy transmitted by humanity’s mass consciousness (and it is to a large degree our own common belief system that holds it in place).
- Our bodies have amnesia programming built into them.
- A large chunk of our DNA is dormant.

These are things that the AIF did in order to slow everything down—not to speed it up, as some people say—although in the long run, they embrace the Expiration Date of our species. Although these beings may be master geneticists in some respect, they can’t stop a soul from evolving because of the “Cycles of Time.” As we have discussed in other levels of learning, the new species is evolving now, and you, the reader, are evolving with it.

My point is that this is the reason why beings such as “Thoth” released much of his material: so humans could take part of it to enhance our evolution. Much of it was not understood at the time it was released, and it was not meant to be understood. Either plans changed and they were hidden again (and supposedly destroyed to some degree), or perhaps they were released so that they would be mentioned in the old records. This comes in handy now with all the channeled material, which is pointing toward these records. These records will assist some of humanity to achieve higher awareness, but they still keep humans within a certain frequency. Nevertheless, they are part of the plan, and they give the false impression that they were written by a benevolent being, which is an important part of the agenda. The Internet is very much working as a hub to help beings evolve, making it easier than ever to find information we need.

When the Rigel War started, Homo sapiens sapiens were not even created yet. This war seems to have happened relatively close to the Deluge, but our planet had not yet been flooded. All these abominable creatures that En.ki and his team of scientists had created were still roaming the Earth, and Atlantis and Lemuria were still the two prominent cultures on the planet. En.ki was traveling back and forth between Rigel and Gaia and has been known to us through this time period as “Thoth, the Atlantean,” or Tehuti, but also under other names, such as Poseidon and Neptune. In his most famous work, “The Emerald Tablets of Thoth-the-Atlantean,” which was found in the pyramids of South America, he talks about his life and that he is a “Divine teacher.” Interestingly, he also explains in his Emerald Tablets why Atlantis was destroyed, and this explanation fits right into En.ki’s Elitism. He says that the reason for the destruction was that “confidential knowledge was imparted to unworthy people and the latter began using it for evil purposes. They adopted bloody sacrifices — and this resulted in numerous incarnations of hellish beings among people. This led to quick degradation of incarnated people in Atlantis.”<sup>397</sup>

This is textbook manipulation. At the time of Atlantis, En.ki was the one who supported bloody sacrifices, and he didn’t instigate it at that time but continued using it for “evil purposes.” Also, En.ki was the one who let his experiments in genetic manipulation result in “numerous incarnations of hellish beings among people.” Nonetheless, it was these abominable monsters and degraded humans that were the main reason for the demise of Atlantis, but it had nothing to do with “unworthy” people getting confidential knowledge. However, this is what En.ki wants the people of Gaia to believe happened, so it can be justified that only the few initiated should have access to such lofty information.

All this is cleverly done. Look at you now, for example. Don’t you think that you have come a long way in just a few years in your own evolution? Don’t you think you have evolved into a more clever and “better” being than you were, let’s say, ten years ago (and this is regardless of how “good” you were back then)? If the answer is yes to those questions, don’t you think you would be “worthy” by now, if we use En.ki’s own term, to receive a great part of “confidential knowledge?” I would say so. However, if you knocked on the door to the secret societies, which hold on to this knowledge, and asked them to share it with you right now, do you think they would? Of course not. If Thoth were here now, do you think he would release it to you? No, he wouldn’t. So let’s ask ourselves—why not? The answer is simple; you are not of En.ki’s pure bloodline — you are not one of his Minions.

Not even during Atlantean times was confidential knowledge released to the public. Some knowledge was released, but the quality of that information was not of the kind that was released in the upper echelons. The same information that we have at our convenience today is approximately the same information that was released back then. It was basic spiritual information (“basic” in relative terms, that is, compared to the information that was actually written down by Thoth), and it was hardly because average people got hold of information that things ran amok in Atlantis. If things went so bad because people were educated, why didn't Poseidon and his "Kings" set up laws against human sacrifice and blood sacrifices in general? They didn't, and the reason is because the AIF has always encouraged blood sacrifices—that is hardly a secret. We need go no further than to the Bible. Didn't Jehovah/Yahweh demand blood sacrifices every so often from the people? Our history is full of examples where the "gods" demand blood sacrifices in order to forgive the people. "Give me a virgin, and I'll forgive you!"

Why are these beings so concerned with blood rituals? We've discussed that in earlier levels of learning, but let's review it again. The gods get energized from the blood of a human or an animal that has been sacrificed under fear and terror. These beings feed on these kind of things. Also, a part of our soul is running through the blood. Consequently, don't think for a moment that they wouldn't encourage such behavior. In other words, Thoth is not telling us the truth about the destruction of Atlantis. What else did he lie about? Well, at least it may encourage the reader to look at his material with new, more critical eyes. If you keep in mind what I've told you in this paper, you will be amazed about what you'll find when you read the Thoth material.

Other cultures worth looking into in this respect would, typically, be the Mayans and the Aztecs, but also the Incas in South America. They were all big on human sacrifice.<sup>398</sup> I also bring up the Incas for a specific reason—if you look at the name "Inca," it's very close to "En.ki," isn't it?<sup>399</sup> This is how the AIF has always played with words and names.

So, the story portrays En.ki as the one who instigated the uprising in Rigel, turning not only the Rigelians against the Empire, but also creating a civil war inside the Rigel star system. This made the war very complicated, and it became another of these wars that has lasted for a very long time. Even if the war is not raging at the moment—the tension is still there.

Although the records state that Thoth was born in Rigel, that is not true, when we know that En.ki and Thoth are one and the same. It's all about misdirecting our attention, and they have succeeded pretty well so far. Rigel has very little to do with En.ki/Thoth, except that En.ki is from Orion, and Rigel is an Orion star. Otherwise, Rigel was just another star system that En.ki wanted to conquer.

We are going to leave the Rigel War for a while and come back to it later. In the meantime, we are going to look into something else that we haven't talked much about before, but it is important. Therefore, let's move on to the next paper.

PAPER #12: THE MILKY WAY SPIRAL ARMS AND THE COSMIC SLAVE MASTERS

I. The Milky Way Spiral Arms

Galaxies, according to astronomers, are put into different categories—just as stars are. The Milky Way Galaxy, in which we reside, is considered a spiral galaxy, for obvious reasons. In the middle of the galaxy is a core, which allegedly consists of a supergiant black hole, surrounded by millions of stars. This core is by some also called The Womb of the Mother and is a birth center of stars.

The theory states that in the beginning of the Galaxy, the “womb” shot out a myriad of nebulae and stars, which took a spiral form, and eventually, different spiral arms, filled with gas, nebulae, and stars, formed and created the shape of our current Galaxy.

Fig. 1. NGC 6744, a Milky Way look-alike.

There are many spiral arms in the Milky Way, but they all develop from two major arms<sup>400</sup> and get other names as we get closer to the outskirts of the Galaxy. The two major arms are the Perseus Arm and the Scutum-Centaurus Arm, as depicted in fig. 2 below. These two arms shoot out from each side of the oval-shaped galactic core.

Fig 2. The most common spiral arms in the Milky Way Galaxy.

To begin, let us first get a little bit familiar with the spiral arm in which our own solar system is located. As we have mentioned earlier, the Sun is located at the fringes of the Galaxy and sits on the Orion Arm (see fig. 2 above, where it's called "2b. Orion-Cygnus," and is written in orange). This is what Wikipedia has to say about the Orion Arm:

---

<sup>400</sup> There is speculations going on in the scientific field as we speak that the Milky Way consists of four, not two, major arms.

The Orion Arm is a minor spiral arm of the Milky Way galaxy some 3,500 light-years (1,100 parsecs) across and approximately 10,000 light-years (3,100 parsecs) in length.[2] The Solar System and therefore the Earth lies within the Orion Arm. It is also referred to by its full name, the Orion–Cygnus Arm, as well as Local Arm, Orion Bridge, Local Spur and Orion Spur.

The Orion Arm is named for the Orion constellation, which is one of the most prominent constellations of Northern Hemisphere winter (Southern Hemisphere summer). Some of the brightest stars and most famous celestial objects of this constellation (Betelgeuse, Rigel, the stars of Orion's Belt, the Orion Nebula) are located within the Orion Arm, as shown on the interactive map below.

The Orion Arm is located between the Carina–Sagittarius Arm (toward the Galactic Center) and the Perseus Arm (toward the outside Universe), the latter one of the two major arms of the Milky Way. Long thought to be a minor structure, a "spur" between the two longer adjacent arms Perseus and Carina–Sagittarius, evidence was presented in mid 2013 that it might be in fact a branch of the Perseus Arm, or possibly an independent arm segment itself.[3]

Within the Orion Arm, our Solar System and Earth are located close to the inner rim in the Local Bubble, about halfway along the Orion Arm's length, approximately 8,000 parsecs (26,000 light-years) from the Galactic Center.<sup>401</sup>

Fig.2 above is a picture we are going to return to several times in this paper because, first, it is a very good picture, giving an excellent visual view of the Galaxy and its spiral arms, and second, it will be very helpful when we start talking about star races and their location in space/time and time/space.

If you study fig. 3 below, you'll notice that there is a "trail" within these arms, which starts at the Perseus Arm. Follow that arm inward (to the right), beginning at the fringes until you come to a place where the Orion Arm branches off "downward" in the picture (here called the Local). Follow the Orion Arm, and you see the Sun's position in red. Just where the Orion Arm ends, there is a connection between this arm and the Carina–Sagittarius Arm, which then continues all the way to the center of the Galaxy. We can of course also follow this trail, starting from the Galactic Center and moving outward. Along such trails we have different Galactic Highways, such as Pesh-Meten, which is the commercial "highway" I've mentioned a lot in my papers. The Galaxy is also divided into sectors by trading star races, and Orion and our solar system belong to Sector 9. When we look at the Galaxy from this perspective, we get more order out of chaos, and the Milky Way doesn't seem so vast anymore.

Fig. 3. Pesh-Meten.

Look at the trail again, and you will notice that our solar system (in red) is sitting on Pesh-Meten, which is the Galactic Highway I just made you look at, which goes all the way from the Galactic Center and out of the Galaxy where the Orion-Cygnus Arm disappears into space in the upper part of the map (from there, it continues through deep space until it reaches the Andromeda Galaxy, 2.2 million light-years away, and continues there). Hence, Lucifer knew exactly what he was doing when he was taking over Ar-i-du, our solar system! Earth is sitting like a plug right on Pesh-Meten, and by isolating Earth from the rest of the Galaxy and eventually closing the Saturn stargate, he blocked the energy, which previously flowed free along this long highway of business and trade. This was not taken lightly by many star races that had business going on at both sides of Pesh-Meten, where Ar-i-du sat in the middle.

Star travelers could of course take a passageway on either side of Ar-i-du—and they do—but it works like when you put a big stone in the middle of a creek—the water has to take routes around the stone on both sides, and the flow of the water slows down, and debris is gathering where the stream is almost standing still, and it's piling up. A similar thing happened with the energy flow after a while, with the solar system sitting there, blocking the energy. In some places, the energy created back currents, and it could become a somewhat dangerous place to travel through. What happened was that the flow of business and trade also decreased with the flow of energy.

Fig. 4. A Sagittarius.

One thing I want to teach the readers to always pay attention to when researching the Pantheon and old records is how things are named—everything from the beings themselves, to planets, to suns/stars, to nebulae, to asterisms, and to galaxies. I would suggest that very little—if anything—is named randomly. All names are there for a reason—e.g. there is a reason why a spiral arm is named the Perseus Arm and not the Artemis Arm, just to make something up here in order to prove a point. It's named the Perseus Arm and could not be named anything else because of its significance to "Perseus." I hope the readers understand what I mean by this. Therefore, it becomes so much easier to know where to start researching if we are aware of this simple rule. How many people have actually seriously thought about why a certain planet is called Jupiter? Not many. Most people think it's just something astronomers decided to do because it sounded cool. Far from it!

The Orion Arm is called that because this cluster of the Galaxy belongs to the Orion Empire—it's a matter of real estate. We are not talking about the Third Dimension now, but all dimensions, all the way up to Satania.

Fig. 5. Nergal depicted as a Centaur in the British Museum.

However, let's take a look at the spiral arms between which the Orion Arm is "squeezed in." We have Carina Sagittarius on one side and Perseus on the other. Although our own spiral arm is generally known as the Orion Arm, it's correct name is, as I already mentioned, the Orion-Cygnus Arm. Further down, we also have the Scutum-Centaurus Arm (see fig. 2).

First, what is a Sagittarius? A Sagittarius is a centaur (fig. 4).

Then, I mentioned Scutum-Centaurus, and "Centaurus," of course, stands for centaur as well. Now we have not only one but two spiral arms referring to centaurs, oddly enough. In the papers, I have on a few occasions mentioned that En.ki and his scientists, when they did their experiments in genetics to create the perfect slave race, as a mid-station they created the centaurs, who were half man and half horse. The fact that these creatures actually roamed our world in ancient times has been confirmed by quite a few sources by now, so I have little doubt that this was a real species. In any case, why name two spiral arms after this rather odd creature? Isn't that strange if a centaur is only a temporary experiment here on Earth—an experiment that didn't even last long and then was terminated?

It is not strange if we know what Nergal symbolizes. The reader may recall that Nergal is one of En.ki's alter egos—the one he is known by as the King of the Underworld. Now, let's take a look at Nergal again. In old Babylon, he was often depicted as a...yes, you guessed it—as a centaur! (See fig.5).

Could there possibly be a connection? Of course! We've learned by now that these things are not coincidental. However, before we go into the significance of this, let's look at a few other Spiral Arms, and let's start with the Norma Arm.

The Norma Arm starts at the Galactic Center and expands outward to become the "Outer Arm" and the "New Arm." Thus, it's quite far away from the Orion-Cygnus Arm, where our solar system is located. Therefore, how can it have any relation to us?

Well, if we look up Norma, we find something quite interesting.

Norma is a small and inconspicuous constellation in the southern hemisphere between Scorpius and Centaurus. Its name is Latin for normal, referring to a right angle, and is variously considered to represent a rule, a carpenter's square, a set square or a level.<sup>402</sup>

First, we need to know that the Milky Way Spiral Arms in some instances also have Constellations named the same. I would suggest that the name of the Constellations came first, and the Spiral Arms were named afterward. Hence, we have Norma located between Scorpius and Centaurus! There we have the centaur again, associated with Nergal/En.ki. As if that weren't enough, there is also a reference to the square, the rule, and the level. Where have we heard of these carpenter's tools before? The knowledgeable reader knows that these tools are used as symbols in Freemasonry!

The working tools of a Fellow craft are the square, level, and plumb-rule.<sup>403</sup>

Consequently, who is in charge of Freemasonry, which is a branch-off of the Brotherhood of the Snake? The answer is En.ki!

Fig. 6. Freemasonic tools: the Carpenter's Square; the Level, the Plumb-Rule, and more...

We now understand that the constellation of Norma is related to En.ki and is quite possibly one of Lucifer's strongholds. What about the spiral arm called Norma, as well? Can it be that there are some very prominent star bases for Lucifer along this spiral arm as well? Following this array of sources, it is quite plausible. Can he be in charge of the complete spiral arm? That is highly doubtful, but as we've discussed earlier, there are a lot of different passageways or galactic highways following these spiral arms, and he may very well have taken over some of them—hence, he could be in charge of business and trade along such a passageway.

When we looked into the Norma constellation above, we found that it is located between Scorpius and Centaurus, and if we look at Scorpius, we find:

Scorpius, sometimes known as Scorpio, is one of the constellations of the zodiac. Its name is Latin for scorpion, and its symbol is (Unicode  $\text{♏}$ ). It lies between Libra to the west and Sagittarius to the east. It is a large constellation located in the southern hemisphere near the center of the Milky Way.<sup>404</sup>

Now we notice that Scorpius lies between Libra and Sagittarius! This is all about so-called "trails of stars"—in this case, star constellations—and it's more related than any astronomer, astrophysicist, or astrologer may realize. As I've said repeatedly, names are not random! They have direct meanings, and they have hidden (occult) meanings. Here we have a trail of star constellations, conquered by Lucifer and his DAKH warriors. Also, we once again stumble upon the word Sagittarius, which is related to Nergal, the Centaur.

Now, let's take a look at Cygnus, as in the Orion-Cygnus Arm. What does the word Cygnus mean? It means "swan," doesn't it? Let's look it up.

Cygnus /'sɪgnəs/ is a northern constellation lying on the plane of the Milky Way, deriving its name from the Latinized Greek word for swan. The swan is one of the most recognizable constellations of the northern summer and autumn, it features a prominent asterism known as the Northern Cross (in contrast to the Southern Cross).<sup>405</sup>

What is a swan? Of course, it's a bird. Have we heard of birds before in relation to these papers? We have—in relation to the "Bird Tribe!" What is the Bird Tribe? They are the bird/aquatic species that followed Lucifer in his rebellion, and many of them were captured and put in prison in the Sirius C Dark Star—they are also called the Nommos. Is this a coincidence? Hardly! Especially not when it's mentioned as a part of the word Orion (Orion-Cygnus Arm). Isn't it more plausible that the word Cygnus is added after Orion because a certain being wants to brag and say that he is in charge of some of the Orion Empire? More literally, he is telling us that he is in charge of a part of Pesh-Meten. Earth is indeed sitting as a blockage on the exact border between the part of the spiral arm called "Orion" and the part called "Cygnus." If we go back and take a look at fig. 2, we can see approximately where Orion starts in the upper part of the map and where Cygnus takes over in the lower part of the map. Earth is sitting right between the two! Does this mean that Lucifer, by putting a plug in the middle of the Passageway, only lets business and trade move into Cygnus with his permission? Could he possibly have the star races doing business in that area of the Galaxy (Sector 9) pay taxes to him in order to be able to move into the Cygnus Arm? This would be something that someone with his character would do, so who knows?

Here is another very interesting comment on the Cygnus constellation:

Together with other avian constellations near the summer solstice, Vultur cadens and Aquila, Cygnus may be a significant part of the origin of the myth of the Stymphalian Birds, one of The Twelve Labours of Hercules.<sup>406</sup>

In my papers, I have often mentioned that the AIF—or at least some of them—are man-eaters. They eat human flesh. The Stymphalian Birds referred to above are a clear reference to this, for us, horrendous habit of the gods. Let's look up "Stymphalian Birds" to see what we can find:

In Greek mythology, the Stymphalian birds (Greek: Στυμφαλίδες ὄρνιθες, Stymphalídes órnithes) were man-eating birds with beaks of bronze and sharp metallic feathers they could launch at their victims, and were pets of Ares, the god of war. Furthermore, their dung was highly toxic. They had migrated to a lake in Arcadia to escape a pack of wolves, and bred quickly and took over the countryside, destroying local crops, fruit trees and townspeople.<sup>407</sup>

Ares, the "God of War" is a reference to Marduk (and in some respect En.ki, as they both were impostors, playing the role of YHWH), and in mythology, these "birds" are referred to as being his "pets," which would be horrific enough, but I would say that this is just a cover-up, "blaming" this habit on pets, when in fact it refers to the gods themselves. Also, haven't we seen depictions of some of the gods having long, sharp beaks? Aren't some gods referred to as birds?

Then we have the Carina-Sagittarius Arm to the "left" of the Orion-Cygnus Arm, which can be best seen in Fig. 3. Sagittarius is obviously a very important word when we look either locally, at star constellations, or at the spiral arm. It's probably not a coincidence, either, that the Carina-Sagittarius Arm is the one closest to the Orion-Cygnus Arm because Lucifer expanded what was going to become his own empire. It's reasonable to believe that stars and asterisms in the Carina-Sagittarius Arm located closest to the Orion-Cygnus Arm are occupied by Lucifer's DAKH. When we look up Carina, we find that it means "keel," as in the keel of a ship, and this is what we'll find when we dig into the Chinese constellations:

From China (especially northern China), the stars of Carina can barely be seen. The star Canopus (the south polar star in Chinese astronomy) was located by

<sup>406</sup> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cygnus\_\(constellation\)#History\_and\_mythology#History_and_mythology)

<sup>407</sup> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Stymphalian\_birds

Chinese astronomers in the The Vermillion Bird of the South (南方朱雀, Nán Fāng Zhū Què).<sup>408</sup>

Canopus (alpha Carinae) is the brightest star in the constellation of Carina,<sup>409</sup> and there we have a connection to birds again, although this time we have to look into Chinese astronomy and astrology to find it.

Last, we have the Perseus Arm, which some astronomer nowadays think that the Orion-Cygnus Arm is just an extension of, and if we look very carefully on star maps (see fig. 3), we can see that this can very well be a case. It looks as if the Orion-Cygnus Arm is branching off from the larger Perseus Arm, and if this is the case, the former is much larger in size than previously thought. I haven't found anything worthwhile in regards to the Perseus Arm, however, which would indicate any extensive Luciferian involvement. Could it perhaps be that this outer arm is relatively free from their involvement? I have no way of knowing, but if so, it would be a very nice thing!

After having done research on the Milky Way Galaxy as a whole, there are a couple of things that strike me. First, it seems as if the Luciferian influence on the Galaxy is larger than I first thought—something I have also had suggested to me from anonymous sources. One of these sources said something to the following effect as a reply to a question I had at the time: “En.ki has created more damage in the Galaxy than you may think...” It seems now that this source may be correct!

The second thing that strikes me is how often the centaur entity appears in the research. There is no doubt that this is related to Nergal, the King of the Underworld, who is often depicted as such a creature. Thus far, we have brought up Sirius and the constellation it belongs to—Canis Major—as one of the origins to some of the Luciferian followers, but I also suspected that the Luciferian forces had to be more widespread than that. Sure enough, research pointed at many other star systems and asterisms, which I have mentioned here in Level IV. However, there seems to be another one, which is more “close to home.” Let us take a look at the constellation of Centaurus. I found this quite fascination information:

The figure of Centaurus can be traced back to a Babylonian constellation known as the Bison-man (MUL.GUD.ALIM). This being was depicted in two major forms: firstly, as a 4-legged bison with a human head, and secondly, as a being with a man's head and torso attached to the rear legs and tail of a bull or bison. It has been closely associated with the Sun god Utu-Shamash from very early times.<sup>410</sup>

Now we are a little bit ahead of ourselves because I have yet to release the paper that discusses Marduk's involvement with the Underworld. I will go into more details about that later, but for now, just keep a note to yourself that Marduk, after the Deluge, was deeply involved with the Underworld. In the quote above, Utu Šamaš is associated with the centaur, or as they depicted it in old Babylon, a bull or a bison—the Bull being related to the constellation of Taurus and the Pleiades—EA's resort. Utu is, as we've concluded earlier, the same being as Lord Marduk himself—the Sun god.

My last thing on Centaurus is the perhaps most compelling! The nearest stars to our Sun are Alpha and Proxima Centauri, being just about four light-years away from Earth. En.ki has taken on many different forms over the eons, and the centaur is only one of them. However, it's closely related to his kingship of the Underworld. Are some of his cohorts originating in any of these two stars, or could it be that Lucifer conquered them some time in the past? Whatever the case may be, Centaurus in its entirety seems to have a very close relationship to Lucifer. I think that we may eventually find more information showing exactly how Centaurus is connected with Lucifer and his Fallen Angels. Some have suggested that Centaurus—perhaps as an asterism—is the home of the DAKH warriors.

The Milky Way Galaxy is large, however, and we need to keep in mind that whatever we see in the sky is only 4% of what is actually there. It may be true what my anonymous source said, but I am also convinced that large sections of the Galaxy are not under Luciferian command.

The readers may ask themselves—if the Orion Empire is so vast, how can Lucifer have taken over what seems to be such a significant part of the Galaxy? I think the answer lies in the 4%. When Lucifer, as En.ki, created us as a slave race and only let us perceive 4% of the Universe, which 4% is it most possible that he would let us see? The territories owned by the Orion Empire, or the territories owned by his boasting self? I would put my money on the latter. Not to say that everything he shows us are his territories—it's probably far from it. However, some of the territories we can see, which are not what he considers his domains, could very well be territories he is planning to conquer—some of them with our help!

II. Redemption or Annihilation?

I know that there are many who, just like me, have seen the En.ki-Lucifer connection, but some of them claim that he is redeeming himself, and that we should let him get that chance. Personally, I would consider that, if not for the sole reason to end this War of the Gods, which has lasted millions, if not billions, or years, so we humans can get released from our electronic prison and start living a cosmic life. In addition, by ending the war, it would free many other beings in the Heavens, too.

The crimes that have been committed over the eons here on Gaia are horrendous, and it would certainly be understandable if such an “amnesty” would not be accepted—regardless if such an acceptance came from we humans, or the Orion Council. I am only talking for myself now—I can’t speak for mankind in its entirety—and if people get educated on the subjects I have been addressing, they may judge differently than I do.

The Orion Council already spoke on the matter a very long time ago and accepted a redemption from Lucifer. So far, so good, but there is also where it stops. Lucifer has showed no interest whatsoever to redeem himself over the long eons. Instead, he has made matters worse by conquering worlds and stars with the help from his Draco minions and others and enslaved the populations. Neither has he showed any attempts to give up his master-slave relationship with mankind. The Queen of the Stars is still waiting for him to come to his senses, but even she is starting to get impatient, to say the least.

In his jealousy, Lucifer has built his own empires throughout the Milky Way Galaxy, where the one consisting of the asterisms and stars Ursa Minor, Spica, and Alpha Draconis is only one in a series of smaller empires. The intention is quite obviously to supersede Orion and create the greatest empire in the Milky Way Galaxy.

Still, he must know better. The Orion Empire expands far beyond the Milky Way Galaxy, in which we live. It includes many star systems and star constellations in our neighbor, the Andromeda Galaxy, approximately 2.2 million light-years away from the Milky Way, and whole clusters of galaxies farther out and even reaches into other universes, totally separated from ours. The Empire of the Queen of the Stars goes beyond what humans can comprehend. How can Lucifer even in his wildest dreams think he can beat that? And then, what? Is he going to declare war against Orion?

Yes, that’s exactly what he is planning to do. He wants it all, and he still wants more. There is no such barrier for Lucifer where he may say, “OK, that’s enough!”

Obviously, this being is delusional in many ways. He may be brilliant, but his brilliance has also made him blind. Things that we humans can quite easily see—such as what I just mentioned—he can't envision. But on the flipside, he is not so different from humans—his anger and his rage are blinding him, and he refuses to see failure as an option. He is fighting a war he is bound to lose—there is no way for him to come out of it as the victor. He may win a battle here and there, which he has, but the war is already lost. The questions are, when will it all be over, and what will it take to get to that point?

An obvious question arises from this information, however—a question I know that many readers have asked themselves. I have addressed it before, but in the scheme of things, I'd like to bring it up again. The question is, if the Orion Empire is that vast and powerful and Lucifer is “nothing” in comparison, why hasn't he been taken out a million years ago, before he even had the chance to take over planet Gaia?

This is a much more complicated question than it may seem to be. Of course, guerilla warfare comes to mind. Nations in the past have lost against rebels who were using guerilla warfare, so that's nothing new. Although Lucifer can never win, he can drag it out for eons by using this kind of warfare. Still, I don't think that's enough to hold the Orion Empire back. It has to be more “tricky” than that, and this is where using star races as “shields” come into play. Lucifer simply hides behind the races he has enslaved and doesn't hesitate to slaughter them if his life or his freedom are at stake.

Therefore, he takes advantage of other's compassion. The Council has hesitated for a very long time, not wanting innocent star races to be used—sometimes perhaps without their knowledge, but mostly, they have no choice. Still, on occasion, the Empire has felt forced to interfere regardless, and innocent lives have been taken in the process. Also, when it comes to Earth, it's been pretty close more than once that the Council has voted for our annihilation in order to get to Lucifer—the last time that it occurred was just a few years ago, according to some. Before that, it was the Deluge. Our problem is that the gods are once again considering interference.

If this occurs, what would it mean for humanity? Well, it's quite obvious. Mankind is almost totally ignorant of the existence of these gods in the first place, and if an Orion armada would storm into our solar system, it wouldn't be a 3-D armada anyway, and we wouldn't even know that they were coming until the war was upon us. The Orions would never kill innocent humans if they could avoid it, but En.ki and the Global Elite would. They would use us as shields, and the Orions would have to kill us to get to the rebels.

I think that the first thing we would notice, in case the Orion fleet took everyone—including the Global Elite—by surprise, would be that worldwide military would be mobilized immediately. People would see military on the street worldwide, but no news about what was occurring. Total confusion would follow—everybody would wonder what was going on and demand an explanation. Martial Law would be declared. Much would be done outside the scope of the military handbook because at this point, En.ki wouldn't care if he followed the rulebook or not.

Only a few people on the planet would understand what was going on. I'm sure En.ki has planned what to do if something like this occurred, and I'm not a military strategist, so I can only guess.

An army of supersoldiers are already trained for emergency situations, and they would do what they were told, regardless of what the orders were, as long as the orders came from the "right place". En.ki would mobilize this army, ready to kill off human citizens—most possibly whole cities would be nuked if necessary. This Supersoldier army is also trained to be interdimensional and multidimensional soldiers. They would be our intermediary, able to nanotravel with help from technology (the AIF does not want them to nanotravel without being under the control of the AIF).

The main confusion would occur because the Orions are interdimensional and wouldn't come here in human bodies. To us, they would be invisible, vibrating on a much higher frequency than any of us. It would be like fighting ghosts—literally—they would probably bleed through and then disappear in a whirlwind. There would be weather changes, such as earthquakes, tsunamis, tornadoes, huge storms, and other anomalies.

The Orions would never harm humans if they could avoid it, but in such a hypothetical war, humans would be sacrificed by the millions, perhaps billions. En.ki would probably contact the Orion fleet and threaten them, saying that if they did not withdraw, he would start nuking major cities on Earth, starting with New York or Tokyo.

Soon enough, he would realize that the Orion fleet meant business, and as soon as the armada progressed further, En.ki would execute his threat and have one of the major cities nuked, with millions of people killed.

After that, everything would go downhill. The AIF that is stationed on Earth, including En.ki, would do everything they could to flee, while the military continued bombing cities and targeting spaceships interdimensionally.

Would the Orions even try to reach the human population? Yes, I'm sure they would. If there was a chance to get people out of here, they would do it, regardless of how few people could be saved. A TV announcement would hardly do it because even if people eventually would believe that an alien force was closing in on Earth, no one would know who the friend was and who the enemy was. This would be the exact confusion that would benefit En.ki the best, but not the Orions, nor mankind. The chance would be great that humans would start fighting humans, taking side in the battle without even knowing whose side is what.

Unless En.ki has thought this through down to the smallest electron, he and his minions would hardly escape. The Orion armada would most certainly have blocked all the exits from the solar system, down to the subquantum levels. En.ki and the rebellious aquatic Bird Tribe would be annihilated one by one, having their Avatars blown to pieces, and it would be over. Perhaps that would take care of the problem once and for all on a cosmic level, but what would happen to Mother Gaia and the human race? Very few, if any, would survive. These gods, as we know, have technology to blow up planets, regardless of size. As a final revenge, I wouldn't be surprised if En.ki blew our planet to pieces, just before he was annihilated. He would think, "What do I have to lose? After all, it would be the ultimate revenge!"

This is one case scenario, but a very scary one! Nevertheless, I think the readers can imagine that this could actually happen, and that it even is likely, unless we do something. We can't hide our heads in the sand anymore, thinking that the less we know, the better. If we do, we contribute to our own destruction. It's time to stand up against this insanity and simply not agree to be slaves anymore—as we have discussed in previous levels of learning. Most of the "spiritual community" doesn't even understand to which degree we actually create our own reality—very few people have any real grasp of it. However, before this level is completed, I hope the readers will have a good picture of it. I will do my best to share my own insights on this, and you can see if it works for you.

If Lucifer were really trying to redeem himself, he would not use his own lineage—his human-Orion hybrids—to continue this master-slave situation on Gaia. He would take down the Grid and open the Saturn stargate. He would stop these suppressive reincarnation cycles and start helping those in need on this planet, in order to rectify what he has done. Instead, what do we see? We see a Global Elite, who desperately try to hang on to their power, doing what it takes to maintain global dominance. That is not what I call redemption.

III. En.ki's Interactions with the Orion Council

We all know the story by now. The AIF took an existing, already evolved race, manipulated and genetically engineered its genes, left a big chunk of the DNA dormant, and after a lot of experimenting over a very long time period, they came up with the first human slave race that they were quite satisfied with.

This new hybrid race replaced the alien workers, who were in cahoots with Lucifer. This was something that was not only morally or ethically incorrect, but also against Orion law. Queen Nin, Khan En.lil and Prince Ninurta had already lost the original Living Library to Lord En.ki, but when it became known in the Pantheon that he was in the process of creating a hybrid slave race by manipulating DNA of existing, evolving beings on an evolving planet, they did what they could to interact.

According to the Sumerian tablets, in Sitchin's translation, Khan En.lil and Prince Ninurta were the ones who were most against genetic manipulation, contrary to what many people think.

Enlil objected to Enki's plan. Don't create a Nibiran/Apeman slave class here on Earth, Enlil reminded Enki, "On our planet [Nibiru], slavery has long ago been abolished, tools are slaves, not other beings."

Ninurta added that to get gold better, Enki should make machines, not slaves.<sup>411</sup>

To this, En.ki responds, followed by Khan En.lil's comment:

"Earthlings we create," Enki replied, "shall helpers, not slaves, be."

Enlil still protested: "To clone hybrid beings is in The Rules Of Planet Journeys forbidden."<sup>412</sup>

En.ki got the last word:

Enki responded, "a new species create we shall not; the Apeman of Earth [Homo Erectus] is in his fashioning essence [genotype] as we of Nibiru [Homo Sapiens, Sapiens] are. Our ancestor the Apeman is; into us he evolves. Quicken Apeman shall we, speed him but some millions of years to what has only always been his destiny."<sup>413</sup>

If we put together the whole drama and what has happened here on Earth since the AIF took over, the above conversation makes total sense, whether the translation comes from Sitchin or somebody else. “En.lil” and his son, Prince En.lil/Ninurta, did not want any tampering done with their creation. It is obvious that this planet was a Living Library and an Experiment from the beginning and somebody else’s property—not En.ki’s. All along, we humans, who have looked into the old Sumerian story, have believed in the lie that “En.lil” was the bad guy who tortured and dominated mankind, while En.ki was the being with a “heart.” This is simply not so—and can’t be—because Khan En.lil and his son, Ninurta, were not even here at the same time as En.ki and his cohorts. The records were manipulated during the Babylonian Empire. The scribes only wrote down what they were told.

Fig. 7. A member of the Bird Tribe (left) and En.ki (right)— Lucifer and his representative in a Council Meeting.

The real story is there, fortunately—because, once upon a time, it was written down as well and brought forth orally from generation to generation. This means that En.ki and his son could not just make things up as they wished. First, they had to destroy as many original records as possible (many were destroyed when the Library of Alexandria was put on fire) and then rewrite history in a way so that it didn’t totally conflict with the real story behind the cover stories—the changes had to happen slowly. In these papers, I am trying to show the readers that it is possible to still find the truth, but one has to be very persistent and willing to deal with whatever comes up, regardless if it is uncomfortable or contradicts the “mainstream” way of looking at things. The person who is willing to do this can’t have any preconceptions that he or she refuses to let go of, if and when necessary. It’s a process, and it’s an opening of new neuropathways and chakras.

Queen Nin, Khan En.lil, and Prince Ninurta have had their names and characters pretty much destroyed by the AIF, thus being blamed for most of the crimes that were done by En.ki and those who were conspiring with him. To discover this was a shock to me because to begin with, I was no different from anybody else—I had bought the false stories as did most people. When I discovered what really happened—or as close as possible to what happened—I felt a moment of loneliness, thinking that once I know this, I can’t go back. Not many people at this moment would support my hypothesis, so I’d better back it up as best as I can.

Anyway, the fact remains—despite what many people have believed so far, “En.lil” had nothing to do with most of the things that have happened on Earth over the last 500,000 years. There is one exception, however, and that is the Flood—the Deluge that happened circa 11,000 BC. The whole Orion Council was involved in the biblical cataclysm, but that’s something we will discuss in an upcoming paper. Furthermore, most of the internal fighting that supposedly was going on between the En.lil and En.ki clans, written in a partly narrative form by Sitchin in his “Earth Chronicles,” did not happen, either, the way it was described. How could it, when what we know as the “En.lil clan” wasn’t even here? What is true, however, is that there is a war between the clans which has been ongoing since Lucifer’s Rebellion, but most of it was not played out here on Earth! The fact that En.ki was in bad standing with the Orion Empire did or does not stop him from travelling the Universe and at times meeting with family members and Council Meetings. These gatherings are, of course, not in a friendly manner and are reflected in the old records, although these conflicts have to a large degree been re-transcribed so that it appears that they all happened here on Earth.

IV. Our Inherited Sexual Aberrations and Obsession for Gold and Precious Stones

We have some serious problems here on Earth, and the police force, social workers, and psychiatrists would certainly agree with me.

Humans have sexual problems that can be so severe that they hurt others for life or even kill their sexual victims. There are rapes, which is one of the optimal vicious acts to be in control of another being—more so than enjoying the sex act itself because the act is just a way of showing domination. In a relationship, the criminal male rapes his girlfriend after a verbal fight, just to show who is in charge. The rapist on the street is someone who is suffering from feeling no self-value—he's at the bottom of the totem pole and doesn't even yet know how to be a human. Therefore, in desperation to gain control over someone and hopefully not feel so worthless (in his own eyes), he rapes somebody.

Then we have the pedophile. He has an obsession to rape somebody who may be as young as a baby up until the girl or boy reaches puberty—then, in most cases, the rape stops (but not always).

Many rapists, whether they rape adults or children, rape both sexes. Like I said—it's not about sex, it's about control—and then it doesn't matter to those sick people which gender the victim is (note: I use males overall here, as if it is only males who commit these crimes. This is not true, although they are in the majority. There are women who are just as bad—some of them are even more violent than men are).

Did you know that rape case statistics indicate that this crime has plummeted since the 1970s? Hence, there are fewer rapes being reported today than 40-45 years ago!<sup>414</sup> I find this quite interesting. First, we should celebrate the fact that fewer people became victims!—however, there is another side to this. In the 1960s and 1970s, the talk about the Anunnaki and the “Return of the Gods” was starting to create its impact on the Western society, at least, and that's where these statistics come from. Can it be that certain people got “restimulated” by this information, and their “godly genes” started “reminding” some people about how it was in ancient times, so these aberrations began to spread in the mass consciousness? After all, we do have the genes of the gods!

On the slightly brighter side—many people also have an obsession for gold and precious stones. They love gold and diamonds but may not know exactly why. If you ask a female, she may answer that she thinks they are pretty and make her attractive, while a man says that to wear gold watches, gold bracelets, and gold necklaces are symbols for wealth, power, and control. Either way, owning precious stones does something to the person—in a minor or major way, these stones change the personality of the owner.

We also love to give each other golden rings or rings with diamonds when we get married, and we exchange these rings on the Wedding Day. Why do we do that? Very few people know that this is coming from the gods. “I give you this ring, and in exchange, I own you!” This is exactly what the gods did to each other, or to humans, so we got this habit from them.<sup>415</sup> I don't mean that married couples should now flush down their rings in order not to own each other, but it's something to think of—in subtle ways, these habits remind these energies to come alive again and can have at least a minor impact, unless the couple are aware of it and tell each other that the ring for them means something else. Don't say "bond" because that ties you to each other, and soon it will trigger feelings of guilt and other unwanted emotions. Couples who are still wearing rings could come up with a new meaning for this symbol, e.g. making it a sign for an enormous amount of love for each other. Just be careful so this doesn't create a "must" so that at moments when you don't feel great love for your partner you feel guilty. You can see how this can tie people to each other for all the wrong reasons. Instead, marry without rings, if we are to marry at all. However, that is for another time—I have rocked the boat enough already.

We have all heard how the gods came down here to mine gold, precious stones, tin, and other things. This was not their main reason, but it is still a common thing in the Universe. Trading between star systems is commonplace. The AIF, after Tiamat was struck and split into becoming the asteroid belt, was almost immediately there to mine gold and precious stones. All moons and smaller planets in our solar system have been and are currently being mined for different minerals by the AIF, and they don't want any snooping humans out in space to see what they are doing because the evidence of their intrusion is everywhere.

If it weren't so serious, I would think it almost amusing to see how we mimic the gods. When criminals are caught, we put them in prison and more so in the past than we do now — perhaps, we used to put the criminals on hard labor. We often see movies in which people in overalls are hacking stones apart, all trapped in chains with prison guards watching over them, so no one gets too lazy. This is nothing new. We discussed the Sirius system previously, and the prisoners who were imprisoned in the Dark Star. They, too, like many other criminals out there in the Universe, have to do hard labor when they are in prison. Often, it is related to the damage they have done. If they have destroyed something, they simply have to restore it while they are serving "time." In the Sirius system, particularly, there are apparently planets with a shorter lifespan that need to be mined while it's still time, and this is a common job for prisoners—they are sent there from many star systems in this sector of the Galaxy. It's almost like "community service," where the criminals learn the hard way to take responsibility for their actions.

Obviously, we have inherited the DNA of the gods, and we are now dramatizing their own sexual aberrations and other obsessions, without even being aware that we are doing it. Remember that the gods are living a very long time—some say it's almost eternal. We live 60-90 years, approximately, which is nothing compared to them—a blink of an eye, more or less. Once we have started learning something, we die, reincarnate, and forget almost everything we have learned—we need to start all over again. The Pleiadians say that this is one reason why so many star races want to incarnate here—they evolve faster and learn more by living a shorter lifespan and then forget<sup>416</sup>, until the day we leave the trap and, hopefully, can put it all together. The hypothesis states that if we are forced to learn under harsh circumstances, we learn faster than we do if we have "eternal" life, in which not much new happens, and we don't learn very much even in millions of years. This is why, according to the Pleiadians, many star beings out there may know a lot more than we do, but they are actually less evolved—especially spiritually and emotionally.

Nonetheless, the reason the gods did not want us to eat from the Tree of Life was because they could see the consequences. It was not only that they felt threatened by a hybrid race that would "become like them" —it was also because they didn't want an overpopulated planet. The first humans that En.ki and Isis created, who couldn't reproduce, had a much longer lifespan—hypothetically—but they worked themselves to death at a young age anyway, so they couldn't enjoy their potentially long lifespan. However, when mankind became able to reproduce, the gods understood immediately that they would be very hard to control if they were allowed to live thousands of years. In addition, the longer they lived, the more they would be able to discover. This is the main reason why they left so much of our DNA dormant. “Only let the humans know what they need to know in order to help us,” was the motto.

The gods, however, from living so long, probably got bored after a while and started experimenting in areas that were basically taboo—such as “perverted” sex and other things. This idea, again, comes from the Pleiadians in one of their Summer 2013 lectures, and even if this may have contributed, I believe there was more than that behind it. Violent sex and violence in general toward another being—whether it’s in an act of war or in peace times—is an attempt to control the other being.

We already know that the gods were very sexual beings—some more than others—and they typically had sex with almost any woman they got their eyes on, but let’s make a list over the abnormalities the gods were involved in—things they thought of as quite normal, apparently:

- Rape of women (and sometimes men)
- Violent sex
- Tantric sex
- Pedophilia
- Parent having sex with daughter or son, creating offspring
- Grandparent, or great grandparent, having sex with granddaughter, or great granddaughter or great grandson—creating offspring
- Polygamy
- Creating a harem, where the women were no better than sex slaves and servants to the males.
- Building whorehouses.
- Kinky sex in general (such as anal sex, sex including feces, blood, and urine, etc.)
- Sadomasochism, which became “official” with the AIF lackey, Marquis de Sade, in the 1700s.<sup>417</sup>

These are just a few of the different sexual practices that we have inherited from the gods through our DNA. Some of these practices were basically done for the “pleasure” of the god, while others were for pure domination. However, there were some practices, such as Tantric sex, which the gods wanted humans to participate in, as we have mentioned earlier. When the female, in particular, got her orgasms, the energy found its way right into the KHAA and the inner sanctuaries of the Orion Empire. The AIF certainly fed on this and stored much of the energy for themselves.

---

Now, what about gold and precious stones? Are star being women also fond of gold, diamonds, and other precious stones and metals, just like human women are? In a sense, I think they are—we can see both the Orion hybrid women, sitting on their thrones, and the pure blood AIF wearing necklaces, earrings, “third eye” stones, etc. That was not at all unusual, but to wear these things for pure looks was again not the main purpose with them.

Gold is a great insulator and conductor and was definitely used for that—something we humans are well aware of, too. Gold is also used to enhance life. The readers who read Level I may remember that the gods were snorting gold as if it were cocaine, and they actually got addicted to it, according to Dr. A.R. Bordon. For them, it is supposedly a great life enhancer—if it would work as well for us is questionable—especially with our dormant DNA. However, some people who have been very sick, such as those with bad arthritis, say they benefit a lot from taking monoatomic gold. This could be the case, but will these people also enhance their lives? That remains to be seen.

Gold in the sense of a life enhancer has been a little overrated on the Internet the last decade or so, as more and more websites have promoted the “nectar of the Gods” and the “Secret to the Tree of Life.” This is nonsense, in my opinion. The real life enhancer for the gods is blood! Menstrual blood is said to do the trick to some extent (perhaps also for us humans), but those gods who are fortunate enough to come across S-MA or SOMA, know that it is the real Elixir of the Gods! I discussed this in detail in Level II and how the Orion scientists managed to mix the blood of the Queen (she is cold-blooded, due to being of a dragon-reptilian race) with other substances. This elixir could enhance her own physical existence with millions of years, and when the scientists even managed to create a similar substance for warm-blooded beings, other star beings could enjoy immortality. In Hinduism, this “drink” is called amrita<sup>418</sup>. This will be discussed even more in the Fifth Level of Learning, which is estimated to be published sometime during 2014-2015.

Not all beings in the Universe have access to the Tree of Life and the S-MA<sup>419</sup>, but members of the Orion Royal Family have it, of course, and others may receive it when they deserve it—perhaps after having done something outstanding for the Empire, or in general. It seems, however, as if the gods have to use gold as well in order to keep their bodies young. One hypothesis is that the elixir gives them a very long lifespan, while the gold may make their bodies in constant good shape, even at an advanced age. This is purely my own guess, that's all.

Precious stones and crystals, in particular,, are used for many things — they can be communication devices, store memories, and as we have seen in the case of the “Tablets of Destinies” in a previous paper, they can also apparently be used as weapons and memory banks for the entire universe. There are many so-called Mes in the possession of the gods, and in some respect, they were probably used similarly to how we use our cell phones, iPads, and other smaller devices that many people carry with them on a daily basis — devices we look upon as totally natural. Still, a time traveler, from let's say 1985, would be totally stunned if he or she would enter today's reality and see all these people walking down the street, totally absorbed in these little devices. Unfortunately, regardless of how “convenient” or “fun” these devices may be in the hands of the owners, they are the beginning of the “Machine Kingdom.”<sup>420</sup>

V. Two Versions of Homo Sapiens Sapiens—It's all in the Blood!

I've gone through the creation story a couple of times before in my papers (Level I and II), so I am not going to repeat myself here — I just want to present an update.

En.ki and Isis were the two main characters who created the early Homo sapiens and all the abominable experiments that went along with it. Eventually, they mixed En.ki's genes with ape women — in this case, Homo Erectus, who were not as smart and advanced as the Neanderthals. After experiments back and forth, they also used the Namlú'u genes (some say they were the equivalent with the Neanderthals, who were much more spiritual and advanced than our modern science want to acknowledge), which in this case also included DNA coming directly from the Mother Goddess. This mix was then inserted into Isis' womb, and she gave birth to the first humans.

Eventually, Isis' body became too worn out to be used as a breeding machine, and other AIF females were used for the process. DNA were made dormant, so that the exact IQ could be established, and the lifespan they wished for the new hybrid race was limited. This is the so-called “Abel bloodline,” which

<sup>420</sup> For much more on the Machine Kingdom, see my previous work. If you are not familiar with the term, please read up on Level II, III, and the e-book, “Beyond 2012 — A Handbook for the New Era”. They can all be downloaded from my website, <http://wespenre.com>.

most people on Earth originate from—more or less. I say “more or less” because with time, there were certain changes made to our DNA, using other star beings, and there were some additions and subtractions happening on that level.

Although, in general, what they created were our first ancestors.

Then, I have talked some about a second bloodline, who became En.ki’s Minions—today’s Global Elite, sometimes called the Illuminati. These people are very different than we are in regards to their DNA. En.ki wanted to create a bloodline that was a lot smarter than the regular human slave worker, so he used the Namlú’u genes and mixed them with his own DNA, thus creating a much “purer” hybrid race. These became the Ruler Class, known as Kings, Queens, Pharaohs, Caesars, Tsars, Presidents, Dictators, and more. Behind the scenes, but still very much in charge, we have the “Money Lenders,” or the “International Bankers,” as they are called today. We also have the CEOs of Industry and Trade, Priests, High Priests—in some cases Priestesses and High Priestesses--Media Owners, people sitting on the Boards of Education, and so on. Above all these people, we have the Secret Elite, whom nobody, except the very few, even know the names of. They are super-rich—much richer than any other human on this planet, and still they are never mentioned in Forbes. They prefer to be totally anonymous and answer only to the gods themselves. On the top of the pyramid of any secret society, we have Lucifer himself, regardless of what offended members may say about that.

This is the Cain bloodline, the “Serpent line,” or the “Holy Grail,” as researchers, such as Sir Laurence Gardner, now deceased, put it. The Cain bloodline is also the “Jesus bloodline” that so many people speculate about. Did Jesus get married? Of course he did—many times. However, he may or may not have married more than once as his incarnation as Jesus Christ, but as the immortal being he is, he has been married over and over and had thousands upon thousands of lovers. We are talking about Lucifer, of course, then more known as Ea. Jesus and Lucifer are one and the same—syncretism at play again.

In other words, Gardner is correct in the sense that there is a hidden, “Holy Grail” bloodline, which the Elite want to keep as pure as they possibly can. Of course, many of these Elite members have bastard offspring, but they were more or less “cast out” and created their own watered-down bloodlines all over the world. Therefore, we have the Morgans, the Buchanans and the Bauers, etc. amongst regular people as well, although those names are Elite bloodlines. Some of these people claim family ties to the super-rich Elite, and on some level, the ties are there, but they would hardly ever be acknowledged by the real Elite—the “bastard” bloodlines are too watered-down to be useful. Therefore, these people are often as much slaves in the eyes of the Elite as those whose names are Anderson or Taylor.

We know that the reason the Elite need to inbreed is because if their bloodlines are not pure enough, they can't host an interdimensional being such as En.ki and the AIF. We also highly suspect that many of the Global Elite people have been taken over by the AIF already and are now not only remotely run by them, but more directly so. As we discussed in an earlier paper, many souls, whom En.ki managed to release from the Sirian prison—the Dark Star—are now inhabiting human bodies here on Earth, but more are waiting to be released when a new chance arises (if ever).

Mankind, in general, is considered coming from the line of Seth, who also had the mix of Namlú'u blood in him. Not only that—when the Luciferians descended in the solar system and fought off Prince Ninurta and his team, Lucifer managed to wound Ninurta and stole his blood and sampled it. Later on, when Homo sapiens sapiens were created, Ninurta's blood was used as well.

The Bible discusses how Cain slaughtered his brother Abel. This story has many layers to it and also indicates the end of the Namlú'u bloodline, which "God" (En.ki) didn't care for. Hence, the Abel line, as I see it, was destroyed symbolically when En.ki created the Cain line (the Kings that had the "Divine Right to Rule"), and the Cain line took over the "Divine" role. Metaphorically, Cain "slaughtered" Abel, whose bloodline disappeared from Gaia.

The story about how the Cain line became the Jesus line instead of the Seth line has also been told and thoroughly researched by Sir Laurence Gardner.<sup>421</sup>

Another interesting note comes from author and researcher Peter R. Farley, in his free e-book, Where Were You Before the Tree of Life (The Experiment—the True History of the Darkness and of the Light), where much of his information is channeled from "The Nine"—something Farley himself admitted. We have in Level IV been talking a lot about the Bird Tribe as being associated with Lucifer's rebels. The Nine mentions something very similar when it comes to En.ki's experiments, which eventually led up to the creation of mankind.

"Enki was, in fact, able to create his own version of evil spirits—called Enkum—"part human, part animal"—extensions of his research involving the creation of man. These were warrior like beings with the bodies of cave birds. The Anunnaki were often said to wear bird masks, great wings, even bird claws, much like the later gods in Egypt. Lilith, “she of the night” and the howler,” said to be Adam’s first mate, had wings and was always portrayed with owls.<sup>422</sup>

Almost wherever we look in regards to En.ki’s people depicted in the old records, we’re bound to find some reference to birds, whether it’s like Peter Farley mentions here, or it could be human-like figures with bird heads, associations to vultures, eagles, hawks, ibises, and more. All of this is referring back to the Bird Tribe of Orion. Other depictions we see are also those of aquatic beings, such as men with fish heads or fish torsos. Then there are the reptilian artifacts, which, foremost, equate with those from Alpha Draconis, who are not to be confused with the primordial Dragons, who are the race that created the Universe and the primordial “womankind,” whom I call the Namlú’u.

It’s very important to understand that it’s not the “Grail Bloodline” — the Cain bloodline, which became En.ki’s Minions that is significant to the Luciferians. It’s the Seth bloodline that is important to them — the Seth bloodline being the “common man.” Much attention has been put on the Cain bloodline, which is fine because we need to know about them, but it’s easy to put these people on a pedestal, making them more significant and “godlike” than we are. Remember that this is not the case. We are the god(dess)like ones — the ones with the Fire of the Mother Goddess. Although many of us may be “born out of the Sun,” spirit-wise, this whole solar system was created by Mother Goddess and given as a “gift” to her son, Ninurta, so he could create in it and expand the Living Library the way the Goddess had intended it. En.ki has certainly also “helped” expanding the Living Library, but the “essence” of it — the real “spirit” and the original meaning how it should be done got lost when the Patriarchal Luciferians arrived. The entire brilliant idea with the Living Library and a world of compassion and love was destroyed.

En.ki’s minions have bodies that are not at all as “Divine” as ours are, but En.ki still created them that way to have his “signature” on them. Also, the spirits that inhabit them are not of this solar system. The members of the Global Elite are a mess. We, perhaps, think of humans being a mess — overworked, manipulated, traumatized, etc. This may be so, but the people of the Elite don’t sleep at night — their bodies are sick, and their minds are always worrying: “Am I pleasing my Masters enough? Am I doing things right, or will they replace me? Will they kill me? Set me up?” That is the real day in the life of the Elite. Therefore, don’t think for a moment that they are senior to us in any way. I’m so very happy I am not one of them. They may look down on us because right now they believe they are the ones who have power, but deep within, they envy us for who we are and for what our true destiny is (or is meant to be). They wish they were us!

VI. How En.ki Planted Criminal Souls in Human Bodies, and more on the Human Star Race

Here is another thing I have found out from an “impeccable source,” as they are usually called in the news media. When some star races out there in the Universe discovered what Lucifer had done here on Earth, they asked him if the criminals in their star systems could be metaphysically transferred to Earth and forced into human bodies. These star races are also in opposition to the Orion Empire for unknown reasons and have taken Lucifer’s side. In other words, they were asking for permission to transfer the souls of executed or dead criminals in their star systems over to us and let them get trapped in Lucifer’s reincarnation cycle. Many times, Lucifer gave his permission!

This is more shocking than it may sound at a first read. We can compare it with what the English did when Australia was being populated with people from outside the continent. They used the new continent as a dump-off for criminals from the British Islands, so Australia became a huge prison camp—guards included. With time, Australia generally became just as civilized as any other place on the Earth, but I’m not sure that the same thing happened when they started dumping criminal souls from other star systems here on Earth.

This has gone on for quite a long time, but we can see how many criminals over history have stood out because of their horrific crimes. One must expect that at least some—if not a majority—of these criminals are originally from other star systems.

Of course, I’m sure there are a few—a very few—people here on Gaia, who basically are not from Earth but have managed to sneak in here “by mistake” when the AIF had their guard down or there was a hole in the Grid. This happens, and some of these souls may have come here in order to help humanity out in this mess, but most souls on this planet belong to this particular solar system and have always belonged here. Then we have a significant number of Namlú’u souls trapped here as well, whose souls are from Orion and some Vulcans from Lyra, but the majority of souls that inhabit human bodies of the Abel bloodline are younger souls who were born in this solar system, unless they were transported here as criminals.

The vast majority of humans are children of our own Sun, and at the time when Lucifer created his colony here in Ar-i-du, he also trapped many young, playful, but innocent souls, who were hovering around Mother Gaia to see what was going on. The story states that the AIF even has a “soul catcher,” which works almost like a vacuum cleaner but which specializes in sucking in souls who they can use to enliven the slave bodies that are created here on our planet continuously through the sexual reproduction system. Therefore, the majority of souls have evolved here in our solar system, but got trapped by the AIF at one time or another. People often wonder where all the souls come from when there are more and more bodies being born on the planet—this is part of the answer. However, during the nanosecond, there were billions of souls hovering around Earth to participate in that speed-up process, in order to evolve more quickly. You know this already, but you who read this can consider yourself lucky to have lived during the nanosecond, regardless of everything else that may be wrong with this planet. It has helped your soul evolve!

Another thing I’ve found out is that the Grid, as we know it through my papers, was not set up until after the Deluge, about 13,000 years ago. The same is true for the recycling trap, including the “tunnel of light” and the “Between Lives Area.” Before that, souls who had been attached to a manipulated human body often came back due to implants and pictures that stuck in the mind of the soul, even without the Afterlife Implant Stations. However, there were also many souls who decided to leave after a lifetime here on Earth and were permitted to do so. Lucifer had no problems with finding souls. After the Flood, En.ki had to make a “closed system” out of Ar-i-du, and Earth in particular, in order to protect himself more carefully because of increased tension between himself and his Minions, versus the Orion Empire on the other end. This is when he created the Grid and changed our frequency—Earth became denser. In addition, the Saturn stargate became more heavily monitored, and it was next to impossible to find Earth to begin with due to its weird frequency in the electromagnetic spectrum and because the stargates were closed to outsiders—even the one in the Sun—Earth became considered a “locked-in system”.

VII. The Luciferians Own “En.lil”

I think what has shocked me the most from having researched this level of learning is to learn how En.ki and his Luciferian Minions have altered the ancient scriptures so that they can accommodate their own agenda. Cleverly, they have taken on the roles of other gods and goddesses in the Pantheon and changed history by changing the characteristics of the beings they have taken on.

One such shocking example is that of En.lil. Just as everybody else, little did I know and understand about this character, although I thought I knew enough about him to be able to judge him. Not so.

Interestingly enough, I did know that En.lil, just as En.ki, is just a title and not a name. However, I didn't realize that this title could apply to more than one person to begin with. Now I understand that there are many en.lil's. One of them is the King of Orion, another is the son of the King of Orion (Prince Ninurta), and a third one is Lord En.ki himself, who took on that title without earning it and started acting in the name of the King of Orion and his brother, the Prince. Every so often, he also mixed the two because he really just wanted us to think that there is one En.lil, and that En.lil is "bad."

This is not an attempt to glorify the real En.lils—not at all. They, too, have their shortcomings, just like everybody else, but I always like to look at beings' intentions—are they basically good, or are they working to create evil? When I look at the King and the Prince, I see two warriors, just as I see a lot of other things in them. The Orion Empire is constantly attacked by those who want the power that such an empire automatically signifies. In the distant past, just as I explained in Level II, the Orions were a warrior race, and the Queen was a warrior queen—a conqueror. This was a part of the evolution of that kind of star race. Remember that the Queen of the Stars is a personification, a soul fragment, or an incarnation, of Mother Goddess, just as Mother Gaia is another one. This whole concept can be confusing and very hard for us humans to comprehend, so it is explained to us in very simple terms. I have brought this up elsewhere but would like to recap in order for us all to grasp the concept—at least on the most simplistic level.

The Universe is the creation of a Mother Goddess, who is in everything that is—she is what metaphysics calls "Source," "First Source," or "All That Is." The only difference is that I have showed evidence that the Universe is feminine in nature and that God is feminine and not masculine or neuter. Other than that, there is no difference between what I teach and what other metaphysical researchers teach in that respect.

I also agree with most other researchers that at one point, Source (the Goddess) became "bored" and "lonely" and wanted to explore herself to learn more about herself. Hence, she created the Universes, which are enormous holograms in which separated soul fragments of herself are allowed to go out and create. You and I are two such soul fragments. The Goddess created us as different individuals so we could create all different things that are possible in order for the Goddess to learn everything there is about herself from different viewpoints in different dimensions.

With time, the Goddess wanted to participate in more intimate ways, so she “inserted” herself in different places in this universe and others. One of these “insertions” is her life as the Queen of the Stars—the Orion Queen. As such, she has powers as the Goddess but is also playing the same “game” as others out here. This means she is part of the physical world as well as the metaphysical world, and she interacts with others. In such ways, she is experiencing “good” and “evil” and all different aspects of life. However, her goal is to unite and bring everybody into compassion and love on the highest levels. First, everybody must learn by experience—in certain terms, she also has to learn. I hope this helps you understand a little better how things work. Nevertheless, this is an incredibly simplistic but good way of looking at it.

Khan En.lil (King En.lil) is often referred to as just “An” or “Anu” in the ancient texts. These two terms both mean “Heaven.” Anu is therefore referred to as the “King of Heaven,” and this is where the confusion comes into play. The Goddess as the original Creatrix has been deleted from the old records (but clear references can still be found to her if we really look, and I have showed the readers that), and only “King Anu” has remained. Thus, he has become the King of Creation, the King of the Universe, and the King of the “Anunnaki.” We suddenly have a masculine, patriarchal universe.

Matters become worse when Ninurta, in some instances, also gets merged with his father and is referred to as both Anu and En.lil. Then, Ninurta’s name is changed to En.lil in the records by Marduk in Babylonian times, and we have the scenario that Sitchin and others played out.

Just as in a Shakespeare play, we now have the characters ready, and we just have to write the plot. Marduk and En.ki did that part quite thoroughly, and then we have their false creation—the false picture of reality. With the characters at hand, they now can use any of them for any purposes they want because the original characters, upon which the “Shakespearean play” is based, are not present and can’t object to the script. The actors have free hands!

Therefore, making a long story short, Lucifer walked into Prince En.lil’s (Ninurta’s) Garden of Edin and rapes an “Eve.” Then he abducts another one, steals a “rib” from another, and so it continues. All the time, the blame is put on “En.lil” —in this case Ninurta, whose Garden it was in the first place. Consequently, the story that En.lil should have raped the Eve does not make sense. Then, in the context of things, and as we go along and learn the real story, we can see that there is no doubt about who is the real rapist, and just as a criminal often tends to do, En.ki is then hiding, or backing up, other criminals/rapists and defending them. We have seen that happen, too, in the story I’ve told.

In fact, “En.lil” —both the King and the Prince—were against sexual interaction with womankind, whom the Goddess had created and Prince En.lil as Ninurta had nurtured to such an extent that he managed to create the Golden Age. This is all backed up by evidence, and we can clearly see it if we study Greek mythology, such as that of the Titans and the Olympians —stories that are told in most cultures. Only the names have changed, and the plot is slightly different, but still clearly recognizable.

En.ki/Lucifer is of course Poseidon and Neptune in the Pantheon, and it’s easy to see that Poseidon was an Olympian and not a Titan. Ninurta as Cronos, however, is a Titan. I clearly showed this in a previous paper. The Olympians are the “younger gods” in the sense that they came to Earth later. When they arrived, the Titans were already here. Thus, however we bend and twist this, there is no way we can make En.ki/Poseidon a Titan. Still, he is sometimes addressing himself as Cronos, the Titan, as well! By doing so, he is free to use the Cronos character with the purpose to do evil. These evil deeds are then being automatically blamed on En.lil/Ninurta because people who research the Greek Pantheon see that Cronos was the bad guy. What researchers amazingly haven’t understood is that En.ki/Poseidon can’t be both an Olympian and a Titan simultaneously. In reality, he was an Olympian, but in the rewritten part of the story, he also took on the role as Cronos and gave En.lil a bad name.

The problem is that those who research the old ancient records don’t go back far enough in time to see the connections. If they went back 500,000 years in history, they would find that this was the time when the Titans were defeated by the Olympians. Then, if they looked at the consequences of this, like we have done here in these papers, it would be very obvious who is who and who did what. However, because of the lack of understanding what really happened back then, En.ki has managed to get himself a good name in our alternative history book, while En.lil is the evil one —sometimes even referred to as Satan.

I am not saying that it’s an easy task to put things right —it’s certainly not —and I don’t blame those who have fallen for the rewritten version of alternative history. In order to get the entire picture, it’s not enough to study the ancient cuneiform and other similar resources —we also have to study metaphysics, or we’re hopelessly lost. Even then, it takes time to get it right, and we must allow ourselves to make the mistakes necessary to eventually get the more correct version. I say “more correct” because I think it’s very difficult —maybe next to impossible—to get it totally right. We just have to make sure we create a better and better version of what really happened as we go along.

Another typical example is that of YHWH. Who was he? Many say he was a composite of beings (something that I’ve suggested as well), and most truthseekers are of the opinion that the angry and “insane” version of YHWH was En.lil, while the softer version was En.ki. Some have also suggested that the “bad” YHWH may have been Marduk in combination with En.lil. The result is that En.lil always seems to be connected with the angry, unjust part of this mysterious “god.”

First, it doesn’t make sense that En.lil had anything to do with the biblical YHWH at all because neither Ninurta nor Khan En.lil were even here on Earth. There is plenty of evidence that Prince Ninurta was chased off the planet and had to flee out of the solar system as far back as 500,000 years ago. He is still mentioned in ancient history as being present on Earth long after he was chased off—however, that would of course not make sense. Instead, some of these stories, where Ninurta supposedly was involved, did most likely not happen on Earth, and other stories were simply rewritten records, where En.ki and his cohorts took on the role of Ninurta. These impostors were no fools—they knew what they were doing, and they did it in order to confuse humanity, so that most of us hopefully, never would find out the truth.

Here is an example of what I mean when I say that the En.lil title was taken over by the Patriarchal Luciferians. The following “project team,” which consists of ten researchers, who have looked into the Sumerian Pantheon, did a good job at seeing through quite a few lies, although I am certainly not in agreement with all of it. They also had six professors who assisted them in the project, which doesn’t have a specific name, other than that they are listing and explaining “Ancient Mesopotamian Gods and Goddesses.”<sup>423</sup>

In the first millennium the great gods Aššur, Marduk and Nabu were supreme, but Enlil's power was clearly remembered for even they were referred to as the "Assyrian Enlil" or the "Enlil of the gods" (Edzard 1965: 61).<sup>424</sup>

Most people wouldn’t reflect on this statement because they don’t have the entire story, but here it clearly says that Marduk and his son took on the title “En.lil.” According to their research, which in this case corresponds with mine, “En.lil” is definitely a title. However, the way it works in the Heavens, you just don’t take on such a title without the consent from those who have the authority to give out such titles. Obviously, no one belonging to the Patriarchal Regime had, or has, such authority. They simply created their own laws and regulations.

Consequently, if Ninurta and Khan En.lil were not even present here on Earth, who then was YHWH? Well, we probably only have two alternatives remaining—En.ki and Marduk! Now, was YHWH a composite of both of them, then, or was he one of them? Let's take a look at that, once and for all.

VIII. Another Look at the Biblical YHWH

The “Great Deception” has a lot to do with how Marduk and his father rewrote the records, not that they did it. They figured out how to do it most efficiently because they had seen over due time that humanity, despite how they'd been manipulated, still had a lot of trust for people and things—contrary to the gods themselves, who barely trusted anybody, we humans decide to keep trusting until we get blindsided. We, too, become more suspicious the more we are deceived, but we have a hard time giving up that trust in our hearts. In the matter of the gods, it hasn't served us very well, but in general, it's a very noble and good thing—if we only could use trust in conjunction with more discernment, we would be better off.

When I realized that YHWH could not be En.lil, regardless how I bent and twisted things, I wanted to know if the biblical God was still a composite being, or if he were only one with Multiple Personality Disorder (MPD). In addition, who was he (or “they”)?

When I started restudying this subject, I soon concluded that YHWH, after all, had to be En.ki/Lucifer—there were certain criteria that talked in his favor, so I began to look into these. The most compelling was the following.

Dr. Joseph Farrell in “The Cosmic War” manages to give the reader rather convincing evidence that YHWH was En.ki, and I was convinced when I read it. Concurring with me, regardless how “disturbing” it may be, Farrell says, En.ki is the absolute best candidate for the Sumerian Lucifer character.<sup>425</sup> Then, when he starts connecting the dots, which lead to En.ki/Lucifer was also the best candidate for being the God of the Old Testament, it becomes unusually “chilly,” as he puts it.

In Exodus 3:13-14, “God” is talking to Moses from the famous Burning Bush, so he doesn't have to reveal his face (I'm sorry, but how cheesy can it be?) The following is played out:

13 And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel and shall say unto them, The God of your father hath sent me unto you; and they shall say unto me, What is his name? shat shall I say unto them?

---

14 And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you.<sup>426</sup>

This statement from God, “I AM THAT I AM” has been endlessly quoted by religious people all over the world, but very few understand what it really means. Dr. Farrell may have figured it out after having read David Rohl, a scholar in alternative theosophy, and it makes sense. Here is what Rohl has to say about the above Bible quote.

And we have learnt, Enki... was called Ea in Akkadian (East Semitic)—that is to say in the Babylonian tradition. Scholars have determined that Ea was vocalized as “Eya”. So, when Moses stood before the burning bush and asked the name of the god of the mountain, did he really reply “I am who I am” (Hebrew Eyah asher eyah)? This puzzling phrase has long perplexed theologians but now there is a simple explanation. The voice of God simply replied “Eyah asher Eyah” — “I am (the one) who is called Eyah” the name of Ea in its West Semitic (i.e. Hebrew) form. Scholars have simply failed to recognize this is another of those characteristic puns in which the Old Testament abounds, “I am (asher) Ea (Eyah)” is a classic biblical play on words. It also explains God’s apparently nonsensical instruction: “This is what you are to say to the Israelites” “I am has sent me to you.”

“Eyah” or simply “Ya” is the hypocoristic form of the name Yahweh found as an element of so many Old Testament names. So Enki/Ea, the god who created Man and then later warned Zuisudra/Utnapištim of the impending destruction of mankind, is one and the same as the god of Moses.<sup>427</sup>

So, according to these two researchers, the correct translation should be “I am the one who is called Ea,” and if so—there we have it! Rohl goes so far as to let the Hebrew word “Ya” transform into “Yahweh,” and if he is correct, that makes sense as well—not that Ea is Yahweh, but that he took on that title from the Mother Goddess, who originally bore that title. Regardless of who stole the title YHWH from the Goddess proves that thefts like this were done and certainly not as a one-time thing—it was a part of the pattern, just as when En.ki and Marduk stole the titles of En.lil and Ninurta and used them irresponsibly to make us get a wrong impression of these two deities. The Patriarchs were very careful not to say too many kind words about anybody who stood by the side of the Mother Goddess.

<sup>426</sup> The Holy Bible, King James Version, “Exodus 3:13-14”, op. cit. (When quoting and using the Bible, it will always be King James Version unless otherwise indicated).

<sup>427</sup> David Rohl, “The Lost Testament”, cited in Peter Goodgame, “Domination by Deception,” “The Giza Discovery”, Part Six, www.redmoonrising.com/Giza/DomDec6.htm.

However, as Farrell is pointing out, YHWH as the Creator of Heaven and Earth in the biblical tradition, as well as the creator of mankind, has little to do with En.ki, the sorcerer—especially as YHWH seems to prohibit such practices. What he fails to understand, however, is that the original YHWH, who created “Heaven and Earth,” was a female Creatrix and the original YHWH. When the AIF took over, they blended the YHWH female Goddess of all creation with their own inferior characters. Hence, if Ea became YHWH of the Bible after mankind was genetically manipulated into existence, it makes sense that she became a he and that he was a sorcerer, but he did not want the general population to be sorcerers. “Sorcery” was an occult trait that you learned within secret societies and not something that ordinary people should occupy their minds with. Therefore, when we realize these things, everything seems to be put in place—it definitely looks like Ea was YHWH.

BUT there is more to this story, so let’s keep on looking. There are also certain indicators that YHWH is associated with Lucifer’s son, Lord Marduk, and we will take a look at a few of these indicators.

We know that gold, precious stones, gems, and minerals were very important to the gods—so important, actually, that many individual gods were associated with certain stones, as we saw when we compared the planets in the solar system with certain Sumerian gods.<sup>428</sup>

We know from previous papers that the stone in Lucifer’s Crown, which was lost in the battle between Lucifer and Ninurta when the latter threw Lucifer out of Orion’s Inner Sanctuaries, was a sapphire, and that sapphire, in many ways, is related to Prince Lucifer.

However, Lucifer is not the only deity in the Heavens who has a weakness for sapphire. If we look at the table depicting planets connected to certain precious stones, we find that Jupiter is associated with sapphire as well, and Jupiter is said to be Marduk’s planet. Then, to narrow it down and connect the dots some more, the first Laws of Moses, which he received from YHWH, were inscribed on sapphire! This means there are great chances that YHWH was either En.ki or Marduk, or perhaps both of them. In some traditions, “The Book of Thoth” was inscribed on sapphire as well, which tends to show that these three beings were quite tightly connected, if we didn’t know that Thoth and En.ki are one and the same—not because they happened to “like” sapphire, but because sapphire meant something more to these beings in the sense of their usability. I haven’t heard of any other beings in history who have used sapphire in the sense that these two beings have—En.ki/Thoth and Marduk. So, in reality, we have two candidates for the title of YHWH, the Imposter.

Then, there are strong indications that Marduk certainly had a hand in the creation of the imposter YHWH, and this indication comes from a quite unlikely direction—a book review that I found. This reviewer is, by all means, not reviewing my material, but a book at Amazon.com where the author spends a lot of time trying to prove that YHWH was En.ki. The reviewer strongly disagrees with this claim. Although the reviewer, I believe, is correct on many points (I haven't had the chance to check all his references, which will be endnoted after the following quote), his point does not in any way exclude that En.ki had a hand in it—only that the name YHWH was inserted into the Old Testament once it was translated into Hebrew, which was not the original language in which the Bible was written (again, see quote below). Instead, based upon the evidence this reviewer is providing, YHWH is no less than Lord Marduk.

For example, he mistakenly assumes the "original" old testament (OT) is a Hebrew document written in Hebrew, and that "Yahweh" is disclosed as a principal player (and thus is a principal player). Sadly, he spends a large portion of his book arguing that Yahweh is Enki - provoking a host of collateral conclusions, based upon this (faulty) presumption.

In fact, the original old testament (OT), including the book of Genesis - the creation story (which Roberts relies upon) was written in Babylon during the Israelite captivity and afterwards (cc 570 to 510 BC, during the reign of Nabopolassar II (aka Nebuchadnezzar), Cyrus). It was written by a new religious group known as the Jews, not Hebrews. (NOTE, Judaism was the product of the Babylonian captivity and is very distinct from Hebrewism.) Furthermore, it was also written in cuneiform/Aramaic - not Hebrew, and absent any reference whatsoever to "Yahweh."

This material, because the original OT wasn't written by Hebrews, wasn't in the Hebrew language and there wasn't any disclosure of any "Yahweh!"

In its subsequent translation into Greek neither the name "Yahweh" nor any derivative thereof is found (Greek LXX Septuagint version, cc 250-100 BC). Naturally, one would assume if the original was devoid of any reference to Yahweh that an honest translation would also be devoid.

Interestingly, in the Greek version there is also no descriptive/identification of "who" the "Lord or God of Israel" is other than "Kyrios," which translates merely as "Lord."

It wasn't until well after Christ's time that the OT was translated/revised from its Greek version (not from the original cuneiform) into a Hebrew language version (Masoretic Text 700-1000 AD). Thousands of material differences exist between the two versions. It was in this later Hebrew language version that the term/personage "Yahweh" finally shows up (for the first time).

Historians have several lines to establish there was no earlier Hebrew OT version. One line is that both Philo and Josephus (prominent Jewish historians about the time of Christ) quoted many passages of the Old Testament -- always directly in Greek from the Greek Septuagint, even when they wrote in Aramaic. They were scholars of the day and also very Jewish. If a Hebrew OT existed, they would have used it instead of the Greek Septuagint. At a minimum, they would have mentioned its existence, if it existed. They didn't, because it did not exist.

It should also be noted, the Babylonians and Assyrians during the period of captivity (and thus the Jews who drafted the original OT) knew of a god named "Yahweh," who was a "local" lessor/low powered/low level tribal god that resided on Mt. Horeb. Mind you he was not an important regional god, much less a powerful national god, nor an omnipotent (universal/Chief) god -- but, rather a low powered/humble "local" tribal god. The indigenous tribesmen felt he could even be beaten in battle, if they could get him off the mountain into the plains.

Did this low level local tribal god at the time of drafting the original OT in Babylon somehow magically become an all powerful omnipotent universal (chief) god -- when the OT was finally translated/revised into Hebrew 700-1000 AD?

Compelling (virtually indisputable) extrabiblical evidence supports all the above, if one bothers to look for it and read it.

Obviously Roberts didn't. So, he doesn't know the original old testament wasn't a Hebrew document not written in the Hebrew language, and absent any reference to any omnipotent god named Yahweh (until the later revision/translation into Hebrew). Roberts is essentially relying upon the modern King James revision of the OT (derived from the Masoretic text).

Relying upon this conveniently available modern OT (e.g. King James) without testing its reliability/authenticity against earlier versions and extra-biblical references is (forgive me) lazy and poor scientific method/scholarship.

So how valid can Roberts comparison be that Enki was one and same god as Yahweh, if Yahweh truly didn't exist as the omnipotent god of Israel, in the first instance (e.g. in the original cuneiform Babylon OT)?

Perhaps the better question is who was the unnamed god Kyrios "the Lord of Israel" disclosed in the original and Greek (non-Hebrew) OT versions?

On this score, the answer may be found in indisputable contemporaneous archaeology (e.g. the 2600 year old "Cyrus Cylinder" discovered 1879 in Babylon). In other words, there is archaeological evidence from the same time/place as the original cuneiform OT from the very King who released the Jews from captivity.

In this remarkable stone cylinder Cyrus's very words ordering the release of the Jews from captivity and the rebuilding of the temple in Judah (which Cyrus incidentally financed) were recorded.

The Masoretic 700-1000 AD text gave Yahweh credit for Cyrus's order ("I will raise up Cyrus in my righteousness: I will make all his ways straight. He will rebuild my city and set my exiles free," Isaiah 45:13).

Amazingly, in the "Cyrus Cylinder" Cyrus expressly discloses the name of the god who ordered his decision. But, hold on to your pants, it was not Yahweh, nor was it Enki, nor was it Enlil (and all were known at the time). It was none of them.

Rather, Cyrus gave credit for his order to his god, the god of Babylon (who had orchestrated Cyrus's earlier conquest of Babylon without shedding a drop of blood). It was the new chief god of the pantheon -- Marduk!

It was Marduk-- Marduk -- who ordered Cyrus' release of the captives and the building of the temple of Judah.

So, Yahweh did not exist as an omnipotent god when the OT was drafted in Babylon, and even if he did, he couldn't have been Enki.

By unquestionably assuming the validity of the Masoretic text and thus the existence/importance of Yahweh, Roberts commits fundamental error. He also makes the same mistake by assuming the validity of the Book of Genesis as provided in the Masoretic text. This of course (unfortunately) causes Roberts to create a product that grossly misleads his readers.<sup>429</sup>

Of course, the reviewer doesn't know the "hidden history of mankind," so his assumptions that En.ki couldn't have been involved at all (and neither could En.lil) can't be taken at face value. However, his research does show that it's more than likely that Marduk was involved.

Although the name YHWH was not mentioned in the early writings of the Bible, two things still ring true. The "God" referred to, when we discuss YHWH, is the same being as Kyrios, the "Lord [of Israel]." YHWH is, like the person I quoted says, the Hebrew name of the same deity, but the Hebrew name is taken directly from the Orion language. Those who translated the Bible into Hebrew knew this very well! What the "Amazon.com reviewer" doesn't know is that Marduk and En.ki were still the ones lurking in the background when the Hebrew version was written! It was not until the Hebrew version was written that it was decided that the name of the Orion Queen, Yahweh, should be used as the ultimate humiliation—turning the Divine Feminine into the Divine Masculine. Before then, father and son just changed the gender of the Goddess to God—a male deity—to emphasize their patriarchal hierarchy. Therefore, saying that En.ki had nothing to do with the biblical "God" is not proven in the reviewer's text—he simply doesn't go back far enough, something that Dr. Farrell does, however. The fact remains that today, the Hebrew version of the Bible has been used to translate the Bible into the most common languages in the world—English being number one. This is, of course, no coincidence, if Marduk and En.ki at one time, after the turn of the First Millennium after Christ, decided to use Hebrew names in the "World Bible"—words such as Yahweh.

The "local god" the reviewer mentions may, or may not, have existed, but even if he did, he is outside the scope of this story and of very little interest for us. Nevertheless, he may be a curious side note to research for those who are interested.

Now, to summarize, let's hypothesize. If you were En.ki in this particular duo (En.ki and Marduk), would it matter to you which one of you played the role of YHWH (if we are still using the Hebrew name)? If you were on a mission somewhere else in the Universe, and you were the one who originally played the male YHWH, would it matter to you if your co-conspirator, Marduk, filled in, similar to what happens when you are sick, and someone else fills in for you at work? You both know the job. In YHWH's case, it would explain the different personalities of the "god" at different times—he simply was a composite being.

I believe that when push comes to shove, YHWH was both En.ki and Marduk—thus YHWH's schizophrenic nature. I find David Rohl's interpretation of the Exodus section above particularly interesting, and if he is correct, that shows that En.ki/Ea probably was the original entity behind YHWH—Marduk filled in later.

IX. From One Thing to Another

In the next paper, we will address some subjects which lead up to the Deluge, which happened here on Gaia approximately 13,000 years ago. Although we have discussed this subject at length in other levels of learning, it's well worth addressing one more time before we lay it to rest. There are still things related to this devastating "catastrophe" that have not yet been discussed, or even addressed, by other researchers—at least not from what I know—and it's very important to understand this subject as much as possible. The reason for this is because it still sits as a trauma in the mass consciousness of mankind and can possibly lock many people into this current reality unless it is addressed accordingly.

As the readers may have noticed, we haven't discussed Atlantis, Lemuria, or any other of the past great civilizations at any depth in this level of learning, and although we are going to mention them soon, we have already learned about them in previous levels of learning, and they are not crucial to go into again at any length—what needs to be said about them for the purpose of these series of papers has more or less already been said.

The Big Goal with these Levels of Learning is to help people free themselves from the bondage and the slavery of this plane of reality we call the Third Dimension. If the topics I have discussed with the reader have helped open your chakras in order to see new realities, possibilities, and probabilities, then my Big Goal is accomplished. I am aware that for this to happen, in order to make a difference on a more global scale, the incidents that hang us up here in 3-D need to be addressed—one by one and up to a certain level. Then the rest should come more naturally for the true inquirer. Important, too, is that the readers think for themselves. These papers hopefully will serve as guidelines and food for thought, but in general, they are written to give you ideas as you move on through the material and start seeing reality from your own perspective. You are a unique being, and the way you see things will be different from another reader because your experiences are different. Keep this in mind because it's a powerful statement if you understand it in depth.

PAPER #13: THE GARDEN OF EDIN REVISITED

I. Isis' Confession

In a previous paper, I started telling the story about Isis and how she got involved with En.ki. Isis was the goddess who became the breeder, creating the human hybrid races that existed before the Flood. She was also heavily involved in creating En.ki's Elite human hybrid race after the Deluge. However, she did not have anything to do with creating Homo sapiens sapiens. We were created from different genes, as we shall see. I also showed how she had been confused with Ninhursag, who is actually the name Prince Ninurta gave to Mother Goddess, and therefore, she was not the female who created the watered-down versions of humankind. Instead, Ninhursag was, indeed, involved in creating the previous, original womankind, who roamed the Earth before Lucifer arrived.

Over time, Isis slowly started waking up from the spell En.ki had put her under. Slowly, she began to feel deep regrets for what she'd done. Also, her real family—her father, Ninurta, and her grandparents, Queen Nin and Khan En.lil, must have thought very badly of her. She didn't know what to do—she just knew she needed to get out from her imprisonment with En.ki. Unfortunately because of the rape, she now had a son, Marduk, whom she loved—he was her son, after all. She saw how he had been manipulated from birth by his father, En.ki, and taken on his father's values and hunger for power. Still, as a mother, she knew that Marduk was not evil deep inside, and she couldn't leave him with En.ki—who would destroy him totally.

She needed advice and went to see her father, Prince Ninurta, who at that time was in Mintaka, Orion's belt. Her father met with her, and Isis was very tearful and regretful when she talked to him. At first, Ninurta looked at her with stern eyes, willing to hear her out, but probably not willing to forgive what she'd done. He asked her if she realized the consequences of her actions. How could she, being from the House of En.lil, be so stupid that she went with Lucifer, the Archenemy of Orion, gave him a son, and started giving birth to a hybrid race, destroying her father's Experiment? What was she thinking? Ninurta's tone of voice when he was asking this was very demanding and damning. He made sure she understood that he didn't want to hear any lies. If she wanted to talk to him, she'd better tell him the truth, or he would never speak with her again.

Isis was quiet for a moment, thinking about what effect she had created back on Earth. By giving En.ki a progeny, she and he were now inseparable. She had become known as “Lilith,” the “Mother of Demons” —her reputation as a whore was widely spread in certain circles.

Then she started talking and deeply apologized for what she had done. She told Ninurta that she had been raped by En.ki, and Marduk was the bastard son, who was the result of that act.

Now it was Ninurta’s turn to be quiet. Isis saw his black face turn paler, and his eyes narrowed. His breath became heavy, and his eyes started shooting arrows. He couldn’t believe what he was hearing! His own brother had not only forced his daughter into marriage, but actually done so by raping her!

Prince Ninurta knew his daughter well enough to see whether she was lying or not. Their communication was telepathic, and he would have noticed if there had been blockages in her thoughts, but there were no secrets she was trying to hide. Her energy flowed freely and effortlessly when she was “talking.” In this case, there was no doubt—what she was telling him was the truth.

The Prince was absolutely furious, and he looked at his daughter in rage and said that his brother was not going to get away with this! Isis protested, and said that he can’t kill En.ki because if he does, En.ki will terminate the whole human race and everything else that originally was created by his mother and himself.

Ninurta shook his head while still looking at her, and he said, “there are other, better ways to deal with that bastard than to kill him—believe me! This time he’s gone too far!” Then he looked at his daughter for a while, and his rage decreased a few degrees. He said to her—this time in a much calmer voice: “You come to me so I can forgive you. What your husband has done to you is unforgivable, but in order to get so totally under his spell after that, you must have had some feelings for him. At this time, my daughter, I can’t decide whether I’m going to forgive you or not. I need time to think this over. You went against everything your father stands for, and not only that—you also showed total disrespect for what your grandfather and your grandmother have taught you! I am not willing to take you in yet. First, I want to see some real proof from you that you are willing to give him up once and for all, and I want to see you help putting things right again!”

Isis bowed her head and nodded. She understood. Her father could be very stern, but she knew he loved her, and what he did was still in her best interest. After all she’d done, he could have abandoned her right there—and maybe not even being willing to see her in the first place.

Fig. 1. Isis, Lady of Fire.

Isis had a last request. “What about Marduk? He is innocent in all this—he was just a child under the influence of his manipulative father. Please, let him into Orion, and keep him there for protection. Deep within, he is a good person!”

Ninurta said he could not make such a decision alone, so he consulted his mother, the Queen of the Stars. The Queen said, “This thing is not to be taken lightly. My granddaughter has been forced into a marriage because of a rape. It’s intolerable. When it comes to my grandson, Marduk, time will tell. My doors are always open for him, but at the moment, his loyalty is with his father, and as long as he has not repented and redeemed himself, I cannot allow him into Satania. Nevertheless, let him know that the doors are open, and he is welcome to dwell here, once he has totally made up his mind and has proven himself worthy.”

Isis retreated from the Palace, where she had spent so much time in the past, when she was younger. She felt a sting in her heart because it was here she had grown up, and it was here she felt that she really belonged. For now, however, she had to leave—she had no choice. She knew they wouldn’t take her back and let her in, the way the situation was now—she needed to make amends. With a heavy heart, she left Orion and returned to Gaia, where her husband and son were playing their vicious games, in which she no longer wanted to have any part. She was not enjoying the reunion with her new family.

Not too far after Isis' journey, Marduk asked her why he was banned from visiting his grandparents and from being lifted up into the Palace of Satania. Isis felt obligated to tell the truth—even the part where the Empire considered Marduk being someone who was his father's son. She told him, as well, that the door was open for him in case he changed his mind. Marduk was furious and said that he certainly sided with his father, who had been so badly treated by his family. Later on, when he talked about this with others, he insisted that the Queen and the Khan refused to let him in, and that he was banned from Orion, although he was innocent and never participated in the original Rebellion. This was not true, however, because the Queen had said in front of witnesses that Marduk was welcome back when he got his act together.

It is probably quite true, however, that Marduk was manipulated by his father to side with him, and it is very plausible that En.ki promised Marduk that he could take Prince En.lil's place in the Heavens, once the Great Cosmic Wars were over.

II. Prince Ninurta's Confrontation with En.ki on the Rigelian Battlefield

When Isis had left Orion, Prince Ninurta didn't waste any time. He put on his armor, gathered his weapons, and prepared himself for war. He didn't assemble any troops or anybody at all to follow him—this was entirely his own battle.

Still enraged, he travelled the short distance of about 200 light-years between Mintaka and Rigel, where the frenetic, destructive war was ongoing. The giant white-blue star showed up in front of him—extremely bright and quite large. Rigel, the second brightest star in the Orion Constellation—once a peaceful place, where star beings were evolving in happiness and companionship, was now turning into a wasteland. When Lucifer's Angels and Demons entered the stage, everything changed. A civil war had already started from inside, from Lucifer using the same manipulated techniques that had showed to be so useful in the past.

The Rigel solar system has several planets orbiting the gigantic sun, and at least one of them carries life in a meaningful form. The main intelligent life forms in this solar system, otherwise, are star beings, i.e. they live inside their Sun, and are interdimensional.

Ninurta, however, aimed for the seventh planet, counting from the Sun and outward. In size, it was 1 ½ the size of Earth, and the life forms were therefore larger in stature than humans are. Many of them were Reptilians.

Ninurta used his perceptions and his technology to figure out the status of the planet, and he checked the star constellations to make sure he arrived in the right time period.

Fig. 2. The Battle of Gettysburg, in 1863, during the American Civil War.

When everything looked right, he descended through the thin clouds and landed on the top of a mountain (mountains are Prince Ninurta's sanctuary), where he hid some of his baggage. He used supercharged binoculars to see what was going on far down on the ground level. What he saw was a fatigue battlefield. It was huge, and dead bodies were lying everywhere. If the readers have ever seen a picture of the aftermath of "The Battle of Gettysburg," this scenario was similar (see fig. 2). The only difference was that this battle was still raging, although Ninurta could tell that the soldiers on all fronts had battle fatigue. One bomb went off and hit a target, but then it took a while before the attack was returned. Beings were running back and forth between sheltering trees, bushes and rocks, in order to change positions.

Somewhere in all this chaos, he knew that his brother was leading one of his legions. Khan En.lil was still busy fighting the war in Sirius, and Queen Nin was writing a peace agreement with an old enemy on another flank of the Orion Empire.

Ninurta didn't waste any more time. He hurried down the mountain, fully armed, dressed in a well protecting armor, which was light to carry, but made all the difference if he was being hit by laser or electromagnetic weapons.

When he arrived at the bottom of the mountain, he ran across the battlefield, and took shelter behind a rock formation. Primitive bullets from a primitive population swished all around him, and some hit him in the side, in the back, or on the side of his head, but he kept running. These bullets didn't do anything to him—the armor easily took care of them. He couldn't be too careful, however, because there were those out there whose weapons actually could penetrate his armor, and if so, he had no one who could help him heal. He did carry some medical instruments, which he could use to heal himself from serious wounds, in case he was badly hurt, but how effective they would be would depend on the situation.

Ninurta sat behind the rocks for a while and studied the environment. He knew his brother all too well, and if there were somewhere on this planet, on any battlefield, that Lucifer would fight, it would be right here. He would use his advanced weapons against a civilization that was superior in numbers, but inferior in technology. These were the kind of odds Lucifer liked to play with—he called them “fair,” when in fact he had all the advantages.

Ninurta smiled sadly to himself when he thought about this, but then went to action. He jumped up on the top of a rock, showed himself as being totally fearless, and put a bullhorn to his mouth. He blew in it the strongest he could, and a loud tone rang over the battlefield. So loud was it that all firing stopped. Everybody wanted to see where that loud noise came from. He had gotten their attention!

When the sound from the horn had echoed out and faded, Ninurta changed to an amplifier in which he could speak, so that his voice could be heard over a relatively long distance. He shouted:

“Lucifer, Prince of Lies, King of Rape, Heir of Nothing, in control of nobody, where are you hiding? Do you recognize the voice of your own brother? Yes, I have come to see you, and where do I find you? In a place where death and terror reigns—where rats and cockroaches thrive, and a foggy darkness is all there is to see. Aren't you supposed to be the Prince of Light? But you see, there are cracks in all darkness—that's how the light comes in! And I am the Light, my brother, and the Light right now is your worst enemy! Come out from your hiding place, so I can see you!”

The battlefield was totally quiet—one could almost hear a needle fall. No one wanted to miss this scenario and what would happen next. Ninurta peered out over the field, where an early morning mist laid like a coating over the bluish landscape. No birds were singing—it was almost as if this entire god-forgotten place was abandoned, although Ninurta knew better.

Then, out of the shadows, came a tall gestalt. His armor was still clean, as if he still hadn't been in battle at all, and in his hand he carried some kind of gun, although it was not pointed at Ninurta at that moment.

Ninurta jumped down from the rock and stood on the ground with his arms crossed, waiting for his brother to come closer. Lucifer stopped 20 feet from his brother and looked at him with a smile.

"You are calling me many names, brother. You, who think you're so good that you can win everybody's heart. You sure convinced our parents that you were better than I, didn't you? They even chose you as the heir of Orion, although I am the eldest of us two. People call me "smooth talker," and a "trickster," but that's just because they don't know you. You have fooled the entire Royal Court, but one day, your false character will burst at its seams and you will be revealed for whom you are. When that happens, no one wants to have anything to do with you, my brother, but then it's too late. I have already built my own Empire, and in a very near future, it will supersede Orion tenfold. Then, Orion will be no more. It will be under my jurisdiction, and its name will be changed to what I find appropriate. "Orion, the Hunter?" You're such a liar. And you have the stomach to call me a liar? What do you want? I am fighting a war here, and I don't have time to talk nonsense with you!" Lucifer's hand around his gun hardened.

"Be careful so you don't shoot yourself in the foot, dear brother!" said Ninurta with a loud and steady voice that could be heard over the battlefield. "It looks quite new, as if you haven't used it before. I would put it aside until I'd learned how to use it, if I were you! But enough now! I haven't come here to engage in a word battle with you. I have come here to take revenge for my daughter, Isis!"

Lucifer's eyes narrowed. "Isis? What about her? She is my consort now, as you very well know. The House of En.lil is losing its family members because they realize, one by one, that they can't stand living amongst you, isn't that correct? Isn't it a little too late to think of revenge now after all the years Isis and I have been married? You have a grandson, too, brother. Too bad you're so out of touch with your family—both your daughter and your grandson. It can't be because of me, can it?"

“Stop your idiotic word games, Lucifer!” Ninurta shouted. “You raped my daughter, and your son is a bastard, that’s what he is! How dare you rape my daughter? Did you think you could do that without being reprimanded? Did you really think you could get away with it?”

“So what are you going to do? Kill me?” Lucifer laughed sarcastically. “You know you can’t kill me. You love your mother’s gift way too much for that. My sentimental brother doesn’t want his Living Library destroyed, does he? I, on the other hand, can kill you without any major repercussions. So what is it that you really want, Prince of Lies?”

“Fight me, Lucifer! Show me that you are as quick in battle as you are with your tongue! Throw away your heavy weaponry and let us only use our knives!”

“You are shielding yourself—I can’t read your intentions—so I know not what you have in mind. But I am not afraid of you, brother. You are a great warrior, but so am I! And remember that you can’t kill me, if that’s what you are planning. I have people who would destroy your solar system in next to no time!”

“Don’t you worry about that, you little coward. Show yourself off instead! Show that you can defeat me! Show all these soldiers, hiding in the bushes, that you can defeat me!”

Both of them threw their weaponry on the ground, took off their armor, but kept their long, sharp knives, which looked more like scythes than they did knives. The two brothers put themselves in position, while soldiers popped up from behind their shelters to get a better look at what was happening. All fighting, except between the brothers, had now suddenly stopped. Beings from both sides of the battle, who had been trying to kill each other just a few minutes ago, had put their weapons down, and now standing up, they were totally visible to their enemies, who could easily kill them. However, it was as if all grudges were forgotten. As long as the battle between these two powerful brothers took place before their eyes, there was no conflict existing between all these soldiers.<sup>430</sup>

Ninurta didn’t want to wait for Lucifer’s first attack—instead, he was the one who attacked first. Steel turned against steel, and two strong bodies ran into each other with such an effort that one could hear their lungs emptying. The two combaters grabbed each other, fell to the ground, and rolled over, while they were punching each other hard in the face and in the chest. Ninurta could feel the sting from Lucifer's sharp knife cutting through the skin on his right thigh, and he kicked his brother away from him to get a chance to reposition himself. He felt the warmth from the blood running down his leg. He knew immediately that the wound was just shallow, and nothing to worry about.

<sup>430</sup> If my memory serves me well, a similar thing happened between the Nazi soldiers and the Allies just before the Battle of Dunkerque started in WW II. The German soldiers and the Allies ate, drank, and laughed together, just to start fighting again the next morning. Isn’t this a typical example of how people get manipulated into war, when in fact they don’t hold any grudges against each other?

Lucifer, however, took advantage of the situation when he saw that he had wounded his brother, and rushed toward him at full speed. Ninurta saw the rock that was lying slightly to the right of himself, and when Lucifer came closer, he kicked the rock toward his brother's feet.

It had the exact effect Ninurta had hoped for. En.ki was not prepared, and didn't expect the stone to suddenly appear in front of his feet, so he tripped on it and fell flat on his stomach.

Ninurta was over him in the blink of an eye, and turned him around on his back. En.ki had dropped his knife when he fell but couldn't have done anything anyway, sitting tight in Ninurta's grip. Ninurta had a stretched arm and hand around En.ki's throat, and his knee on his chest, so that he couldn't move. Ninurta, in rage, showed his scythe-like knife to En.ki and held it close to his eyes.

"This knife, my brother," he said, showing his teeth, "I suggested we should use as our only weapons for a very specific reason. You see the shape of it? It can be used to cut somebody's head off—something I could easily do to you right now!" Lucifer was sweating but did what he could not to show fear.

"You wouldn't kill me!" he said, but this time he sounded less convincing.

Ninurta looked at him with disgust. "You're right! It's your lucky day, and I won't kill you. However, you interrupted me before I was finished talking. I was going to say that this knife is also perfect to use for another purpose. Can you imagine what that would be?"

En.ki's eyes widened in pure terror. "You wouldn't...!"

In the next second, Ninurta hit En.ki's face with his fist, cut up his pants with the sharp knife and castrated his brother in a matter of seconds. He took his privates and threw them away, out over the battlefield. He whistled, and a bird of prey descended from the skies, grabbed En.ki's privates and flew away with them.

Ninurta stepped back and cleaned his knife, while En.ki lied on the ground, screaming in pain. He couldn't believe that he no longer had his testicles!

Ninurta put on his armor again, stuck the knife into his belt, and looked at his brother without remorse.

“Listen and learn, brother!” Ninurta said. “You knew as well as anybody else that you don’t mess with an evolving race on an evolving planet. So what do you do? You walk around and copulate with every female in sight, although you know that this is strictly forbidden. Then you genetically engineer and manipulate the same evolving race and make them into slaves. After that, you create an Elite bloodline, consisting of your purest genes, and that of my sister’s, so you can make sure that your offspring has Ninurta’s blood running through their veins—through my daughter! This way you think in your sick mind that you will have enough Royalty to outdo me and get your heirship back. I have a surprise for you! It will not succeed! The Khan and the Queen will not change their minds, and their words can supersede the laws when it’s absolutely necessary. Do you really think that your behavior will make them vote in your favor? That’s an insult to me and to my parents!

Furthermore, do you think you can rape my daughter and not get punished for it? If you touch one more hair on Isis, I will gladly kill you—slowly! And I will annihilate you and destroy your Avatar!

Now, listen very carefully, my brother! This is my curse on you: No longer do you have any privates that you can use to continue producing your bloodline, or any bloodline at all, for that matter. You’re finished—no more intimacy with any woman—anywhere! Whatever you do from hereon in an attempt to regain your fertility will fail. You will never again, as long as you live, be able to create offspring. No more progenies! This, my brother, is my curse, and it is effective immediately. You have raped your last woman, and this is my revenge for having raped my own, beloved daughter! No more offspring, no more sex! Now, take this to clean up your mess and get the hell out of here!”

Ninurta threw at him a few small towels and some disinfection medicine, which also stopped the bleeding. He did not want his brother to bleed to death because he knew that En.ki wouldn’t hesitate to put his threat into reality and blow the Ar-i-du solar system into pieces.

Death in itself wouldn’t be the end of En.ki—he could shape another interdimensional body, as long as he had his Avatar—both En.ki and Ninurta knew this, of course, so it was no point in just cutting En.ki’s head off. En.ki’s fear in that instant, when Ninurta had the chance to decapitate him, was more in fear of losing his Avatar. Indeed, the only thing that would have killed En.ki, right there and then, was if Ninurta had destroyed his brother’s Avatar. This, he knew, he wouldn’t do under the circumstance.

However, how could Ninurta be so sure that En.ki wouldn’t go back to Earth, after the humiliation he was experiencing on the battlefield, and just annihilate all humans? Ninurta knew he wouldn’t because then En.ki’s penalty would be eternal death. Was it possible that En.ki would start treating humans worse in revenge for what Ninurta had done to him? Yes, this was certainly plausible.

Prince Ninurta sat down on a rock, studying his brother when he cleaned himself up. Once he was done, En.ki fled from the battlefield and left Rigel. Shortly after, Ninurta left as well, and returned to Mintaka. Warriors' justice had been made!

III. En.ki Back to the Drawing Board

En.ki was furious, humiliated, desperate, and for the first time in his life, really depressed. He had no way of breaking his brother's spell—at least there was no way that he knew of. What was he supposed to do now? Not only had he been deprived of the pleasure of having sex, but he also couldn't continue his planned experiment with bloodlines, using women as breeding machines.

After he'd fled from the battlefield in the Rigel star system, he went to Aldebaran and settled there. It seems as if that's the place where he usually withdrew when he had to think, or if he were in trouble—it was his own sanctuary.

Soon, however, the solution came to him—he went to get his Mes made of sapphire and sent a communication to his son, Marduk, back on Earth, to immediately leave what he was doing and come to Aldebaran. Marduk, quick to please his father at this point, obeyed, and soon the two sat together in the Constellation of Taurus.

When En.ki had described what happened in Rigel, Marduk flew up, furious like someone who had just been robbed of all his personal items. "I will get that bastard!" he said, and was almost already out the door. En.ki calmed him down and commanded him to sit down again. "I don't have time for revenge right now," En.ki said, when in reality he was afraid of his brother. "That's not why I called you over here!" Then he explained to Marduk the more serious situation—at least from his viewpoint—and that was that he no longer could reproduce. Marduk sat quiet, wondering where his father would go from here.

"Now it's all up to you, my son", said En.ki and put his hand on Marduk's palm. He looked his son deep into his cold, black eyes. "From now on, you will be the breeder! Your semen will represent my semen, and thus, whomever you impregnate will still be of my pure bloodline—and yours too, for that matter. I want you to copulate with Isis, and I want you to do it a lot! The more offspring she can give you, the better. I don't want any f..king engineering in this case—I want the hybrid bloodline to be pure as pure can be. This is very important. Do you know why?"

Marduk thought he did, but remained quiet. En.ki withdrew his hand from Marduk's palm and leaned back in his chair.

"I need a breed of human hybrids that is above all other human hybrids back on Earth. I want them to be highly intelligent, having eaten from the Tree of Life—well, to some extent—and be 100% loyal to our cause. Even if you and I are away from Earth at the same time, I want to make sure we can trust this Elite with controlling and manipulating the masses and be able to do it right. I want us to promise them a reward for being loyal.

We will give them riches. We will give them almost everything they may desire in the material world, for they will be the leaders of the people until it's time for us to take over entirely in the open in the future, at the time when we're strong enough to take down the Orion Empire..."

"But father," Marduk interrupted, "we already have such an Elite, who the masses look up to as the emissaries of the Gods. We have our High Priests!"

"Ah, that's not enough!" En.ki crossed his legs (oh, that hurt!). He paused and continued. "The future on Earth will look very different from today. One day, the world civilization will blossom, and the humans will have the technologies of the Gods—or some of them. In fact, we will give it to them! We will prepare mankind for what's to come. In order to take Orion, we need a high tech civilization. We need hybrid leaders who know how to really run a country—or a world civilization, too, for that matter. They will be assigned different tasks, and all these tasks will have as their purpose to control all different aspects of life. We will continue educating the Elite within the Mystery Schools and the secret societies, and they will learn on a need-to-know basis. The rewards will be in line with how dedicated they are. They will be taught that they will incarnate over and over within the same Elite bloodlines and never have to be commons—unless they disobey, of course. If so, they'll be slaves just like the rest of the people next time we recycle them.

That's not all, however! We need to keep track of each person's weaknesses amongst the Elite. If it's sex, we'll give them sex. If it's gold, we'll make sure they get gold—as illegally as possible. Then, if they disobey, we leak their crimes to the public, little by little, until they learn to keep themselves in check. See, I don't trust anybody anymore. You are the only one I trust, my son!

So, I would like you to return to Earth and start reproducing with Isis. You see, the offspring will have our DNA—our blood—and my brother's blood as well, through his daughter. Do you understand what this means?"

Marduk nodded.

En.ki continued anyway. "This means," he said, "that by using my brother's blood when we create the Elite, we may safeguard our position in the Orion Empire. My bloodline may be considered purer than Ninurta's, and I may bypass him in the Pantheon, so that they have no other choice than to make me the heir of Orion. That would be the real revenge on my brother! Then he can take my place and see how that feels for him! We are already planning to do all this, of course, but my brother may think that because he castrated me, I'm out of the picture. No way! You will be our assurance, Marduk. And as a reward, you will be the Crown Prince of Orion, once I take over. What do you think?"

"I'd be happy to accommodate you, father," Marduk said in a low and chilly voice. "You are brilliant as always!"

"Good! I think I'm about done here, actually, so let's return to Earth together. From now on, you will take my role, and I will take on quite another..."

So this became En.ki's new plan. Isis would continue being the breeder, Enki and Isis would continue to stay married—at least for a while—and Marduk would take over En.ki's business on Earth for some time.

Father and son returned to Earth.

IV. En.ki Takes on the Role of Mother Goddess

On Earth, the new plan was set into motion. En.ki explained to Isis that in a huge battle in Rigel, he fought like a hero, killed a lot of enemies with his own hand, and in the end, the enemies fled as soon as they saw him. However, as it sometimes goes, her husband had gotten some war injuries, so Marduk had to take over the part of creating progenies with her.

Isis was less than thrilled to hear this. She was happy not to have to be intimate with her husband anymore, but having sex with her own son was not very tempting! Still, she felt she had no choice.

En.ki, on the other hand, decided to take on the role of Ninhursag—the Goddess herself. He started dressing up like the Goddess in order to look as feminine as possible. This was not too much of a stretch because in Orion, males address themselves as females when they present themselves to the Court, anyway, to remind themselves of their androgynous origins.

Now, because En.ki did not have any manhood anymore, he instructed his High Priests to castrate themselves as well, to honor En.ki/Nergal. Many people in En.ki's Priesthood did what was required of them to show their respect and loyalty, but not everybody had the "courage" to do this. Those who didn't had to resort to wearing pouches and tassels around their waists to show that they were of the Goddess.

Otherwise, the castration became a part of the initiation into En.ki's Priesthood, which was named after his firstborn son, Marduk Ra, and became known in Egypt as the "Priesthood of Amen"<sup>431</sup>. He rose to power and became the Chief God in the Babylonian Empire. Of course, this was also the time (after the Flood) when he and En.ki had the great opportunity to change the ancient records, and have the Priesthood write new ones. Therefore, Marduk is depicted as a benevolent Chief God in Babylon. In the records, he became known as a healer, and the one who brought peace to the Babylonian/Akkadian Empire by running off the oppressive Nabonidus.<sup>432</sup>

In the Priesthood Ecstasy Rituals, the eunuchs then played the role as the Goddess. Even today we see priests of Eastern sects castrate themselves in the name of their religion, and Kings and other rulers used eunuchs as guardians in their harems, as they were thought of as being asexual, which was not always the case...

Out of all this, a story, recently covered correctly by researchers, such as Sir Lawrence Gardner, emerges. By creating the mixed bloodline with En.ki (via Marduk), Isis, and Ninurta (via Isis), they corrupted and took over something that was created earlier by the real Ninhursag (Mother Goddess, just before the time of the Golden Age, referred to her people as the "Tan," or simply "Dan," or "Danu.")<sup>433</sup> By Isis and En.ki/Marduk creating this new bloodline, they are laying claims to the throne that Ninurta has inherited. In fact, the Isis/Marduk/Enki bloodline becomes what is referred to as the "Grail Line," or that of the "Fisher Kings."<sup>434</sup> They are signifying the aquatic Bird Tribe of En.ki/Nergal, which we were discussing earlier in conjunction with the Sirian Wars and the Dark Star.<sup>435</sup>

This bloodline has been very well protected throughout history, and something similar to a "police force" was formed already in an early stage. Isis/Ishtar/Lilith/Inanna now becomes the handmaiden to En.ki/Nergal.<sup>436</sup> The

<sup>435</sup> Here is a typical case when we have to think multidimensionally, with all time being simultaneous. The "Bird Tribe," from our linear point of view, is also the name of an older species, as discussed in earlier papers. Or, can it be that they are actually one and the same?

<sup>436</sup> Lilith being a handmaiden to Nergal is mentioned in a more subtle way in Gardner's "Genesis of the Grail Kings," p. 317, in his "Fourth through Sixth Generations of the Grand Assembly of the Anunnaki." However, Gardner uses a parallel hypothesis, saying that Lilith was the handmaiden of Inanna. In our hypothesis, Isis and Inanna are one and the same.

Secret Police is wearing one of Ninurta's symbols, the "Celestial Cross," to signify that they are protecting the seed line of Isis/Ishtar/Inanna (see fig. 3). The offspring are now direct descendants of Ninurta and are thereby claiming his right to the Throne of Orion, which was given to him by Khan En.lil and Queen Nin. Ninurta's inheritance, which En.ki now claims includes the Earth, Sagittarius (the Constellation directly related to the Milky Way Galaxy), Ursa Major, and a lot of other asterisms belonging to the Orion Empire. The Tribe of Dan becomes a direct line, as well, to Ninurta's Throne, via the seed line created by Marduk and Isis. So those who are of the Tribe of Dan and are still alive on Earth today are the offspring of Marduk and Isis, and therefore, also En.ki's bloodline. Isis then becomes the "Eve" (the originator) of this bloodline, and she is instructed to have sex with the progeny of this seed line to keep it as pure as possible. In the ancient records, it says she has a Temple where this takes place, and she is working as the "breeder." Foremost, as Inanna and Ishtar, she then becomes known as the "Harlot," or the "Whore of Babylon."<sup>437</sup> It is her seed line that is the one designed to rule the Earth, and the way it was done, this seed line has a direct link to Prince Ninurta of Orion.

Fig. 3. The Knights Templar, wearing Ninurta's Celestial Cross.

This is a serious attempt by En.ki and his son to take the power away from Ninurta and give it to themselves, believing that the more purity they can provide via themselves and a long line of progenies, the better their chances are to inherit the Throne of Orion in a more "legal" way, regardless of what the Queen and the King of Orion think about them. En.ki's and Marduk's hope is that the rulers of Orion will have no choice other than to accept them. In order for this to work, they believe, the father and son need to seed a long line of progenies for the laws of Orion to take effect in their favor.

---

They probably understand that this may be a long shot, but these beings are obsessed with succeeding, and they are taking everything they can into consideration. This does not at all exclude a real invasion of the Inner Sanctuaries of the Orion Empire, and if this option needs to be played out (which seems to be the case), humanity is involved big time, working as foot soldiers for the gods.

V. Isis' Escape

One morning, when Marduk, whistling and in good spirit, went to Isis' palace to do his "ritual," he found to his astonishment that she was gone!

He called her name, shouted her name, and turned her place upside down as he got more and more enraged, but she was nowhere to be found. There were no notes—nothing!

Furious, he left the building and went to see his father. He told En.ki what had happened—that Isis was gone—and if Marduk had been upset, it was nothing compared to En.ki. How dared she? He raged out, and Marduk called for his most reliable army officers, commanding them to find her. Within the hour, a whole army was set out to find Isis, but nothing of what had happened could leak to the person on the street. No one was to know that Isis had escaped from her husband, the great King Marduk.

The situation was serious, in case Isis was not to be found, or if she were found dead. This would mean that En.ki's plan to find the backdoor into Orion had more or less failed—no more progeny from the bloodline of Ninurta! Marduk's loyal officers were provided with crystals, so they could quickly communicate with their king.

v.i. Amongst the Ruins of a Queendom of Old

Isis had had enough. Little did she know that when she got back after she had talked to her father, she would have to sleep with her own son. That was the final decision that made En.ki's spell over her break.

In desperation, Isis was fleeing in the cloak of the night and managed to get out of Babylon before dawn. Tirelessly and aimlessly she fled, northeast bound, without realizing where she was going. It was as if her subconscious mind was driving her.

Many days and many nights she was finding her way through the wilderness, toward the mountains which stood in her way. Although she was very cold at times, and both hungry and thirsty, she found that the mountains attracted her, reminding her of her father, whose sanctuary was the mountains. Before falling asleep in caves at nights, she was thinking about her father—how he had taught her shamanism and even how to create new species. She smiled to herself because it seemed as if she still remembered how to do all that.

One day, after had been on the run for more days than she could remember, she suddenly stood in front of some great mountains, and she stopped in awe. Her heart started beating faster in her chest, and her breathing sped up. On unsteady legs, she slowly walked toward the mountains. Something was very familiar about them, and it was as if she knew exactly where to go next.

She found the way in between two tall mountain ranges—like a passageway, which led into something that dwelled on the other side of these majestic peaks.

Suddenly, she came to a huge opening between the mountains, and she stood in front of a giant, clear-blue lake. Now she knew where she was! Without being consciously aware, all these days she had walked and walked, just to end up here in her father's old sanctuary—in his ancient Mountain Paradise from where the Golden Age stemmed!

Fig. 4. Lake of Mountain Spirits, surrounded by the Sayan Mountains.

Isis looked around. The autumn leaves had fallen, and a cold wind was blowing between the mountains. The lake was overgrown, and so were the meadows that surrounded it. This place had been abandoned for a very long time, and what had once been an extraordinary beautiful place—in fact, the most beautiful place on the surface of the planet—the original Garden of Edin—was now a wilderness, void of the beauty she so well remembered. She had reached the area of Lake Baikal, surrounded by the Sayan Mountains in today's southern Siberia, and she was finding herself standing before what remained of the "Lake of Mountain Spirits" (see fig. 4 above).

Isis fell on her knees and started crying. What had she done? How could she have been so mindless and so stupid? How could she have let Prince Lucifer put spells on her without her hardly even trying to break them? She had put shame on her father and everything he stood for. For eons, he had built an incredible paradise on Earth—something that was unheard of anywhere else in this Galaxy—and his daughter had sided with his father's enemies! Where was her father now, when she needed him the most? Why hadn't he helped her more?

A flood of shame and self-pity came over her where she sat, with a cold wind blowing through her long, red hair. For a long time, she couldn't stop crying, but finally she fell sleep, totally exhausted.

When she woke up the next morning, the mountain winds were still howling, and she was cold to her bones. She got up and washed her face in the lake, and she saw the reflection of her face, looking back at her, like a mirror in the water. A very torn and tormented face, weather-bitten and tired, stared back at her. It was still a beautiful face, but it didn't look at all the way she was used to. She let her hand move over her forehead, her temples, and her cheek, and she saw her reflection imitate her movements. She was almost in a trance, but in reality, it was the final wake-up call!

Suddenly, she stood up, took off her clothes, and dived into the lake—in spite of the cold weather. Amazingly, she found the water warm to her skin, as if the lake wanted to comfort her—to make her warm.

After a long swim, she got up, felt refreshed, and washed her clothes. She put them on rocks on the beach because she wanted them to dry. Yet, how could they dry under such harsh weather conditions? The winds were still blowing cold, as if they wanted her to freeze to death.

Naked, she stretched out her arms and looked up toward the mountain range from where the winds came. She smiled, and her eyes were suddenly determined, and they glowed like fire. She spoke, and her voice echoed between the mountains, sounding louder than the storm.

"Mountain Spirits, Storm Spirits, Water Spirits, don't you know my name? Don't you recognize who I am? Can't you see the resemblance when I'm standing here naked—both in physical form and in spiritual form? Don't you remember who your Creatrix was? Can you recall who cared for you? Who was it that nurtured you a long time ago?"

She paused, and the echo faded after repeating her words. The storm subsided just a little, as if the Storm Spirits and the Mountain Lords were considering her words, but still were not convinced.

She continued. "I am Isis, daughter of Prince Ninurta and granddaughter of Lady Ninhursag, the Queen of the Stars! The lineage of Orion is back, and with that the Great Shaman. I am asking you, Spirits of Storms and Winds, and I am asking you, Lords of the Mountains, to stop making me cold. Let the winds stop and the clouds wither! Let the Sun once again kiss the mountainsides and the valleys. Let this sanctuary—the Legacy of my Great Father—once again blossom! Let the river flow freely, and let the lakes be filled with the purest, most transparent water this world has ever seen since the days of Ninurta! Let the flowers grow in all colors, shapes, and forms, and let them invite insects to suck their nectar! Let me fill the valleys with animals that once again live in peace, eating only the beams of the Sun!"

It took no more than a minute for the storm to subside and the clouds that had covered the sky to wither. The bluest sky was opening up, and a warm, yellow sun shone over the valleys and the mountains, heating up the landscape. The Mountain Lords had heard her and saw who she was, and they obeyed.

Isis laughed—a relieving and happy laughter which echoed all across the ancient Garden of Edin. She didn't know it, but even though her father was not there, he saw her, and he was pleased. He was proud of his daughter's change and her recalling her heritage. She was still the great shaman she used to be at the time of the Golden Age when she was invited into the Garden to be taught the skills of her father. She had been an excited and fast learner—a true Lady of Fire.

An idea started taking form in Isis's head. "Look at this beautiful land," she thought. "I could certainly try to rebuild at least some of what my father once created here. I could make a beautiful Garden—I could invite animals and tame them! But most important of all—I could recreate womankind! To honor my father, I could recreate the great Namlú'u and close the Garden of Edin for the Patriarchal Regime. The Mountain Lords could help me with that. I could put a spell around this wonderful Paradise!"

And so she did. She still remembered how to seed life, and in spirit and in flesh, she created a new womankind, in her image and in her liking. Once again, a tribe of women lived in a revived Garden of Edin.

She also managed to resemble an army of loyal soldiers, who, together with the Mountain Lords, would protect her and her Creation. The Divine Feminine was once again at work on Gaia. Isis could feel the spirit of her grandmother emerge in the Paradise Valley.

VI. The New Women of Fire

Rumors started reaching Babylon. It came to Marduk's attention that up in the north, there was a tribe of mountain people, who possessed great power—and more curiously—they were all women!

It didn't take long for Marduk to understand that this was the work of Isis! In vain had they looked for her—it was as if she had been swallowed by the Earth Mother herself, never again to be found. Now he understood that she had gone to her father's old sanctuary—a land the Patriarchal Regime could never claim as theirs.

The fact that Isis had created a new species—a new womankind—was very bad news for Marduk and his father. This meant that Isis now had more rights to the Throne of Orion than they, who had created a mix of males and females, had. Isis, surrounded by a lineage of feminine “pure-bloods,” was definitely in favor before Lucifer's own creation. This had to be stopped!

Marduk sent out an army under Ninurta's Bear Emblem, which signifies Ursa Major and Orionites tied to Arcturus—the birthplace of Ninurta's and En.ki's father, Khan En.lil. In their usual manner, they stole what they could from the Matriarchs and transformed it to fit with the Patriarchal Regime. In this case, the emblem was used intentionally, in an attempt to trick Isis into thinking that those who came were sent out by her father, Prince Ninurta.

Isis was not stupid—she was no longer under Lucifer's spell and could certainly think for herself. When the army arrived, Isis asked the Mountain Lords to let the rains fall, thus using the same weapon as her father had used nearly 500,000 years ago, when he was defending his Garden of Edin from the attacking forces of Lucifer and his Fallen Angels.

Marduk's army was swept away by the powers of the Weather Spirits, and many of the invaders drowned. Only a few could retreat and get back to Marduk's palace alive. In the meantime, Isis and the females she had created, fled from the Mountain Paradise, knowing that it was just a matter of time before Lucifer managed to break in. Although Isis was an excellent shaman, she knew she had indeed forgotten some of her skills, and she was not as powerful as her grandmother and her father had been in protecting the Paradise. Still, her father also had had to flee, after some bitter fights with his brother's army of dark spirits, a long time ago.

En.ki was again enraged. This woman had a tendency to really be a pain in his neck. How many times had she infuriated him by now? And once again, she had escaped Lucifer and destroyed his plans behind his back. Why was she avoiding him? Why all of a sudden was she against him? What had broken the spell? These were thoughts running through Lucifer's clueless head.

However, things suddenly changed in En.ki's favor. One of Isis's creations—a Lady of Fire—was captured and sent to Marduk's palace. He and his father found to their great disappointment that this woman was as perfect as was intended when Isis created her. There were no flaws in Isis's Creation!!! After had come over the worst shock, they were starting to think about what to do next. As they saw it, Isis had betrayed them horribly, and who knew how many of these Women of Fire were out there in the world?

After a bit of pondering, the two plot makers came up with a solution. Once again, they had to make up a story—a new lie. If anything of this came out to the world, the story Marduk, as the authority in Babylon, would tell the people would be that Isis in her insanity had started to mix genetics and created highly imperfect beings that could be very dangerous because they were involved in witchcraft. They could put curses and spells on anyone they met, and it wouldn't take much for them to do that.

Therefore, with Isis being “mentally challenged,” En.ki now decided that Marduk, Isis's son, should be the Champion of the Gods, who superseded Isis's attempt to restore Planet Gaia to the point when her father, Prince Ninurta, was here. His “magnificent self” was then looked at as being “lifted up to the KHAA.” Thus, he took the title of “Khan” for now. If he will ever inherit the Throne of Orion, he will be the Khan-Khan-Ur, where “Ur” means “one of a kind,” i.e. the “One God.” At the moment, he was only Khan-Khan-Us, where “Us” denotes “one of many.” From now on, all of Prince Ninurta's characteristics, as well as Khan En.lil's, would be passed on to Marduk via Isis, his mother. His symbol became the “Ankh,” which can be translated to “An” (Heaven) and “KH” or “KHAA” (life, Universe). (Ankh also works as an anagram for KHAN—if we change the letters in “ANKH” around, we get “KHAN”). Thus, he was claiming the “Throne of Isis” (Isis is often depicted with an Ankh), and this would give the impression that Marduk had a direct link to the KHAA and the Inner Sanctuary of the Orion Empire, and only through him could humanity communicate with the gods. As we can see, En.ki was now working more in the background, letting his son gain more and more power—at least as a front to the people. Marduk also claimed the same title as Khan En.lil, but in fact, behind the scenes, it's En.ki himself who was claiming the title. Still, it's complicated due to En.ki's castration. After that, Marduk became the male breeder and would technically be the one who inherited the Throne of Orion, in case their plan would succeed. However, knowing En.ki, he certainly had plans that would not allow that to happen either. He would never seriously allow his son to take his place in the ranking of the gods.

Fig. 5. Isis, kneeling, holding an Ankh.

In addition, En.ki and Marduk would do everything in their power to find Isis and put her to "justice" because she had offended them both with her misbehavior. En.ki, who took on the role as Ninhursag (which we saw earlier), would now become the "Hunter of Fire," tracking down and killing the females whom Isis created.

Last, from a rewriting of records, Isis was now being identified with the Goddess Bau, or Gula, who was actually Prince Ninurta's consort. Wikipedia says:

Nintinugga was a Babylonian goddess of healing, the consort of Ninurta. She is identical with the goddess of Akkadian mythology, known as Bau or Baba, though it would seem that the two were originally independent. She was the daughter of An and Ninurta's wife. She had seven daughters, including Hegir-Nuna (Gangir). She was known as a patron deity of Lagash, where Gudea built her a temple.

The name Bau is more common in the oldest period and gives way to Gula after the First Babylonian Dynasty. Since it is probable that Ninib has absorbed the cults of minor sun-deities, the two names may represent consorts of different gods. However this may be, the qualities of both are alike, and the two occur as synonymous designations of Ninib's female consort.

Other names borne by this goddess are Nin-Karrak, Nin Ezen, Ga-tum-dug and Nm-din-dug, the latter signifying "the lady who restores to life", or the Goddess of Healing. After the Great Flood, she helped "breath life" back into mankind. The designation well emphasizes the chief trait of Bau-Gula which is that of healer. She is often spoken of as "the great physician," and accordingly plays a specially prominent role in incantations and incantation rituals intended to relieve those suffering from disease.<sup>438</sup>

As the readers can see, it's a jungle out there — now, we have at least three goddesses who are related to the Creation of Homo sapiens and Homo sapiens sapiens. These goddesses are Ninhursag, Isis, and Bau. According to the altered records, these deities are supposedly one and the same because they — again supposedly — helped En.ki create mankind. However, as we know, Ninhursag is Mother Goddess herself, who created the primordial womankind — the Namlú'u — but never worked with En.ki to create mankind. In fact, Isis was intentionally given the name and characteristics of Ninhursag by the Patriarchal Regime, in order to blame Mother Goddess for, and associate her with, the creation of Homo sapiens.

Later, when it was appropriate and in order to blame Ninurta, Bau, his consort, was associated with "giving breath" to the humankind that was created after the Flood and with restoring the species that existed before the Flood and who would finally help create Homo sapiens sapiens, when this was, in fact, done by a fourth deity, as we shall see in a few moments. Bringing in this fourth deity became the solution now when Isis was out of the picture, refusing to work with her new husband, Marduk.

Bau, who previously also was associated with the Bear of the Northern Sky — Ursa Major — and was also the consort of Ninurta, had, in the altered records, now taken over the characteristics of Isis/Ishtar/Lilith, the consort of Marduk, Satan himself! Taking on characteristics which were not their own was, as we know, a big part of En.ki's and Marduk's revenge on the Orion Empire. Then they could, when necessary, blame all of their own crimes on those who had nothing to do with them. Much more about this later.

Fig. 6. Fragmented sculpture of Bau in the Louvre, in Paris, France

However, the cover-up doesn't end here — there is more! After Isis had left, Marduk was standing there without a Woman of Fire — he had no one to continue the pure Ninurta bloodline with. This was the last riddle that had to be solved by the two plot makers. As usual, there was a solution!

Both Marduk and En.ki descended to the Underworld!

VII. The New Isis of the Underworld

The Queen of the Underworld was listening very carefully to her husband's, En.ki/Nergal, story, when he told her the truth about what had happened in terms of Isis. The story interested her in more than one aspect because Inanna as Ishtar was also her older cousin, as I will soon show the reader.

Eventually, En.ki came to the point. His plan was simple. He promised Ereškigal, the Queen of the Underworld, that she could take Isis's place in the Pantheon, if she started posing as Isis/Ishtar because it had to be a well-kept secret that Isis had escaped. In exchange, Ereškigal would become the Queen of Orion once the Empire was conquered, and En.ki would be the King — thus taking over Khan En.lil's position. All she needed to do was to become the new "mother of mankind!" Marduk and her would copulate and create the new human species (which eventually would be us, Homo sapiens sapiens). The Queen didn't hesitate for one second because this was all she could wish for in one big package! She could be the mother of the new slave race and the Queen of the Stars. She wholeheartedly agreed and took on the guise of Isis/Ishtar — and in one aspect, Inanna.

This may come as a shock to many, but it's well recorded. In fact, most records say that Ereškigal is the daughter of Nanna (Nannar). In a previous paper, I proved that Nannar, Sin, and En.ki are one and the same. This being the case, then En.ki must be Ereškigal's father!

Why, then, does it say so often in the records that Ereškigal is Innana's/Ishtar's younger sister?<sup>439</sup> To answer this question, I suggest the reader reads the following reference (the italics are mine):

She (Ereškigal] is known chiefly through two myths, believed to symbolize the changing of the seasons, but perhaps also intended to illustrate certain doctrines developed dating back to the Mesopotamia period. Ereshkigal is therefore the sister of Ishtar and from one point of view her counterpart, the symbol of nature during the non-productive season of the year. As the doctrine of two kingdoms becomes crystallized, the dominions of the two sisters are sharply differentiated from one another as one of this world and one of the world of the dead.

One of these myths is the famous story of Ishtar's descent to Irkalla (or Aralu), as the netherworld was called, and her reception by her sister who presides over it; Ereshkigal traps her sister in her dark kingdom and Inanna/Ishtar is only able to leave it by sacrificing her husband Dumuzi in exchange for herself. The other myth is the story of Nergal, the plague god. His offence against Ereshkigal, his banishment to the kingdom controlled by the goddess and the reconciliation between Nergal and Ereshkigal through the latter's offer to have Nergal share the honors of the rule over Irkalla. In later tradition, Nergal is said to have been the victor, taking her as wife and ruling the land himself.<sup>440</sup>

If we read the above reference carefully, what do we see? Isis (the same deity as Ishtar and Inanna), being Ninurta's daughter, is "descending" to the Underworld, where Ereškigal "kidnaps" her identity and becomes Isis' counterpart in the Underworld — Ereškigal becomes Isis, the breeder! In reality, as it says in the quote, first paragraph, the dominions of the two sisters are sharply differentiated from one another as one of this world and one of the world of the dead. This means that Isis continues to live on the surface of the Earth (away from her suppressors), while her cousin, Ereškigal, En.ki's daughter, and now his wife, takes on her characteristics but continues to live in the Underworld! In the second paragraph, it tells us that for Isis to be free from Nergal and Ereškigal in the Underworld, she has to give her husband, who is actually Nergal/En.ki, in exchange for her "freedom." In other words—En.ki marries Ereškigal, but Marduk becomes the breeder (not mentioned in the quote). This is what the records actually say, and it's easy to see this now when we know what we know.

In addition, let's take a quick look at Dumuzi as well, who Isis left in the Underworld so that she could stay on the surface—all according to the myth. If we research Dumuzi, we find the following (the italics are mine):

Aside from this extended epic "The Descent of Inanna," a previously unknown "Courtship of Inanna and Dumuzi" was first translated into English and annotated by Sumerian scholar Samuel Noah Kramer and folklorist Diane Wolkstein working in tandem, and published in 1983. In this tale Inanna's lover, the shepherd-king Dumuzi, brought a wedding gift of milk in pails, yoked across his shoulders.<sup>441</sup>

Keep in mind here that the myths say that Dumuzi is Innana's/Isis lover and husband. Now, look at what Dumuzi is called—the shepherd-king! Isn't that interesting? Who else was called the "Shepherd King?" Here is a hint:

The first indication that the God of Israel is a shepherd to His people Israel is found in Jacob's words of farewell blessing to his sons in Genesis 48. Jacob, Abraham's grandson, spoke of "the God before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac walked, the God who has been my shepherd all my life to this day, the Angel who has delivered me from all harm..." (15-16 NIV) [from "Jesus, the Shepherd King"].<sup>442</sup>

As we can see—and this is known to all Christians—both "God" and Jesus are shepherds (and Jesus is known as the Shepherd King). According to my research, Jesus (Ea-Su) is En.ki/EA/Lucifer, and YHWH and his counterpart, Jehovah, are both En.ki/EA/Lucifer as well. Consequently, Dumuzi, whom Isis symbolically exchanged for herself, is En.ki/Nergal. Now, when this has been established, the entire quote above makes sense and fits right into our story.

In conclusion, Ereškigal took over the role as Isis the Breeder, and because Isis was no longer En.ki's lover and still lived on the surface, an "exchange" took place, where Ereškigal took Isis's place, both as En.ki's/Nergal's/Dumuzi's lover and husband. Ereškigal became the new breeder, helping to create Homo sapiens sapiens, i.e. us. This means, in plain language, that genetically, today's Global Elite are the descendants of Marduk and Ereškigal! Therefore, they have En.ki's DNA via both these beings, and they have Ninurta's DNA via the genes that were still used from the En.ki/Isis bloodline that existed before the Flood (I will make bullet points of this in a moment to make it easier to understand).

En.ki/Nergal, in some instances, also took on the role as the god Apollo or sometimes Apsu, and Ereškigal also became known as the Queen of Apollo. In more recent history, when En.ki in the Hindu tradition took on the name of "Shiva,"<sup>443</sup> Ereškigal became famous under the title "Queen of Shiva" or "Queen of Sheba."<sup>444</sup>

<sup>443</sup> I am planning to write future papers on how the different deities in the different cultures correlate across their religions and end up being the same characters under different names and titles. It's too much and too confusing to go into these details in this Level of Learning, but a "Fifth Level of Learning" is planned to follow after this one, and it will be almost like taking a scholarship on this subject. For now, I am asking the readers to play around with the idea that En.ki and Shiva may be one and the same, as well as Queen Ereškigal of the Underworld and the famous Queen of Sheba are counterparts as well. As the reader will finally see, the evidence of all this is compelling, to say the least!

As the readers may have noticed, much of this part of the “Isis story” is taking place after the Deluge, and in this and a few following papers, I am going to go back and forth on the timeline between what happened just before the Flood and what happened after. Much of what is now explained happened during the Babylonian/Akkadian Empire, when En.ki had assigned the leadership in that part of the world to his son Marduk, the biblical Satan, but the first version of En.ki’s Minions, who we today call the Global Elite or the “Illuminati,” were of the same seed line as that which had been used before the Deluge, and that was the Lucifer-Isis seed line, created by copulation between En.ki and Isis. Thus, the Marduk-Isis seed line was the second version of the Global Elite, created in Babylon, after the Deluge. The third version was the Marduk-Ereškigal seed line, to which the majority of the Global Elite of today belongs. The Powers That Be (PTB), thus, are of pure Orion blood and a mix between Ninurta’s line through Isis and Marduk, who represents the Luciferian/Satanic En.ki bloodline.

Fig. 8. Ereškigal, as the Queen of Sheba, visiting King Solomon.

They are all virtually the same because Ninurta and En.ki had the same parents, but for the gods themselves, the difference is considered huge because the more righteous Gods of the Pantheon want to have no part in Lucifer’s tricks and manipulative manners. They must feel highly assaulted the way they've been depicted in the eyes of humans after the records were distorted in Babylon.

Homo sapiens sapiens—today's version of mankind—was recreated after the Flood from the template used before the Flood, with some adjustments, as we shall see in a later paper.

Last, a fifth version of humankind was created by Isis, who basically recreated the androgynous Namlú'u, the primordial womankind.

vii.i. A Summary of the Different Bloodlines that En.ki Created, Before and After the Deluge

I am aware that all these bloodlines can be very confusing, but have no worries—I will not leave you in confusion. Hopefully, the following numbered lists will help the reader sort this out. It may be a good idea to go back to this sub-section every so often to review the information.

In summary, the following Elite (Minion) species were created before and after the Deluge, in descending order:

1. The Lucifer-Isis seed line. This bloodline was the original Elite bloodline, which En.ki created long before the Deluge—the Minions he initiated into his Mystery Schools and secret societies. These Minions became Lucifer's High Priests. However, even after the Deluge, Lucifer and Isis continued creating this bloodline for a while, until Isis escaped. This bloodline exists up to this day, and those who belong to it consider themselves being of higher rank than the other two bloodlines below. The "Lucifer-Isis Bloodline" is called the Luciferian Elite Bloodline.
2. The Marduk-Isis seed line. After En.ki was castrated by Ninurta, he let his son, Marduk (the biblical Satan), take over the breeding business. He had him marry Isis, and together they created the First Satanic Elite Bloodline.
3. The Marduk-Ereškigal seed line. When Isis escaped, Ereškigal took over the task of seeding an Elite bloodline. This is the main Elite bloodline in today's world, and is the Second Satanic Elite Bloodline.

Something En.ki and Marduk may, or may not, have anticipated when they created these three versions of Elite Bloodlines was that these bloodlines would start fighting against each other to win the creator gods' favor. Mentioned above, those of the first "Luciferian Elite Bloodline" feel superior to the others because of their more ancient lineage. Many wars throughout history have had totally different causes than what people have been told, and some of them have really been wars over territories and real estate. Sometimes the three Elite groups work together because after all, they are fighting toward a common goal. Yet, they often disagree on how to get there and who is supposed to have the most control. We see this struggle repeatedly in today's world, as well as in the old world, and as usual, it's us, the common population, who have had to suffer the most.

Fig. 9. Robert Wadlow, the tallest man known to have lived (2.72 meters or 8 feet 11 inches) with his father, Harold Wadlow (1.82 meters or 6 feet 0 inches) Robert Wadlow, the tallest man known to have lived (2.72 meters or 8 feet 11 inches) with his father, Harold Wadlow (1.82 meters or 6 feet 0 inches)<sup>445</sup>

When we are listing the rest of the different races here on Earth throughout history, it becomes much more complicated because the DNA of many different star races has been used in a multitude of experiments. We have often discussed how En.ki and his cohorts tried many different ideas before they agreed upon which race or species should be the primary one. Sometimes, they just terminated the “mistakes” they made, and entire species were killed off, while at other times, they let their mistakes be, and they just continued their experimentations. Hence, it’s virtually impossible to list all of that, and of course, similar to any other researcher on these subjects, I only know of a handful of all these different varieties of genetic manipulations that have been done throughout time. Therefore, I’m just going to list three of the ones that still existed after the Flood and up until this day.

1. Homo Sapiens sapiens. The Flood was supposed to wipe out all of humanity in conjunction with all the abominable races in existence on the planet at that particular time, but the DNA of some of these races (perhaps all of them) were saved, as we shall see later. After the Flood had subsided and the water subsided, new experimentations in genetics started again. A new version of Homo sapiens, now named “Homo sapiens sapiens,” the “thinking man,” was created. That is of course us, the general population. We are created through a gigantic mix of different DNA from many different species—both preexisting here on Earth and from beings from the stars.
2. The Nephilim Bloodline. Many people think that this bloodline was wiped out with the Flood, but this is not the case. This bloodline has been traced to many different parts of the world and still exists today.<sup>446</sup> The Nephilim are the “offspring” of Lucifer’s Fallen Angels and preexisting humans and “apes,” which resulted in the Giants of old. However, most of these “offspring” were created in genetic laboratories on Earth and on Mars. The point is that these experiments were “unauthorized” and done mainly by the Pleiadians, who themselves were giants. As we’ve discussed in a previous Level of Learning, the Pleiadians have admitted to this in channeling sessions with Barbara Marciniak as the channeler.

Some of these Giants fled underground just before the Flood, while others survived by fleeing to higher ground. Their genes were also kept safe together with other DNA while the Flood was raging. Giants have since then been more common on our planet than the general population thinks. Both in Canada and in the United States, huge creatures were allegedly still walking around in the wilderness when the white man came, and legends about these Giants have been kept in memory by the

<sup>446</sup> See “The First Level of Learning” and the “Third Level of Learning” —the papers about Michael Lee Hill and his experiences with the “Anunnaki.” One seed line of the Nephilim has been found in Ohio and can allegedly be traced by taking blood samples.

Native Indians.<sup>447</sup> In general, stories about encounters with Giants have been quite common in many cultures all over the world—until perhaps 250 years ago—since then, the encounters have been less, and when they happened, they have been suppressed by the media.

3. Giants. I am listing Giants in their own category because that makes more sense to me. Some researchers call this the “Giant gene.” When they use this term, they are normally referring to people who are in the approximate range of seven feet and up<sup>448</sup>. In society in general, we rarely see someone taller than seven feet, but in other parts of the world, larger beings than that have been spotted and encountered (see item #2 above). Giant skulls and skeletons of beings of very large stature have been found by archeologists and general people all over the planet, and some pictures have been taken, and videos have been posted on YouTube. Two great researchers in this field are Brien Foerster and Steve Quale. Although some of these pictures may have been faked and posted by Intelligence Agencies, and others, in order to counter the real pictures out there so that matters can be confused, but there are quite a few pictures that can’t be explained.

Giants were, and are, a part of the Nephilim, but not all Giants are Nephilim.

The last, but certainly not the least, important species I need to mention here in its own category is

4. Ladies of Fire—the second race of Namlú’u. This is the species which Isis created on her own while visiting her father Ninurta’s old Mountain Paradise—the Garden of Edin of old. This is a recreation of the Primordial mankind—the androgynous Namlú’u, shamans who can create life without copulating with a male, but who can also reproduce by having normal intercourse. This species will become very important as our story progresses. These “Ladies of Fire” are still here on this planet today—many are in hiding, while others eventually blended in with the rest of society and created families and married men amongst Homo sapiens sapiens.

<sup>447</sup> The story of the Nephilim Giants has been told in details in Pleiadian lectures, but can also be studied elsewhere in alternative history research.

In addition, we could actually add another race of humans to the second list above, but to make sense in the context, I've decided to mention it as the very last species.

5. Human/Namlú'u hybrids. These hybrids would look just like you and me but, perhaps, have more red in their hair and a fairer skin. The people of Ireland come to mind, and although not all Irish women are Namlú'u hybrids, many of them probably are. For some reason, unbeknownst to me, the Ladies of Fire must have had a resort on the British Isles, and particularly in Ireland. How do we look at women with red hair in general? As fiery, more energetic than average, determined, and having a strong will and strong intentions. Could we perhaps also add that red-haired women are more psychic than average? We see both women and men everywhere in society who have the attributes of red, or reddish, hair and fair, sensitive skin. We don't even think twice when we see them. They blend in with the rest of society with its huge variety of human hybrid races.

I understand that some of the above statements are generalizations, but I do believe there is some truth to it. Not that I am proud to share "beliefs" with the former Nazis, but they also believed that women with long, red hair had more psychic power and abilities than women in general. The Vril Society<sup>449</sup>, which consisted of a group of red-haired women, often with extraordinary long hair, started out in the early 1900s as a society which used the "Vril Power" (the Primordial Power of the Universe, compared with "The Force" in George Lucas' "Star Wars" movies) to increase their psychic abilities. It is said that they used their hair as an antenna to pick up and to send the Vril energy. I wrote a lot about this secret society in my e-book, "The Myth Around Supriem David Rockefeller" back in 2009<sup>450</sup> and told the story of Maria Orsic and her group of psychic women, who later were used by Hitler and the Nazi Party to channel information from the Anunnaki. Maria, in particular, managed to get in touch with a group of ETs which were located around the star of Aldebaran in the Constellation of Taurus, to which the Pleiades also belongs. These ETs were said to be the Sumerian gods, and En.ki in particular was mentioned. We know that En.ki fled to Aldebaran after his Rebellion and created a hybrid race there.

Fig. 10. Maria Orsic of the Vril Society (notice her long hair).

Maria Orsic and some of the “Vril women” suddenly disappeared from the face of the Earth, never to be seen again. This happened just before the end of World War II. The legend states that these women went to Aldebaran, and some say that Hitler went there, too, and that the body they found in the bunker was not that of Adolph Hitler. If any of this is true or not, I have no way of knowing at this time. The Vril women could just as well have been murdered. They could also have been transported in secret to the U.S. as a part of Operation Paperclip—the U.S. Government would certainly have been interested in their abilities. Still, if they did, I doubt that these women would have cooperated with the Americans—the Vril women had great integrity. Would they work under torture? It’s impossible to know.

What is quite interesting in all this, however—besides their connection with Nazi Germany (no, they were not Nazis) is the connection between the Vril women and how they connected with the Pleiades. Were these Vril women in fact Isis’s Namlú’u—the Ladies of Fire who had been in hiding for centuries? Their long, red hair and their psychic abilities make me wonder. If so, it raises a number of questions:

1. Were they actually murdered, with their bodies hidden, and the records of what happened erased?
2. If so, who killed them? The Nazis or the Allies?
3. Did they just flee and went back into hiding?
4. Were they kidnapped—either by the Nazis or by the Allies?

5. Were they indeed going to Aldebaran? If so—knowing that it is En.ki's territory—what happened to them there?
6. Moreover—if they were Isis's Ladies of Fire, why did they come out in the open as they did?

These are many questions that we don't know the answers to. If we start researching this subject, we get many different opinions and answers—some more likely than others—but there is no substantial evidence of what really happened to these women.

In order to fully understand all of this, we need to go back in time again to when Queen Ereškigal took over the breeding task from Isis.

VIII. The Knights of the Celestial Cross

As we learned in Level II, another name for Mother Goddess is Mary, which stems from the Orion form MA.UR, where "MA" denotes "mother" and "UR," as we discussed in relation to Marduk taking the title Khan-Khan-Ur, means "the one and only," i.e. "The One and Only Mother." Now, because Isis returned to the Mountain Lands of her father Ninurta and restored womankind, she became associated with Mother Goddess herself as well as the originator of this species. Therefore, we have the title "Ava" (from where the form "Eve" is built) and "Mary" — "Ava Mary," or "Ava Maria," meaning something to the effect of "The Original One and Only Mother." In other words, Isis became known in history as Mary Magdalene—the feminine side of the Grail Bloodline which is spoken about in Sir Laurence Gardner's book and in other places.

Gardner, in his own way, is describing, to some degree, what happened to those who were of Mary Magdalene's pure bloodline and the patriarchal side of the coin—the mix between Marduk and Isis, as well as the Marduk-Ereškigal seed line.

There is much in the Gospels that we do not presume to be there because we are never encouraged to look beyond a superficial level. However, we have been aided greatly in this regard in recent years by the Dead Sea Scrolls and by the extraordinary research of Australian theologian Dr Barbara Thiering. The Scrolls not only explain the offices of the Messiah of Israel; they tell about the council of twelve delegate apostles appointed to preside over specific aspects of government and ritual. In turn, this leads to a greater awareness of the apostles themselves through understanding their duties and community standing.

We now know that there are allegories within the Gospels: the use of words that have hitherto been misunderstood. We know that baptismal priests were called 'fishers', while those who aided them by hauling the baptismal candidates into the boats in large nets were called 'fishermen', with the candidates themselves being called 'fishes'. The apostles James and John were both ordained 'fishers', but the brothers Peter and Andrew were lay 'fishermen', to whom Jesus promised ministerial status, saying, 'I will make you to become fishers of men'.<sup>451</sup>

Apart from eventually becoming a fisher, Jesus was also referred to as the Christ - a Greek definition (from Khristos) which meant the King. In saying the name Jesus Christ, we are actually saying King Jesus, and his kingly heritage was of the Royal House of Judah (the House of David), as mentioned numerous times in the Gospels and in the Epistles of St Paul.

From AD 33, therefore, Jesus emerged with the dual status of a Priest Christ or, as is more commonly cited in Grail lore, a Fisher King. This definition, as we shall see, was to become the hereditary and dynastic office of Jesus's heirs, and the succeeding Fisher Kings were paramount in the continuing Bloodline of the Holy Grail.<sup>452</sup>

Superficially, I brought up the "Jesus myth" in Level II, hinting that Jesus, as we know him, is associated with En.ki but not Marduk, which would be more in line with what Gardner states if we compare with my own line of research. Hence, the "error" here lies in the confusion between bloodlines. As we saw earlier in this paper, there are actually three slightly different Elite Bloodlines created by En.ki or Marduk, respectively, as the male contributors.

The "Fisher Kings" became one of the terms for the Merovingian Kings, who were the Elite Bloodline of the Patriarchal Regime—the bloodline Marduk and En.ki decided to protect as their own main Elite Bloodline. It needed to be protected—therefore, what can be compared to as a "police force" or "semi-military force" was created. This force wore the "Celestial Cross," which is the symbol of Ninurta—something that was never spoken of. The "Ninurta bloodline" survived through Isis descendants, also known as the "Grail Bloodline."<sup>453</sup> This police force was, of course, the Knights Templar, and although they had different tasks to perform, the protection of the Holy Grail Bloodline was their main duty.

Fig 11. A Knights Templar—a Protector of the Holy Grail—wearing the Celestial Cross of Ninurta

Although under false premises, the Templars protected the female line of Queen Isis, a.k.a. Mary Magdalene. Gardner mentions this as well in his “Bloodline of the Holy Grail.”

This was especially apparent during the Age of Chivalry, which embraced a respect for womanhood, as exemplified by the Knights Templars whose constitutional oath supported a veneration of the Grail Mother, Queen Mary Magdalene.<sup>454</sup>

IX. Evidence of Marduk Marrying Isis

In order to understand how Marduk and Isis/Inanna are related, we need to start looking at a goddess called Sarpanit. Wikipedia says,

In Babylonian mythology, Sarpanit (alternately Sarpanitu, Zarpanit, Zarpanidit, Zerpanitum, Zerbanitu, or Zirbanit) is a mother goddess and the consort of the chief god, Marduk. Her name means "the shining one", and she is sometimes associated with the planet Venus. By a play on words her name was interpreted as zēr-bānītu, or "creatress of seed", and is thereby associated with the goddess Aruru, who, according to Babylonian myth, created mankind.

Her marriage with Marduk was celebrated annually at New Year in Babylon. She was worshipped via the rising moon, and was often depicted as being pregnant. She is also known as Erua. She may be the same as Gamsu, Ishtar, and/or Beltis.<sup>455</sup>

Sarpanit was Marduk's consort when he was the Chief God, which was during the time of the Babylonian Empire—the same period we have covered in this paper. However, few people have even heard of the name Sarpanit, so who is she?

According to the quote above, it says that Sarpanit may be the same as Ishtar, who is the same as Inanna and Isis. Furthermore, it also tells us that this goddess is sometimes related to Venus. So, which goddess in the Mesopotamian pantheon is associated with Venus? Isn't that Inanna? If we type in "Inanna" in Wikipedia, we get, plain and simple:

Inanna was associated with the celestial planet Venus.<sup>456</sup>

As the readers can see, this deity is also, according to Babylonian myth, the creator of mankind. So there we have it—Inanna/Isis was the goddess who really created mankind (together with En.ki and Marduk), and not Ninhursag.

In the above example, it becomes obvious that the goddess who was married to Marduk during the time of the Babylonian Empire was Sarpanit, which is another name for Inanna, Ishtar, Lilith, and Isis.

Perhaps the reader now starts to see how the few can control the many—it is very cleverly done, and it's been done in almost all aspects of life. As long as they can keep up with the deception, humanity will continue being enslaved. However, it's not even necessary to go into all these different aspects in detail—it's enough that we know how it's done, and we can start seeing the pattern in which they are manipulating us. Then it gets easier and easier to see through their lies—there is no longer any way for them to regain our trust.

In the next paper, we are going to look deeper into the story about the Deluge—another story well worth looking deeper into...

PAPER #14: THE ANTEDILUVIAN TIMES AND UTNAPISHTIM'S HEAVENLY ARK

I. En.ki Breaks his Oath with the Council of Orion

To begin with, we must be clear: there has been more than one Flood in the history of our planet. Some were natural events in Gaia's evolution, while others were instigated. One such Flood happened when Tiamat was destroyed in the Titan War.

In this paper, we are going to be concerned with the mechanics behind the Flood that most historians say happened around 11,000BC, which is 13,000 years ago—half a cycle around the Zodiac. Most researchers (but not all) agree that in general terms, "En.lil" was the one who decided to eradicate mankind, and from studying the sources available, it's no doubt that the specific En.lil that is supposedly responsible is Khan En.lil himself, the Orion Queen's consort—the King of the Orion Empire. The readers, who have read previous papers, understand by now that when the texts address En.lil, the majority of the time they are addressing Khan En.lil, without being aware that this is the case. Hence, it seems that Khan En.lil ordered the Flood to happen, and though we are aware of this, we really don't understand the reason behind such a "strange" decision. Isn't this genocide? Why did Khan En.lil want Gaia to be flooded?

What I am going to do in this paper is to go inside the heads of the individuals who were responsible for the Deluge to see how they are thinking, and why. This is, of course, a dangerous task because my conclusions may be wrong, but I am going to back them up as best as I can.

Humans have a tendency to be quite emotional about the whole Deluge issue—understandably so—and judge those involved pretty harshly, calling what they did genocide or the height of arrogance. The Deluge literally wiped out a whole planet—at least that's how the story goes—and it's hard for us to comprehend how someone can have the conscience (or lack thereof) to do something such as that. Without defending anybody, I will try to look at it from the perspective of the gods. Just as we do in a court process, we need to look at this from the perspective of everybody involved, or the real reason for this action will be lost. It is a court process—in a way—because in the end (if this seemingly endless conflict between the gods ever comes to an end), humans are the ones who will be on the witness stand, in the prosecutor's chair (as plaintiffs), and as defendants. Not all humans are innocent, either.

Thus, let us hear the gods out—Khan En.lil, Prince Ninurta, and Lord En.ki in particular—and let's start with a passage from Enûma Eliš. When Khan En.lil had had enough of what was going on here on Gaia, he and Queen Nin summoned a council somewhere up in Orion, and Lord En.ki was invited, and he actually attended! Arguments between Khan En.lil and En.ki quickly developed (Khan En.lil is the one who begins):

“[You] imposed your loads on man,
 You bestowed noise on mankind,
 You slaughtered a god together with his intelligence.
 (Ellil [En.lil] to En.ki): You must...and [create a flood].
 It is indeed your power that shall be used against [your people!]
 You agreed to [the wrong (?)] plan!
 Have it reversed!
 Let us make far-sighted Enki swear...an oath.”
 En.ki made his voice heard and spoke to his brother gods,
 “Why should you make me swear an oath?
 Why should I make my power against my people?
 The flood that you mention to me --
 What is it? I don't even know!
 Could I give birth to a flood?
 That is Ellil's kind of work!

In this passage of Atrahasis—Tablet I, Khan En.lil is reminding En.ki that he slaughtered one of his good workers as a sacrifice for the new plan, which was to create the human hybrid race, who was going to take over the work in the mines from the AIF workers and accomplish other chores for the gods. Such barbarism was not tolerated in the Orion Empire. However, if we read the sentence really carefully, it says that En.ki slaughtered a god “together with his intelligence.” Haven't we learned what this means? It means that not only was this god slaughtered physically, but his Avatar was apparently destroyed as well! The god became space dust! In simple terms, he basically ceased to exist as an individual—both in physical and metaphysical form. The Fire has nowhere to go when the Avatar/Light-body is destroyed, and eventually, the Fire dissolves and becomes one with the Universe—without individual consciousness and awareness.

Later on in the above passage, Khan En.lil wants En.ki to swear an oath to have his creations “reversed,” meaning destroyed, so that everything, after the Flood, can start all over from the beginning. En.ki refuses, not being willing to destroy “his people,” and a Flood must be Khan En.lil’s “kind of work” because the Khan is also the Lord of Airways and of weather. Erakal in the text is another name for Nergal, which again is another name for En.ki (see previous papers). This specific quote doesn’t mention that En.ki actually agreed to take the oath, however.

The following excerpt is from the Sumerian “Flood Story.” The story is hacked up because there are words and lines missing, or they are impossible to read. The context, in any case, is quite clear. I have emphasized in italics where it says that En.ki, together with all the gods in the Council, took the oath to destroy En.ki’s creation—the hybrid race:

Regardless of what we think about this decision to flood the Earth, En.ki was very fast to break his oath, and thus acting deceitfully toward the Council. This was of course not the first time this happened, but it clearly shows that En.ki was not to be trusted. He agreed to take the oath, and if he didn’t want to have anything to do with the Flood, he might have considered not taking it. Was he too pressured and intimidated to say no? Hardly. On the contrary, it must have been in En.ki's interest to have the Gods of the Council save his creation, as his life may have depended upon it. If the Council decided to wipe out everything he had engineered, En.ki could no longer hide behind his creation. He must have known this and that his life was now in danger. En.ki, most probably, attended the Council meeting remotely, via "satellite," which means he could have been located hundreds of light-years from Orion and still participated. We know that the gods often communicated via crystals.

Nevertheless, it seems as if En.ki was not on Earth when he communicated with the Council because he returned to Earth after the meeting was over.

As soon as En.ki was back on Earth, he warned Utnapishtim (also known as Noah and Atrahasis, amongst other names) about the Flood — something that would be considered a break of the oath he had taken before the Council. However, instead of openly telling Utnapishtim what the Council had decided, he tried to go around the problem by speaking to the wall outside Utnapishtim's cabin instead of with Utnapishtim in person, being well aware that Utnapishtim would hear every word En.ki said to the wall (see the quote above). It is of course quite clever, but not exactly ethical. Later in this section, I will go a deeper into this whole "wall communication."

We all know the general story, how En.ki told Utnapishtim to build an ark, in which he would store the DNA of all the relevant races, plants, and animals on Earth, so these could be restored later. Utnapishtim was also told to save himself and his family. This part of the story we are going to look into more in a moment, but first, I want to look into the character of Lord En.ki.

The tale of Utnapishtim and the Ark is told in an epic called "The Atrahasis tablets," which include both the Creation story and the Flood account.<sup>459</sup>

Tablet III discusses the Deluge, while Tablet II is a story about how [Khan] En.lil sent a famine and a drought on Earth in 1,200 years intervals in order to wipe out mankind — or parts of mankind — and all other versions of En.ki's creatures, before the Flood was even considered. Not until at the end of Tablet II is the Flood mentioned.

All in all, Tablet II, in particular, portrays Khan En.lil as a very evil, angry, and emotionless character, while En.ki is portrayed as the good guy. Could this be (and forgive me if I seem cynical now), as Wikipedia says, because it was En.ki's priests who wrote and copied the story? Both En.ki and Marduk were notorious for making changes to the ancient record, as we have learned. Once again we're told that En.ki was bound to an oath (which he broke).

Tablet II begins with more overpopulation of humans and the god Enlil sending first famine and drought at formulaic intervals of 1200 years to reduce the population. In this epic Enlil is depicted as a nasty capricious god while Enki is depicted as a kind helpful god, perhaps because priests of Enki were writing and copying the story. Tablet II is mostly damaged, but ends with Enlil's decision to destroy humankind with a flood and Enki bound by an oath to keep the plan secret.<sup>460</sup>

We must remember, for the record, that En.ki has been deceitful many times before this incident, so we can rightfully add this characteristic to his personality. If we put ourselves in En.ki's/Lucifer's shoes, wouldn't it be fair to suspect that he was the one who created the bad feelings amongst the gods, whose task it was to mine the gold and precious stones in the beginning because En.ki wanted them to rebel? Learning how he talked to the wall in order not to break the oath, wouldn't it be fair to think that En.ki, using this same side of his character, thought he would be justified in creating a hybrid race if the miners rebelled? Wouldn't it be logical to think that Lucifer may have wanted to create the human hybrid race—not so much because he wanted them to be miners (although this was something he could use them for as well), but because he needed soldiers as well as vessels, into which his imprisoned cohorts in Sirius could incarnate, and thus escape from their prison? He needed women in particular, but in order for them to reproduce, he also created males. My "hypothesis" here becomes self-evident when we look at what En.ki actually did, which was exactly what I just said.

Dr. Joseph Farrell comes to a similar conclusion and writes in his book:

It is clear from the Atrahasis however, that at least one motivation for the Deluge, as far as the Mesopotamian tradition is concerned, is the overpopulation of the earth by the new hybrid race...perhaps Enki's seeming beneficence to Atrahasis and the human race was just that: seeming beneficence. Perhaps he had plans to use the revolt among the human workers to further his own power.

In any case. It seems that the Atrahasis is more than a mere epic, for it hints at dark designs and agendas at work in the pantheon, and moreover clearly suggests that mankind, whether in hid hybrid form or not, is perhaps both battlefield and prize in a much larger cosmic conflict.<sup>461</sup>

As we can see, I am not alone in seeing through En.ki's manipulative and hideous character. It is easy for En.ki to make Khan En.lil look like a monster, using the Flood as a justification for doing so. The problem we normally have when we're talking about these gods is that we are basing our knowledge on records that were written by scribes, who in turn, were priests in En.ki's hierarchy. If you were En.ki, would you tell us the truth? Of course not, why would you? It would contradict your agenda.

Fig. 1. The Atra-Hasis Tablets

Fortunately for us, some original records have been restored, although those have been compared with the rewritten ones, which were available first, and adjusted to fit into the false history. Nevertheless, we can use these more accurate records to tell a more correct story. However, how do we know that one story is actually more correct than the other? On one level, we don't. We will never be able to totally determine the absolute true history by using ancient mythology and old cuneiform. Timelines are changing as we continue looking—events are altered when someone figures something new out, and so on. After all, thus is the nature of the Multiverse. Even the more truthful version of history contains parts that were intentionally written to deceive because “history is written by the winners.” This is always true, and we have to deal with that and do the best we can to figure things out. Important to remember, however, is that we are talking about interdimensional and multidimensional beings, and earthly timelines are not a reliable way to look at history—it needs to be seen with multidimensional, “fluid” eyes, or we’ll miss too many points. This is why the timelines in my papers change as we advance. I’m only using timelines to have reference points in 3-D—other than that, they are quite useless.

Amitakh Stanford is a female researcher into the Anunnaki and other ET star races. I have read a few of her articles and find a mix of very useful and truthful information and imbedded (and I think intentional) disinformation. Nevertheless, she wrote an excellent article back in 2002, which has a lot to do with rewriting and manipulating ancient records, and I suggest that you read it. It is short and compressed and very compelling. You will find her article here: http://www.xeeatwelve.com/articles/the\_anunnaki.htm.

II. Concerns from other Star Races, Leading to the Decision to Terminate Mankind

There was a time when En.ki’s experiments here on Earth became too disruptive and too disturbing to witness by the Orion Council. For many thousands of years, they had left En.ki alone because they knew that if they interfered, En.ki would kill off his creation, and with them also the remnants of Queen Nin’s and Prince Ninurta’s creation. This, they were very hesitant to do.

On the other hand, it came to a point when what En.ki and his cohorts did on Earth apparently became a threat also to the rest of our galactic sector. During the later Atlantic Era, man had already reached the Moon and traveled to other planets and celestial bodies in the solar system—of course under the guidance and guardians of the gods. This became a real threat to other star races because they could easily anticipate what En.ki could do with a relatively ignorant human race under his command: First, the human race was not mentally ready to travel in space, and if En.ki taught them to nanotravel, the Orionites were not the only star race that was concerned. Second, the creatures En.ki had created on Earth were often failed experiments that he didn’t care about, but instead left to evolve on their own, causing confusion and violence on the planet. Worse than that, however, was if these beings were allowed into space as well—many peaceful star races felt threatened by this. There were, in other words, more than one star race who wanted something to be done about it, and the Orion Council felt quite pressured.

Both the Khan, the Queen, and Prince Ninurta would highly dislike to see the remnants of their original creation destroyed, and with them perhaps the whole Living Library, but they more and more came to the conclusion that they might have to intervene in one way or another. Some humans had already figured out how to use crystals for time travel, communication, and space travel, but without having any ethical and moral codes following with such freedoms. In addition, there were also humans who had learned to create life forms, just as their Chief God, Poseidon (En.ki) had done, and still did.

Whether we agree or not, it's important to understand why the Orion Empire came to the decision where they had to tell En.ki to take the oath to destroy his creations. It is doubtful if the Orion Council actually for even one moment thought that En.ki would do this, but they had to act according to their laws and regulations, just as we do, and order him to take this action.

If I would sum it up, the following would be the main reasons why the gods decided to terminate life on Earth:

1. En.ki's genetic experimentation went out of hand. It was very painful for the Queen, the King, and the Prince of Orion to see their former Paradise turn into a cosmic zoo, with a lot of abominable beings wandering around—sometimes aimlessly—on the planet, eating each other, but also killing and eating humans. There were experiments which En.ki had created in a hurry, realizing his mistakes, but didn't care to do anything about them. The Orion Council saw the complete irresponsibility in such actions, and they could not see an end to it.
2. Overpopulation. The planet just before the Flood was apparently highly overpopulated, and this is probably the reason for Khan En.lil's classic comment, where he said to the Council, "Because of their [humans] noise I am disturbed; because of their tumult I can't get any sleep."<sup>462</sup> This is erroneously interpreted as if En.lil was physically present on Earth, but what it really implies is that in his mind [Khan] En.lil was disturbed by what En.ki had done, and thinking about it gave him no rest. Humanity, and all other creations on Earth, were basically destroying the planet with everything that comes with overpopulation.

3. Humanity became a threat. Other star races became quite concerned with how mankind evolved. They could see them using nuclear weapons against each other, and the star races were afraid that mankind would take their warlike manners with them out in space. No one needed another violent colonizing race in this sector of the galaxy. There were those who could see through many of En.ki's plans and anticipated how he would use humans as foot soldiers to expand his own Empire. The more clever races wanted to stop this from happening. En.ki needed to be stopped and not allowed to fulfill his plans, which otherwise would affect many star races in this sector of the Universe and beyond.
4. Termination became the last resort. For eons, the Orions had held themselves back to avoid another, even larger Cosmic War than was already being fought, and had been ongoing since Lucifer's Rebellion. Now it had come to the point where the Council had decided that termination, as the last resort, had to be the solution. I believe that En.ki was not prepared for such a decision from the Council and was more or less put up against the wall. He believed that he had no other choice than to accept to take the oath but never intended to keep it. He also knew that with the destruction of mankind, his own safety was at stake. He had always hid himself behind humans, saying that if something happened to him, he would destroy the whole species. Now, when the Council had decided that destruction was the only solution, En.ki needed to be careful because they could capture him at any time and put him to trial, and from what I can see, this is exactly what the Council planned, as a part of the whole scenario. However, En.ki managed to escape again, and I will get into how he did it later on in this paper.

Atrahasis Tablet II, which brings up Khan En.lil's discontent with the human overpopulation, describes that his first order of action against En.ki's creation was to let loose the surrupu-disease—a plague—over the Earth to take care of the overpopulation. It seems that this first action was a “milder” verdict, which would save some of humanity, but affect a large part of it, so that the overpopulation at least would be taken care of.

The plague was let loose on the planet, and many people died. Utnapishtim/Atrahasis went to En.ki and asked for help. En.ki told him that the people needed to stop praying to their personal gods and instead make sacrifices to the “Plague god”, who in the tablet is called Namtar. Apparently, people started doing so, and Namtar became so ashamed that he stopped the plague. Moreover, it seems that Khan En.lil ordered Namtar to start the Plague. BUT who is Namtar?

It proves to be quite interesting to start researching who Namtar is. We soon find out that he is the son of “En.lil” (Khan En.lil) and associated with death and the Underworld.<sup>463</sup> He is also married to a goddess of the Underworld, who is named Hušbišag. Hence, when we take a look at Hušbišag, we find out that she sure enough is a goddess of the Netherworlds.<sup>464</sup> Although the names have changed, this sounds suspiciously similar to the goddess Ereškigal and Nergal/En.ki himself. So, in the light of things, we can suspect with quite some certainty that En.ki was playing the trickster again. In other words, Khan En.lil was telling his son, Namtar/En.ki to start the plague. Utnapishtim became tormented when he saw how people were treated and asked En.ki, his supposed father, for help. En.ki saw how he could take advantage of the situation and strengthen his own position by asking a majority of people to pray to him and give him sacrifices (historically, such sacrifices are basically blood rituals from which En.ki could gain power and strength). Then he stopped the plague that he was ordered to spread to its completion. Thus, this was, from what it seems, the first Council decision that he broke. Afterwards, he blamed Namtar, who probably was a fictional god, for starting the plague. This fits with what we’ve discussed earlier — En.ki wanted to be worshipped as the One and Only God, and by playing the trickster again, he managed to get a big part of the population to worship him.

Let’s take a deeper look at what En.ki was doing here. He was agreeing with the Council to reduce the population and even started spreading the Plague. Then, when people began to complain, he told them to stop praying to the Orion Gods—or any other god or goddess they may worship—and concentrate all worship on Namtar, a possible fictional god, who most likely was an alias for En.ki himself. Thus, En.ki stopped the Plague after having received all this energetic power from mankind and immediately became the “good guy”—both as En.ki and Namtar because it was En.ki who Utnapishtim came to when he needed help, and it was En.ki who “resolved” the situation. Namtar also won people’s affection because he showed to have a conscience when he stopped the Plague. In reality, it was En.ki, who all along played a game with mankind and the Council.

About 1,200 years later, according to these same records, man had multiplied again to such an extent that it started concerning Khan En.lil. This time he decided on a drought to reduce their numbers. Hence he let the “Thunder-Rain God,” Adad, stop and hold back the rains so the land became dry and without water. Again, Utnapishtim came to En.ki for advice, and again,

En.ki gave the same advice as he did earlier and told him to tell the people to worship the one god who is holding back the rains.<sup>465</sup> Adad, just as Namtar did, became ashamed and let the rains start falling again.

Fig. 2. Adad

Adad is an interesting character if we look him up, and it seems as if the scribes have had a hard time identifying him correctly. This is probably not the scribes' fault because they only wrote down what they were told, but it looks as if Adad, like Namtar, was one of these gods who was used by the "greater" gods (read En.ki) when they needed someone else to be responsible for what "they" were doing. Interestingly enough, it's not hard to find this little quote:

He is also occasionally son of Enlil.<sup>466</sup>

Does this mean that Adad is another alias for En.ki? Well, if we look at the pattern here, it definitely seems that history is repeating itself—first Namtar and now Adad. The Orion Council must be furious by now.

---

<sup>465</sup> This means that Utnapishtim now has lived for more than 1,200 years. We know that people at that time—En.ki's Minions in particular (of whom Utnapishtim was one—some say he was En.ki's son)—lived a long time, but the time span of 1,200 years is used continuously in this text and should therefore probably not be taken literally. It's better to look at it as if it means that a long time had passed.

<sup>466</sup> <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Adad>

Another 1,200 years went by, and the noise became almost unbearable. To apply a new solution, Father En.lil declared “a general embargo of all nature's gifts. Anu and Adad<sup>467</sup> were to guard heaven, Enlil the earth, and Enki the waters, to see that no means of nourishment reach the human race”.<sup>468</sup> In addition to this, he makes women infertile by “let[ting] the womb be too tight to let the baby out”.<sup>469</sup> The Atrahasis Epic says,

When the second year arrived
They had depleted the storehouse.
When the third year arrived
The people's looks were changed by starvation.
When the fourth year arrived.
Their upstanding bearing bowed,
Their well-set shoulders slouched,
The people went out in public hunched over.
When the fifth year arrived,
A daughter would eye her mother coming in;
A mother would not even open her door to her daughter. . . .
When the sixth year arrived
They served up a daughter for a meal,
Served up a son for food.<sup>470</sup>

This decisions of the gods apparently led to cannibalism, something that only the Nephilim Giants had dedicated themselves to previously.

The Tablet is broken at this point, but the general interpretation is apparently that En.ki ignored the decision by distributing a large quantity of fish for the population to eat. This made Khan En.lil even more furious, so he decided to put an end to it once and for all and let a Flood sweep over the planet and drown everything in its way. This was when En.ki and the rest of the gods had to take an oath not to go against this final decision. En.ki was ordered to execute the Flood. En.ki refused at first, asking his father why he would use his power to destroy his own creation, and that this was more in line with what Khan En.lil

<sup>467</sup> Adad is used here as well as a separate entity from En.ki. If I am correct that Adad and En.ki are one and the same (which I believe I am correct), En.ki and Marduk had a reason for letting the scribes include Adad in this new Council decision, too. Unfortunately, the records are broken, so we may never be able to find out, unless we compare notes with other records that we do have.

would do (because Father En.lil is the Lord of Nature, and has the power to create Nature and destroy Nature). Eventually, En.ki agreed to take the oath anyway. However, he had no intention to keep it (at least not in the fashion in which it was decided, as we shall see), but in order not to overtly break it, he figured out a way to tell Utnapishtim about the Council's decision without breaking the oath.

Hence, he went to Utnapishtim's reed hut, made sure Utnapishtim was home, and started talking to the wall instead of directly to Utnapishtim himself. This way, he hadn't broken the oath by telling mankind about the Flood—he only told it to a reed hut wall. This is what he told "the wall,"

Wall, listen constantly to me!
Reed hut, make sure you attend to all my words!
Dismantle the house, build a boat, . . .
Roof it like the Apsu
So the sun cannot see inside it!
Make upper decks and lower decks,
The tackle must be very strong,
The bitumen [a kind of tar] strong . . .<sup>471</sup>

Utnapishtim followed En.ki's directions and built the Ark, filling it with DNA of all significant species, including animals, humans, and plants, and got ready before the storms had built up to such a degree that the water started flooding the land.

Up in the Heavens, the Mother Goddess was crying, the records say.

Like a wild ass screaming the winds howled
The darkness was total, there was no sun. . . .
As for Nintu the Great Mistress,
Her lips became encrusted with rime.
The great gods, the Annuna,
Stayed parched and famished.
The goddess watched and wept . . .<sup>472</sup>

The Goddess complained bitterly over Father En.lil's and Prince En.lil's shortcomings as decision makers (Prince Ninurta had apparently sided with his father when it came to flooding the planet). She wept when she saw dead humans “clog the river like dragonflies.” She swore “by the flies in her necklace” that she would never forget the Flood.

Fig. 3. The beginning of the Deluge (artist's interpretation)

Khan En.lil, on the other hand, became furious when he realized that the DNA of the human race was preserved. He understood that only En.ki could have been clever enough to once again override the orders from him and the Council.

En.ki (assumably from a safe haven) admitted to En.lil that he preserved the life forms on Earth by warning Utnapishtim and suggested that in the future it would be better to use a more “humane” form of population control, such as restricted birth control. En.ki said that he had preserved the DNA of the version of humanity that had just been wiped out, and he intended to start all over, but apparently agreed with Father En.lil (the text is fragmented here) that one-third of the women would not be able to give birth successfully — a pasittu demon(?) would “snatch the baby from its mother’s lap.”<sup>473</sup>

Dr. Farrell and I are very suspicious about En.ki’s motives here when he constantly turned against the Council. It may look as if his beneficence to Utnapishtim is genuinely caring, but in reality, is it just a way to increase En.ki’s own power?<sup>474</sup> Utnapishtim, after all, is En.ki’s own son with a human female, as the story states, so he's the perfect being to preserve for the New Era after the Flood. Also, when he fed the starving people with fish and had the Nature Gods withdraw their actions against Nature, it created an opposite effect on the Gods than one would have thought that En.ki anticipated. However, En.ki is after all Lucifer—forget not!—and Lucifer is clever when it comes to manipulation, which is his perhaps the trump card in all this drama. What if En.ki actually, in his own way, silently agreed with Father En.lil that the result of his creation was chaos, and he wanted to start anew? This idea may not be as foreign as it may seem at first. Ponder it, and take what I've written in this paper into consideration. After all, Father En.lil did not want to terminate mankind to begin with, but let's say, for argument's sake, that En.ki was the one who wanted to terminate mankind.

How is this possible? Well, let's go back and see what really happened here. Khan En.lil, despite other star races' wish to terminate mankind, wanted to avoid this from happening. Instead, he decided on population control. En.ki, who had gotten tired of what he had created and wanted to start from the beginning again, saw this whole thing as a great opportunity. Therefore, he sabotaged every effort from the Orion Council to save the majority of mankind. En.ki knew that if his plan succeeded, the Council eventually would have to give in to the pressure from other star races and, indeed, would need to terminate mankind once and for all. Thus, when every attempt from the Council had failed because En.ki sabotaged their plans, they came up with the idea of a Flood. En.ki probably jumped for joy when he heard that but kept a straight face. Instead, he said something to the effect, "What Flood? I don't even know what you're talking about. This is something for En.lil to instigate—not me!" Thus, he swore himself free from this decision, pretending he didn't want to have anything to do with it—although he secretly did—and has since then been seen as humanity's friend.

Then, however, Khan En.lil wanted everybody to take an oath, so the project would not be sabotaged. Why would the Khan do that? He would do that because the Council's plans had been sabotaged repeatedly by En.ki in the past and now the Khan wanted to avoid this from happening again. Probably, the oath was not something En.ki had foreseen, and therefore, it became a problem that he had to solve. Now he, En.ki, had to take an oath to destroy mankind, and he did not want to go into the "history books" as a "destroyer" but as the "savior." BUT, how would he accomplish this?

Some might say that En.ki warned Utnapishtim because of compassion for mankind, but was that really his motive? After all, he warned the one who is considered to have been En.ki's hybrid son—Utnapishtim—but he didn't care to warn any other members of the human race—except his own Minions, as we shall see. The average man—the slave race—he left to perish. The only thing En.ki seemed to be concerned about was to save his purest bloodlines because he knew he could create new slaves later on. If that's called compassion, then En.ki was indeed compassionate.

Those who support En.ki may say that he didn't have a choice—he was bound by an oath, and his hands were tied. I don't believe that for a moment. When I put two and two together, I see En.ki showing his true face all too well. He tricked the Council, and in the end, he got exactly what he wanted—a terminated mankind, and a chance to start anew. The Council did not want to terminate mankind—En.ki did!

Now, there's another side story to all this. When Earth got her verdict and En.ki knew that the flooding of Earth seemed inevitable, as a last attempt, En.ki invited his brother, Ninurta, to come to Earth, in what he called a "Diplomatic Meeting." Ninurta took his brother up on it and descended to Earth a short time before the Flood. They met in the high mountain lands, which En.ki knew that his brother loved the most here on Earth. He wanted Ninurta to feel comfortable and "at home."

There, En.ki and Ninurta stood face to face again, looking at each other in silence at first. It was a calm day—as if Gaia had no idea what had been decided for her—and the weather was not as humid as down at sea-level. Before the Deluge, a canopy was covering the planet most of the time, but not always—people were actually able to see the stars and the asterisms because astrology was a great art back in those days, and many people were educated in it.

Ninurta didn't say a word—he didn't like and he didn't trust his brother at all, especially after everything that had happened. However, at this time (whether it was desperation on Lucifer's part, or if he thought that his brilliance and manipulation abilities would have an impact on his brother, I don't know), the Shining One, Prince Lucifer, came out and started talking calmly and convincingly to Prince Ninurta.

"Dear brother!" he began. "You and I have had our disagreements, and we have been in combat with each other. You even deprived me of my manhood!" Lucifer smiled. "None of that is important now. Let us leave that behind us. I admit that your creation was absolutely gorgeous, and the Living Library you started with our parents and those...those...giants from Vega...oh, the Vulcans, was ingenious. As you can see, I have kept it up—it is still here, my brother. However, my dream was to create a species that would reproduce sexually, as a mix of your womankind and my mankind. It was an Experiment, just like yours. I was wild at the time, and I must admit—quite desperate. Of course, you understand that I was under deep pressure. I didn't agree with my parents' ways of seeing things, so I rebelled. After been thrown out, I came here for revenge—that is true!—but once I'd taken over Ar-i-du and things had calmed down, I saw the fantastic creation that was built here, and I thought: 'My goodness! This is magnificent!' At that time, I had nothing in mind other than to improve it even more, if I could. I knew that's what you planned, anyway, and now that you were not here...well, you know—I tried to make it for you, but perhaps a little bit with my own state of art."

Lucifer paused and looked at his brother. Ninurta stood in the same position as when Lucifer had started talking and looked his brother in his eyes. Ninurta's face expression was serious, but neutral. Lucifer had a hard time reading him, which made him slightly nervous. He continued, smiling:

"Anyway, all that is in the past. I wish it could have been done differently, and in certain terms we can still change things around. I hate to fight you, my brother! It's not your fault that our father chose you instead of me—that he loved you more. Why wouldn't he? You are such an excellent warrior, and you've been taught well doing other things too. They never knew where they had me because I was different..."

Lucifer took a step forward and bent over to really look deep into his brother's eyes and said: "Let's not allow our father to destroy this beautiful creation. You and I can make a difference, you know. Look what I have created all by myself! All these creatures, all these animals and intelligent beings. Look at the lulus—they follow every command, and they seldom complain anymore. They gladly help me! Not only that—look at the Empire I've been building over the millennia! It's growing and growing! My son, Marduk, is doing a great job back in Draco. We are expanding! Soon we're bigger than Orion! See, I don't even have a name for my Empire yet—I saved that for last, you see. I saved it for us—you and me. I've been waiting a long time for this moment, and it's very exciting for me. I want you and I to start working together. Don't you see? I've done all this without you, but how far do you think you and I would have reached if we'd worked in unison from the beginning? I bet that the Orion Empire would have been ours by now. Together, you and I are untouchable! Together, we can conquer the Universe, and I promise you a place at the top—right where you belong! My brother, what do you think?"

Lucifer took a step back and watched his brother in anticipation. Lucifer's bright eyes were shining, and his long hair was flowing in the breeze that had incrementally built up while he was talking. He was beautiful to look at, and his voice was like honey—when he wanted it to be.

Ninurta, who didn't look very different from his brother, with his black skin, long hair, and his face covered in a thick, well-nurtured beard, didn't say a word. During Lucifer's monolog, he hadn't taken his eyes from his brother. Also now, he was steadfast. He couldn't believe what he was hearing! A rebellion against his parents was totally out of the question—that was something that wouldn't even occur to Ninurta under any circumstances. He loved his parents beyond everything else, and he knew their mindset, which was very similar to his own. Now, his lips didn't say a word, but his heart declined with all its might. He had heard enough.

In silence, Ninurta turned his back to Prince Lucifer and ascended back to the Heavens, heading directly to Satania to speak with his parents about what Lucifer had said. His mind was troubled and his heart was heavy when he relayed the news. He knew the mindset of his brother, but it was still a shock to hear him suggest that he, Prince Ninurta, heir of Orion, would work together with this destructive rebel. It was an insult!

Khan En.lil and Queen Nin listened to his words, but Queen Nin spoke not. She did not like the decision-making of the Orion Council thus far, and she didn't like the wishes that had been put on the table by Father En.lil and his youngest son. The Queen was in tears because this would be the end of her creation—the end of any traces of the Primordial womankind and the end of the Living Library—all of which she had loved so dearly. Still, she had no right to override the decisions of the Council. Thus were the laws of Orion. Hence, she excused herself and let father and son continue the discussion.

Khan En.lil understood at this point that it was a bad idea to try to have Lucifer destroy his own creation, which otherwise would have been the logical way to do it, following Orion laws and rules. Instead, he asked Prince Ninurta to execute the order to flood Gaia. They both anticipated that En.ki—despite the oath he'd been taking—would not destroy his creations.

They also both understood that En.ki planned to use his Elite bloodline, possessing their shamanic power, and use Tantric Sex and other means to work tirelessly on finding the backdoor into Orion. They also understood that this was one of the major ways Lucifer had figured out he could conquer the Queen's and the Khan's Empire. Therefore, in spite of any other reasons, the Flood was inevitable. This Elite bloodline had to be terminated to safeguard the Empire. Unfortunately, as they saw it, there was no other way to do that but to terminate the entire human race and everything else on the planet. Everything else had failed!

What then? What if Lucifer once again rose like a Phoenix from the ashes and started anew? What good would the Flood have done then? Khan En.lil revealed his plans, which had been brought up in the Council meeting while Ninurta had been busy elsewhere, unable to attend.

“Maybe Lucifer was right on one point,” said Khan En.lil. “He once said that to flood the Earth is a job for En.lil and not for him. After all, you and I are the Lords of Nature, aren’t we? We can execute such things. We just have to bypass Lucifer. Go back there, my son, and do your duty. Also, keep your troops on watch on our side of the Saturn Stargate. Once the Flood has begun, we will go in and take back Ar-i-du. This is my gift to your mother. The star system shall be ours again, and we can start all over—without your brother and his legions present anymore. What do you say?”

This was excellent news for Ninurta! He would love to recreate womankind again and restore the Living Library after the Flood. His feeling of doom and gloom turned in a second into hope and excitement. He left the Palace in a much better mood, now willing to execute the order!

Little did Ninurta and the Khan know, how far En.ki’s infiltration had gone, however. En.ki had managed to infiltrate Satania with his own loyal officers, who told him of Khan En.lil’s plans, which gave En.ki time to prepare and take actions. En.ki told Utnapishtim to be ready with his Ark in the next seven days, and he’d better make it “air tight” because he was going to take Utnapishtim, his family, and the stored DNA (a plan the Orion Empire knew nothing about) on a ride that his hybrid son would never forget.

Once En.ki got the message from his spies in Satania, he quickly took action. Another thing he had planned to do was to free as many as possible of the Nommos—his Minions who were still trapped in the Sirius system. Indeed, he managed to get most of them out with the help from shamanic human females, who let the souls of these criminals enter their bodies via black magic rituals and Tantric sex. En.ki knew that the vessel template he had prepared for his trapped friends had to be rescued from the Deluge, and optimally, the rest of his Minions, who were already walking on the face of Earth. He was aware, however, that many of them probably couldn’t be saved—there wasn’t enough time—but it was irrelevant in a sense. As long as the souls who were trapped in Sirius could be taken out of there, he could give them new bodies after the Flood. On the Ark, he still had the seed stored, so he could use it later.

Knowing that it was impossible for the Flood to cover the Earth entirely, En.ki told his Minions to move to higher grounds immediately and gave them the altitude which they needed to move to in order to survive—all from using En.ki’s mathematical skills. The Orions had always been brilliant with numbers.

ii.i A Multitude of Different Soul Types Inheriting the Earth

Here is another side note. If we look at the human population from after the Flood and up until our present time, we have a mix of souls here on Gaia, coming from many different places in the Universe. Of course, we have the original, human souls, who were created here in our own solar system, and who never have been anywhere else but here on Earth, reincarnated over and over. Then we have the Global Elite, who consists of a mix of souls, originating from different places in the galaxy. Many of them are the criminals whom En.ki rescued from the Dark Star in the Sirius system, while others are souls coming from other Lucifer-dominated star systems, such as Alpha Draconis, and others. Some of the Global Elite are also human souls, who are heavily corrupted and work for the "System," which of course is Lucifer's own "System." Then there are criminal souls from many different parts of the galaxy, who were dumped here when star races, who were fed up with their worst criminal souls, noticed that Earth was a prison planet, and that En.ki was happy to take them on. This is also mentioned in Peter R. Farley's book, "The Experiment:"

... there were also others on the planet at that time who were outcasts from other planets. Just as Australia had started out as a penal colony for those deemed unfit for polite society in 18th century England, so to[o] at times was Earth a dumping ground for those considered unwanted by the civilizations on their home planets.<sup>475</sup>

Also, we have a minority of Titan souls, who belonged to the Titans who were killed here in the Titan War, and moreover, we have the souls of Namlú'u,<sup>476</sup> who never got the chance to escape during the Solar War, when Lucifer took over the planet. They are very wise and loving souls, raising the frequency of everybody around them, being great teachers and spiritual beings, who have been living amongst us humans for millions upon millions of years. These souls originally came from Orion, and they have the Fire of the Mother Goddess still burning inside of them in such a fashion that the rest of humanity can't miss it.

Thus, when people say that Earth is a prison planet, and all the souls living here are criminal souls dumped here from elsewhere, they are either lying, or they don't know any better. Although it's true that criminal souls have been dumped here, most of mankind is innocent, and are just being manipulated by all these criminal elements. This is the sadness and the sorrow we sometimes feel deep inside—something we constantly carry with us, even if we otherwise are happy and positive beings—we know that we don't belong amongst these criminal elements. We listen to the daily news and look around us, thinking, "what am I doing here? I don't belong in this insanity!" So don't listen to those who claim that we are all criminals. Also, we are not "fallen," like some people say. I think we will hear more about such nonsense in the near future—Lord En.ki has his plans.

After all, it's easy to recognize who these criminal souls actually are—they are the ones who can harm humans and animals without seeing anything wrong with it. They don't mind and even get off from torturing, killing, stealing, and cheating on other people—some of them even get sexually aroused from it. They are the ones who propagate false friendships, and then they betray you, thinking nothing of it. If you are not fitting into these categories, you are definitely not one of the criminal souls.

III. Forty Days and Forty Nights—The End of a Long and Confusing Era

So how was the Deluge executed? Was it really Starship Nibiru, which happened to be in the neighborhood at the moment and instigated this global catastrophe? Was it the icecaps of the North and South poles that burst because we were at the end of a major Ice Age?

It is true that Planet Gaia was at the end of an Ice Age when the Flood occurred, but even if the polar ice broke and flooded the land, it wasn't enough to create such a dramatic effect, although it certainly must have contributed. Also, I have no other real indications that it was Nibiru that did it, other than Sitchin's accounts, and other sources agreeing with his "translations." The Epics tell another story, which more correlates with what I've concluded in my research in general. To some degree, I think we can use the Epics that are available to us, the ones we have already used—such as the Bible, the Atrahasis Epic, and the Epic of Gilgamesh—they all tell a similar story. I will also use other sources, and list them in the endnotes (or footnotes if you're reading the PDF file) as we go along.

Genesis states, "All the fountains of the great deep burst forth, and the sluices of the sky broke open."<sup>477</sup> The Gilgamesh Epic says, "the underworld footings collapsed, the dikes gave away, and a tempest swept the land."<sup>478</sup>

From reading Genesis in the Bible and the other two epics, it seems that it started with heavy rains which lasted for weeks, maybe months, and in addition, there were great tidal waves sweeping in over land, followed by majestic earthquakes.

There are those who refer to the vapor canopy, which to some extent is said to have covered the skies, and they ask the question if this would have been enough to create this effect (perhaps in correlation with the melting ice caps)? I would say, no, because the sources are telling us that there was more going on than just these two things, although again, they may have contributed or been used intentionally as part of the plan to flood the Earth.

Author and researcher R.A. Boulay speculates, by using old Rabbinical legends as his sources, that it was a cosmic event, which also caused changes in the position of the stars. Two stars are said to have been moved from the Constellation of the Pleiades, and these were replaced by two stars from the Bear Constellation. According to these sources, Boulay says, there were also changes in the Sun and the Moon, although these changes are not specified.<sup>479</sup>

These ideas are highly interesting, and some of the events may have occurred as a part of the plan, but the question is what really happened during the Deluge, and what happened afterward—something we will look into in the next paper. In the Post-Diluvian times soon after the Flood, En.ki and his son made drastic changes to Earth's position in the solar system. Interestingly enough, the Rabbinical legends seem to have picked up on this.

We know that Ninurta was the final person in charge of instigating the Flood, and what seems to be in common amongst most sources is that Ninurta was actually here in the solar system when he started the event. In other words, he left Gaia after talking with his brother in the mountains, but returned again to complete the work. I would presume he came through his own old Saturn Stargate, which probably wasn't very well protected at the time because En.ki knew that the Deluge was inevitable, so he let his brother in. Also, as we shall see, En.ki had additional plans, which included letting Ninurta and his helpers in. Not only that—En.ki, in the Gilgamesh Epic, in his role as Nergal (syncretism at play again), helped to pull out the dams, and Adad (possibly another of En.ki's aliases) created the storms,

With the first light of dawn a black cloud came from the horizon; it thundered within where Adad, lord of the storm was riding. In front over hill and plain Shullat and Hanish, heralds of the storm, led on. Then the gods of the abyss rose up; Nergal pulled out the dams of the nether waters, Ninurta the war-lord threw down the dykes, and the seven judges of hell, the Annunaki, raised their torches, lighting the land with their livid flame.<sup>480</sup>

The gods of the abyss, as described here, are those of the Underworld—the gods who had been (and still are) ruling this planet, and the ones who enslaved mankind. Nergal, as En.ki, is of course the one ultimately in charge. The AIF leadership, here called the “Seven Judges of Hell,” who they are will be revealed in one of the last papers of this level of learning.

Interesting in the above passage, however, is that when push came to shove, the “Anunnaki, (the AIF) decided to help with the Deluge after all, and I will soon reveal their real motives behind this. I will show how En.ki played both sides in this whole drama. He was not telling the truth to the Orion Council about his plans, of course, and he had figured out how to use their decision in his own favor, after he had infiltrated Satania with his own men.

Once the Deluge began, panic broke out on the planet, and people and animals fled everywhere. Animals, from instinct, looked for higher ground, and because of that, many of them survived. Some humans survived as well (those who were lucky enough to get up in the high mountains in time) together with some of the anomalies—such as giants and other miscellaneous creatures. However, the majority of life on Earth disappeared in the Flood, and even those who survived afterward would have a hard time staying alive because of lack of food. Cannibalism became common again.

In fact, the majority of those who survived the Flood died in the aftermath.

IV. The Saturn Stargate Closed!

When the job was done, and the Flood was sustaining itself, a series of things happened—one after the other at a rapid pace. En.ki was executing his plans!

Before Ninurta had the chance to let his MAKH warriors enter through the Saturn Stargate, En.ki attacked Ninurta and his helpers, who had assisted him in instigating the Flood. A quick battle took place outside the Earth's atmosphere, but the numbers were against Ninurta and his men—they all had to flee out of the solar system through the stargate, taken by surprise.

Little did they know that En.ki had his spies positioned all the way up in Satania and the Palace, and thus knew everything about Khan En.lil's and Ninurta's plans to take over the solar system and put En.ki on trial. So, once En.ki had killed or driven away all the MAKH warriors, he quickly closed the Saturn Stargate. No one could now leave or enter the solar system that way without En.ki's permission. The Solar Stargate, and other stargates, leading into Ar-i-du from outside, were shut down as well. The solar system was now totally in En.ki's hands.

Also, while everybody was concentrating on instigating the Flood, En.ki had taken Utnapishtim and his Ark off the planet. In other words, the Ark of Noah was built as a spaceship and not as a boat.<sup>481</sup> It was meant to “float on the ‘Primordial Waters’,” and not on the earthly oceans. Although Noah came back, it's questionable if we will ever find the correct Noah's Ark here on Earth. Some say they have already discovered it in the same place the Bible put it, but there is no real evidence showing that this was actually the Ark of Noah.

481 This has been discussed by the Pleiadians in a few of their lectures—especially the fairly recent ones. They say that the Ark was basically a spaceship and not a boat. They never told us exactly where En.ki took the Ark, other than we may have “cousins” out there somewhere because the Ark had the DNA of mankind in it. The Ark being a spaceship is also mentioned here: <http://www.greatdreams.com/masters/thoth.htm> (item 39). I also have an anonymous source, who independently says the same thing.

The space ark hypothesis makes sense in the context, too, because it would be too casual for En.ki to hope for the Ark to survive the Flood, jeopardizing all the DNA which was stored onboard. All that was required was that the Ark accidentally hit a big rock, the side or top, of a mountain, or any other obstacle, and it would potentially sink. Better then was to remove the whole Ark from the surface of the planet. Of course, if this is true, Noah/Utnapishtim was not the builder of the Ark, either. If we read the ancient texts, we see that it doesn't say that he was the only builder of the Ark, but that he had help from "friends." Because Noah/Utnapishtim was En.ki's son, it is reasonable to think that these "friends" were indeed of the AIF, and they were the real spaceship builders. The real trick with interpreting the old scriptures is to be able to read what is not written in them.

There are also indications, given to me by an anonymous source, that the Ark story is indeed two stories in one. The DNA stored in the Ark was later used by En.ki to create an updated Homo sapiens (Homo sapiens sapiens—the modern man) but was also used elsewhere, such as to create hybrids in the Sirius system and in Alpha Draconis. If so, we do indeed have cousins out there, who are genetically closer to us than any other star races out there—possibly. This is a hypothesis well worth pondering, especially as it comes from two separate sources, unfamiliar with each other (the Pleiadians and one of my anonymous sources).

The result is, however, that in order to start all over and create a new race of human hybrids, En.ki needed to do so without interruption. Therefore, he figured out how to close the Saturn Stargate, chased off the Council of Saturn, who were sitting in the rings of Saturn<sup>482</sup> and up until then had been serving the Orion Empire, set up his own Council, and put up the infamous "Grid" around the Earth, which is still there as of this writing. By taking these actions, En.ki had the entire solar system to himself to do whatever he wished to, without any serious interference from the Council or others.

His creations, for the most part, were destroyed and gone, but on the other hand, he now had a great opportunity to start all over with the intention to once again create a slave race, but this time, he would do it differently. Hence, he also built the "Between Life Area" (BLA) in the "ether"—one of the dimensions—where he captured souls who died on Earth and needed to be recycled into the system again with full amnesia. He wanted to make sure that as few souls as possible escaped. He couldn't afford to lose souls that he had already manipulated throughout an entire earthly lifetime. This way, these souls always came back, and the manipulation could continue from where it ended the life before.

The AIF was now in control of the Saturn Stargate, and they had defeated Ninurta—he who once threw their own King En.ki out of Orion. Previously, Ninurta, as Archangel Mikael—was the one who defeated them all. Hence, Ninurta was looked upon, by the AIF, as a War God. By defeating Ninurta for the second time, the AIF members all took on the title of War Lords, although they knew that under equal circumstances, Ninurta was unbeatable. Still, they could at least show that they were almost as powerful as he was—at least, that’s how they looked at it. Some of the AIF members were Kings over their own star systems under En.ki’s sovereign command, and they now started calling themselves Khan Kings, as a reference to Orion and the Khaa. Others referred to themselves as Overlords.

Prince Lucifer—or maybe I should say Khan En.ki—now had it all well set up!

V. Some Afterthoughts

I have done my very best to analyze the Deluge story, trying to see it from everybody’s perspective and am working on understanding how the beings involved came to their decisions and conclusions. This doesn’t mean that we humans necessarily have to agree with any of it. If we put ourselves in Khan En.lil’s, Queen Nin’s, and Prince Ninurta’s situations, they had seen their Paradise, with an almost perfect Primordial womankind walking the Earth, and they had seen the lion sleep with the lamb in Ninurta’s Golden Age and his Edin Mountain Paradise. They had watched their original Experiment reach a point in the evolution which exceeded their own expectations, when Lucifer came and destroyed their entire creation. The Living Library, although mainly preserved, was heavily interfered with, and womankind was being transformed into a watered-down mankind, which was no longer androgynous, but needed a man and a woman to reproduce. Their connection with Orion was gone—Earth became a lower 3-D prison, where the watered-down version of the Orion creation became slaves, and lost all memory of whom they were and where they came from. In addition, Lucifer decided to enlighten a select Elite of this humankind to let them have the knowledge on a need-to-know basis in order to rule over the rest.

In these tumultuous Antediluvian times, they also watched monstrous giants, who themselves were AIF experiments, multiply on Earth in great quantities, and when mankind couldn’t sustain themselves anymore, they turned against them and devoured them. Then they began to sin against birds, beasts, reptiles, and fish. Moreover, they started eating each other and drank each other's blood.<sup>483</sup> Things had gotten totally out of hand.

For many millennia, the Original Planners had to watch this continue, and they couldn't do much about it. They had empathy for Lucifer's creation because their own creation was embedded in it, and many of the original souls, who had inhabited the Namlú'u humanoids, were now trapped in these watered-down, amnesiac bodies. The Namlú'u were Mother Goddess's children but were adopted by the Orion Council, who all loved these Ladies of Fire as if they were their own children. A mother—whether in human form or a Goddess—doesn't want to kill her own children.

One day, however, the Khan and his son, Ninurta, had seen enough. They couldn't stand to see mankind develop into what they had been manipulated into, and they saw no other way than to do something about it. We can argue if the first attempts were really good decisions, as the Queen said, but regardless of whether we agree with the Khan or not, I can see why he ordered the Flood. Who knows where mankind would have been today if there had been no interaction at all: Just a thought, and I'm sure people have their own personal opinions about this...

Thorkild Jacobsen (1904-93), was a Danish historian who wrote two books that included the events described in this paper, and he's also been cited here. He wrote in "A History of Mesopotamian Religion" (1976) the following about the struggle between En.ki and Father En.lil:

"The modern reader may well feel that Enlil, easily frightened, ready to weep . . . insensitive to others, frustrated at every turn by the clever Enki, cuts a rather poor figure. Not so! The ultimate power of Enlil, the flood, stuns ancient imagination and compels respect."<sup>484</sup>

Another important reason why Khan En.lil would take drastic actions was that he apparently is very much against slavery, and watching how his "own kind" (being En.ki and some of the AIF) were mating with humans was too much for him. After trying everything he could think of, he found it better to wipe out all creation than to keep watching this drama for yet another second.<sup>485</sup>

Before we continue, let's stop here for a moment. So far, we have had many discussion about En.ki's actions in this Flood scenario, so let's discuss

Khan En.lil for a minute. To us humans, it may sound pretty grim and horrific to send a plague on mankind. From having read our history books about the Plague in the Middle Ages and the Black Death as well, we know what a horrible death this brings to the person who gets sick. Why would the King of Orion do such a thing?

This may be hard for us humans to understand, and I'm going to do my best to explain this from an ET perspective—from beings who are far more advanced in both the shamanic and technological aspects. Khan En.lil, from where he sits, has access to the highest of dimensions, which can only be accessed from inside the Orion Empire that typically doesn't just include the star constellation "Orion," which may just be a "location" that is being used to bring about a thought form—an idea of a vast Empire that stretches from the lowest to the absolute highest "unthinkable" dimensions, where "Void" is actually "Void" in its real implication. The Empire has outposts stretching through the entire Universe and beyond and has very little to do with our galaxy alone. For simplicity's sake, let's say that in the Andromeda Galaxy, there is another species, who just like mankind is trying to figure out how the Universe works. Would the Queen of the Stars and the King of the Stars call the Empire "Orion" when talking to these Andromedans? Probably not. They would possibly call it something that is familiar to that star race—such as a constellation known to them. "Orion" in that sense has nothing to do with it—it's just a "focus point."

In an "Infinite Realm," where the Higher Selves of the Khan and the Queen exist, anything is possible, and anything can be done. On one level, Father En.lil—the Khan—is the Lord of Nature—whereas, En.ki is the one who is overriding it with technology (as part of his revenge). Hence, every act Father En.lil is taking, his son is counteracting by using technology. This makes the father furious—particularly as his stepson is not only going against his, Khan En.lil's, own will, but that of the entire Orion Council.

When I look at this entire scenario, it is really a war and a struggle between the gods, and we humans are the ones who sit between them and become the target for them shooting their ammunition toward each other. Father En.lil is a co-creator of the Living Library, and for eons, he's been agitated over En.ki's actions here on Earth, and it seems that when he had enough, he really had enough, although it can't all be blamed on him, as he also had the entire Council pressure him to come to the conclusion to do something. The Council, on the other hand, had pressure from other star races to intervene. Apparently, the Khan didn't want to eradicate the entire human race, and therefore started with addressing the overpopulation. He did it in the way he was the expert—by using Nature, and this time he used it against his creation. En.ki did his counteracts in the way he was the expert—with technology and science. Another way of looking at it is that En.ki actually didn't care about his creation at all at this point—all he cared about was to counteract Khan En.lil's actions by using technology to override everything his father did—regardless of what it was. He wanted to infuriate his father, as a spoiled child who refuses to listen to logic would. Then, of course, there were also more sophisticated plans behind the plans.

One thing I have learned since I started working on all these papers, from Level I through Level IV, is that we humans think we understand how ETs/the gods think and operate. We are good at assuming things when it comes to ETs—assumptions that are far from correct. The reason why we are so incorrect is because we compare them with ourselves—“if we are and react in a certain way, the ETs can't be too much different” seems to be how we think. Unfortunately, that is usually incorrect. My experience is that we don't really understand them, and they don't really understand us, but both of us are curious to find out about one another.

So why are we humans so different? It's because of what we've discussed many times in these papers—we are the Experiment, and this experiment is making us quite unique! We have a wide range of emotions that we need in order to communicate with nature—more so in the future than we do now. To be able to communicate with plants, rocks, and animals, we need to be able to “feel” and be very perceptive to certain frequencies. Also, if we didn't have a wide range of emotions, we would get bored in 3-D after a while. Having emotions usually makes things more exciting, and it makes us curious about ourselves and our environment—with our without the AIF suppression.

The ETs are not emotionless, but they don't have our types of emotions at all. The Third Dimension is light “trapped” in matter, which makes things more solid, and thus creates a reality in which beings can live and interact. Hence, the learning curve here is often quite steep—during the nanosecond, it was steeper than it has ever been.

ETs, who live in many dimensions simultaneously (some call them trans-dimensional)<sup>486</sup> and can energize certain realities at will, are not that careful when it comes to physical bodies and such. They see bodies as dispensable—they are only vessels or vehicles for the soul—so if the bodies get destroyed, souls can get new ones if they so wish. “Death” to aliens is next to nothing. It's similar to when you get into your car and drive to your destination and then step out of it—not a big deal. The car is in this case the body, and you, the driver, are the soul. If you wreck the car, it may be inconvenient, but you can get a new one fairly quickly.

Most AIF—but by all means not all of them—can nanotravel—something the Pleiadians, interestingly enough, brought up as well in a very recent lecture. Some of the AIF need bodies and inter- or trans-dimensional spaceships in order to travel from here to there, but they can jump from body to body just as we jump from car to car. Others can nanotravel. I am not sure if the Pleiadians have read my papers, but again, in a very recent lecture, they compared nanotravel with Star Trek, and the character Q! Is this a coincidence, or are they citing my papers? It doesn't matter which, of course, but I found it quite jaw-dropping. Also, the Pleiadians have talked endlessly about the AIF (Anunnaki) in their lectures recently. They say that the Anunnaki actually have been here all the time (something I have claimed too), and that we humans are soon going to meet with them—this can be both good or bad, according to them. They also say, just as I have, that the Anunnaki are the ETs that have visited us in different disguises over the centuries. They are the ones who gave us technology—they are the ones who instigated the Technology Transfer Programs (TTP) and made contact with the U.S. Government in the early 1950s. They are also the ones whom Hitler was in contact with. People are talking about all these different star races, such as the Dracos, the Nordics, the Grays, the Reptilians, and so on, but in reality, they all belong to the same group of ETs—the AIF! Disinformation agents are trying to separate these ET races, saying they have different agendas, but this is nonsense. The AIF are the ETs that are here on this planet right now, and they have been here for centuries.

What about the “good ETs?” They certainly exist and are the great majority out there, but this is En.ki's domain (or so he believes), and to say that the ET races I mentioned above are not working together in order to keep us enslaved is incorrect. It's very important that we understand this. We also need to understand that shapeshifting is a piece of cake for interdimensional beings, and therefore, discussing Dracos and Reptilians becomes quite pointless. The AIF do have bodies on an interdimensional level, and some of them may be of reptilian nature, but these beings can take on any shape or form if they like. This is very important to keep in mind. Thus, researching and trying to catalogue and categorize these star races, based on their agendas, often becomes a waste of time.

The Pleiadians are Enkiites, and they are telling us that the two brothers, En.ki and En.lil, are here right now, fighting for power. On the flip-side, they also claim that En.ki is no longer the irresponsible genetic entrapper that he once was, but he has changed a lot, while En.lil is still pretty much the same stern, morally and ethically steadfast character to the extreme. They want En.ki to be our teacher in the Age of Aquarius, and they say that he will change the frequency of the planet, so we can get more access to our dormant DNA.

I wholeheartedly disagree with the above because my research clearly indicates the opposite. The Pleiadians are very much citing Sitchin still, and they are setting us up for something we will regret. Therefore, please use discernment!

In general, higher level ETs know that our human bodies are designed to do things that are unique, and they understand the importance of the Original Experiment, but if it comes down to it, they are ready to wash the plate clean. This is why a more advanced god can sometimes make decisions that seem horrendous to us, but are not big deals to them—the soul lives on.

This is usually the point where ETs and humans stop understanding each other. We have amnesia, and we usually have bonds with family members and friends. Once our body gets destroyed, we become disconnected from those we love, afraid we won't find each other again. This is a big thing for us. The ETs, on the other hand, know that we will find each other again, and therefore think it's irrelevant. However, they don't possess our range of emotions, which can be both our strength and our downfall. I know that in the future, we need a more open discussion about this between star races and ourselves.

In any case, the above probably explains how Khan En.lil could make the decisions he did when he ordered a plague, a drought, and starvation here on Earth. This, in addition to ordering the Flood, is what I believe is the main reason why mankind is biased toward En.ki and usually looks at "En.lil" as the bad guy in the drama. After all, En.ki saved us when we starved (he gave us fish)—he stopped the plague, and he saved the human race (the DNA and his own Elite) from the Flood, while Father En.lil did everything he could to have his orders executed, which would lead to mankind's demise. However, in certain religions (in Christianity in particular), the followers totally agree with Khan En.lil's decision to wipe out humanity, being under the impression that mankind was sinful and didn't respect God enough. Only Noah and his family were "righteous" enough to be allowed to survive the Deluge, and from him, all humans of today stem, according to religion. Therefore, it all depends on from which angle we are looking at this.

My personal viewpoint is that we humans indeed are caught in the middle of something that is much bigger than us—a Cosmic War and a Galactic Conflict in which we are sometimes the prize and sometimes the sacrifice. It's easy, if we look at the Flood story shallowly, to take sides in this conflict and argue that En.ki did the right thing when he tried to save mankind, but we also need to remember that he didn't do it for our sake, but for his own. He was the one who had plans for us, he was the one who had unresolved issues with Orion, and he was the one who wanted us here as slaves—not as his equals or his pupils. Even after the Flood, he kept us in ignorance—actually, even more so, as we shall see. Also, when we listen to the Pleiadians, we can, if we look carefully, see the same agenda repeat itself all over again. Once again, according to them, En.ki wants to “save mankind” from the “evil En.lil.” It’s like a broken record.

Morally, there are a lot of gray areas—it’s not black and white. This is why it’s so important to stand on our own feet and claim our own sovereignty over our body, Avatar, and our Divine Fire. Every nation, every planet or star system, and every Empire has its own laws and rules. As we can see in the Atrahasis Epic, the Goddess was totally against creating the Flood, but there was nothing she could do after the Council had voted and shared their arguments.

As long as we are slaves, and an ignorant species that can’t stand our ground, others are going to make decisions for us—just as we make decisions for our pets—and not until we have broken out from our slavery can we avoid being the effect of other beings’ decisions. So, however we bend and twist it, it comes back to that it’s entirely up to us. This is, in itself, nothing bad because in the end we need to earn our freedom, or we won’t be able to keep it and maintain it, but it’s hard work—work that has just begun, with a long way left to go.

PAPER #15: THE POSTDILUVIAN TIMES—LUCIFER BUILDING HIS PLAN

I. The Creation of Modern Man—A Species with a Destiny

It didn't happen overnight, but eventually, the water subsided on the previously so beautiful Planet Gaia, and landmasses began to rise over the oceans again. The storms subsided and finally stopped, and everything was quiet and calm. The clouds in the sky started withering, and after a while, a bright sun shone over a clear-blue sky in many parts of the world. The canopy, which had covered much of the planet before the Flood, was now gone. The lands slowly dried up.

For the first time in eons, Antarctica was ice-free, and the long Ice Age was over.

As Sitchin correctly surmises, this is the time, directly after the Flood when Antarctica was clear of its ice-pack for the first time in eons, a time when the maps of showing the details of an ice-free Antarctica were made which later became available during the 14th and 15th centuries in Europe around the time of Columbus.<sup>487</sup>

The Living Library was more or less destroyed, except for what had survived in high places, but worse than that—at first, when the oceans withdrew their excessive amount of water, lots of dead bodies were found floating ashore. These bodies were not only humans, but animals, and other creatures, too. It was not a pretty sight!

After some time, the survivors, who had found their shelters in the mountain caves, or even underground, now started climbing down to lower ground, or to higher ground, respectively, until they reached sea level, in order to try to find more food, or to get away from their neighbors, who attacked them, trying to steal what little they had. This was really “an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth” existence, where people had to gather in groups in order to survive. Most people armed themselves with whatever they could find or create from their environment in order to kill intruders, and perhaps even eat their bodies after they had killed them. Most of all, people feared the Giants, who had, to a certain extent, survived as well.

In addition, there was another group of beings, who also had survived the Flood, and who now were extremely hungry and thirsty. We can read about them in a book by Stephanie Dalley, called "Myths from Mesopotamia,"

Now it is the gods' turn to go hungry:
"like sheep, they could only fill their windpipes with bleating
Thirsty as they were, their lips
Discharged only the rime of famine."<sup>488</sup>

As we can see, Lord En.ki didn't save all of his men, either. Some of them were left on Earth to die from thirst and starvation. In addition, they had to fight off their own creations, or they would themselves be killed. No longer did they have technology to defend themselves with. Perhaps, some of the ET survivors were also Ninurta's MIKH-MAKH warriors, who never made it off the planet before the catastrophe was a fact.

As time went by and En.ki and his Minions were waiting elsewhere (probably on Mars) for things to settle down enough on Earth for their return, more and more people and creatures died on Earth. The animals were those who had the greatest chance to survive.

i.i. The Grays and the Martian Slave Race

Also, before the Flood occurred, En.ki evacuated a limited number of Homo sapiens to Mars, where they were put in underground cities, some sources suggest. En.ki and Marduk had told them about a catastrophe that was going to hit Earth, and they needed to be evacuated. Space travel within the solar system was, if not common for humans, still occurring, so the shock one can expect would happen when they were leaving their planet to go to Mars was not overly great.

Once the space shuttles had taken them from Earth to Mars, they were all bunched together in a big group and put in some kind of "storehouse" in one of Mars' underground cities, where an artificial atmosphere had been created under an invisible cupola. The gods had even created an artificial sky and a heat source, looking very similar to our own Sun, which made the weather quite inhabitable but more on the tropical side because the gods liked it that way.

However, in the storehouse it was always dark.

As soon as the catastrophe on Earth was over and depending on the outcome, these Homo sapiens had been promised to be taken back to Earth at the gods' first convenience, or transported elsewhere if necessary, but the gods never kept their word. Instead, these humans, who looked very similar to us but have the genetics that were common on Earth before the Deluge, are still living on Mars up until this day! In their usual manner, the AIF have used them as slave labor on Mars instead of transporting them back to Earth.<sup>489</sup>

Fig. 1. Grays in Flying Saucers, in shuttle traffic between Mars and the Earth.

However, fairly recently, a tribe of the small “Grays” have allegedly helped some humans escape from their Mars prison (this would be the descendants of the humans who were abducted and transported to Mars before the Deluge). Remote viewers, working for the government, have apparently remote viewed how the Grays drove shuttle traffic between Mars and Earth in their saucer-shaped ships, transporting willing “Martians” back to their home planet, Earth.<sup>490</sup> These human descendants were then hidden inside a mountain complex somewhere in Arizona or New Mexico, I believe, and perhaps in some other places too. The environmental circumstances are not exactly the same in the Martian underground facilities as they are here, quite obviously, and some adjustments needed to be made. Also, the Martians don't know how to interact with the everyday human of the 21st Century, so no one knows at this point how the project will turn out. A classified level of the U.S. Government is supposedly helping out with this program. Many—if not most—of the Martians wish themselves back to Mars, despite the circumstances on Mars because they no longer feel at home here after all these generations that have passed.

---

Also, these Martian human hybrids are not Homo sapiens sapiens as we are, but they are the forerunners to our current species, which also makes things more complicated if the Martians want to start mingling with our society on Earth. What happens if we interbreed between the species, for example? This, however, may be the purpose, for all I know.

As time passed and the remote viewing of the Martians and the Grays became more sophisticated and complex, it was suspected that the Grays were actually humans who had come back to Earth from one of the future timelines—in other words, they were (are) time travelers. The readers who have followed my work and read the Level III papers know that many of the “Gray aliens” who are encountered on Earth today under different circumstances are future versions of ourselves on a timeline when the Machine Kingdom became predominant, and advanced Orion technology was chosen before Nature. They are often half human and half machine and have what we call a “hive mentality,” where their minds, to a large degree, are integrated with a “Super Computer” that controls their thought patterns and their behavior. Individuality is mostly a thing of the past in their future society, and what is best for the group is what is important—the individual is expendable.

Much of the channeled material we are taking part of today is channeled by different factions of the Grays—our future selves. They often present themselves as a “Social Memory Complex,” and in the following excerpt, the Ra people, who were presenting the “Ra Material”—some of the most well-known channeled material today—explain how a mind/body/spirit complex, such as ourselves, becomes a Social Memory Complex:

I am Ra. A mind/body/spirit social complex becomes a social memory complex when its entire group of entities are of one orientation or seeking. The group memory lost to the individuals in the roots of the tree of mind then become[s]

known to the social complex, thus creating a social memory complex. The advantages of this complex are the relative lack of distortion in understanding the social beingness and the relative lack of distortion in pursuing the direction of seeking, for all understanding/distortions are available to the entities of the society.<sup>491</sup>

Even if this may be looked upon as an advantage by the Social Memory Complex themselves, I am personally very much a propagator of individual thinking and uniqueness and wouldn't dream of being part of such a hive mentality.

However, in some of these future societies, the Grays are more and more breaking out of what I see as their mind controlled state and are traveling back into their past, exploring our Living Library and our human DNA in order to restore their own individuality. Many of the alien abductions that are reported worldwide are almost certainly done by such factions of the Grays. It seems as if it is also one of these future human hybrids that are intervening with the Martian society today. From what we understand about these Grays, it's inevitable not to think in terms that they are helping the Martians because it has something to do with their own rehabilitation.

i.ii. The Creation of a Special Species and their Neo-Atlantean Destiny

Instead of waiting for Planet Earth to recover after the Flood to such a degree that En.ki and his consort, Isis, could open up laboratories here again, it makes sense that En.ki started his new experiment on Mars instead of on Earth, with a purpose to create human hybrids. He already had genetic laboratories set up on Mars for such a purpose since long ago. In the past, when he used Mars as a laboratory, the engineering occurred in underground cities because Mars was depleted of its atmosphere during the Titan Wars, when Tiamat was destroyed.

This time, he already had the seed from the Antediluvian human race, so the work went much faster. However, now he wanted to create a humanity with potentials—he wanted us to evolve faster. In order for his new creation to do so, he needed to reactivate some of the previously dormant DNA and activate a dormant “timer” in the human cells—a timer which was activated before the AIF came. Each Era (or “Astrological Age”), starting and finishing in association with the Zodiac, is about 2,160 years;<sup>492</sup> a so-called “Great Year” is 25, 920 years;<sup>493</sup> and half of a “Great Year” is 12,960 years long.<sup>494</sup> En.ki knew that in approximately half of a Great Year, the solar system would line up with the Galactic Center, which meant that a lot of energy in the form of gamma rays (and other parts of the electromagnetic spectrum) would hit the Earth. On gamma rays, a lot of information is carried. En.ki saw this as a great opportunity to let humans evolve enough so that he could use our abilities for his own purposes, i.e. to steal our enhanced Fire, which is connected with the increased energies, in order to break into the realms of the inner sanctuary of the Orion Empire.

En.ki also knew that what the Pleadians call the “nanosecond” is a very real concept. He understood that time would speed up a million-fold during the last 25 years before the year 2012. Thus, humanity had the chance to learn things a million times faster than they could otherwise. The amnesia we are born with prevents us from realizing how fast we have actually evolved, compared to other lifetimes. You, who read this, and I, who write it, can both look back 10, 15, or 25 years and notice how much more aware we are now than we were back then — it’s like night and day!

However, the nanosecond is not a free ride. Many people, I’m sure, are curious about why we were allowed to expand our consciousness in the way we have. Why did the AIF let us “get away” with it?

Well, actually it does make sense, if we think about it. Remember how we talked about already in Level I that the gods are thinking “long thoughts,” meaning that they live so long that planning a few thousand years ahead is like planning a week ahead for us. Hence, En.ki, and those in cahoots with him, planned exactly how they wanted the new Homo sapiens sapiens to evolve. Of course, we were still meant to be a slave race — that part has never changed — but eventually, the gods were going to disappear out of the picture and not interact with mankind directly, but let their Minions take care of it, while the full blood AIF were lurking in the background, being in control from other dimensions. The interaction with the gods would eventually only be a vague memory of a distant past, at best. Then, even that memory would fade. What I am describing here is the time from approximately 4,200 years ago and up until now, when the gods are starting to get more overly involved.

It was after the Deluge that the Bankers of Babylon saw the first light of day, and ever since, finance has been one of the major manipulative tools the Minions have used to keep mankind in check — that and religious wars and

conflicts. Enhancing the DNA in mankind caused the evolution to go faster than it would have done otherwise, and as time closed in on the nanosecond and 2012, a new type of society needed to see the light of day as well.

In actuality, it was not really a new type of society—it was just Atlantis being created all over again—and this New Atlantis, as it was envisioned by Sir Francis Bacon, the famous Rosicrucian<sup>495</sup> (who some people say was the same person as William Shakespeare),<sup>496</sup> was planned to be Canada and the United States of America—at least to begin with. In the long run, Bacon, who was one of En.ki's initiated Minions, and his like-minded, wanted a One World Government, based on enhanced Atlantean technology, which would eventually lead to the Machine Kingdom.

Let's take first things first though. In order to make great changes from behind the scenes, a good way is often to instigate "revolutions." Thus, we had the French and the British Revolutions in the 1700s. In the latter revolution, the British wanted to depart from the tyrannical King George. Therefore, Freemasons—with Rosicrucians working in the background—played the role as "liberators," and founded the United States of America, which became known as the "New Atlantis" amongst the Elite and the occultists. After the American "Revolution" was completed, the Brits who moved to the U.S. and Canada thought they would be free from British tyranny, when in fact, the Freemasonic liberators and the British Kingdom were just two sides of the same coin. The United States and Canada were never free from British influence—indeed, both countries (as well as Australia, but that's another story) are owned by the British Crown—something that seems pretty obvious when we look at it. The official leader of the United States has always been the President, and America is considered being a Republic—but the real ruler of the U.S. is Queen Elizabeth II of the British Empire (yes, you read that correctly).

One of the purposes with the American Revolution was not to become free from oppressive British influence, but to prepare for the nanosecond. En.ki wanted the Industrialism in order to be able to develop technology into an integrated society where everything is connected, and therefore, is easier to control and manipulate. For En.ki, it was now a race against time, although he was probably never overly worried or stressed. He needed to create a technological society before people evolved spiritually and neurologically from the enormous gamma rays bursts, without Ea being able to control them. If he didn't have people registered in databases and assembled into big cities and communities, people could easily break free and turn against him. En.ki needed a society where it's easy to communicate. This is also why it was so important to get the Internet up and running during the nanosecond. It's my own opinion that the Global Elite were actually delayed when it comes to developing a functioning Internet, and that it was planned to be up and running already in the beginning of the nanosecond, which was in 1987. At that time, computers were still running on DOS—Windows didn't appear until in the early 1990s and was a big revolution for its time. However, by connecting globally with the Internet, people could share their ideas and new knowledge and speed up their awareness level even more—but under surveillance!

This is very important to understand. We have all this freedom to explore whatever we want on the Internet, but every letter we type on the keyboard is being tracked. Thus, the freedom we think we have by being able to communicate globally is mostly an illusion. By exposing the Global Elite, we are not defeating them, and we are not ascending to a higher dimension just by being more aware. Our awareness level, on an individual and global level, is monitored, and "someone" is waiting for us to be ripe enough to "eat" —both literally and metaphorically. We need to work hard for our freedom without fighting for it—fighting has to be something of the past. Our revolution must be peaceful, or it's doomed to fail.

Therefore, with this in mind, it is crucial that the evolving human understands where the traps are and how to avoid them. Again, it is not enough just to grow in awareness and consciousness. We also need to look at who or what it was that trapped us in matter in the first place, if they are still around, and what plans they have for us. This is the most important thing I have stressed in all my papers, and will always be. What good is it if a group of people are listening to some channeled material that is set up by the AIF in order for the listener to feel really nice and cozy with a lot of almost overwhelming love vibrations and even with healing processes involved, when the outcome is that they trick you into believing that they are your saviors? Does "Elohim" ring a bell? When the time comes, they will "Harvest" their members, who willingly will follow, thinking they are going to the fourth and fifth dimensions, when all that these lofty beings want is to eat our flesh and/or feed off our new awareness level in order to use it for the worst? Then they dispose of us, or perhaps they will send us to Orion as a part of the payoff of the spiritual "debt" that they owe the Orions. However, all the Orions get back are depleted spirits in a horrible, irreversible shape, when they would expect evolved beings.

I don't know how many times I've warned people who are involved in the above activities, to no prevail. It's difficult when people think they have found their "religion" or "spiritual path." However, it's not our job to tell them what to do or not to do—one “warning,” including providing information, is enough. Then we have done what we can. The person we are talking to can either take it in or discard it. It’s his or her right. We always have to remember that, although it’s hard. I sometimes have problems with that too. If the reader thinks I am repeating myself on this matter, be aware that it’s purposely done—it needs to be readdressed for it to really sink in.

II. The Cosmic War Escalates

After succeeding in closing down our solar system, En.ki got overconfident and started being more offensive in the Cosmic War drama. As we’ve discussed earlier, one war front was located in Sirius, where not only the Nommos were imprisoned in the Dark Star, but En.ki had also a hybrid race fighting against Khan En.lil’s (Archangel Mikael’s) troops.

This was an ongoing guerilla war, and just like what happens sometimes here on Earth, the war consisted of different phases. Sometimes it could be very intense, while at other times, an armistice lasted for quite a long time, until something erupted again, and a new battle took place.

Fig. 2. Guerilla war in the Sirius star system.

After he had closed the Saturn Stargate and Homo sapiens sapiens were created and started to increase in numbers, one of En.ki’s Intelligence Agencies found out exactly where Khan En.lil himself was positioned, together with a large amount of MIKH-MAKH troops. With increased confidence, En.ki decided to take on Khan En.lil in person. His plan was to storm the star where the Archangel was stationed and then battle Khan En.lil on a one-on-one basis.

Little did he know that En.ki's DAKH warriors, when they entered the star system, had already been on Khan En.lil's radar as soon as they left the Ar-idu solar system. En.ki's plan was to kill off Khan En.lil's soldiers until only a few remained, and then En.ki himself would enter the stage and battle an almost defeated Orion King.

The plan failed almost before it was even put into action. As soon as En.ki's fairly large battalion entered Khan En.lil's star system, the Archangel's MIKH-MAKH armada was ready. En.ki's battleships were destroyed, one by one, while the Khan hardly suffered any losses. Many of En.ki's DAKH warriors were captured in that attack and put in prison in the Dark Star together with the Nommos that were still there and hadn't been able to be released in En.ki's previous attack. An improved electronic net, or veil, was being set up by Mikael First in Command and his scientists, hoping En.ki would not be able to penetrate it. Also, there was nothing that prevented the Khan from terminating the prisoners totally if he so wished and entirely wipe out their consciousness. This, however, is the most severe penalty a being can get for a crime and was not executed very often, although the Khan in this situation was seriously considering it. What most of these DAKH warriors were involved in was nothing less than High Treason, and for that, the most severe penalty could be selected for the prisoners. The Khan—perhaps out of mercy—was still holding back on it.

For En.ki, however, his defeat was devastating, and his pride was seriously hurt. He had been so sure he could defeat Mikael at this point, but obviously, he still had a few things to learn.

His troops were severely diminished, and he felt vulnerable. Hence, this was the reason for the Grid, and this was the time when he put it up around Gaia to protect his stronghold. Also, in order to further secure his position, he tilted the planet, changed the distance between the Moon and the Earth, and manipulated our planet's electromagnetic frequency in such a manner that although she was still a third-dimensional planet and the life upon it was 3-D as well, she now vibrated with a speed that was pretty odd and unnatural. En.ki did this intentionally with advanced technology so that other star beings, in case they managed to slip through the stargates around Saturn and the Sun, had a very hard time finding the Earth. Even though these star beings of course would be interdimensional in nature, they would still—hopefully so, En.ki thought—stare right onto the planet without being able to see it—all they would see was empty space. In certain terms, En.ki's idea worked quite well, and he could work fairly uninterrupted for a long time (in human terms). This breathing room he spent setting up his control- and manipulation mechanisms to get humanity to where he wanted them — under total control.

III. The Reincarnation System is being Refined! (Additional Ideas on How the Afterlife is Set Up)

The next thing En.ki and his son Marduk decided to do, apparently, shortly after the Deluge, was to make changes in some star constellations. R.A. Boulay writes in his book, "Flying Serpents and Dragons:"

Rabbinical legends suggest it was a cosmic event which also caused changes in the positions of the stars. It states that two stars were removed from the constellation Pleiades, and these were replaced by two stars from the constellation of the Bear. The legends also suggest there were other changes among the celestial spheres during the year of the Deluge, involving the sun and the moon, although these changes are not specified.

Whatever the cause, it was significant enough in intensity to divide the history of Mankind into two great periods. The antediluvian era is known as the time of the gods: the "golden age" in many mythologies. What had been achieved by man and god was washed away by the disaster.<sup>497</sup>

This may sound very "mysterious," but if we're thinking in terms of 4% and 96% Universe, the "mystery" is not as much a mystery anymore. It's them, and not us who decide how we're going to perceive the asterisms in the Heavens. It requires some reprogramming, but it can be fairly easily done.

What father and son apparently did was to change around amongst the stars in the sky, and then they created some new constellations in order to make changes in the Zodiac. By doing so, they could change the level and ways of controlling mankind. Up until this day, we are more or less following the "Babylonian Zodiac." It is well known within secret societies (and now also in public, to some degree) that there was once a more ancient zodiac, which affected life on Gaia differently.

They also wanted to refine the "soul trap," to make sure that no souls — or very few of them — escaped the prison after their bodies died here on Earth. The great Hologram, which we usually call "The Matrix," and which is projected from Saturn via the Moon, and down to Earth, was now better calibrated with the human bodies. As soon as a soul entered a newborn baby's body, a complete amnesia took place. The souls could now not remember at all who they were due to how the DNA was programmed by En.ki and his geneticists. This in itself was nothing new, but before the Flood, if someone figured out that they were trapped, they could fairly easily exit the body if they wished to, just by mentally “cutting the cord” between the body itself and the soul<sup>498</sup>—the cord which we call the “silver cord” in metaphysics. Then, in theory, it was nothing that held the soul to the prison, and they could escape into the Universe—even into the KHAA part of it—if they wanted to. For the rest of humanity, who hadn’t figured out that their existence in slavery was something wrong, often automatically returned into a new body after body death because they thought that this was what they were supposed to do. If a soul in her confusion went astray, there were AIF in the astral who could capture them and “shoot them” back into a baby body at random. In these cases, they had no choice in the matter and were assigned the first available body.

Now, after the Deluge, this had to change. En.ki couldn’t afford to lose any souls that had been programmed here on Earth—especially now when he had agreed to take on all these criminal souls from other star systems who were a little harder to manipulate than the human souls who were born in this solar system. What En.ki had in mind was a “Between Life Area” (BLA), which was to be set up in the ether. This location should have its own dimensional time/space. Here, souls whose bodies died would be lingering before they went back to a new life on Earth. This idea probably started with the fact that En.ki had more souls at his convenience than he had bodies to shoot them into. Therefore, he let souls stay in the BLA for a certain amount of time, until bodies were available again. He noticed that souls in the afterlife gathered in soul groups—those who’d known each other earlier tended to stay together in the afterlife, too. Here they usually discussed their lives and told each other about their dreams and wishes, e.g. who or what they wanted to become in their next life.

This was something that En.ki certainly could take advantage of. “Spirit guides,” such as deceased relatives and friends, were told to guide their recently deceased friend or relative to make sure that the deceased chose to go into the tunnel toward the “Light.” An enormous wave of love energy was set up as well to attract the soul. This could easily be done with technology and is used by some channeled entities as well. In the long run, the spirit guides often watched over their relatives while they were on Earth, and if the incarnated spirit knew how, she could ask the spirit guide/guides for assistance or advice. This is true up until this day, and if possible, these guides will help with problems in our earthly existence.

Once trapped in the BLA, the recently deceased soul was drawn toward a place which corresponded with their beliefs. An illusion of such a reality was often created in the ether with the help from technology and holographic projection, with a purpose to make the spirit feel comfortable, but deceptively so. With time, the spirits themselves unwittingly helped create such “islands” in the ether for likeminded spirits to go to after body death. Thus, not everybody goes to the same “place” after they’ve entered the Tunnel—it mainly depends on their beliefs. The Pleiadians call this phenomenon “Islands of Beliefs,”<sup>499</sup> and it is just as valid today as it was when it was set up.

The illusion of the beliefs a person has created during his or her lifetime (or several lifetimes) is then projected from his or her own mind into the astral time/space and will appear quite real, and that dimension will be shared by those who have similar beliefs. To get an idea of how it works, the term “Islands of Beliefs” is perfect. The deceased is thus “isolated” on an “island” of his or her conviction of how things are in 3-D life and after death, and the AIF can enhance that belief system with appropriate technology until it becomes self-sustaining. Alongside this island are other islands, invisible to someone who doesn’t share the belief system that is dominating the particular island. Again, the soul is creating her own reality, and each reality has its own frequency and vibration, inaccessible to others whose beliefs are quite different. This is a perfect manipulative setup, which often keeps the soul manipulated during the next lifetime because the soul memory of this artificial “Heaven,” or whatever it could be that the being projects, is still lurking in the background of the individual while living on Earth. Hence, when death is coming close, the being has some kind of feeling where to go when the body dies. This way, the recycling system is kept alive and well and is, to a large degree, sustaining itself.

Quite often, souls are gathering in soul groups in the BLA. The members of such a soul group do not necessarily share the exact beliefs, but they tie together because of the feeling of belonging to each other. Here we have soul mates, friends, spouses, and relatives, etc. However, most of the time, members of such groups do share beliefs similar enough to each other for an afterlife gathering to take place, building its own Island of Beliefs. The belief can simply be that they are convinced that they will meet each other after death.

A “Council of Elders,” consisting of AIF beings, was put in charge of the BLA, as many people in regression therapy have described.<sup>500</sup> A goal for the next lifetime was set, and a couple here on Earth who fit the profile of being parents to this soul were located. An astrological date, which best suited the soul to achieve her goals was also set, and the soul in the BLA “manipulated” her soon-to-become parents to have sex nine months before the chosen astrological period so that the soul could be born into the baby’s body at the designated time. All this was true then and is true today.

So why did En.ki and his cohorts make such an effort for the deceased souls? Isn’t that an action of compassion?

Fig. 3. Etheric beings in an “Island of Beliefs.”

I’d rather say that it is quite self-serving. By creating this Between Life Area, very few souls have a desire to leave the Earth plane and will happily reincarnate into a new slave body. The goals the soul sets before she is being recycled is very rarely met because of the amnesia. Instead, the soul is confused—often she knows there was something she should achieve, but can’t remember what it was. Usually, the soul instinctively goes in the right direction but gets easily distracted and fails to accomplish the goal. Sometimes, however, the goal is achieved, and a new goal is set the next time around.

Exit plans are also made in the BLA before the next reincarnation. The soul is told to create a few different exit plans so that she can expire (die) at a point of choice, although she won't remember this once she is back on Earth. If the soul decides she will die either at the age of twenty-eight, fifty-six, or ninety-two, it then depends on the circumstances which of these exit plans will take effect. If the soul accomplishes her goal already at twenty-eight, she will exit at that point. If she needs more time, fifty-six or ninety-two could be more appropriate. An unforeseen incident, of course, often happens that forces the soul to exit at a time that was not planned—often before the goal is achieved. Failure to achieve the goal during the lifetime may also force the soul to end that lifetime prematurely. This doesn't necessarily mean that the person commits suicide, although this may be one option.

The BLA most likely began as a storage of souls, but the entire process became more sophisticated with time, until it reached the point where we are today, as told to us through regression therapy. Thus, as long as we're letting ourselves become manipulated into going toward the Light, we are trapped in the "Recycling System." This is the pattern we need to break! What I've described above can, for the most part, be backed up by regression witnesses and from channeled material, and some of it is conclusions on my part, after having spent a lot of time attempting to connect the dots. It seems to me that this must be very close to how it really works. What I know for a fact, due to overwhelming evidence, is that going to the Light means coming back to Earth, and refusing to go through the tunnel means freedom from additional reincarnations. The choice must be up to each individual.

The Between Life Area became an important part of the whole Control System, and in many cases, the deceased doesn't even need guidance anymore, but recognizes the Light and the Tunnel and goes there on her own, remembering the incredible feeling of love that met her every time she went there after she had died. Besides souls who have increased their consciousness recently, very few have even thought about escaping the trap, I'm sure, since the day it was set up by the AIF.

iii.i. More on How to Escape Lucifer's Afterlife Trap

I can understand if it may sound scary to choose not to go to the Light because many of us are afraid of the unknown—whereas, the Light feels "safe" because we've gone there so many times, and "everybody else" who went there seems to have done just fine. However, remember that you are being multidimensional every single night you go to sleep and dream. This is a taste of what is awaiting after we die—except, after we die, we are in charge of our "dreams" and can create consciously what we create unconsciously during REM sleep.

However, this only gives a partial picture, so let's get a little bit more into detail about what I have learned recently on the details about escaping the AIF Afterlife Trap once and for all.

Those who have come to the point in their awareness level that they are reading this don't have to worry about getting "stuck" in the ether and become a "lost soul." The reader of this material is far beyond that because you know too much. Instead, when you die, you will most probably be approached by your guide of guides as usual, and he or she wants to help you "cross over," and if you allow this, it will lead you through the Tunnel. In some cases, there are no guides in the beginning, and the Tunnel will open up in front of you, but at a distance. Normally, souls feel the attraction and gravitation from the Tunnel and start moving toward it, consciously or unconsciously—like a leaf being sucked in by a vacuum cleaner.

Here, I believe, it's a good idea to put up a list, in order to easier absorb the information I'm about to give you.

1. Instead of letting yourself be "hypnotized" by its attraction, turn and look in the opposite direction (you will have 360° vision, and you can still concentrate on looking in a certain direction) and move away from the Tunnel (you do this by "thinking" yourself as moving—it's all about thoughts and intention in this dimension). Remember, you, as a soul of Fire, are far stronger than the centrifugal force that pulls you toward the Tunnel. Don't try to fight it—that's not the way to do it. Instead, think yourself away from it! The Tunnel with the Light on the other side of it is a sophisticated hologram, and all you need to do is to think yourself in another direction, and the Tunnel will fade away.
2. Soon you will see the Grid as a fuzzy "barrier" in front of you, or above you (there are no ups and downs or left and right in space). You will also see that it has holes in it—like a Swiss cheese. Move through one of these holes.
3. You will now see the Universe the way it is, i.e. you will now be truly interdimensional. This means you will see a much larger universe than you are used to. This is possible because you are outside the Grid, and you're not in a programmed body—you are meeting the Universe as a pure spirit of Fires with an Avatar, which is your mind. When astronauts are allowed outside the Grid, they are still restricted by their bodies and will remain in 3-D, but on a slightly higher vibration because the Earth is tilted and the Grid is no longer doing its work on these astronauts.

What you experience outside the Grid, as a discarnate spirit, can be quite overwhelming and impressive. Probably for the first time, you see the Universe as it really is, with the KHAA and everything. When you read this, you are still limited with your five senses, but a good idea is to prepare yourself mentally for what is out there. It's not at all going to be a negative experience, just very different! You will also see the Space War that is going on in the solar system, and you will notice the soldiers fighting in other dimensions, which you now are going to have access to. In order to prepare, a recommended reading is my free e-book, "Beyond 2012—a Handbook for the New Era." There are of course other materials that you can use as well—these papers will also do the job.

4. As a Fire riding an Avatar, you are now free to go more or less anywhere in the Universe. I talked earlier about "Universities"—that certain star systems work as universities do here on Earth. You may go there and explore what they have to offer, to see if it interests you, but the more appropriate or easier way would be to first know what you want to do or what you want to learn. Let's say you want to learn about how to build interdimensional space crafts. Then you think yourself to a university that teaches that, and you will nanotravel there as fast as you think it. As I see it, you need to concentrate on that thought, so it becomes dominant over your other thoughts at that moment—that's all you need to do.

I have talked to a few humans who are able to nanotravel—one of them gained the ability after a serious car accident. He said that we have nothing to worry about—once we're free from our bodies, we know automatically how to do this. In the beginning, not only will we be stunned but also impressed. We will think it's fun and probably want to play around with it. The fear and anxiety we may have while in our bodies are gone once we enter the spirit world.

Once you're at a university, you will meet with star beings who will ask you what you wish to do. If your aura and your chakras are open like a book, they will already know because you communicate telepathically, but if it's closed—either because of fear, or intentionally, to protect your thoughts—they will not know. Once they are told, they will advise you whether you qualify or not. If you don't, you can ask them where you should go first to eventually qualify for their dimension of learning.

If you want to go to Orion, you think yourself there and you will stand before the "Gates of the Orion Empire," and a similar procedure will take - place. You may want to tell them that you are a human soul, and you may most likely qualify to get into the higher dimensions of the KHAA, but once “inside,” you will find out which University level you qualify for, depending on your current knowledge as a spirit, what you want to do, and your personality.

5. You may instead just want to travel around in the Universe as a Soul/Avatar and explore before you decide to find a new “home.” You will notice that you can think yourself anywhere and you will get there, but also you can create your own environment as you wish—similar to what Q did in Star Trek. You may want to have fun with that for a while, too, before you do anything else. Remember that you can’t really get lost because if you don’t know where you are, you can think yourself to be anywhere—even back in the solar system, if you wish.
  6. You will most certainly also meet with other beings as you think yourself away. You can tell them you’re not interested (in a polite manner), or you can join them. First, however, feel out their energies and trust your intuition! If you are still uncertain, ask where they come from and why they want your company. Always shield yourself with a golden aura by thinking it up around yourself, and make sure not to have any holes in it. You will find out for yourself that it works!

Remember that just because your creators happen to be Orions, it doesn’t mean you have to go there if you don’t want to. No one will hold that against you, and you can always go there later, whenever you want to. You may even choose to join a group of beings you like and co-create an interdimensional reality—either in space, on a planet, in a star, or in a nebula. The options are endless, only limited by your own creativity. You will notice that the Universe bends to your will, thoughts, and intentions.

Any of this sounds much better than to be recycled into slavery again, doesn’t it? We have the Fire of the Mother Goddess, so we are privileged that way—more so than other star races out there. Those out there who have access to the KHAA (just like you will) can also create without technology, but as a human soul, you automatically have access to the KHAA and to the Orion Empire, unless you’ve done things that are excessively harmful to the Empire, your fellow man, or other star races. Other star races will have to “earn” their way into Orion, while you can come in without any prerequisites, except for the ones I just mentioned.

What you do miss out on (perhaps only temporary, but still) is the loss of your human body, in case you decide not to reincarnate on Earth again. In an upcoming paper, I will discuss more about the incredible vessel we call the human body, what it is capable of, and what it can do for you as a Fire/Avatar. Once that is explained and you want to continue going back to Earth in the next incarnation to inhabit one of these vessels again—this time with a higher level of knowledge—you can. You don't have to go into the Tunnel in order to do that. You can reincarnate on Gaia without "help" from the AIF, but you would still have amnesia. However, you would operate on a higher level here on Earth than you've done so far, and with time, you will expand your awareness and your consciousness even more. If you choose this path, you will help rebuilding the Library, and the reward will be a body I will be talking about later. The choice is yours, and there is no right or wrong choices here—it's entirely up to you. The only thing I advise everybody to do is to avoid the Tunnel and the Light!

IV. Babylon the Great—Setting the Records False

After the water level from the Deluge had subsided and the planet became more stable, it was noted that the northeastern part of Atlantis had managed to stay above the oceanic surface during the Flood, and this part of former Atlantis later became the British Isles of today. The great stone circle of Avebury now was used as another interdimensional doorway for various star systems, such as Sirius, the Pleiades, and Arcturus,<sup>501</sup> which were all, to a large degree, now under En.ki's dominance. This way, En.ki's Minions could travel in and out of our solar system and to their own star systems, although strict security, which will make our International Airport Security look like a joke, was certainly in place.

iv.i. AIF Leaders Promoted to Khan Kings, and En.ki becomes Ea

Minions who had been promoted to leaders of a certain star system or a part of a certain star system, now took on Orion names and titles, such as Khan Kings, to mock Khan En.lil's title. "Khan" is an Orion male title, while "Vulcan," "Vulk[h]an," or "Vulvakhan," is female. Both titles are, as they imply, related to the term "KHAA." En.ki and those who were closest to him, belonging to the so-called En.ki Clan or the "House of En.ki," now also took on female names and titles, in addition to their original ones, and from the Babylonian times forward, researching the Sumerian-Babylonian-Akkadian records can be quite confusing and challenging because there is so much syncretism—particularly since En.ki and Marduk decided to change things around in the older records.

Lucifer no longer used his title En.ki (Lord/God of Earth) but instead became known as Ea (House of Water)<sup>502</sup>, which denotes the “Primordial Waters”—another term for the KHAA. The term Ea originally stems from E-Abzu, which is a title for Khan En.lil. In other words, Ea is not an appropriate title for Lucifer either because he stole it from the real Khan King of Orion.

From being able to close the stargates and safeguard the Ar-i-du domain, he promoted himself, and in a sense took Khan En.lil’s title—self-proclaimed, of course. I will also mainly call him Ea from hereon because this is one of the dominant titles Lucifer was known as in Babylonian times.

iv.ii. Marduk Rises to Power in Babylon

The Babylonian-Akkadian Empire has always been assigned to Marduk. In conventional history, we learn that many different (human) kings were ruling in Babylon and in the vicinities of the Empire itself. Although that was true, Marduk was the one in charge behind the scenes. We learn very little about this in conventional history books because if they told us the truth, the historians would need to explain how Marduk could get so old. In fact, you may find references in mainstream history that Marduk actually died and was buried, and his son was Alexander the Great. Whether Alexander really was one of Marduk’s bastard sons or not, I don’t know at this point, but it would probably be fairly easy to research. However, it’s outside the scope of this paper.

Lord Ea would never give up his own power, but he let his son Marduk rule while he was busy doing other things. Hence, it seems as if Ea more or less disappeared from history at that point, only to return to power again, apparently with some help from his son (or that’s what it looked like) during the time of the Babylonian Empire.

Babylon, with a new race of humans evolving who had amnesia and couldn’t remember anything prior to their current lifetime, was the Era when Ea could claim the supremacy of the “Gods,” imprinting in humans that he was the Lord of the Universe, and no one else could compete.

He did this by having himself and his son taking on the personae of the “Supreme Gods” of Orion. They both used alter egos to accomplish this because the old records from ancient times were still around, and they did not have access to them all. Therefore, the best way they could accomplish this was to take on the personae of the Gods and Goddesses of the Heavens. So, when we research the old mythologies—whether it's the Sumerian texts, the Vedas, the Incan mythos, the Mayans, or any other mythology, tradition, or culture—we find the same beings showing up in all parts of the world—under other names!

This must be understood by the researcher, or everything else after that will be a series of incorrect conclusions. What many have problems with is that there seems to be an abundance of deities all over the world, and therefore, many think that if these deities are visitors, they must be coming from different star systems, independent from each other. Thus, we talk about the Dracos, the Reptilians, the Nordics, the Grays, the Insectoids, the Praying Mantas, and all the rest of them. In our ignorance, we have created our own illusion of what is going on in the Heavens.

I am not disputing that all these beings I just mentioned exist in a sort of way, but I do claim, backed up by evidence existing on this planet and not amongst channeled entities, that these star beings are not separate from each other. They generally belong to one of the two sides in the Cosmic War—they are either Lucifer's Fallen Angels, or they belong to Khan En.lil's and Queen Nin's Orion Empire. It's as simple as that, and this is why I have stuck to writing about the "Anunnaki" because they are really the visitors to this planet, as far back as 500,000 years, at least. Before that, the Earth was mainly visited by the Orion/Vegan crew, led by Prince Ninurta.

In addition, I am not saying that long before Lucifer came to Gaia, there haven't been other civilizations from space who have visited this planet in distant ancient times (footprints have been found on Earth that are half a billion years old)<sup>503</sup>, but these beings, who most people call the Anunnaki, are our so-called "aliens." They come from different star systems, and from an interdimensional viewpoint, they may look different from each other, but they are still working for Lucifer!

I was listening to a Pleiadian CD the other day, and in that lecture, someone asked them how Pleiadians look like, and I found their answer quite interesting.<sup>504</sup> They said that they themselves, who were speaking on the CD, are refugees from many different star systems and have gathered together to create a more peaceful environment in their part of the Pleiades, and they are "energy beings," meaning that they don't have any regular, physical bodies in any dimension (although they can "mock" one up by changing the form of their Avatar), but the Pleiades is vast and consists of many, many different beings. They said that those souls who inhabit physical bodies such as ours (and they are talking about 3-D bodies here) are all created following the “human template,” meaning that they have a head, two arms, two legs, and a torso. Then, they explained, the designers can decide how they want to modify that template—some beings may be small, others may be large and tall, and some can be blue and have psychic abilities (depending on how much DNA is activated), while others have less so. Some are giants. There are those who have hair, while others don’t, and so on. The reason I find this interesting is that we know that Ea fled to the Pleiades a few times and created hybrid races there, as he’s done here. Those whom the Pleiadians are talking about on the CD are exactly these hybrids that Ea—and probably Isis as well—created over there. These humanoids are also all working for Lucifer, although they don’t have the “Fire of the Goddess” as earth humans have. They are still our “space cousins.” Only the Goddess herself can create such a Fire connection, and although we know that Lucifer has tried, using technology, he has never managed to accomplish that goal, and he never will. Such a connection can of course not be created with technology, and technology and science are more or less the only thing a Lucifer has at his convenience.

iv.iii. Syncretism and the Babylonian Empire

With that said, let’s return to Earth to see what Ea did when he took over the Pantheon and the personae therein. What we are talking about here is called syncretism, and the meaning of syncretism is as follows:

noun

1. the attempted reconciliation or union of different or opposing principles, practices, or parties, as in philosophy or religion.
2. Grammar . the merging, as by historical change in a language, of two or more categories in a specified environment into one, as, in nonstandard English, the use of was with both singular and plural subjects, while in standard English was is used with singular subjects (except for you in the second person singular) and were with plural subjects.

Origin:

1610–20; < Neo Latin syncretismus < Greek synkrētismós union of Cretans, i.e., a united front of two opposing parties against a common foe, derivative of synkrēt ( ízein ) to syncretize + -ismos -ism<sup>505</sup>

Of course, when a deity is either traveling around to different areas of the world and becomes known in different countries or different places, that deity may have at least one name for each place he or she has been to. Thus, we have Lucifer hidden behind the name En.ki in Sumeria, Ea in Babylon, Ptah and Osiris in Egypt, Poseidon in Greece, and Neptune in Rome. However, when we take time to research this, we immediately find that all these beings, under different names, are just one being, named differently in different parts of the world.

This is known by most researchers. However, that's not the syncretism I'm discussing—it gets far more complex than that.

To begin, let's concentrate only on the Sumerian Pantheon. Those who have studied the Sumerian Pantheon to any degree are fully aware of the Triad—Anu, En.lil, and En.ki. In addition, we have their consorts (who are getting much less attention in the Patriarchal Hierarchy) and their children. Most people think that this is quite straightforward, but we have a problem already here.

All three of these names are not really names, but titles. Anu means "Heaven," En.lil means "Lord of Air/Heaven," and En.ki means "Lord of Earth." The readers know by now that Anu can be replaced by yet another title—Khan En.lil, which literally means "King [and] Lord of the Air/Heaven." Anu's consort, An.tu, means "Heaven Female [more than one]" to translate it word by word, but it can loosely be said to mean "One of the Ladies of Heaven." Nin.lil, who is En.lil's consort, means "Mother Air" or "Mother Heaven." Unbeknownst to most, there are at least two beings who carry the title "En.lil," and those are Khan En.lil (Anu), and Prince En.lil (Anu's son, Ninurta). Herein lies a huge confusion because in Babylon, Ea made sure there was only one En.lil, and that was his brother, Ninurta. Anu totally took over the title Khan En.lil. Last, we have Nin.ki, En.ki's consort, which means "Lady Earth."

The titles of the females can then be transferred onto any female the male deity may have a relationship with because Nin.ki, for example, is just a title, and means that she could be one of many consorts of En.ki's (which is also true in his case).

Thus far, we have the En.lil confusion sorted out, but we have to be very careful when we look at references in mythology to make sure which "En.lil" is addressed—Father En.lil (Anu) or Prince En.lil (Ninurta). Just because it says En.lil in the reference, it doesn't necessarily refer to Prince En.lil. In order to figure out whom it is referring to, we need more information. Does it mention who the consort is? The son? The daughter? It can be a very tedious detective work to get this right.

In order to take over the personae in the Pantheon, Ea needed to associate himself with them, being they male or female didn't matter—he made sure that he was associated to both. This was not a big deal, however, because in Orion, everybody associates with being females foremost, and males second, as we discussed in Level II.

In an earlier paper in Level IV, we talked about Ninhursag. We learned that this was a name given to the Goddess by her son, Ninurta, as an honorable gesture when he was given the Ar-i-du solar system as a gift from his mother and father. Ninhursag means "Lady of the Mountain," and the mountains were Ninurta's domain. However, if we research Ninhursag shallowly, we see that she is also En.ki's consort in some regard and was the female who helped En.ki with creating mankind. In other words, according to these records, Homo sapiens have Ninhursag's genes, foremost, together with En.ki's genes, and some other genes from elsewhere as well. This is one instance when we need to look at syncretism. Because of flaws in researcher's translations and because of distortion of records, many people now think that En.ki worked with Ninhursag to create mankind, which is false. Ninhursag is Mother Goddess herself, who had nothing to do with En.ki's creation. As we know, she was strongly against it. En.ki, as we know, in fact, destroyed "Ninhursag's" humanoid species to create his own model of humans. However, if we dig just a little bit deeper, we soon find that Ninhursag is the Mother Goddess and not En.ki's consort (I showed evidence of this in Paper #2). Unfortunately, we also have "mediums" who confuse the matter even more by saying that En.ki married his own mother, which is of course not true. Since En.ki took over Gaia, she wants to have nothing to do with him, unless he redeems himself.

The reason why we still can find the truth behind the alteration of records that took place in Babylon is because the old records, to a certain degree, still exist, if we only take the time to look. In research of any kind, it's imperative to look at details, but perhaps more so than ever if we research the old cuneiform and other ancient texts. Sometimes, as I've mentioned earlier, it's also a matter of reading what is not written into the records, if that makes sense.

In any case, by associating himself with the Goddess, via Ninhursag, Ea came a little closer to also associating himself to Satania, the inner sanctuaries of the Orion Empire. Later on, after he had been castrated by his brother in Rigel, Ea took on the cloak of the Goddess and became "feminine" by what we may call an "interdimensional gender change." In the Artemis story, if the reader can recall from a previous paper, En.ki also cloaked himself as the Goddess and did so under other circumstances as well, which have been discussed in these papers.

As the reader notices, we also need to have a multidimensional attitude in order to correctly research this subject because these beings are multidimensional, and thus act as such. This is why I've spent so much time explaining multi-d from many different angles in previous papers. If I hadn't and the reader hadn't studied it elsewhere, he or she would have been lost by now.

When we dig even deeper than that into the Pantheon, we find a lot of other very interesting syncretism. We notice that Ea goes under an incredible number of different names and titles. Not only is he Neptune, Poseidon, Ptah, and Osiris, but he is also Zeus, Quetzalcoatl, Thoth, Nergal, Nannar, Sin, Ningishzidda, Oannes, and a myriad of other personae. Nonetheless, in the old records from Babylonian times, it's pretended that many of these entities are different persons, when in fact, they are one and the same!

The list goes on and on. If we go to the Hindu, Veda, Inca, Aztec texts or generally to any ancient text we know of, we find the same deities everywhere! Still, that's not all. The most interesting thing is that despite these almost overwhelming number of god and goddess names mentioned in ancient texts, and we have looked at syncretism, it all boils down to only a few deities under different disguises. Also, Ea took on the personae of Khan En.lil, the Goddess and his brother, Ninurta—none of them were even here on Earth at the time. Hence, all the energy that people sent to the deities of the Orion Empire through prayers and sacrifices was engulfed by Ea himself because here on Earth—on a multidimensional level—he had taken on them all—but foremost, Khan En.lil's persona. This is symbolically told in the texts, where it sometimes says that En.ki killed Apsu (or Abzu), and he now dwells in the carcass of Apsu, while others interpret it as if Ea put Apsu "in a long sleep." We know that the original Apsu (Khan En.lil) is still alive and well, so similar to when Marduk symbolically "slayed" Tiamat, Ea "slayed" Apsu. Both incidents are symbolic for when Lucifer came and took over our solar system and chased away the Original Planners.

Without boring the reader too much, I'd like to add a few references to clearly make my point. Apsu was known to be Khan En.lil, as we can see in many references. The following is one of them, taken from a website that lists Babylonian gods and goddesses. Tiamat, as we know, is the Mother Goddess who was defeated by Marduk, according to Enûma Eliš, the Babylonian Creation Story:

Apsu

The Babylonian god Apsu is Tiamat's husband, the ruler of gods and underworld oceans. Father of Lahmu, Lahamu, Anshar and Kishar. Ea killed him.<sup>506</sup>

Then we'll see, if we look up a reference for En.ki, that he now took over the role of Apsu and is thus promoting himself as the "Father God" — the Ruler of the Universe:

Considered the master shaper of the world, god of wisdom and of all magic, Enki was characterized as the lord of the Abzu (Apsu in Akkadian), the freshwater sea or groundwater located within the earth. In the later Babylonian epic Enûma Eliš, Abzu, the "begetter of the gods", is inert and sleepy but finds his peace disturbed by the younger gods, so sets out to destroy them. His grandson [sic] Enki, chosen to represent the younger gods, puts a spell on Abzu "casting him into a deep sleep", thereby confining him deep underground. Enki subsequently sets up his home "in the depths of the Abzu." Enki thus takes on all of the functions of the Abzu, including his fertilising powers as lord of the waters and lord of semen.<sup>507</sup>

Although it becomes evident that Ea "stole" the persona of Apsu/Khan En.lil, it states in the Babylonian texts that Ea is the "Lord of the Waters" and the "Lord of the Apsu," which is defined as the "Underworld," interestingly enough. Who else is connected with the Underworld? Nergal and Ereškigal are. However, there is no chance that Ea could be the Lord of the Waters (waters being a metaphor for the Universal Ocean, or the KHAA) when that title was already Khan En.lil's, the Elder God. Ea chasing Khan En.lil out of the solar system doesn't make him Lord of the Universe—it only does for a being with psychopathic tendencies—someone a psychiatrist would diagnose as having an antisocial personality.

Perhaps, I should also mention, while we're talking about the KHAA, that Ka in the old Egyptian language means soul,<sup>508</sup> which I think is interesting. The 4% Universe is the 3-D physical universe, while the KHAA is dark matter and the spirit universe. The Ka does also have to do with "breathing" the soul into existence so that it can attach to the baby's body, according to Egyptian beliefs.<sup>509</sup> If you recall, the Goddess "breathed out" the Universe in the beginning, as was told in Level II. Things are, thus, on some level, connected in one way or the other.

The conclusion, in regards to syncretism, is quite obvious, but it is something that most people have missed when they have researched the ancient records. Still, these are just a few examples of many. It's very easy to miss these things, however, because if we misinterpret an important reference earlier on, we will not be able to get the rest correct, either, and we miss obvious conclusions, such as the one between Apsu and Ea. The confusion, of course, is not accidental, but by design. Ea and his son didn't want to make it easy for those who came later and wanted to translate and interpret the records that he and his son had tampered with.

These few beings, who appear to be so many, basically consist of Ea, his son Marduk, Isis, and Ereškigal, Queen of the Underworld. So, in reality, it is more or less only four beings who are passing themselves off as many more! Thus, I have just revealed the four entities who rule our planet behind the scenes! If I really want to narrow it down, I would take Isis out of the equation because she has rebelled against her husband, Ea, and is on the run from him and the rest of the AIF. The real Triad, in command of the Earth, consists of Ea, his consort Ereškigal, and Marduk. On the flip side, the earthly Triad corresponds with, and works as a counterpart to, the Heavenly Triad, consisting of Queen Nin, Khan En.lil, and Prince Ninurta.

I have already exposed some of this and showed evidence of its validity, but more proof will follow as we move on.

I must emphasize again that there are no guarantees that the older records, with which Ea and Marduk tampered, are totally correct either. There are probably no records whatsoever, preserved or hidden here on Earth, that are genuinely correct. Those who wrote them may have had their own agenda, and may, therefore, have omitted or added to the true story. All we can do in that respect is to connect the dots as well as we can with what we have and make some sense out of it. This is when it becomes fortunate to have other sources as well, telling their version of history, sometimes independent from both the records and each other. Some channeled material can be helpful in this respect, as well as, perhaps, anonymous sources, who for any given reason may know more than what the rest of us do, and we feel that we can really trust them. There is of course always a chance of deceit that comes into play, but sometimes, there are tools we can use to see whether a source is genuine or not, and regardless of what others may think about it, the person who's got that "genuine source" sometimes knows that it's a genuine one and is, therefore, not overly concerned about what other people think.

iv.iv Ruling with Help from the Zodiac

Now, when we have narrowed down all these gods and goddesses to three or four deities, it's time to look at rulership in regards to the Zodiac. Sitchin and others say that different deities ruled in different Ages of the Zodiac, e.g. Yahweh ruled in the Age of Aries, and now, when the Age of Aquarius is coming up, many think that this is the Age of Ea (Aquarius equating "House of Water,"), and therefore, they are waiting for Ea to show up in one disguise or another. In this particular case, I would say they are correct, but only by coincidence because Ea has ruled all the time, regardless of which Age it was been — at least the last 500,000 years or so.

Fig. 4. "Detail of Father Time in the Rotunda Clock (1896) by John Flanagan, Library of Congress Thomas Jefferson Building, Washington, D.C."

The Zodiac, as we see it, has an elliptic movement. Let's, for arguments sake, say that the Zodiac keeps this elliptic movement because it rides on galactic currents. At each "Age," a certain galactic current may be stronger than the other, so to be in charge, as one of the gods, one would have to take control over that specific galactic current. For example, if we go into the Age of Aquarius, it is the being who takes control over the House of Aquarius who will rule. He will enter the Sun via the House of Aquarius, so once again, we have the Sun as a “gate” —literally a “stargate” —a regulating force of energies that can pass through at certain times. So, if this is true, all it would take would be for one being to “jump” from one House of the Zodiac to the next, in a clockwise motion, and thus be in charge of time. Then we have another “stargate,” in connection with the first stargate—the Sun. This second stargate is Saturn, known as “Father Time,” interestingly enough.<sup>510</sup>

With this in mind, who would be the “jumper” between Houses? The answer is, of course, Lucifer/En.ki/Ea. Many are, as I mentioned, anticipating that Ea is coming back now in the Age of Aquarius because Aquarius equates water, but what about Pieces, the sign we are about to leave? Doesn’t that equate water, as well as fish? Who is associated with fish? Jesus Christ. Isn’t it appropriate to presume, then, that Ea and Jesus (Ea-Su, or Ea-Zeus) are the same deity? If so, doesn’t that indicate that Ea was in charge during Pieces as well? Although I am claiming that Ea has been in charge the last half a million years or so, I believe that I have to point this out because I haven’t seen many people making the connection—or if they have, they may have discarded it because they really want Ea to come back very soon, thinking he is the returning Messiah in the Age of Aquarius, and thus could not possibly have anything to do with Pieces, which is erroneous. However, if Ea shows up in the disguise of the Messiah, he will be the “Second Coming” in the Bible but certainly not the Second Coming that good-hearted people are waiting for. Lucifer is never coming with freedom, he’s coming with slavery.

Our mythology, naturally, is also talking about these “Zodiac Jumpers,” who in actuality are just one being—Lucifer—or Osiris, as is pointed out by some sources. The informative “Cystalinks.com” teaches us about the Zep Teti:

Along with the list of mythological gods we find encoded in the grid stories of the creation of the human experiment, we find the Zep Tepi. Within the void called Time and Space there are those who move from reality to reality creating the programs in which souls experience. They move through the place known as Zero Point, where matter and antimatter merge to create new realities. It is the place where positive and negative collide to destroy matter and recreate again.

Zep Tei refers to “First Time”, a remote epoch prior to ancient Egypt. It is a place of awakening and a place of forgetfulness. It is the beginning and the end of all and everything. It is the home of the creational forces, those who bend and shape realities through sound, light and color. The term Zep, Zipper, closing and opening, rips in time, movement through space time, DNA is a polymer or encoded DNA.

Zep Tepi is Genesis. Zep means Time. Tepi means First. Together they are the First Time or the Golden Age of Alchemy where the gods moved through the Void and created the grids of our reality. We know them as the Egyptian Gods highlighted by Osiris who is associated with Orion, god of resurrection and rebirth. They allegedly came to this reality, loosely based on the precession of the equinoxes, approximately 12,500 year ago.

At Zep Tepi, the constellation Orion acknowledged as the most significant constellation to the ancient Egyptians, was at its lowest position in the southern sky. From Zep Tepi onward, precession of the equinoxes has been gradually carrying Orion/Osiris higher and higher in the sky. The Sphinx is positioned such that in 10,500 BC - time of Zep Tepi - give or take a few hundred years, a remarkable astronomical arrangement of the Sun, Orion, and the constellation of Leo occurred. Leo, Lion, Crown, King.

Aker signifies the horizon, the point where night turns to day, where day turns to night - Zero Point or Zep Tepi. It is depicted as two lions seated back to back, facing away from each other. They are also called Yesterday and Tomorrow, as one lion faces towards the east where the sun rises and begins the new day, the other lion faces west where the sun sets and descends into the Underworld.<sup>511</sup> Aker also guards the gate to the Underworld and opens it for the King to pass through. We also find this pattern on the breastplate of the Sphinx and represents duality.

The area between the lions' backs often shows the circle of the sun as if rising between two hills. This also signifies the sun's journey across the sky during the day, as well as it being safely carried on the back of Aker during its dangerous night journey in the Underworld each night. Aker was not worshipped in temples as a Netjer. He was more connected perhaps to the primeval concepts and Earth powers.

According to a prominent Ancient Egyptian myth, the legendary Gates of the Afterworld were guarded by two gigantic lions or sphinxes called Aker. In New Kingdom tomb drawings the aker-sphinx of the eastern gate sits proud with its hind parts in a hollow. Underneath it can be seen an curious underground stream or duct. Behind the lion towers a huge mound or pyramid and under it is found a large, oval chamber which appears to be hermetically sealed.

In this mysterious chamber it said to be some lofty secret, no doubt from the 'gods' who ruled the land of Egypt during the remote epoch of Zep Tepi - 'The First Time'. This strange chamber was called the 'House of Sokar' in Rostau. The resemblance with the Sphinx complex at Giza is uncanny. Giza, in ancient time, was called Rostau. Sokar, a hawk-headed deity, was identified as Horus.<sup>512</sup>

This quote is full of great references to what we've been talking about, and the more time we read through it, the more we will find.

iv.v. Nimrod and the Tower of Babel

I believe we need to set the record straight, as well, when it comes to the Tower of Babel because it has created so much confusion—both in the times when the Tower incident was supposed to have happened and today, when the scholars are very divided on this subject, to say the least.

The Bible, and some ancient texts, indicate that King Nimrod of Shinar was in charge of those who built the Tower of Babylon. We know that, symbolically, the Tower was intended to be built into the Heavens, so the mortals could mingle with the gods (or the "God" in the Old Testament) and become immortal, just like them. When the gods found out what was going on, they were furious and destroyed the Tower. People were now scattered all over the world, and after talking the same language, they now had to speak different languages so that they could no longer understand each other.

Period. End of story.

Or is it really? Let's backtrack and take a look. If we start with Nimrod—who was this man? The Bible, which is a rewrite of old ancient texts (which, in turn, are rewrites of even older texts) tells us that Nimrod was the great-grandson of Noah. This would make him a hybrid king, wouldn't it? Half En.ki blood and half human, if we take it for granted that Noah's sons and grandsons kept the bloodline "clean." Assumingly, this was what they did. The question is, was Nimrod really Noah's great-grandson?

If we look in the records, we also see that it's often repeated that he was a "great" or "mighty hunter,"<sup>513</sup> which are titles for Ninurta and the Mother

Goddess. We know that none of the two were here at the time—instead, we understand that Ea took on multiple personae when he had scribes rewrite history in Babylon. Ea took on the characters of both Ninurta and the Goddess at times, and often called himself the “great hunter.” Also, Nimrod is depicted in the “Tanakh” (the Jewish “Oral Torah”) as a man of power “in the earth.”<sup>514</sup> The man of power “in the earth” (the Underworld) was Nergal/En.ki. Then, Shinar, over which Nimrod was supposed to have been the King, was, according to the records, some unspecified region of Mesopotamia,<sup>515</sup> so, in other words, he was a Sumerian King.

This put together sounds mysteriously similar to the Orion god Ea. The “hints” are still there in the records, as we can see, but they are overridden by newer information, including Nimrod being Noah’s descendent, and hence, a hybrid king. Therefore, the Tower of Babel incident is blamed on a hybrid who never existed in the form described, and the “God” of the Bible was blamed for being the furious one who separated people with different languages.

How about if, before the Flood, everybody spoke the same language, which still was the Orion language (and in some cases, telepathy) taught to the Primordial Namlú’u by Ninurta and Khan En.lil? After the Flood, building a new mankind, whom he wanted total control over, wouldn’t it be easier for the controller if he made sure that there was a language barrier between different people and different nations so that they couldn’t join together as easily? Then, if we look at the indicators, suggesting who King Nimrod may have been, we have a certain scenario played out before us.

The whole Tower of Babel metaphor could then, hypothetically, if we are to believe these findings, be Ea playing both sides of the coin and confusing the languages in people, who started becoming a little too smart and too close to the gods when it came to knowledge. An adjustment of the DNA would be appropriate for Ea, in order to resolve that problem. After all, who was it that became overly furious when people started building the Tower for the purpose of being like the gods? Well, according to the Old Testament, it was God himself who became furious, and his solution was to confuse the languages. Then, who was the “God” of the Old Testament? Exactly, it was Lucifer/En.ki/Ea!

The consort of Nimrod was said to be Semiramis<sup>516</sup>, and if we research her, it says that her consort was King Ninus of Assyria. Consequently, who was King Ninus? When I looked, I found that in some records, Ninus is the same person as Nimrod,<sup>517</sup> who certainly seems to have been En.ki himself (more syncretism).

Fig 5. Ninus equating Ea/En.ki?

BUT there is more. Let's not forget about Semiramis. Who was she? I bet that very few readers have heard of her. Now, if we conclude that King Ninus is Nimrod, and Nimrod is En.ki, then Semiramis must be either Ereškigal, Queen of the Underworld, or Isis/Inanna/Ishtar because these two goddesses were his main consorts, as we have discovered earlier. So, let's take a look at Semiramis.

Minister Alexander Hislop, in his 1853 book, "The Two Babylons," also suggests that Semiramis, indeed, is Nimrod's consort. Not only that—he also tells us who Semiramis really is. He wrote, to support his claim:

According to Hislop, Semiramis invented polytheism in an effort to corrupt her subjects' original faith in the God of Genesis. She deified herself as Ishtar and her son as Gilgamesh, as well as various members of her court and her then deceased husband.

In support of his claim, Hislop talked about legends of Semiramis being raised by doves. He referred to the writings by the church's Ante-Nicene Fathers to suggest that these stories began as propaganda invented and circulated by Semiramis herself, so her subjects would ascribe to her the status of Queen of Heaven [citation needed] and view her child as divine.

Hislop believed Semiramis' child to be the Akkadian deity Tammuz, a god of vegetation as well as a life-death-rebirth deity.<sup>518</sup>

<sup>518</sup> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Semiramis#Hislop.27s\_goddess\_claim (my emphasis)

Thus, not only did Hislop claim that Semiramis was Ishtar (En.ki's consort), but also that she would ascribe herself as the Orion Queen, which of course, is the case in the "fantasy world" which En.ki and Ishtar created, where En.ki became Ea, the "Lord of the Primordial Waters," and his spouse became the Queen of the Stars. Her child is Marduk or Horus, who in the ancient texts was indeed considered divine—son of Osiris/En.ki, and Ishtar/Isis. Tammuz and Horus are one and the same, as we have talked about earlier.

Hislop apparently figured out quite a lot, as we can see here:

He maintained that all divine pairings in religions e.g. Isis/Osiris, Aphrodite/Cupid, and others, are retellings of the tale of Semiramis and Tammuz, and that this was then applied to Mary/Jesus in Catholicism, even though Christianity does not support a special divinity of Mary rather the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. The figure of Semiramis was later developed into the Blessed Virgin Mary, according to Hislop's book. Hislop used this in support of his claim that Roman Catholicism is in fact paganism.

Hislop took literary references to Osiris and Orion as "seed of woman" as evidence in support of his thesis.<sup>519</sup>

Here, Hislop also gives reference to Orion and the "seed of women," which I find quite astonishing, taking into consideration that this was in 1853!

Last, Semiramis, as the consort of Nimrod/En.ki, was also considered a harlot. Who else was considered a harlot? Well, we know her from the Bible, but also from Enûma Eliš, the Babylonian Creation story, as Inanna/Ishtar/Isis. Here is from Armenian legend:

Armenian tradition portrays her [Semiramis] as a homewrecker and a harlot. These facts are partly to be explained by observing that, according to the legends, in her birth as well as in her disappearance from earth, Semiramis appears as a goddess, the daughter of the fish-goddess Atargatis, and herself connected with the doves of Ishtar or Astartë.<sup>520</sup>

In this tradition, she is also the daughter of the fish-goddess Atargatis, who through syncretism is associated with Ishtar and Inanna.<sup>521</sup> This is again where we can see how records have been tampered with because Semiramis/Isis can't be both the daughter of Isis/Ishtar and being Isis herself. The confusion lies in that Isis was not the daughter of En.ki to begin with, but she was the daughter of Ninurta, as I pointed out earlier. However, En.ki took her as a consort after he had raped her, and he also claimed her as his daughter—erroneously so. If we set the records straight, the above quote makes more sense. However, we can see in the Armenian tradition that Semiramis, who is Isis/Inanna, is considered the Harlot, which we know is associated with Inanna.<sup>522</sup>

We also see the association with fish gods and goddesses, which is something that is related to Ea as well, in his appearance as the fish god Oannes, who ascends from the water as a “fish man” —a man with a fish head and a human torso. The fish head has since then been adopted by the Pope and the Catholic Church, in the form of the “Mitre.” The Catholic Church is big-time Luciferian (see fig. 6)

Fig 6. The Popes, throughout history, have been wearing the “Mitre,” which is a symbol of Oannes, another version of Ea/Lucifer.

As the readers can see, in order to figure out how things are connected, taking syncretism into deep consideration when doing this kind of research is imperative, or it is impossible to figure out our own history.

In summary, it was Ea himself, as Nimrod, who confused the languages in the Bible and the old Babylonian texts, in the incident called the Tower of Babel, and he did this by playing both sides of the story, blaming the entire incident on a king who never existed, except through syncretism (Nimrod = Ea) and a God that was non-existent as well, except through syncretism (Ea = Jehovah/YHWH).<sup>523</sup>

<sup>523</sup> Jehovah/YHWH was non-existent in the sense that she was not present on Earth during the time of the Biblical God. The real Jehovah/YHWH is, as we’ve discussed a number of times, another name for Mother Goddess. Ea made YHWH from the Divine Feminine to a male god.

iv.vi. The Everlasting Babylonian Empire

The word “Babylon,” as far back as it can be traced at this time, stems from the Akkadian word Babili, which means “Gate of the God” or “Gateway of the God.” The earlier name, which is Babila, is of non-Semitic origins and has an unknown meaning.<sup>524</sup> Note that it says “God” in singular and not “Gods” in plural. This is because in Babylon, Marduk was the God with a capital “G,” and he and his father did the best they could to erase the memories of earlier times from the human mass consciousness, when other gods and goddesses had been worshipped. Sumer (or Shumer/Šumer), according to Sitchin, is translated to “The Land of the Watchers,” or “The Land of the Guardians.”<sup>525</sup>

Today, Iraq is the place where the old Babylonian Empire, with its capital, Babylon, was located. Of course, the reason for the Iraq War and the defeat of Saddam Hussein was to get access to the old artifacts that he was sitting on and to be able to safeguard what is buried underground. According to the Pleiadians, in many of their lectures, the “Anunnaki” still dwell under the Earth, and a “Gateway to the gods” can supposedly be found where Iraq is now located. The reason the U.S. needed access to Saddam’s land at that time was because time was running out, and the “return of the gods” was coming up. Iraq is still Ea’s and Marduk’s domains, and it is said, not only by Sitchin, that there is a stargate located somewhere in that neighborhood, being titled “The old Atlantis.” It is important for the U.S. to get in charge of that gate because that’s where some of the Minions are going to line up to “welcome the gods.” It is my own belief that it’s through that gate most of the Invaders, who are now coming in droves, in form of non-physicals, to possess those of the “correct” bloodlines, will enter. Saddam was probably quite furious that he was not the one who would stand there and welcome the major gods. Instead, they captured him and hanged him.

This Gate was probably created in Babylonian times, with the future in mind—remember that the gods are thinking long thoughts.

Most historians, I believe, say that the Babylonian Empire existed between approximately 2350-323BC, ending with the death of Alexander the Great.

Eventually, the Babylonian Empire “migrated” and became the Roman Empire. Not much changed—the same gods were worshipped—only the names changed, creating more syncretism. I am not going to go into talking about the Roman Empire and all the following empires because that’s something anyone can look into if they want to—if the groundwork been done in these papers fresh in mind, it should be somewhat easier to do. However, it’s just history repeating itself—the same control, the same kind of conflicts, and the same kinds of wars. When we think about it, we can see how convenient it is, from the gods’ perspective, when we have amnesia—we are unable to learn from history because our lifespan is so short, and the next time we come back, we have forgotten everything that occurred in the past lifetime. With history being manipulated and with immortal beings running the show, repeating history over and over, how are we supposed to be able to learn? We only know what we are being told, which is not the truth—not even close.

Including today, the same deities are worshipped, so the story remains the same, in that sense, over the millennia. Babylon, under whatever disguise, has never ceased to exist, and if we would have asked Saddam Hussein, he would certainly have considered “his” country being more Babylon than Iraq—just two different names for the same thing. Of course, Babylon at its peak, was much bigger than Iraq is today, but the core of Babylon still stands today, and is a very important outpost for the gods.

The AIF—and even those who were here prior to them—left a lot of records behind. Some of them have been found, but there are still a lot that are buried, waiting for the right time to “reveal themselves.” Records were left in the Underworld, Antarctica, East and South Africa, America, and Latin and South America.<sup>526</sup>

The number seven is an Anunnaki number as well as a Pleiadian number (the Seven Sisters), according to themselves.<sup>527</sup> The WingMakers, who are the AIF (Anunnaki), also stress the number seven when they talk about the seven Tributary Zones.<sup>528</sup> Again, according to the Pleiadians, the number seven will be the key to translating records.<sup>529</sup>

In the next paper, we are going to conclude what it is that En.ki and his son really want from us humans. We are also going to look into what kind of potentials our bodies actually have—potentials much greater than any of us had any ideas about. What is matter, and what is spirit? What is the difference between them, if any? In this respect, what is it the gods know that we don’t?

These are questions we will discuss in the next paper, which will be Paper #16.

PAPER #16: THE ONGOING BATTLE OVER THE MATERIAL AND SPIRITUAL REALMS (WHAT IS MATTER AND WHAT IS SPIRIT?)

I. The Hologram Makers

And they had a king over them, which is the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name in the Hebrew tongue is Abaddon<sup>530</sup>, but in the Greek tongue has his name Apollyon<sup>531, 532</sup>

In previous levels of learning, as well as in this Fourth Level of Learning, Paper 14, we discussed how the star races were concerned that humanity soon will be able to travel in space, and if we don't evolve, we will be a danger to the rest of the Galaxy. This was one of the reasons for the Deluge, and now we are facing the same problem again—extinction or survival.

Although there are benevolent star races in the KHAA, who are concerned about our behavior and want to stop us before it's too late, there are also less benevolent ones who are sharing the same kind of thoughts. We're talking here about the star races who are on Lucifer's side in this "Cosmic Play." Many of these star races are getting very concerned that we will escape the trap en masse. If we do, they think that we will come after them, and they know that with extended perceptions, we are much superior to them in the sense that our Fire is burning higher, faster, and more furious. However, once we humans are free from the trap, we will not become like them, and this is what they don't understand. We are not a violent species when we are free from indoctrination, and our purpose would not be to go to war against them. This shows how little they understand humans in general. They may have manipulated us genetically, turned off the majority of our DNA, learned how our bodies work on a more scientific level, but they still don't understand our emotions.

Our emotions are our downfall and our blessing at the same time. They can be used against us (which they are), but we can also understand other

<sup>530</sup> In Hebrew, Abaddon means "Destruction" or "Destroyer", which also is the definition of "Shiva" in the Hindu tradition. As I will go into in much more details in Level V, Shiva is equivalent to En.ki. In the Bible, he is known as Lucifer and Satan.

<sup>531</sup> Equivalent to whom we also call Apollo, which is mostly the name for Marduk, but when En.ki plays the role of his own son, he is En.ki-Marduk (syncretism) species better. This is why we got the emotions in the first place. It was mainly so we could understand and communicate with Nature, of which we are a part. When the Namlú'u walked the planet, they could understand and communicate with their entire environment—this was their purpose as Guardians of the Living Library. Many think that this was done telepathically, but it was not. It was done by “thought.” I don't mean that they were thinking something, and the plants and animals picked it up—that would still be telepathy—but I mean that these beings connected with one of the Inner Sanctions (but not the Inner Sanction) of the VOID or the KHAA, where thoughts reside. By intentionally tuning into that section of the VOID, they could instantly make themselves understood by their environment, including all the elements—air, water, earth, fire, and ether. In the first paper of Level I<sup>533</sup>, I explained how this works on a subquantum level, by introducing LPG-C's (Life Physic Group California) subquantum research, which partly consists of ET science. In that paper, I wrote about the Thought Superdomain that “surrounds” our Universe/Multiverse (which they call the Unum). This is the level which the Primordial Womankind tuned into, and when doing so, they could also understand species who visited our planet. This was of course crucial because if they couldn't “read” these beings, they wouldn't know which knowledge of the Living Library that being was in need of.

The AIF knows about this, and there is no end to what they needed to do in order to keep us ignorant and under control. Think about it—why do they need to take all these actions in order to keep us in check? Obviously, they are very afraid of us and the power that resides inside of us, or they wouldn't have to do it. Look at the following list of things they have done and created in order to entrap us—then ponder in wonder:

1. The Grid.
2. The Between Lives Area (BLA).
3. Amnesia.
4. DNA reduction.
5. Reduction of our perceptions to include only 4% of the entire Universe—a tiny piece of the Electromagnetic Spectrum, which we call visible light.
6. Lie and manipulate.
7. Population reductions.

If you think that this is quite impressive, it is! Still, we haven't really talked a lot about the major thing that they have done, which is the main entrapment—senior to any of the above. The seven items I listed, however, are tightly connected in a subordinate fashion to what we’re now going to discuss—the Holographic Universe!

I am sure that almost all readers have heard about it, and many probably have studied it to quite some extent and have been wondering when Wes is going to bring that up, if at all.

Well, now is the time. I have based the previous three levels of learning on the LPG-C “Working Model,” and the Universe according to the Orion Empire (the “Orion Model”). Both these models are accurate models, although that of the Orion Empire is more expanded, only because the AIF, who LPG-C were connected with, just revealed so much. I am not suggesting that what I’ve written about in relation to the Orion Model is a perfect model because, again, I am limited in my own understanding of the Multiverse, being a soul in a limited human body, but it’s enough for our purpose.

i.i. Back to the Planet of Power—Saturn as a Holographic Projector

The reader will have noticed that the planet Saturn has been mentioned frequently in my papers as a very important planet for many reasons. It’s been highly worshipped throughout history—especially within secret societies, in so-called black magic(k)<sup>534</sup> and satanic rituals, where “evil spirits,” demons, or interdimensional beings are called up. The magician can then make a pact with the entity that shows up within the circle and the pentagram that is drawn on the floor. He (most often a male) thinks that by getting the power from the entity, he can rule, get riches, women, or whatever he desires, and in exchange, he sells his soul to the Demiurge/Leviathan/Satan after death. This is the most commonly told version of a satanic ritual.

Saturn was also Prince Ninurta’s planet during the Golden Age—before Lucifer and his Fallen Angels came. It had a stargate connected to it, which probably connected to many different locations in time/space and space/time—such as Pesh-Meten, the commercial galactic “highway” and to the gates of the Orion Empire, perhaps. According to the Pleiadians and others, there is a stargate in Orion’s Belt as well, and perhaps the two connect.

The Ra Material discusses the Council of Saturn, which consists of a council of Elders, who decide who may enter our solar system and who won’t be allowed. During the Golden Age, I've been informed that there was a "council" of sorts at that time too, but it consisted mostly of MIKH-MAKH warriors, who guarded the gate from intruders. Once Lucifer took over, he either created the rings of Saturn, or even if he didn't, and they were already there, he placed an Interdimensional Council in the rings. This council is still there and has a similar function as the MIKH-MAKH warriors of Ninurta's Golden Age, with one important exception—they are the ones responsible for the Third Dimension! The Ra people from the Ra Material call them the Council of Saturn or the "Council of Nine." In this Ra Material session, Don Elkins<sup>535</sup> asks the question, as usual, and the channeled entities reply:

<sup>534</sup> Magick with a “k” is referring to the magic of Aleister Crowley. He added the “k” in order to separate his own work from that of “stage magic,” which is trickery. Crowley took his own magick very seriously.

Questioner: ...Who are the members, and how does the Council function?

Ra: I am Ra. The members of the Council are representatives from the Confederation and from those vibratory levels of your inner planes bearing responsibility for your third density. The names are not important because there are no names. Your mind/body/spirit complexes request names and so, in many cases, the vibratory sound complexes which are consonant with the vibratory distortions of each entity are used. However, the name concept is not part of the Council. If names are requested, we will attempt them. However, not all have chosen names.

In number, the Council that sits in constant session, though varying in its members by means of balancing, which takes place, what you would call irregularly, is nine<sup>536</sup>. That is the Session Council. To back up this Council, there are twenty-four entities<sup>537</sup> which offer their services as requested. These entities faithfully watch and have been called the Guardians<sup>538</sup>.

The Council operates by means of, what you would call, telepathic contact with the oneness or unity of the nine, the distortions blending harmoniously so that the Law of One prevails with ease. When a need for thought is present, the Council retains the distortion-complex of this need, balancing it as described, and then recommends what it considers as appropriate action. This includes:

<sup>536</sup> This is the "Council of Nine," whose channeled information Roddenberry used as ideas for "Star Trek" in the 1960s-1970s.

<sup>537</sup> The "Council of 24," which the channeled entities calling themselves "The Council of Nine" or just "The Nine" mention in their sessions. I brought this up in detail in the Third Level of Learning.

<sup>538</sup> "The Guardians" is another term for the AIF, which I have talked about in previous papers.

One, the duty of admitting social memory complexes to the Confederation; Two, offering aid to those who are unsure how to aid the social memory complex requesting aid in a way consonant with both the call, the Law, and the number of those calling (that is to say, sometimes the resistance of the call); Three, internal questions in the Council are determined.

These are the prominent duties of the Council. They are, if in any doubt, able to contact the twenty-four who then offer consensus/judgment/thinking to the Council. The Council then may reconsider any question.<sup>539</sup>

Evidence that what I'm writing about is correct is given by the Ra people themselves:

Questioner: Is the Council of Nine the same nine that was mentioned in this book? [Questioner gestures to Uri {Geller}.]

Ra: I am Ra. The Council of Nine has been retained in semi-undistorted form by two main sources, that known in your naming, as Mark and that known in your naming as Henry. In one case, the channel became the scribe. In the other, the channel was not the scribe. However, without the aid of the scribe, the energy would not have come to the channel.<sup>540</sup>

The channelers of the Council of Nine (the AIF) are Mark Probert and Henry Puharich:

Questioner: The names you spoke of, are they Mark Probert and Henry Puharich?

Ra: I am Ra. This is correct.<sup>541</sup>

Furthermore, the Ra people are telling us from which dimension the Council of Saturn operates:

Ra: This Council is located in the octave, or eight[h] dimension, of the planet Saturn, taking its place in an area which you understand in third-dimensional terms as the rings.<sup>542</sup>

The Ra people give us a lot of information here, which coincides with my own body of research, and it tells us that Saturn, indeed, is an important planet in our solar system. We also learn that they operate from the eighth dimension (Ra calls it density), which is the last dimension of the universe of visible light. Personally, I don't like to number dimensions and densities because the boundaries are so fuzzy and uncertain. We notice this all the time—depending on whom we're asking (particularly amongst channeled entities)—they give us a different dimensional system. I think the best way to describe this phenomenon is by referring to the Electromagnetic Spectrum. The Third Dimension is simply the spectrum of "visible light." To try to explain these things, and at the same time making sense, is difficult at best, and impossible at worst. However, we know that the Council of Saturn, who is creating our Third Dimension, is located in the upper echelons of this physical universe, which makes sense.

<http://www.lawofone.info/results.php?c=Miscellanea&su=Council+of+Saturn#Council+of+Saturn>

I've been writing about the Golden Age, and what a different Earth that was from the one we're living on now—it's like night and day. The reader can take the "night and day" quite literally, actually, because the Earth before the Invasion was existing in the KHAA (the "dark" night), while the present Earth is perceived to exist in the "visible spectrum" (daylight). Not that the KHAA is "dark" once a being is able to dwell there—it's just another spectrum of light—but to us, in our limited state, the KHAA is darkness.

The AIF used Saturn, being the most powerful stronghold in the solar system, as their main base, from where they projected a hologram that was overriding a previous hologram. The Third Dimension, whether we are discussing the Golden Age or the manipulated version, is a program—a software program of sorts—which once was projected within the KHAA as an Experiment—a hologram projected by thought, idea, and intention. Some say it was "dreamed up." Thus, the original Living Library existed in the KHAA before it was hijacked. It was a projection, which made it seem physical. The AIF, however, created their own program with assistance from advanced technology, where matter became much more solid, being energy in form of a small spectrum of light.

Saturn thus became the projector of an overriding hologram, in which the creators could decide what to show and what to hide. Some even say that nothing of what we perceive with our senses is "real"—it's just a copy of the original universe, and a copy which makes us perceive only about 4% of what is actually there.<sup>543</sup> The KHAA is thus the real universe.

In David Icke's books, Human Race Get off your Knees and Remember Who You Are, he elaborates on his theory that those who operate Saturn and our own Moon are working hand in glove to keep us trapped. I, too, believe this is the case, with Saturn as the main projector and the Moon working as an enhancer of the holographic images in order to pinpoint a reality on us here on Earth—the reality we are accepting as the true reality (which most people do). The question is whether the Moon was even here before the solar system was hijacked. It may very well be a construct, created by the AIF. The reason I think so is that I suspect that the Moon may be hollow. Scientists were stunned when they noticed that the Moon sometimes "rings like a bell," which indicates that it may be hollow—perhaps even a spacecraft. Who is flying around in hollowed-out craft? The reader knows the answer...

i.ii. The Magicians of Time and Space

By some, they are called the Anunnaki, and these people usually claim that the Anunnaki are the Originator of Magic—the Master Magicians of Time and Space. Although this sounds to me like a joke, in one way it is true.

The AIF created the distorted Third Dimension, but just like the Archons, they can't create something out of nothing—they may be scientists in a “copy-cat” kind-of-way, but they are not artists. They take something that's already there and manipulate it—often to something less than the original. If the original were beauty, they would create ugliness; if the original were powerful, they would create weakness; if the original were stable, they would create something unstable, and so on.

In this case, we had a full Universe to “play around with,” and most dimensions were available to us. We were part of an Experiment that we had agreed to and which we loved playing in because it was about Nature. In the middle of a functioning Experiment, the AIF came and shrank our Universe by 96%, and that became our new Universe. In this new Universe, they kept us imprisoned on a small planet in the outskirts of the Milky Way Galaxy, and that became our Universe. On that little planet, we let a small number of extraterrestrials tell us what we can and can't do. We let our “Free Will” be determined by these beings, who in fact were strangers here—they didn't even belong here.

Many “New Agers” say that the Global Elite and the extraterrestrials, who are in charge of them, are reflecting our own level of consciousness—we are in this poor state of mind because we have done bad things in order to deserve the Global Elite, who are controlling us. Not until we change our mass consciousness will the Global Elite change as well. These New Agers further say that no one individual can be free on his or her own—we have to work on the mass consciousness to be free. In other words—this whole mess started with us humans doing criminal and unethical things, and then we “pulled in” the Elite—this probably also sounds familiar to those who have read “Hidden Hand,” who claimed the same thing.<sup>544</sup> However, he is far from the only one saying so.

I would say that this is nonsense! This is probably an idea that comes from the Global Elite, or the “Alien Masters” themselves to keep their own hands clean. I can hear a familiar Luciferian voice in the background saying: “Don't attack us—it's not our fault! You were the ones who asked for us to control you because of your own behavior! We were just your catalysts!”

My readers know the story—humanity lived in a Golden Age, and then the Alien Invader Force (AIF) descended and started a war here, where after they started trapping human/Namlú'u souls into third dimensional human bodies. In light of this information, how can the New Age hypothesis be correct? Someone is trying to make criminals out of the “victims,” although I don't like using that word. I just want to set the records straight—who is the criminal? Is it the person who storms into a 7-11 store and starts shooting people left and right, or is it the person who gets shot?

Of course, then we have all this talk about co-creation. Channeled entities suggest that in the Between Lives Area (BLA), souls make agreements with each other in order to help each other evolve. It may go something like this: “I will be the bully in the next lifetime and treat you really bad so that you learn how to become stronger and how to say no.” The other soul replies: “That sounds good, Arthur. I'm with ya!” Although agreements may sometimes be made between souls in the BLA, this has been taken to the extreme. People starve to death in Africa while flies are biting them and sucking their sweat and blood from top to toe, and instead of having compassion for these people, New Agers say that the Africans “deserve it” in some twisted way because they need that experience in order to evolve further. What I see is a very dangerous path, where people stop caring for others because if people are in trouble, they need to experience it, and they should be left alone. To the defense of those who have such ideas, however, they still think we should help, but only if the person asks for it. I agree with that part. People sometimes do need to be left alone to reflect over their situations, but we need to use discernment. My concern is that “someone” is trying to sneak a new set of moral codes into society, where everyone is on his or her own, with no help from anybody. In the extension, this is possibly what could happen. I want to give a heads up on these things because they may sound good to a certain extent, but watch out for hidden plans behind the scenes—always! Constant alertness is what is important. Don't stop trusting people, but learn to see red flags. Never stop caring and be compassionate about other people.

Now, what about the AIF being magicians that we talked about? Yes, in their own way, they are magicians. The AIF know how the hologram works, and they know what “tricks” they can play with it. They can suddenly show up in a place as Reptilians or even as humans, talking and socializing with others, only to suddenly disappear in thin air. They can show their spaceships in the sky so a whole village can see it, and then they just disappear in a ball of fire. They can do a lot of tricks because they know that they are dealing with illusions, but we don't. We get upset or excited when these things happen.

Has anybody thought about why Lucifer is called the “Light Bearer”? It almost makes him sound benevolent and nice, doesn’t it? Light Bearer...hm. Does it mean that he is surrounded by the most magnificent light and can say the words, “Let there be light!” and there will be light? Or, does it actually mean that he is the one who is bearing the little tiny spectrum of light that we humans are able to perceive? If this was a “$10,000 Question”, I would vote for the latter.

Isn’t that what Lucifer did? He brought Light into the world and the Universe as we know it—“Let there be light!” This is why so many worship him. Without him, we would be blind and fumble in the dark! In that case, remember that the light we perceive is only 4% of the Electromagnetic Spectrum—what about the rest of the spectrum? Why are we cut off from that light? It doesn’t look like light to me, you may say, and stare out in dark space, and from your limited perceptions you would be right. The Universe is teeming with life, but the very majority of it resides in what we call darkness. What we need to realize is that this so-called darkness is just other frequency bands, and when we are able to perceive them, it’s no darkness there anymore! They shut off our DNA—the DNA which when activated can experience the rest of the spectra as well. So much for Light Bearer.

These entities, who are guarding us to make sure we don’t regain our abilities without them being in charge, ready to capture us, can have a lot of fun with us and our miniature reality—just like a little boy has fun with his train set that his dad built for him. The AIF, however, don’t feel any empathy and compassion when they are “playing.” And for us, their game has been deadly serious. It’s time to disagree with this seriousness and tell ourselves that getting out of this silly trap is easy. Put the AIF “over there” and then go in your own direction. Do it in your mind. Then live your life as you want it to be, and take some consequences if necessary. What has always been your passion? Do it! And what is just as important—teach your children this!

When you and I grew up, many of us had no clue what consequences certain actions had. We got some money? We bought a house and a car—on credit, of course. We got married, and our income increased, so we bought a bigger house, leading to more debts, and so on. Almost everybody made this mistake, so we never thought something was wrong with it, until we started having trouble paying because of so-called “inflation,” which is a made-up term built on a lie about the value of money, supposedly reflecting the value of silver and gold that are stored in vaults somewhere. These silver and gold reserves justify the printing of money. Then woops! There comes the magician again, and there is no reserve. Money was just an illusion, but we still need to pay. Someone always gets rich on other people’s misery.

Instead of coming in a hard situation where your hands are tied—a part of slavery today—where you have to work for the System until you die, in order to pay your debt, you teach your children never ever to buy anything on credit, and always go for their passion, wherever it will lead them. If they do, they will be just fine, and they have a much better chance to build a life which is not so dependent on the System. Explain to your kids what is really going on in the world, little by little, so you don't overwhelm them. Also, don't only tell them—let them experience it, let them see it, hear it, taste it, and smell it! Only then do they know it's real. Children grow up in blindness only because the parents are blind—there is no one to guide them, and there is no one to tell them what they can do to get a rich life. Most people think that living a rich life means having a lot of money. Yes, money can buy you freedom to a certain extent, if you use it for that purpose, but the true richness is what you can find within yourself—and the best of it all is that it doesn't have to cost anything!

i.iii. Freezing Realities

Saturn is considered being “Father Time,” which we mentioned in the previous paper. He is the one who decides how long the eons should be, the year, the month, week, day, hour, minute, second...linear time! Once we humans have agreed that we live on a timeline with a past, present, and a future, we have truly lost our multidimensionality. Now, most people think that what is in the future can never happen before what happens in the present and vice versa. People think that time is really set in stone—the past will never come back and can never change, and we know nothing about the future. Still, as I mentioned in Level I, extraterrestrials—whether they have the technology to do so or just the power of thought and intention to do so—could “insert” an entire civilization here on Earth from what is perceived as one second to another. You look out over a field and there are only flowers and bushes as far as you can see. In the next second there is a big city where there was an empty field! How is this possible? It's the simplest thing if you have what it takes to do it because you can build it outside of this reality and then just insert it as you “insert” a new house in your toy train landscape. It takes a couple of seconds.

The Pleiadians said recently that is quite a common occurrence throughout history—more so in ancient times than now—ETs froze our reality quite literally to get a job done here<sup>545</sup>. Let's say a team of scientists are on the way to the Sahara to check out some rumors that giant skulls, 300ft tall, are buried in the sand and have been dug up by some locals. The AIF doesn't want these scientists to see that such tall beings once walked on the Earth, so they freeze the entire hologram—including the people—insert themselves at the finding place, and remove the skull. When finished, they “unfreeze” the hologram again. The scientists get to the site but find nothing. This is just an example from the top of my head, but according to the Pleiadians, this can be done and has been done. I am not the least surprised, having the understanding I have.

i.iv. Father Time in the New Era

The AIF, just like myself, are convinced that we are now entering a New Era, and this is when Father Time—Saturn—is playing a big role. In Greek mythology, Saturn was known as Cronus, or Kronos (there are many different spellings), and he was also the father of the Titans, as we learned in the first papers of this level of learning. Originally, Cronus was Khan En.lil and Prince Ninurta, respectively, while Poseidon was a “younger god”—the head of the Olympians, who overthrew the Titans and took over our solar system. Once that was done, Poseidon (Lucifer/En.ki) took on the role of Cronus and became Father Time. This is where people have the most problem. These beings, whom I call the AIF, are out to conquer everything that is owned by the Orion Empire, in order to boost their own egos and power. Then they take over the identities of the ones they have conquered—including their names and titles. This is the reason why Lucifer has so many names and titles—he has conquered them! This is also why he can have names and titles which contradict each other. He rules under one name, Poseidon, which is him as an Olympian god, but he is also Cronus, his opponent, who's a Titan. For example, scholars are connecting Saturn with Ninurta, making him the evil guy, who is keeping us imprisoned here, with Saturn being the planet which projects the hologram. If people knew that Ninurta is out of that picture since 500,000 years ago, and Lucifer/En.ki took on that title/name, things would start to fall in place. Wrong beings are being accused for wrong things, while the real criminals go free and are looked at as liberators.

The New Era which the AIF wants to ring in is the Era of the evolved human, who is spiritually and physically savvy enough to take that extra leap, which is required in order for the AIF to invade Orion. They are soon there, and this is why we start seeing so many UFOs on television right now. Sightings are shown on CNN, ABC, NBC, BBC, and so forth. They want to prepare people for Disclosure in a sense. It's not going to be a real and honest disclosure, of course. Why would the government, which has so incredibly much to hide, suddenly set the record straight when it comes to UFOs, extraterrestrials, interdimensionals, and multidimensionals? Please think about it. If they disclose anything of value at all, it must be in their interest, not in ours! This is why I have such a hard time comprehending why so many people believe in all these co-called Disclosure Projects. It's way too naïve. I really hope, if the day comes when "disclosure" happens, that people are smarter than that. It's bad enough how otherwise nice and very compassionate people believe in such things as the Harvest being a good thing, particularly so now, when there is so much information out on these subjects.

When the nanosecond was over by the end of 2012, I decided to immediately suggest a New Era for those who are choosing a new beginning. I set January 1, 2013, as the beginning of the New Era, and simply called this Year 1 (as I write this, we are just 16 days from January 1, Year 2 AN (after nano [second])). The new species, who will be the new Guardians of the Living Library, I call Homo Nova. I have no idea if any of this will be adopted in the future, but I do believe that the new probability, which will eventually build a world void of the Alien Invader Force, will start the new time count with the end of the nanosecond in mind. I also believe that the Era we have just started will be the last one, in the sense that soon enough we will not pay attention to linear time anymore—at least not as a fixed concept of past, present, and future. As we become more Multidimensional, time as we know it will be less and less important. Time is a "stopper" and a "distracter." Time is always holding us back, while no-time opens up all probabilities and possibilities. Time has had its advantages in 3-D, but when we are moving away from this fixed reality, linear time has to go.

i.v. Passion—a Way out of the Trap!

Now and then, we hear the expression, we should be living our dreams. This is one of my favorite expressions of all time because it's so true that it actually explains Paradise in one single sentence!

With dream, I mean passion foremost. Then, when we've gone as far as we can with that passion, we go for the next passion and so on. Sometimes, we can work on more than one passion at the time. Living like this creates true happiness. Also, it's in his or her passion that a person is the strongest. It's very hard to manipulate a person who knows what he or she wants. Such a person is not the first targets of the AIF because they are hard to mind-control and manipulate. Therefore, the greatest favor we can do to our kids is to suggest to them that they live out their passions, as long as these passions are not hurting them or anybody else. Can you imagine a whole generation living out their passions, totally discarding everything the “authorities” tell them they “must” do? I would love to witness that! The society would look a whole lot different from now, but overall, it would probably be workable.

Without having an inkling of what life will bring, it’s hard to live our passions because we are always told that we need an education, a good job, to be a good citizen of the society, and to help building on the society we have. All these ideas are just “stoppers.” That’s what led us into modern slavery in the first place. If we live our passion and are true to ourselves, the rest will resolve—we will have what we need because the passion is so strong that reality bends according to our will power. Still, passion comes with some discipline because it’s easy to totally live our passion and forget that we have other duties, too, such as taking care of property, socializing, and even such simple things as providing food for ourselves and others.

Being passionate about something is not selfish—quite the opposite. By showing that someone can live like that, you inspire many people to attempt the same thing—and those who are brave enough will succeed. Also, being in the energy field of a person who is passionate is very inspiring and uplifting. What better things can you do for others than that? You are living your life in full and inspiring others to do the same. Also, you show that it’s possible not to agree with being a slave worker for the Companies of the super-rich. For those who are thinking “Service-to-Self” and “Service-to-Others,” this is probably one of the best Service-to-Others I can think of. To live out our passions means that we are creating something—we are working as creators! Therefore, if we live out passions that are not harmful to oneself or others, we are automatically building a new world, using stepping -stones created from very positive energies. This kind of creation will automatically include beauty in some form, and beauty is one of the most important things in the Universe—beauty and love go hand in hand. Look around you, and what do you see? In essence, you see an incredible creation we call Mother Earth. This planet is no less than absolutely beautiful—a masterpiece created by the most brilliant forces of the Universe and beyond. Nothing on this planet is created by mistake—everything has its place, and I mean the Living Library, not what the AIF or immoral humans have created (or uncreated). Then, take a look at the Universe with its stars and galaxies— isn’t that absolute beauty? No one can say that beauty is not a major part of Creation.

Passion is also a way out of here—it’s one way out of the trap and a good one too! Let’s say that I die after a lifetime of having expressed my passion most of the time, and I’m feeling content, saying to myself that I had a good life despite the slavery going on here on Earth. I leave my body and slip through a hole in the Grid. What do I see?

The thing is that we see what we are prepared to see. Those who are totally prepared to be recycled again and become another slave worker, who “accidentally” slip through the Grid, won’t see much else than the darkness we see when we look up in the night sky, and someone will probably come and pick them up and lead them toward the Light. Those who are in the know about things, and aware of the 96% versus the 4% Universe will probably see the Universe as it is, which is allegedly an enormously amazing sight. If those people still want to go back to Gaia and work on stabilizing the New Era, they can return through the Grid and reincarnate without going through the Light.

People who have left their dogmas, religious beliefs, and other beliefs we’ve been putting on ourselves from having listened to “authority,” have no problem seeing the KHAA for what it is—and I’ll tell you that I don’t know myself what to expect out there. I only know that it’s not necessarily exactly the same as we experience when we see the night skies. What is there in addition to stars, planets, nebulae, and galaxies? I don’t know. However, passionate people know what they want and have a much easier time creating their own reality, and that’s what it’s all about in the Free Will Universe. Either someone else is creating it for you (and you may not like it), or you’ll create it yourself. You’re absolutely free to experiment as much as possible—it’s just a soul who has been so traumatized that he or she can’t make up his or her mind about things that is in trouble. Otherwise, the Universe is our playground—become a child again and start creating! That’s what it’s there for. Don’t be afraid because there is really nothing to fear except your own fear, as a famous American President once said. The good thing with passion is that it also works if you want to return to Earth and the New Era. It will create miracles down here!

II. The Abduction Agenda Revisited

This is quite a worn out subject, the reader must think, but there are still a few things I think are worth mentioning about it. To summarize what I’ve said earlier, people—mostly of specific bloodlines—are abducted either by government agencies, the ETs themselves, or a mix of them both, for a few reasons, primarily. They want to deep study how our DNA has developed, and perhaps make changes when necessary in a certain number of individuals in order for the ETs to feel comfortable to incarnate either into the abducted body or into its descendants.

Fig. 2. Alien abduction.

First, Ea has over the years conquered new star races, and new star races have joined his cause. These new star races, if they have Ea's permission, are also to be incarnated here in small groups, so they can be part of the future Global Elite.

Second, the "old" star races, such as the Alpha Draconians, who have been with Ea for quite some time now, are the ones who need to adjust the human DNA of the bloodline, or bloodlines, they have selected as their future vessels.

Third, we have races of "genuine" Grays, who are basically us in the future (see Third Level of Learning), who want to retrieve our DNA in order to recreate the biological body form they once had but lost in a future Machine Kingdom.

Fourth, we have the Military Industrial Complex (MIC) that either abduct people on their own, mostly for genetic research, or work together with the AIF in the abduction scenario.

What is common for the first three categories is that the abductors lack human emotions (one could say that those of the fourth category do too). The Pleiadians, in a lecture I just heard, said that the abductors keep their heart chakra closed. In a warzone, I would assume that this is a "normal" thing to do to mentally survive, and this sector of the Universe is a warzone, apparently (just don't think that it's like that everywhere). When I talk about the MIC, more often than not, the people who operate on the abductee are emotionless mind-controlled slaves who are programmed to do their job, and when it's done, they go home to their families and forget all about what they have done. Then, above these people are of course the emotionless Elite hybrids who have another mix of DNA in them, which makes them less prone to feel. These days, most of these Elite bloodlines are also possessed by the Nommos and others. Because of all this, the abductees often have to suffer when they are kidnapped.

I know this sounds pretty discouraging for a person who reads this and actually is an abductee, having experienced all this agony and pain. However, there is a solution to this, which also may prevent future abductions. My suggestion is to go to a regression therapist. Some of you who read this may say, "I've already done that and they are still taking me!" This may very well be true, but the regression therapists have in that case not helped you looking for the correct thing yet—that is why. It is a good idea to first re-experience the abductions in the sessions in order to get rid of the feeling of trauma around the experiences, but then it's time to start looking for what I call The Agreement. Somewhere, buried underneath all this, is an agreement with the ETs to let them abduct you. This agreement could have been done between lives, where everything feels easy because you don't experience the "heaviness" and difficulties of the material world and the counter-energies from the AIF, who rule down here.

More commonly, there was a manipulative agreement, which the abductee subconsciously or unconsciously may or may not be aware of. An encounter between lives or in a present or a past life with these beings may have resulted in a manipulative agreement that you would void immediately if you could.

And you can! Once you are ready to look for it, tell the therapist that you need to find the initial agreement in regression. It could take a while to find it (hopefully it won't), but once you find it, you will know you did. Then you just tell the ETs—out loud and/or just telepathically—that this agreement, or any agreement that you have with them, is now void and that you won't permit them to take you again under any circumstances. This should help. Sometimes, regression therapy in this sense is not even necessary—you just let them know that any agreement you've done with them is void and that you have changed your mind. It's only when that doesn't help that regression therapy, in order to find the agreement, can be helpful.

The toughest cases are those who say that they sympathize with their abductors, and even if it physically and mentally hurts, the abductors are in such need of doing what they're doing that the abductees want to help them—the so-called Stockholm Syndrome, after a kidnapping drama in Stockholm, Sweden, in the 1970s, when the people who were kidnapped started sympathizing with the kidnapers, once they began to know them. The ETs may have told them that the abductee is helping their race survive. These people first need to convince themselves that the abduction phenomenon is not benevolent—and especially not when pain and suffering is involved—and the cycle needs to be broken. This, however, is something for the regression therapist or any psychic who's taking on the case to work out with you.

The bottom line is that humans here on Earth should not be abducted. We are an evolving race, even though we've been tampered with and should, as such, be left alone. There are star beings, however, who come here in physical (enter a human body from birth), or contact selected people on a soul level to help us humans break the spell, but they do so by following certain universal rules and protocols, and they don't break them. In addition, they certainly don't, in any shape or form, hurt the people they are contacting.

ii.i. Atlantis All Over Again

There are researchers who say that we live in a time loop. With this they mean that we start from a rather unevolved stage and evolve up to a certain point, and then a catastrophe of some sort happens, which brings us right back to the start again. It's like a DVD you have finished, and then put it on from the beginning again.

Fig. 3. Barbara Hand-Clow, Pleiadian channeler.

I think there is some truth in this. Although I don't think we repeat every single moment of a previous cycle, I do believe we make the exact same mistakes over and over again unless we break the cycle as a mass consciousness. We are just now at such a breaking point.

In Atlantis, approximately 13,000 years ago, we were engaged in the same things we are engaged in now—more or less. They were into space travel (much more so than we are), and they were heavily into genetic engineering—similar to when En.ki and Isis experimented with different versions of Homo sapiens. At that time, the AIF, Elite human hybrids, and scientists were working together to create genetic alterations, just like we do in Area 51 and other military bases today—on Earth, on Mars, and most likely on the Moon and other places.

Barbara Hand Clow is another channeler of Pleiadian energies. It is not the same group of Pleiadians as Barbara Marciniak is channeling, but the two groups recognize and apparently used to support each other's efforts, although that has changed. Hand Clow's Pleiadians once said:

I, Alcior, am an Atlantean stellar being . . . I am a carrier of the blood of the stars—one of the pure stellar beings who traveled here from outer space. As for the earth-born people, some are indigenous while some are mutants spawned by “stellar implantation.” ...from their central genetics laboratory in Atlantis, we stellar beings bred ourselves with Earth beings. Stellar sources mixed with Earth creatures have varying offspring. In this photon laboratory, I study how the stellar imprint affects the Earthling. We tell the people that we are doing this in order to eliminate disease, but the real reason we are doing it is to gain control of the Earth.

...the only way extraterrestrials, such as myself, can understand humans is by means of decoding human DNA.... The Atlantean project is to assist in the process of the stellar encodement of humans... In other words we read the cosmic evolutionary cycles through humans on earth!... we need this information in order to determine the stability of Earth in the Solar System—particularly so that we can evacuate Earth at certain times... That is why we first came to Earth three hundred thousand years ago... For example, a photon from the star Aldebaran contains information on the functioning of Aldebaran consciousness. It is very musical, very mathematical, very harmonic, and very powerful for the right hemisphere of the human brain.

When the crystal is charged, all of the mutants will move into “stellar fusion.”... Mutant Earthlings will fuse with the powers of their own original stars, we will live on Earth when we want to, and the rulers of Atlantis will control it all.<sup>546</sup>

Well, that doesn't sound very nice, does it? Essentially, it tells it the way I have described it in my papers. Aldebaran has been mentioned over and over again in my work in connection with the Pleiades, starting with my e-book, “The Myth Around Supriem David Rockefeller” in 2009. This is, without any doubt, the base Lucifer chose when he fled to the Pleiades after Lucifer's Rebellion and it still is his main base outside of this solar system—there doesn't seem to be much doubt about that either.

I also find it noteworthy that this Alcior being says that they really don't understand humans, and as I've mentioned earlier, this is very true. Then, of course, we have the main message in this channeled sequence, which is that when time is right, “mutants” of a certain star system will merge with their own “gods,” in a sense that they will be drawn to them, and the old visitors will come down here and rule on Earth as they did in Atlantis. Well, this was channeled back in the 1990s, I believe, and much has changed since then. Much of what Alcior is talking about has already happened or is currently happening.

Some of the abduction phenomenon is also pertaining to what Alcior says, meaning that the star races are checking in on their own “mutants,”—or “hybrids,” as we usually call them here. Anyone who is willing to open his or her eyes will notice that all these things are really happening around us—it's not science fiction anymore—and never was.

It was after channeled messages such as this one that Marciniak's Pleiadians withdrew from Hand Clow's group—they didn't want to be associated with this “truth.” It strikes me kind of funny, though, that Marciniak's group was fast with acknowledging Hand Clow in the beginning, but then they changed their minds. Nevertheless, Marciniak's group must have known the other group well enough for them to acknowledge them in the first place. Just because Marciniak's Pleiadians no longer want to talk about the other Pleiadian group, does that make Alcior's statements less true? I am still referring to Marciniak's group to quite some extent in my papers, even though I have serious doubts regarding their real intentions. The majority of their information does not only ring very true but also coincides with other, bona fide information I've found elsewhere. This shouldn't come as a surprise because sometimes a group, such as a channeled collective, can afford to tell the truth, if it is necessary for us to know it in order for their agenda to become fulfilled. This is a quite complicated subject, where things are much entwined and, apparently, contradictory until we understand that their strength lies in the contradictions themselves.

http://www.bibliotecapleyades.net/sociopolitica/the\_experiment/experiment10.htm

For a long time, I thought that their agenda would also benefit us, but when I found out that their own teacher, whom they are talking about so often, in fact is Ea himself, I became very alert, of course. Are the Pleiadians really a rebel group with peaceful intentions who themselves have been deceived by Ea, “the Trickster,” or are they fully aware of who Ea is? They now keep claiming that Ea has changed (Lucifer has redeemed himself, in other words), but if this is the case, why is the Global Elite still here, continuing their negative influence on mankind?

We know that the Earth scenario is rather complex—hence the amount of papers on the subject—but once we separate the different agendas from each other, we notice that they are not only quite similar to each other, but they also are different version of a larger agenda, which is common for all these groups, and that is power and control over humans so that we can be used in a future galactic war. Then, once we understand that, we also understand that it is only as long as we get involved in their business that we are really affected. Although we are prisoners in boot camp, we actually still have Free Will, if we are willing to acknowledge it to ourselves. We can actually escape at any time, once we know how. And we do! The real escape will not take place until after this lifetime is over, if we choose to leave this solar system. If we do, we are free to go. Those who want to come back into a higher frequency version of Earth can also do so and help build a new reality for mankind.
